"Hi ya! How ya doin'?," I said, just as all my college buddies would have said. "I hate to disturb you but the paper got a hot tip that you are an individualist and they sent me to get a story." He pushed his bowl of hashish toward me but not knowing what it was I refused. "Could you tell me just what you are trying to accomplish being an individualist?" I asked? His voice came softly through his beard, "most assuredly." "I wish to establish the fact that one can flatint the stupid patterns of conformity set up by our society and still be a successful and acceptable person."

He Crushed the Crush-Proof

"Could you explain that a little more?" I asked. He reached across the table and pulled a popularly known "crush-proof" cigarette box from my pocket. He crushed it and grinned. He leaned closer. "You know what else?," he hissed. He was taking me into his confidence. "I brush after every meal." "But that's impossible, "I protested," everyone knows that you can't brush after every meal." "And those who can't must use the toothpaste that keeps you safe all day because way back here you brushed, or at least they have to chew gum."

He ignored my objections, however, and continued. "Also I don't think that all new things are good or that everything should be fun." He was an iconoclastic madman. (that's an erotic image breaker I think.) I realized that he was literally crawling with little rebellious traits and now I tried to find them before he had the advantage of throwing them in my unsuspecting face. I noticed his clothes. "I see that you have a belt in the front of your pants instead of the back," I said, "that's a very clever way of protesting against our collegiate conformity. I'll have to give you credit for that, yes, sir."

The Direction's What Counts

He seemed upset by this and said, "Well I . . . uh . . . no, you see I guess I just put my pants on backwards this morning." So he was human and had weaknesses after all. I pursued. "And are you wearing a striped tie just like everyone else?" I thought I had him. "Look a little closer," he said. "The stripes don't go from the right shoulder toward the left hip, but from left to right."

Impossible I thought.

He had regained his composure during this parry and now he attacked. "You're just like all the rest," he said, "You say hi ya or how ya doin, you wear button down collars and a light tan raincoat, you like picnics, you order a hamburger and a coke all the time because you have no imagination, you hate rock 'n roll and the disk jockeys but haven't the spine to stop listening. You make me sick."

He turned away and began to read his copy of Life. He didn't even look at the pictures, he just read the copy.

S. C. Views

By PAT NICHOLSON

Tomorrow at 10:30 the underclassmen of Villanova University will take the first major step in determining their student leaders for the next year. One might now ask, "just how important are these class and student council nominations?" The answer is simple. If you are interested in having outstanding class functions next year, then good men must be nominated for the class offices. If you are interested in having an active effective student council and in having Villanova represented in intercollegiate affairs by sincere capable leaders, then good men must be nominated for the student council positions.

Able Leaders

The student council will only be as effective as its leaders. This holds true for every organization on campus. Thus, it is absolutely necessary that the men nominated tomorrow must be willing workers who are sincerely interested in doing the very best possible job.

One of the biggest problems in newly elected leaders of the student council or any other organization on campus has always been that the leaders (invariably) come into the positions with little understanding of their responsibilities. In addition the student council has often been forced to place authority in men who have very little understanding of the operations of the council.

S. C. Initiating Reform

This year the student council is initiating a one day leadership program which we hope will help to solve this problem. The program is designed to give next year's student leaders a better idea of their role, and the role of student government on a college campus. In addition it will attempt to give the students attending a clear picture of the operations and organization of the Student Council at Villanova. I strongly recommend that all students who hope to hold office in any organization, or intend to run for a seat on the Student Congress, attend this leadership class. It would show that a candidate has little interest if he misses this opportunity, to find out about the problems and opportunities of student leadership and student government.

New Idea For A Progressive Prom: The Sack Look

By BILL CHRISTY

Prom season is here again. But this year it approaches in the face of some scathing criticism. There are a few determined men on campus who are setting out to revolutionize the flowers and formal bit.

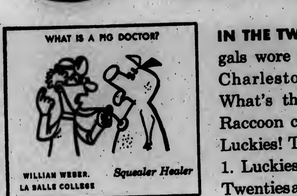
While we conservatives are beginning to worry over such details as name bands, finances, and how to talk that girl into breaking her other date, these men are planning to buck the syatem.

You may have seen them about or even heard their arguments. Everyone knows that proms bring money problems and our heroes are against money. Also the social overtones of a prom's importance have made a prom bid to a girl tantamount to a marriage proposal—a rather hurried snipping of the free social life. Enemies of the present system have devised their answer—the progressive prom.

Down With Capitalists

Expense is a major complaint but can be reduced to almost nil with a bit of judicious cutting. Most proms feature a big band, or at least two small ones. Such frivilous expenditure raises the cost of tickets over 25c making it prohibitive to all but capitalists. The more practical way is the installation of four hi-fi sound systems—one in each corner of the dance floor. In this way cost is reduced and particular tastes are catered to (each machine will be playing one of the four music types- opera, dixieland, swing and rock'n roll.), and besides, there'll be continuous music.

Formal dress is another needless waste. Everyone knows that the average college student abhors looking well and prefers the more relaxed attire of sweater, bermuda shorts and tennis shoes. The answer is the informal formal: Men wear black ties and women high heels—the remaining attire is at the individual's discretion. Bermudas will of course, be most acceptable but dungarees will suffice.



These changes in clothes have caused the more radical element to advocate another innovation: Since crowds are a major complaint and picnics are the most popular form of collegiate entertainment, they suggest that proms move outdoors to a meadow.

Who Needs Preliminaries

One of the greatest attractions of proms, as they are, is the parties that generally follow them. These consist of groups of close friends who adjourn from the crowded dance floor to the relative seclusion of a nearby pub or hotel room. The new system would provide this gay spirit without the bother of the preliminaries. Before the prom, groups would be assigned to a hired hall (maximum crowd five couples) where they would meet in their bermudas and black ties for an enjoyable after-prom party of hi-fi and refreshments.

Of course, because prom night is such an important event in the life of an undergraduate, he would want to be assured of a good time. A sure way of doing this is to carefully pick the four other couples with whom he will spend the evening. Our college friendships are mostly transient, made up of people met while in college then never seen again. One can't be sure these ties will last so he should return to home-town friends for this his big night. For those who live in less populated areas where five couples cannot be found, they should spend the evening with their closest friends—the family.... That's the new system and it may be right. I'll take the old method. See you at the party afterward.

Sticklers!

IN THE TWENTIES, up-to-date college gals wore raccoon coats, danced the Charleston and smoked Luckies. What's the rage on campus today? Raccoon coats. The Charleston. And Luckies! The conclusions are obvious. 1. Luckies were tops for taste in the Twenties and still are. 2. Smart smokers knew it and still do. So any gal who takes Luckies to a Roaring 20's party is a Dapper Flapper! And by George, the boy friend who sports 'em, too, is a Couth Youth! Prediction: In the 1980's, raccoon coats, the Charleston and light, good-tasting tobacco will still be in style!

STUDENTS! MAKE $25

Do you like to shirk work? Here's some easy money—start Stickling! We'll pay $25 for every Stickler we print—and for hundreds more that never get used. Sticklers are simple riddles with two-word rhyming answers. Both words must have the same number of syllables. (Don't do drawings.) Send your Sticklers with your name, address, college and class to Happy-Joe-Lucky, Box 67A, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

Will One Of These Reign During Junior Week?

Marilyn Adelizzi

Immaculata sophomore Marilyn Adelizzi will attend the Prom with Chuck Roellig, and electrical engineer. Nineteen-year old Marilyn has brown hair and eyes.

Nancy Brittingham

Civil engineering student, Mike McShea will escort Nancy Brittingham, A sophomore at West Chester State Teachers college. Nancy is 19-years old and has blue eyes.

Jeanne Conway

Jeanne Conway is an 18-yr. old student at Notre Dame DeNemur High school. She will be accompanied by Paul Molnar, an accounting major. Jeanne is 5'3" tall and has brown eyes.

Kathy Cunningham

Kathy Cunningham is 5'2" tall and has blonde hair and blue eyes. She will be accompanied by Joseph Cacciola, an E.E. student. Kathy is 20 years old and is a private secretary.

Louise Dagit

Louise Dagit, a freshman at Rosemont college, is being escorted by Ed. Coccagna, an electrical engineering student. She is 5'3" tall and has blonde hair.

Harriet Deona

Harriet Deona is a secretary for the Beneficial Finance Corp. She is 5'5" tall, has blonde hair and weighs 130 lbs. Harriet will be escorted by Harry Tappen, an accounting major.

Madeline Hergerty

Madeline Hergerty is a 5'7" brunette and is being escorted by Kenneth Vincent, a junior math major. Madeline has blue eyes and lives in Greenwich, Conn.

Elizabeth Jones

Elizabeth Ann Jones will be escorted by Jack McIntyre, a general arts man. She is a freshman at Rosemont college. Elizabeth is 5'5" tall, weighs 110 lbs. and has brown eyes.

Marilyn Kamalski

Lovely Marilyn Ann Kamalski, a senior at Harcum, will be the Junior Prom Date of Terry Flynn, a marketing major. Marilyn stands 5'4", and has brown hair and eyes.

Pat Karpinski

A secretary for Bethlehem Steel, Pat Karpinski, will come to the Prom with engineer Bob Hennessey. She is 5'2" tall, and has brown hair and green eyes.

Sally Kenny

William "Charley" Mortell, civil engineering, will escort 19-year old Chestnut Hill student Sally Kenny to the Field House affair. Sally has brown hair and blue eyes.

Linda Kinnelman

Arts major Eddie Tepper has something to cheer about in this lovely Lower Merion High cheer leader, Linda Kinnelman. Linda stands 5'2½", and has blond hair and blue eyes.

Martha Lonergan

Martha Lonergan is a business representative for a N.Y. Television Co. She will be escorted by Basketball and Baseball Star George Emma. Martha is 5'7" tall and has brown hair.

Elizabeth Looby

Elizabeth Looby will be escorted by Joseph Vasturia, who is a Civil engineering student. Elizabeth is a junior at the University of Penna., and has brown hair and brown eyes.

Patricia Mathewson

E. E. student Stephen Beither will escort Patricia Mathewson who attends Caldwell College, N. J. Patricia is 5'4" tall, weighs 117 lbs and has blonde hair and green eyes.

Valerie Maxwell

Valerie Maxwell is a 5'5" blonde from Marymount college in New York. She will accompany Joe Nugent, a finance major, and has blonde hair and brown eyes.

Joan McHugh

Joan Marie McHugh is a junior at Marywood College. Joan's escort will be Ed Stroud, an electrical engineer, and has brown hair and blue eyes.

Carol Meany

Hugo Berntason is bringing Carol Meany to hear Buddy Williams and his band at the Prom. A Bell Telephone secretary, Carol is 20 years old and has brown hair and eyes.

Marge O'Keefe

Marge O'Keefe is 5'3" tall and weighs 110 lbs. She is a student at the St. Agnes School of Nursing and will be escorted by Greg Dean. Marge has blonde hair and grey eyes.

Alice Pfeufer

Alice T. Pfeufer is an asst. Lab. tech. at the Andrew Kaul Memorial Hospital in Pa. She will be accompanied by Joe Lynch, a chemical engineering student. Alice is 5'7" and has brown hair.

Sarah Reiher

Sarah Jane Reiher, 17-year old student who lives in Long Island, N.Y., will be accompanying Paul Lang, an English major. Sarah is 5'4" and has brown eyes.

Rita Youngerman

Arts major Joe Zicarelli will escort Rita Youngerman, a 20-year old secretary for American Telephone and Telegraph, to the Prom. Rita has brown hair and hazel eyes.

Engineer Celebrates 25th Anniversary; Growth Seen

By GERALD J. RATCHFORD

The Villanova ENGINEER has grown since its inception in 1933 from a small bulletin of a few pages to a large magazine well respected in engineering circles. The purpose of this article is twofold, to give the ENGINEER and its staff proper credit on this anniversary and to explain to the student what the ENGINEER is and how it operates.

The Villanova ENGINEER is published by the engineering students of Villanova four times a year (November-January-March-May). The articles which appear in the magazine are written by the engineering students. Rev. Vrana, O.S.A. has been the moderator of the ENGINNER for its 25 years of existence.

John Filliman, E.E. '58 is the present editor of the publication. Dave Borcik E.E. '58 is the associate editor; Bob Rosco, E.E. '58 is the managing editor; Jerry Ratchford, M.E. '58 is the assistant editor. These men assist the Editor in his various capacities.

Copy Editor Bill Christman, E.E. '59 has charge of the typing staff and proof readers. Business Manager Dave Dubbels, E.E. '58, takes care of the advertising and publicity.

Source of Articles

Just how do the articles come about? Usually engineers write articles about their past employment or topics they are interested in or subjects they have done some research on. The authors also provide sketches and photographs in the form of glossy prints in conjunction with their articles. Under the guidance of one of the editors the author primes his article for publication.

The editor next goes to work and selects the main article after all of the articles have been submitted and this article is usually the subject of the cover for the issue. Then the art editors, under the guidance of Ed Poska, E.E. '58, decide on the cover, either in the form of a photograph or some elaborate sketch. In the meantime the copy editor has his staff proofread the articles once they are submitted.

At this time the auxiliary articles such as Horizons (a look into new engineering features), Campus Activities, Meet the Profs and the most popular Joke Section are turned in by the respective staff writers. After all the articles are subject to intense copy reading they are given to the printer for the original printing, or what are called the galleys.

While the editors are busily preparing the articles, the business manager is getting together the ads for the coming issue. As is the case with many magazines the staff counts on the ads to defray the cost of printing the magazine. Littel-Murray-Barnhill is the advertising agent and provides the ENGINEER with all of its ads. This agency is the usual agent for the publications of engineering schools throughout the country. As the ads are submitted the respective companies choose the approximate position of their ads in the magazine.

During the period the articles are in the hands of the printer, the editors decide upon the length of the issue and leave room for the ads on their appropriate pages. Once the galleys are received and checked, the big job of the staff begins, that of the layout.

Under the leadership of the Layout Editor "Spike" Dinneen, E.E. '59, the layout of every article and picture begins. The pictures for the respective articles come from the printer cropped (cut down) to their desired size. The layout usually lasts for a week and runs to the early hours of the morning. Layout is simply combining the articles and their pictures along with the sketches, and placing this print on the respective pages of the issue. The trick is putting the print on the desired amount of pages.

Now the layout is done and the printer gets the okay to print up the final galleys. One week later these galleys are in the hands of the editor, and he makes a final check for errors or omissions, and finally gives his seal of approval to the issue. This is the signal to the printer to provide approximately two thousand copies of the magazine after all the bugs are corrected.

At this point Circulation Manager Dick Horn, E.E. '59 takes over and distributes the magazine with the help of his large staff. First of all the issue is given to all the engineering students. Then copies are sent out to the advertising agent and advertisers, and also mailed out to the companies who recruit on campus.

Under a new policy the magazine is sent out to the high schools which have provided Villanova with its engineering students: Copies are also sent to the list of subscribers.

K. of C. Meeting Tonight

for the area, Ralph Gross, will explain that function of the order to the students and faculty.

Literature concerning the order will be distributed. Copies of the constitution and by-laws will also be available.

All those interested in joining the K. of C. will be able to complete their initiation before the end of the Spring semester.

Transfer Membership

All those over 17 years are eligible. Underclassmen and seniors alike have been urged to join. Seniors may transfer their membership after graduation to the council nearest their home.

Delany explained that the formation of the council on campus is not "a particularly novel idea." Such councils exist already on the campuses of Notre Dame, Fordham, Xavier, Holy Cross and Scranton.

Pat Nicholson, chairman of the Student Congress, and Delany will canvas students and faculty for prospective members. They will also assist the members in the organizational activities.

Three Degrees

Initiation into the order consists of taking of three degrees, Delany explained. These degrees will be administered by a degree team supplied by the K. of C. headquarters. Degrees will be completed before the end of May.

It is expected that the first grand knight here will be a faculty member because of the permanency of the position. All other offices will be filled by members of the student body.

Election Ads

Any students who intend to run for any class office in May and wish to advertise in the VILLANOVAN must contact Business Manager Saul Borgese before April 30th. Candidates who wish to include pictures with the ads must submit photos.

Gavel Changes Hands

John Moynihan, retiring president of the Delta Pi Mu fraternity, turns the gavel over to Al Dombrowski, the president elect. Dombrowski and the other new officers were elected at a meeting last week.

Dombrowski Elected Prexy Of DPM Frat; Ball Veep

Al Dombrowski, Industrial Administrations major, was elected president of the Delta Pi Mu fraternity at the annual elections meeting last Thursday night.

Dombrowski, who succeeded Arts major John Moynihan to the position, has been active in class affairs, being chairman of the Charity Ball last semester and a defeated candidate for the class presidency last year.

Rummy Handles Money

John Rumbarger, a history major, will take over the post of Treasurer. Rumbarger, who was also on the Executive Council this year, succeeds Tom McPherson in the post.

The new Recording Secretary of the fraternity will be junior English major Joe Fitzpatrick. The post was held this year by ex-student council veep Don Kempf.

Sophomore Tom Labreque assumes the duties of the Corresponding Secretary, the post vacated by Dombrowski. An ex-engineer, Labreque is a contract NROTC student.

Political Science major Jim Quigley will represent the fraternity on the student council. Quigley succeeds senior Norm Peer in his position.

Announces Dinner Dance

In Executive Council elections, the juniors elected Don Gooley and Vince Bifferato, the sophomores named Tom McAvoy and Herb Lettau and the frosh chose Bob DeLise.

In other fraternity business, retiring president Moynihan announced plans for the DPM dinner dance to be held this Saturday evening at the Falcon House on West Chester Pike.

He also officially welcomed all the new members into the fraternity, and urged them "to support your officers in every way possible."

The new members were inducted into the organization at the close of the pledging period prior to the Easter holidays.

All Seniors who have not yet been measured for caps and gowns are to report to Father Boyle's office or to Student Activities office in Dougherty Hall as soon as possible.

Personnel Expert To Address SAM

Dr. Thomas J. Luck, an authority on Personnel Relations, spoke at the regular meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Management on Monday, April 14th.

Dr. Luck has served as a consultant to the Du Pont Company and was a member of the Governor of Florida's "Little Hoover Commission" in 1949-50. He has wide experience in both industry and educational circles.

Among his numerous works in the field of Personnel Relations is "Personnel Audit and Appraisal" which is currently being used as a text in the Industrial Administration department.

Rafano Elected President of I.R.S.

The International Relations Society elected next year's officers at its last monthly meeting for 1957-1958.

Elected to office were Robert Rofano, President; Clint Chin Vice President; John Hogosky, Secretary-Treasurer; and John Fields, Student Council Representative.

During the meeting Clem Birch announced the details of the social planned for Wednesday, April 16. The social will be held at the Embers in Narberth.

De Paris Group Signed For Jr. Week Jazz Concert

In the thirties it was New York where he played with the bands of Leroy Smith, Noble Sissle, Benny Carter, Jelly Roll Morton, Teddy Hill, and the Mills Blue Rhythm Band. Then several years were spent with the 'Duke'—Duke Ellington.

Again Wilbur organized his own group, playing in New York and Boston theaters and clubs, including the famous Cotton Club and Earl Carroll's Theater Club.

With his present group he has played at the famed London Palladium and the Moulin Rouge and Cafe Les Ambas-sadeurs in Paris, becoming as great a favorite in Europe as in America.

Long Two Weeks

Originally engaged in 1951 for a two week engagement at JIMMY RYAN'S, he has since turn-that into the longest two weeks on record. It is here that so many Villanovans have become acquainted with his music.

Wilbur still finds time though to give concerts at many of the colleges, also at Boston's Symphony Hall, and the Stratford Music Festival in Stratford, Ontario, where he was the first jazz artist to participate in the event.

In addition, he is on the Board of Trustees of the Lenox School of Jazz, in Massachusetts, the only institution dedicated specifically to the formal study of jazz.

Broadway Production

On Broadway, de Paris has worked in the Lunt-Fontaine The Pirate, and provided the incidental mood music for George Kaufman's "The Small Hours."

Television appearances included the Ford 50th Anniversary Program with Mary Martin and Ethel Merman, the Jackie Gleason Show, and Look Up And Live with the Rev. A. L. Kershaw of $64,000 Question fame.

He will also be seen in the near future on NBC's new educational jazz program, The Subject Is Jazz.

Dollar Admission

With this behind him, Wilbur will be bringing some of the most enjoyable and most listenable music ever to come to Villanova.

Tickets for the concert will begin next week. Admission will be $1.00 and will be available in the Pie Shoppe in Dougherty Hall.

The band will be situated on the stage to allow all those who attend to be able to see the musicians at all times.

Physics Club Hears Talk

Jack Solarski, president of the Physics Club, has announced that requirements were being fulfilled to create a student section of the American Institute of Physics.

This is the first organization of this type to which membership has been made available to the physics majors.

Along with the other business treated at the meeting, nominations were made for club offices.. Three juniors were nominated for presidency, three sophomores for vice-presidency, and three freshmen for secretary.

Elections are scheduled for the next meeting of the club.

After the topics of business were finished, Tom Gaynard, junior physics major, delivered a talk on particle accelerators.

A few weeks ago the club visited the huge Van De Graf generator at Bartol Laboratories.

Villanova Named Testing Center For Law School

Villanova has been designated as a testing center for the nationwide administration of the Law School Admissions Test, it has been announced by Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of the Law School.

The test will be administered in Garey Hall, the new law school building, on Saturday, April 19, 1958.

Both the Villanova law school and most other law schools require this test of their applicants. Prospective applicants should consult the law school of their choice as to whether they are required to take the examination.

The next test will be administered in August, 1958. Candidates must file their completed applications with the Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, N.J., at least ten days before the date of the exam.

Application forms and information bulletins may be procured at the office of the registrar of the school of law.

In the State of Washington, there's a town named George.

Engineer To Meet Thurs.

Anyone wishing to join the staff of the VILLANOVA ENGINEER should attend the meeting to be held tomorrow during the activities period at 304 Mendel Hall.

The new editor, Bob Merkert said that he is anxious to name freshmen and sophomores to the staff. "These students", said Merkert, "will be the ones to carry on the publication in the future."

"There are many interesting openings on the staff, particularly in layout, copy, staff writing, and art," said Merkert. Applications will be handed out at the meeting.

Anyone who wishes to join the staff, but cannot attend the meeting, may contact Jerry Ratchford, 307 Sheehan Hall for an application.

Jazz Fraternity Sponsors Contest

The National Jazz Fraternity is sponsoring a contest open to all instrumental college jazz groups of not more than seven instrumentalists.

Any group, professional or non-professional may enter the contest by requesting applications from the fraternity and submitting taped recordings with pertinent information by May 16, 1958.

Those interested in the contest should write to the National Jazz Fraternity, 40 East 40 Street, New York 16, N.Y.

Sell Tickets

Anyone interested in helping to sell and collect tickets, set up chairs, serve refreshments, and collect tickets for the Junior Jazz Concert is asked to sign up on the Dougherty Hall bulletin board opposite the lounges.

THE POSTMAN COMETH

I have recently received several letters from readers which have been so interesting, so piquant, so je ne sais quoi, that I feel I must share them with all of you. The letters and my replies follow:

SIR:

Maybe you can help me. I came up to college eight years ago. On my very first day I got into a bridge game in the student union. I am still in the same bridge game. I have never gone to class, cracked a book, or paid any tuition. All I do is play bridge.

To explain my long absence and keep the money coming from home, I told a harmless little lie. I said I was in medical school. This made Dad (my father) terribly proud. It also enabled me to keep playing bridge. We were both very happy.

But all good things must come to an end. Mine ended when I came home for Christmas vacation. I arrived to find that Sister (my sister) was in the hospital with an ingrown spleen. Dr. Norbert Sigafoos, the eminent ingrown spleen surgeon, was scheduled to operate, but unfortunately he was run over by a hot-food cart on the way to the scrubbing room.

"Oh, never mind," chuckled Dad (my father). "Harlow (me) will fix Sister (my sister)."

Well sir, what could I do? If I told the truth I would make a laughingstock out of Dad (my father) who had been bragging about me all over town. Also I would get yanked out of school which would be a dirty shame just when I am beginning to understand the weak club bid.

There was nothing for it but to brazen it out. I got Sister (my sister) apart all right, but I must confess myself completely at a loss as to how to put her back together again. Can you suggest anything? They're getting pretty surly around here.

Sincerely,
Harlow Protein

Dear Harlow:

Indeed I do have the solution for you—the solution that has never failed me when things close in: Light up a Marlboro! Knots untie as you puff that fine rich tobacco. Shade becomes light as that grand flavor comes freely and friendlily through that splendid filter. Who can stay glum when Marlboro gives you such a lot to like? Not I. Not you. Not nobody.

SIR:

Just off the campus where I go to school there is a lake called Lake Widgiwagan. Thirty years ago when my father was an undergraduate here he went fishing one day in Lake Widgiwagan and dropped his Deke pin in the water. He dived for days but never found it.

Just yesterday—thirty years later, mark you!—I went fishing in Widgiwagan. I caught a four-pound bass. I took the fish home, cut it open, and what do you think I found inside?

You guessed it! Two tickets to the Dempsey-Firpo fight.

Sincerely,
Willis Wayde

Villanovan Editors Change

Robert E. Mulcahy, III, retired editor of the VILLANOVAN, is a Senior History Major. A resident, his home is at 86 Stewart road, Short Hills, N. J. He graduated from Millburn High School.

During his four years at Villanova, Bob was active in class affairs and elected president of the Junior Class. He is an active member of the Student Council and a member of the Student-Administration Committee. Born with a love of politics, Bob numbers among his family's friends many New Jersey government officials.

Bob's younger brother, John, is at present a sophomore in the C and F school.

An NROTC midshipman, Bob will serve with the Navy after graduation this June.

Lawrence M. O'Rourke, Jr., newly appointed editor of the VILLANOVAN, is a Junior English major. A day-hop, he lives at 5663 Springfield ave., in Philadelphia. He graduated from St. Thomas More Catholic Boys High School.

During his first three years at Villanova in addition to work on the paper, Larry has been associated with the Belle Masque Society, the Shamokinaki Dance and the Ring dance, doing publicity work. He is a member of the Literary Club.

A staff member of the PHILADELPHIA EVENING BULLETIN, Larry hopes to continue in the newspaper field after graduation and a hitch in the service. He also plans to attend grad school.

Lynx Meets Tomorrow, Editorial Posts Discussed

The LYNX will hold a meeting at 10:30 AM tomorrow in 102 Vasey Hall to form a staff for 1958-1959, Mr Mitchell and Dr. Phillipon, faculty moderators, have announced.

Since the majority of the present staff are seniors, the incoming staff will be almost completely new to the magazine.

The LYNX is the campus magazine which publishes twice yearly the best from student literary efforts. This year it has been under the guidance of Editor-inChief Frank Delany, senior English major.

Positions to Fill

The major position to be filled is that of Editor-in-Chief. Other editorial positions include Magazine Editor, Poetry Editor, Copy Editor, Art Editor, Exchange Editor and managers for publicity, business and circulation. Staff members are also needed for art, copy, pubicity and circulation.

Mr. James Mitchell and Dr. John Phillipson of the English Department will be on hand at Thursday's meeting to describe the duties and functions of each open position. Applications forms will be distributed on which interested students may indicate the position they would like to fill. All undergraduates are eligible for consideration.

Announced Soon

Any student who misses Thursday's meeting may secure an application by contacting either moderator as soon as possible.

The new staff will be announced as soon as official confirmation is received.

There will be a feeting of all LYNX editors this Thursday at 2:30 PM in the LYNX office to complete plans for the spring issue.

The spring issue will appear in several weeks. There was to have been a third issue which would have been published in March but because of a lack of publishable fiction, it had to be abandoned. Although the poetry and essays have been up to standards, the editors still have not received enough satisfactory fiction.

Urged to Submit

Students who are interested in writing are urged to submit their work for consideration. While it will not be in time for the next issue, it can be held, if acceptable, for future issues.

Mr. Mitchell, who teaches the course in the short story judges the merits of all fiction received by the magazine while Dr. Phillipson who teaches, the Age of Neo-Classicism, determines what poetry meets the standards of the LYNX. Their standards are somewhat exacting but this policy has resulted in a quality magazine in the past.

NFCCS Tour Open

Reservations are still being accepted for this summer's European tours and Mexico Tour, offered to Catholic college students and recent graduates through the Travel Program of the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

Information concerning all European tours can be obtained from Mr. John J. Plungy, Catholic Youth Travel Office, No. 1 Thofas Circle, N. W. Washington 5, D. C.

Soph Arts Tests Held On May 5

All sophomores in the Division of Arts and Sciences will take sophomore tests on dates to be assigned during the week of May 5th, the Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., dean of the school, has announced.

The tests will be the Standard Tests of Educational Progress.

They are of 70 minutes duration for Social Studies, Education, Science (Biology, Physics, Chemistry) and Mathematics.

A. B. Students will be tested in college level reading in the same STEP series.

Jr. Pictures To Be Taken

Senior Portraits for next year's Belle Air yearbook will be taken starting Monday, May 5th, it was announced yesterday by editor-in-chief Bob Pinto.

Pinto told the class that unless the pictures of the Junior Class members are finished by Wednesday May 14th, it will be impossible to include the late pictures in the book.

"No pictures will be taken next Fall," Pinto announced.

Members of the yearbook will be available in the Pie Shop or the Belle Air office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall starting next week.

They will set appointment times so that long waiting for the photographer can be eliminated.

According to Pinto, "It only takes five minutes to have a picture taken. We need complete cooperation from the class if we are to have a good book."

Dr. Benedict A. Paparella, Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Villanova, was guest speaker on March 16 at a communion breakfast held in Lakewood, N.J., by the Ocean County Chapter of the Trenton Diocesan Council of Catholic Nurses.

'Cat Golf Season Opens Friday With Temple Match

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

The golf team, coached by "Jumbo" Jim Elliot, will open its season on Friday when it travels to play Temple. The team has a schedule of 11 Matches, only three of which will be played at the Wildcats' home course, Aronomink Golf Club.

Frank Kruse, a powerfully built senior pre-law major who was elected captain at the end of last year, is one of four returning lettermen. A mainstay on the team since his sophomore year, Kruse has all the qualifications to lead this year's team to an impressive record.

Of the three remaining lettermen, Jay Gibney is the only other senior. Gibney, a Commerce and Finance student, is also a two-year veteran of the team and will be heavily counted upon to continue his past performances.

Twins Are Joined

The juniors returning are Nick Acquilino and Ron Zurinskas. Aquilino posted the low qualifying score last fall, shooting 72-73—145. Zurinskas, a good competitor, turned in many fine scores last year. This year, he'll be joined by twin-brother Reggie, who was ineligible last year after transferring from Mount St. Mary's College, where he was an outstanding golfer.

Due to the bad weather in recent weeks, playoffs to determine the make-up of the remainder of the team are still underway. "In any event," says captain Kruse, "We think we'll have a top-notch team. We expect to better last year's record (9 and 3)."

The team plays 9-point matches, with each of the six members playing for an individual point and each foursome playing for a best-ball point. Under this system, the players still have something to compete for even though they may have lost their individual matches.

After the Temple match on Friday, the team will again hit the road on Saturday, this time journeying to Scranton University. Next Wednesday another away match is slated with usually top-flight Penn State.

Intramural Softball Starts

The intramural softball season will open today with games scheduled for each of the four fields available for play. All games originally slated for yesterday will be played today because of the intramural department's inability to line the fields due to wet grounds.

A complete list of the teams which have signed up to compete in the various league was not available when the newspaper went to press. It will appear next week.

By PAUL BUCKLEY

On other intramural fronts:

The Red Cross life-saving course is still in operation in the pool. To date, over 100 students have signed up for the lessons. The course is necessary for all who expect to have life guard jobs during the summer vacation.

Junior Week Water Show

Junior Week activities slated thus far include a water show on Mother's Day, April 28 (featuring clown diving, a water-ballet by the nurses and exhibitions by members of the swimming team) and a track meet the following day.

In the week preceeding Junior Week, a foul shooting contest is isteld for Alumni Gym. It will run for one entire day, and entrants can sign up at the gym at any time.

In a few weeks, the tennis and horseshoe tournaments will get underway. Golf will follow shortly thereafter.

Trotters Win On 'Last-Gasp Effort'

By JIM McELHENNY

Nobody figured beforehand that they rated with the better teams in the recent intramural basketball tournament, but Turses Trotters, making, as they said, a "last-gasp attempt at an intramural title," managed to outlast the Jolly Totters for the championship just prior to the Easter vacation.

While other clubs received all the publicity, the Joe Murphy-captioned outfit rolled through an unbeaten season in virtual obscurity. But they had the guns to go all the way when it counted.

This five has been playing as a unit for the past three years, and in that time has compiled the enviable record of twenty five wins and only two losses. The defeats came in the 1956 quarterfinal round and the 1957 semifinal round.

Still Dark Horse

This year the Turses coasted through the regular season with eight straight wins, but remained in a dark hore position while other teams were top seeded.

This underdog role worked to their advantage though, as they upended the tournament favored Gazelles in the opening round of the playoffs by a 38-34 count. In this game, the Trotters jumped out to a 15-4 bulge, catching the Gazelles off guard with a pressing man to man defense, and then saw it melt before a second half surge by the latter.

The game was nip and tuck the rest of the way with neither team able to gain a substantial lead. The tide turned when the Turses' alert ball-hawking gave them a commanding lead with only two minutes remaining, and a good freeze held the Gazelles at bay the rest of the way.

Easy Victory

The Turses' second playoff game was a romp over the Royals by a 91-30 score. Seven players hit double figures, and all 11 men entered the scoring column.

After these early successes, the Trotters drew a bye in the third round.

The quarter final round saw the Turses Trotters take on and defeat the highly touted Duffers. It proved to be a game for about 15 minutes, but then the Trotters surged out and made a runaway of it. Very instrumental in this win was Larry Masotti's accurate long range bombing.

All-Star Lineup

Key men in the scoring and rebound colums were Bill Bodo, former LaSalle High star, and big Steve Petrokubi, who hails from St. Gabriel's High in Hazelton. Joe Murphy, former St. Joe Prep ballplayer, Charlie Semon from Augustinian Academy on Staten Island, Arnie Vandervalk, of Great Neck L. I. High, and Paul McGrath of West Catholic all made important contributions to the win.

The Trotters moved into the semi finals and downed the Small Five, a team which averaged 6'3, by an 11-point spread, the final reading 39-28. It was simply a case of a good, well balanced squad outlaying a good but bigger team which didn't have the overall finesse of the winner.

Tough Final Game

The championship game proved to be the toughest game for the Turses, as they ran into an inspired Jolly Trotter quintet. The Jolly Trotters reached the final round by virtue of upset wins over the Ranch Hands and the heavily favored Northerners.

Turses Trotters had a one-point lead at halftime, but the Jolly Trotters opened up in the early minutes of the second half, and maintained about a 5 point lead for the bulk of the period. the Jolly boys had a six point lead and things were looking dark for the Turses.

At this point the Turses showed their championship mettle. They switched into a pressing man-to-man defense and forced the Jolly Trotters into errors which eventually spelled their defeat. In the remaining five minutes they out-rebounded outshot, and outhustled the surprised opposition.

Team Triumph

The final ledger read Turses Trotters 33 and the Jolly Trotters 28 in what represented a great team triumph for captain Joe Murphy's boys.

Mention should be given of the other boys who were indispensible to the Trotter cause. Jack O'Malley, and Vic Baron all of whom hail from Hazelton; and Joe Mason from Pittsburgh.

It took the predominantly-senior team three years to cop a title, but Turses Trotters feel it was worth the wait.

It was erroneously reported in the VILLANOVAN two weeks ago that besides winning the intramural basketball title, the Turses Trotters had also won the football championship.

The actual winner in football was the Playboys team. Possible source of the error lies in the fact that senior Joe Murphy captained both teams.

Take a Puff... It's Springtime

He Wants More Like Godesky

BY BILL VINCENT

It's an old adage of sports that "them that has, gits." Don't you ever believe it.

Item: The Villanova track team has ridden the crest of collegiate success for the past three years. The 1957 club was called the "greatest college team in the history of the United States.

But today Coach "Jumbo" Jim Elliott has asked the VILLANOVAN to insert an advertisement pleading foll all Villanova student who have any experience in the feild events to report to hif at the track.

He's on the Prowl

In short, "Jumbo" is hard up for athletes. He's found that the usual source—scholarships—has started to dry up.

Right about now someone will object. "What about Delany, Collymore, Reavis, Stead, Holup and the rest of them?

Sure, they're great. But there aren't enough of them. Not that Elliott expects to have dozens of stars. But he does not have the depth he would like not have the depth he would like. When the Wildcats take part in dual meets this year, they won't have much to offer in the discus, javelin and shot put.

McGroarty Out

Jim McGroarty, expected to help out considerably in the weight events, was barred for a year by the National Collegeiate Athletic Association.

Elliott will be quite fortunate if his search is as successful as one he conducted last year. At that tife he found himself with a shortage of freshman runners. He went to see the intramural cross-country championship and came away with Bob Godesky.

The name Godesky might not have brought many knowing nods before last weekend. The muscular young man made the squad a year ago, but did not creat any great stir.

He seemed to develop a great liking for Philadelphia, however, even though he hails from Rockaway Beach, Long Island. He won the 1000-yard novice race in the Inquire Games last year, and then came back to cop the 1000-yard handicap in the same meet this year.

But at the Quantico Relays last weekent, Godesky showed that he could help the undermanned Wildcats in a big way in the next three years.

He ran the three-quarters of a mile in the distance medley in the very good time of 3:07. What was more important was that he made up a deficit that reached 75 yards at one juncture.

Second Distance Title

Ron Delany took the baton from Godesky and eased to a 4:17.3 mile to give Villanova the distance medley title for the second time in the two-year history of the Quantico Relays.

The Wildcats' time of 10:10.7 broke their time of two years ago and set them up as the club to beat in that event throughout the Spring season.

Ed Collymore sped to a 47.4 quarter mile in the second leg of the distant medley, a wonderful time if one considers the rainy conditions.

Second in Mile

The Wildcat mile relay team, using the men who will hold the same positions in this weekend's Queen'-Iona Relays, took second to Ohio State. The quartet of Charley Stead, George Sydnor, Delany and Collymore did the distance in 3:16.1 The Buckeyes' time was 3:15.3.

Vic DiMaio, Stead, Jim Blackburn and Godesky, all underclassmen, looked very good in taking third in the sprint medley, just five yards behind Michigan and three yards back of Manhatten.

Again it was Godesky who was the sparkler. This time he banged out the final half mile in 1:54, making up a large gap and almost giving Villanova another trophy.

In the individual events, Phil Reavis tied for top honors with George Dennis in the high jump, both doing 6-4, and Bob Holup took fifth in the 120-yard high hurdles.

Errors Plague Mahan Nine

By JOE FITZPATRICK

If the Villanova pitching staff decides to go on strike in the near future, it wouldn't be a surprise to anyone.

With the season still young (only three games played) it looks like the Wildcat baseball team is doomed to follow the eaxmple of their football and basketball predecessors—costly mistakes at the wrong time.

And the pitching staff has been suffering the brunt of the Villanovans' fatal miscue, especially in the last two contests, both 4-3 squeakers lost in the last inning.

Of course, it wasn't that way at the beginning, but let's save the best for last.

Loss to Teachers

The latest loss came Monday afternoon in the home opener behind Goodreau Stadium, when the Main Liners were toppled by West Chester State Teachers after taking an early lead.

Villanova put together all four of its hits and three Ram errors to score three in the third frame and take a 3-2 lead (West Chester's Butch Shockley unloaded a terrific two run homer in the second), but a three base wild throw by catcher Hank Nichols in the ninth gave the visitors two runs and the win.

Soph Hurlers

Soph Bob Kropiewnicki took the loss, relieving classmate Bob Bauser (who had arm trouble) early in the game.

Those late innings blues also told the story at Penn last Thursday.

Two unearned runs in the eighth dealt staff stalwart Jack Kelly a 4-3 loss, as Villanova fell completely apart with six errors.

Kelly gave up only three hits while his teammates were blasting out nine. Hank Nichols drove in two Wildcat run with a pair of hits, and shortstop Jack Donatucci also hit safely twice.

Perfect in Field

But perfect field play was the order of the day in the season's opener, as the Main Liners downed Temple, 6-3.

Kropiewnicki took credit for the mound work, tossing steady eight hit ball at the Owls, while Donatucci, Larry Masotti and Bob Anthony were collecting two hits apiece.

A game with Seton Hall last Saturday was cancelled.

The Wildcats meet Princeton away today. If they hope to chalk up a win, the defense will have to tighten up.

Either that or the pitchers had better not let anybody even touch the ball.

Juniors Announce Muff Day in Week's Festivities

By JAY BORFF

Junior Week Muff Day will be held on Wednesday afternoon, April 30, it was announced this week by co-chairman Jim Klein and Bill Hixson. This is the first year that a Junior Week sports day of such proportions has been held at Villanova.

Just as in the regular freshmen-sophomore Muff Day in October, such events as wheel barrow races, 100-yard dashes, tug-of-war, relays, and many others will be held.

Teams are to be formed according to different wings and floors in the dormitories and also from various groups of dayhops. Anyone intercsted in forming a team can get entry forms from Klein or Hixson in 313 Sullivan.

The completed forms must be submitted to the co-chairmen prior to 2:30 p.m. the day of the games.

Team Scoring

Scoring will be as follows: first place—five points; second place—three points; and third place—two points. A committee will compile the team totals and announce the winner of Muff Day.

The races and field events will open the Muff Day program at 2:30 p.m. At 3:00 there will be a softball game between the juniors and some members of the faculty. At 4:00 there will be another softball game between the juniors and a team of seniors.

Anyone who would like to play on either of the two junior teams should make that fact known to Klein or Hixson.

Faculty No Sweat

An unidentified source was quoted as saying the better playseniors. As he said, "We can ers would be needed to face the throw almost anyone against the faculty and still win easily."

A faculty member who shall be nameless took issue with the latter statement. "They'll be surprised," he said. "From what I've seen, most of the juniors will find their obesity getting in the way of any attempts at athletics."

He said it, but immediately his eyes fell to his own protreding abdomen. He smiled.

Blue-White Off

The Athletic Department has announced cancellation of its plans to hold the 6th Annual Blue-White Day which was scheduled for Saturday, May 3 of Junior Week.

Frank Reagan, Director of Athletics, stated that a conflict in dates has eliminated a track meet scheduled with Penn State. Because of the time element it has not been posible to secure a representative substitute.

Reagan stated that "a sports cornival such as Blue-White Day would be lacking the feature attraction without the appearance of our outstanding track team. Therefore, rather than trying to stage an event with the 'star' attraction missing, it has been deemed advisable to forgo it for this year. We are looking forward to resuming Blue-White Dav in 1959."

With the IC4A. Track and Field Outdoor Championships listed for our Stadium on Friday and Saturday, May 30 and 31, Villanova students and fans will be afforded the opportunity of seeing the track team under most favorable conditions.

Junior Week Opens Sunday Night

The Class of 1959 will enter "the finest week of their college days" this Sunday when the NFCCS Variety Show opens events of the 20th annual Junior Week.

"All arrangements have finally been made, decorations are almost completed and Juniors are storing up sleep before the big show," Bob Murphy and Joe Schneider, co-chairmen of the week, told the class last Thursday.

"We predict that this can be for all Juniors the finest week of their college days," the co-chairmen said.

Sunday Opener

The NFCCS show, opening event this Sunday, will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Field House. Early arriving mothers as well as Juniors and their dates will attend the affair.

Talent from Villanova as well as several other area colleges will be represented.

Mother's Day, traditionally the most attended Junior Week function, will begin Monday with an 11 a.m. Mass. Class moderator, the Rev. Henry Weeks, O.S.A., will be the celebrant.

Planting of the class tree, luncheon, entertainment and a tour of the campus will follow the Mass. There will be an afternoon baseball game beween Villanova and Temple, at the stadium.

Contest Judging

Judging of the Diaper Dan contest pictures and a banquet in the Field House at 6:30 will conclude the day's events.

Classes will be suspended on Mother's Day for all Juniors.

Wilbur de Paris and his popular jazz band will entertain Juniors and their dates at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Field House. Tickets for the informal affair are priced at $1 a person.

Girls from Rosemont and Immaculata colleges are also expected to attend.

Amateur activity, athletic and theatrical, will be the order of Wednesday's events.

A track meet among Juniors, a softball game between Juniors and faculty members and another softball game pitting Juniors against Seniors will be Wednesday afternoon highlights.

Muff Schedule

Track will begin at 2:30, the faculty affair will start at 3 and the interclass game will be at 4.

Amateur Night will return to the campus for the first time in 15 years Wednesday night at 8. The Intramural Department-sponsored affair was an annual event for several years until cancelled abruptly in 1943.

There will be no Junior Week activity on Thursday.

Ancient Rome will be the theme for the Friday night Junior Prom. The Buddy Williams and the Stan Rubin bands will provide the music.

Over 400 Juniors and their dates are expected to attend the traditional formal dance which begins at 9 a.m. Roman columns, thousands of artificial flowers and a Roman chariot centerpiece will be the unique decorations.

Queen Crowned

The Queen of Junior Week will be crowned at 10:30. She will receive a dozen roses and a trophy. Over 110 pictures have been submitted to the queen contest.

The Saturday night dinner-dance will begin at the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia at 6:30. Plans for accomodating over 600 Juniors and their dates have been made.

The Paul Judge band will provide the dancing music for what may be the largest dinner-dance in the history of the University.

Junior Week activities for the Class of 1959 will end on Sunday, May 3rd, with a 10:30 Mass offered by Father Weeks.

Tickets for all the week's events have been on sale now for ten days. Most of the tables for the dinner-dance were sold soon after the opening of the sale last Thursday.

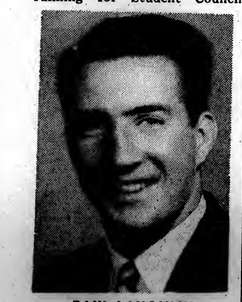
Class Candidates To Speak Before Voters Next Thurs.

All candidates for the presidency of a class or for the Student Council may speak in their own behalf at special class meetings to be held Thursday, May 1, during the activities period—10:30 a.m., it was announced today by Elections Chairman Paul Laughlin.

Nominations for the various offices were held last week, and the list of those named can be found elsewhere on this page. Elections will take place Wednesday, May 7.



Class meeting places will be as follows:

Juniors—207 Vasey Hall. Auditorium.

Sophomores — Vasey Hall Auditorium.

Freshmen—201 Vasey Hall.

Candidates for the office of president will be allowed to speak for three minutes. Those running for Student Council seats are to speak for two minutes.

Chairman Laughlin expressed the hope that all underclassmen will take time to attend these very important meetings. As he said, "It is very seldom in a school election that the voters know each and every candidate.

"At the same time, these meetings will enable the candidates to speak to large groups of students. In the past all campaigning has been addressed to a few persons at a time."

Johnson, NSA Veep, Addresses Council Thurs.

Willard Johnson, Educational Affairs Vice-President of the United States National Student Association, will speak here tomorrow night at the Student Congress meeting, it was announced by Pat Nicholson, Villanova's Student Body President.

Johnston will speak to the Congress on the advantages and benefits to be gained if the Student Council were to gain membership in the USNSA, a move which the Council is presently considering.

A former student body president of the University of California, Los Angeles, 21 year old Johnson was a senior honors student in political sciences. In addition to receiving numerous awards for student government, Johnston founded the Pasadena Youth Council—serving as its first president, and initiated UCLA's "Project Africa."

Nicholson said that he expected the speech to clearly explain the "hows and whats" of the USNSA and felt that it would help the Congress members decide whether or not they feel that Villanova should seek membership.

Both Nicholson and Don Kempf were sent by last year's conference as observers.

The chow line for the Junior Dinner Dance started early—three weeks in advance, as the juniors mobbed the office in Dougherty Hall where tickets were sold last week.

Curtin, Scogna, Hixson Sr. Presidency Nominees

Three juniors, representing each of the three undergraduate divisions, were nominated for the presidency of the Senior Class at a noisy session last week.

Those nominated for the class presidency were John J. Curtin, English major; Oscar Scogna, Accounting major, and William Hixson, Mechanical Engineering student.

Curtin, a 20-year-old resident student from Kennett Square, Pa., has been active in class affairs during the past three years, serving as chairman of the the Sophomore Cotillion, member of the Ring Committee, member of the Orientation Committee for two years and co-publicity chairman of the Charity Ball.

Scogna, a 20-year-old Philadelphian, served on the class Steering Committee this year and was chairman of arrangements for the dinner-dance. He is a member of the Accounting Society and the Beta Gamma Debating Society.

Muff Day Co-chairman

Hixson, a 20-year-old resident from Washington, D. C., has served as class treasurer for two years. He is co-chairman of the Muff Day planned for Junior Week and a member of the Orientation Committee during his sophomore year.

More than 250 Juniors attended the nominations in Vasey Hall. Chairman of the Student Council Elections Committee, Paul Laughlin, received the nominations from the loud, but orderly, audience.

Sports Highlight Of Fathers' Day Festivities, May 10

Sports activity, including the traditional Oldtimers' basketball game, will highlight the annual Father's Day fete, May 10th.

In the past such V.U. greats as Bobby Schaefer, Paul Arizin, Larry Hennessy, Jimmy Smith, and Jack Devine have appeared in the game.

According to co-chairmen Vince Caracio and Walt DeGroft this is the First time the game has been held on Father's Day. The game is usually scheduled for Blue-White Day.

The Father's Day committee has announced that the days activities will begin at 11 o'clock when Mass will be celebrated at the outdoor shrine.

Luncheon will be served after Mass. Ray Lyons, chairman of the luncheon committee, said last week that tentative plans indicate that the luncheon will be served in the cafeteria of the new C and F building.

The afternoon entertainment will get underway at 2 o'clock when the Villanova baseball team will play host to the Seton Hall nine from South Orange, N. J.

At 3 o'clock the fathers and their sons will see films of the Villanova track triumphs in the 1956 Olympic Games.

Films will show Ron Delany winning the 1500 meters; Charley Jenkins leading the United States team to victory in the 1600 meter relay, and Phil Reavis representing the United States in the high jump.

A banquet will be held in the Field House. The dinner will be catered by Smyth Catering Company which served at the Mother's Day banquet last year.

Letters of invitation have been sent to all fathers of seniors. Any senior whose father was overlooked is asked to see Bob Mahoney in room 245, Sheehan Hall.

Bill Lesko, chairman of the ticket committee, has announced that tickets are now on sale in the Day Hop cafeteria. The sale will continue until Thursday, May 8th.

The price of the tickets is $6.50. This includes all of the day's activities.

Co-chairman DeGroft expressed hope for a successful affair. He said he expects 700 fathers and sons to attend.

Villanovan Editors Named, O'Rourke In Top Position

By BOB MULCAHY
Ex-Editor in Chief

Lawrence M. O'Rourke, Jr., English major from Philadelphia, has been named the new Editor-in-Chief of the VILLANOVAN, effective immediately, it was announced last week by the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., moderator.

He succeeds Robert E. Mulcahy, senior History major, who held the position of editor for one year.

O'Rourke became a member of the VILLANOVAN staff in his sophomore year, and served as Managing Editor during 1957-58.

Two other junior English majors were named to the top editorial posts of the newspaper.

Curtin, Goldschmidt Assist

Jack Curtin, who served as Sports Editor and Associate Editor the past year, will take over the Managing Editor spot, vacated by O'Rourke. Curtin is a veteran member of the staff, having joined in his freshman year.

Tom Goldschmidt, another member who joined in his sophomore year, will assume the duties of Associate Editor, a position held this year by Curtin and Joe Kinney. Goldschmidt served a semester as Sports Editor.

Father Rongione, and Mulcahy, also released the new editorial staff which will assist the head trio in the publication of the newspaper.

Other named included Bill Christy and Ray Quaglia, Feature Editors; Frank Dynan, News Editor; Paul Buckley, Campus News Editor; Joe Fitzpatrick, Sports Editor; Jack Serafin, Frank Cunningham and Bill Christman, Copy Editors; Rodger Van Allen and Bill Vincent, Assistant Sports Editors; Al Stoughton and Al Lawler, Photography Editors; Frank Connolly, Art Editor; Harry Bruecker, Circulation Manager, and Sal Borgese, Business Manager.

Christy and Quaglia are both English majors and replace Frank Delany and John Kennedy in their positions. Quaglia, a humor columnist for the paper, is a relative newcomer, while Christy is a veteran staff member.

Buckley was a member of the sports staff this year, while Dynan, a member of the news and feature staffs, will handle the front page stories. Ed Karrer and Joe Wheeler held these posts previously.

Fitzpatrick, Van Allen and Vincent were on the sports staff this year also. The former is another junior English major and the others are sophomores.

Christman, Cunningham and Serafin were all reporters this past year. They will replace John Fixl, Bill Ickes and Ken Miller.

All Veterans

The Photography and Art editors are all familiar with their positions, having held them this year. The first two are engineers and Connolly is an English major.

Brucker, a pre-medical student, is assuming an important post, formerly held by Jack Garrity, while Borgese worked as the assistant of Paul Terruso during the past year.

V. U. Law School To Hold Institute

An Institute on Church-State problems sponsored by the School of Law, postponed last month because of weather conditions, will be held this Friday and Saturday, it was announced last week by Thomas J. O'Toole, Director of the Institute and Assistant Dean of the law school.

Devoted this year to a study of the subject "Seetarian Freedom in a Democratic Society," the Institute was established more than two years ago as a result of a rapid rise in the number and variety of legal issues affecting Church State relations.

Presentation of a library dealing with Church State issues will be presented to the School of Law during activities Friday by Philadelphia Judge Theodore L. Reimel.

The library consists of a growing collection of texts, periodicals and writings on the subject and will be housed in the Church State quarters in the law building.

Student Congress Votes On Nicholson's Proposal To Amend Council Constitution

The Student Congress will vote tomorrow night on a proposal to amend the newly-adopted constitution and by-laws of the Student Council which has been recommended by the President of the Villanova student body, Pat Nicholson.

The two major changes would create three executive vice-presidents and institute a Religious Affairs Committee.

The three executive vice-presidents would aid the officers of the Student Council with some of the administrative duties which they must assume. They would correlate the work done by the officers.

Lessen President's Burden

As Nicholson pointed out to the VILLANOVAN, "in a way this will lessen the burden of work which the President of the student body must necessarily assume as the constitution now reads."

The three executive vice-presidents are to be appointed by the president of the student body (most likely at the start of the academic year). Their term of office will run until the election of a new student body president.

The executive vice-presidents may be removed if their work proves unsatisfactory.

Juniors or Seniors

The three new officers must be juniors or seniors during their term of office. They may be members of the Student Council, but that is not a prerequisite.

They will become part of the student Cabinet along with the Student Council officers and all standing committee chairmen. Another change will put the senior delegate of the National Federation of Catholic College Students on the Cabinet.

The three executive vice-presidents will be called: student government vice-president; student affairs vice-president and educational affairs vice-president.

The new Student Affairs Committee, if approved by the Student Congress, would have as its primary aim the fostering and development of student religious organizations and programs.

Amateur Night Committee Asks Performers To Sign For Show Held On April 30

The Amateur Night Committee has put out a last-minute call for prospective performers for its show on Wednesday night, April 30.

Amateur Night has not been held on the Villanova campus since 1943. This will be the first time that the show will take place during Junior Week.

Junior Week co-chairmen Bob Murphy and Joe Schneider have announced that the first-place winner will get a $25 prize. The next two finishers will also get cash prizes.

Go to 109 Alumni

Anyone who is interested in taking part in the show but who has not filled out an entry form can do so by coming to the Intramural Office, 109 Alumni.

One of the earliest entries came from Ron Delany, Villanova's outstanding track star. The senior C. and F. major sings (Irish songs, naturally).

Among the first batch of entrants the committee received were those of freshmen Ed Quinn, an engineer, who sings popular songs; Ken MacGillivray, junior history major, who is a pianist; Paul Hessler, junior mechanical engineer, who leads a German Village Band.

More Talent

Also, Bill Lyons, sophomore Arts major, who sings, tells jokes and dances; junior Andy Johnson, C. and F., who does impersonations, and Bernie Dean, junior C. and F. major, who plays the steel guitar.

Jim Corey, president of the Intramural Council, reiterated a statement he made when the Amateur Night talent show was first announced: "We are not looking for professional performers. This show is strictly for fun. I hope that some guys who just want to clown around in front of an audience will sign up."

There will be no charge for admission to the show.

Washington Takes WVIL Top Position

William J. Washington, junior English major from Morristown, N.J., was named station manager of WVIL at a special meeting last week.

The 20-year old Washington was WVIL Music Director during the past year. He joined the staff as a freshman and has served as both an engineer and announcer for the campus radio station.

Washington succeeds Henry Nichols as Station Manager.

Mara Program Director

Gary N. Mara, 20-year junior from Newington, Conn., has been named Program Director. Mara, who was Production Manager this year, also joined the staff as a freshman.

Robert Rafano, junior Political Science student, has been renamed as Public Relations Director. Rafano has been responsible this year for most of the publicity the station has received.

Washington also announced other department heads who will direct operations of WVIL next year.

Those named include Michael Kavcak Chief Announcer; James Hull, Business Manager; Eugene Brochu, Music Director; James Corey, Traffic Manager and Personnel Director; John Obeilise, News and Sports Director, and William Hearn, Librarian.

Currall Production Manager

Edward Currall, junior English major, has been named Production Manager to succeed Mara.

Two others named will direct the technical end of the broadcasting.

They are Richard Phelps, Studio Engineer, and Sam Pietrofitta, Chief Technical Engineer.

Accounting Award Given Szablowski

Alex Szablowski, senior Accounting major, has received an award from the Accounting Society for academic achievement among senior members.

Szablowski has received straight A grades in each accounting course he has taken. He was active in the Accounting Society for three years and was also a member of the Villanova football team.

A resident, his home is at 611 Carsonia Ave., Pennside, Reading, Pa. He graduate from Reading Central Catholic High School where he played football, basketball, and baseball.

He won an athletic scholarship to Villanova for his activities in football. He hopes to work in the field of public accounting after graduation.

Jack Goodyear, senior Arts major and president of the Marine Semper Fidelis Society is congratulated by Lieutenant Colonel John Missar U.S.M.C. on the fine turnout at the organization's annual communion breakfast.

K of C Meets Again Tonite, 200 At Initial Meeting

By FRANK DYNAN
News Editor

Plans for the organization of a campus council of the Knights of Columbus were prepared last Wednesday night at a meeting of more than 200 students and faculty members.

Applications for membership were distributed and the aims, purposes and advantages of joining were explained. The application forms are now being processed.

At the meeting were Mr. Frank Bain, a member of the Supreme Council of Hartford, Connecticut, who spoke on the general aims and ideals of the organization, and Mr. Joseph Wyatt, a Grand Knight of the Upper Darby Council, who talked on the activities of individual councils.

Other Speakers

Edward C. Delahunty, Esq., State Advocate; Charles S. Shillingford, State Warden; and John J. MacGrory, District Deputy, also addressed the meeting.

Together these speakers gave a very comprehensive view of the Knights of Columbus in its social, charitable, civic and religious activities.

Another meeting has been called for tonight at 7:30 PM in the Vasey Hall auditorium. A K. of C. insurance agent will attend this meeting to explain the insurance policy which all prospective members under 26 must take out. In addition, future plans will be discussed, especially those concerning the election of officers and the conferring of the three degrees of initiation.

The offices to be filled will be Council Grand Knight, Deputy Council Grand Knight, Financial Secretary, two Wardens and various program chairmen.

Three Degrees

It is planned that the three degrees will be conferred and the officers elected before the end of the present school year.

For those who missed last Wednesday's meeting, applications are still being accepted. Those interested should see either the Reverend Norbert Whitley O.S.A., University Chaplain, or Frank Delany, today if possible. All those who join now will be charter members.

In response to a request from Father Whitley, a number of faculty members attended and applied for membership.

Curtin Elected Pres. of Lit. Club

John J. Curtin, junior English major and Managing Editor of the VILLANOVAN, was installed as president of the Literary Club at a special meeting last week.

Curtin, 20-year-old resident, succeeds senior English major Joseph A. Kinney to the presidency.

Three other English majors also assumed posts in the organization.

Thomas A. McKenna followed Leo Rogers as vice-president; Paul A. Buckley replaced Kenneth Miller as secretary, and Lawrence M. O'Rourke succeeded David Belcher as treasurer.

All new and old officers except Belcher were members of the VILLANOVAN staff last year. O'Rourke is now paper Editor-in-Chief and Buckley is Campus News Editor.

Curtin, in addition to the duties of a presiding officer, has announced he will act as program chairman next year. Tom Martinez, senior English major, handled that important post this year.

Law School Gets $13,000, Used For Research Project

The School of Law has received a gift of $13,000 to enable it to undertake a study of the law relating to subdivision, building, zoning and other matters relating to the suburban home building industry.

Class Nominations Held

dent from Detroit, Mich., were nominated for class vice-presidency at the same meeting.

A smaller, less noisy crowd of 175 turned out for the sophomore nominations. Three men were nominated for the important post of Junior Class president.

They were John Mulcahy and Sheldon Pollack, both Commerce and Finance students and Raymond Rafferty, a student in the General Arts division.

Villanovan Editor

Mulcahy, a 19-year-old resident from Short Hills, N.J., was chairman of the Sophomore Cotillion and Morgue Editor on the VILLANOVAN.

Pollack, a 19-year-old resident who lives in New York state, was a member of the Orientation Committee and quite active in class affairs.

Rafferty, a 19-year-old Philadelpian and graduate of St. Joseph's Prep School, was elected to serve on the Student Council as day-hop representative last year.

Nominated for Junior Class Vice-Presidency were Joseph Durocher, an Industrial Administrations student from Pensecola, Fla., and Ronald Dobies, an engineering student from Toledo, Ohio.

Freshmen Nominations

John "Whitey" Lyons, senior Political Science major, was presiding officer as more than 150 freshmen turned out for nominations for Sophomore Class officers.

Nominated for the Presidency were Thomas McHale, Commerce and Finance; Robert DeLisa, General Arts; Felix Petrillo, Commerce and Finance; Louis Retacco, General Arts; Elwood McCarthy, General Arts; Robert Sealia, Commerce and Finance, and Kevin Flynn, General Arts.

There were no freshman engineering students nominated for class presidency.

An engineering major, Amin Khoury, was nominated for class Vice-President.

Also named were David Doyle, Jay McKay, and Richard Keane, all Commerce and Finance.

Others Nominated

More than 50 other students throughout the three classes were nominated for other class offices.

Listed for Senior Class officers were:

SECRETARY — Ronald Anderson, T. Walker Lloyd, Matthew Mazza, Edward Knepley, Joseph Schneider and John Taormina.

TREASURER—Michael Axt, William Snow, Gerard Kerwin and James Hull.

ALUMNI REPRESENTATIVE — John P. Moran, John Taormina, Lawrence Palacio and Robert Wagner.

RESIDENT ARTS—Joseph Mason, Thomas McPherson and Thomas Goldschmidt.

DAY-HOP ARTS — John P. Kelley and John Rumbarger.

RESIDENT C and F—Francisco Pancheo, Jay Freeman, Edward Utsch and John Taormina.

DAY-HOP C and F — John O'Malley, James McHale, Frank Miller, John Hone and William Gilhool.

RESIDENT ENGINEERING —Burce Irving, Joseph Driscoll, Louis Mafaro, Joseph Krackeler and Richard Phelps.

DAY-HOP ENGINEERING —John P. Moran, Robert Wagner and Frank Lamprecht.

Other nominations for Junior Class offices included:

T'n'T To Present 'Who's Foo' May 14 to 17; Peer, Klesius Gilligan Hold Lead Roles

The Turf and Tinsel production of 1958 will burlesque the typical Hollywood detective movie of 1930 in its annual production, May 14th to 17th in the Field House.

The production will be a slapstick parody on Fu Mancnu, the fictional character of Sax Rohmer.

The author, Villanova Alumni Director Mr. George Pequignot, uses San Francisco's Chinatown as the scene of his story.

Basically, the plot centers around two slow witted detectives who try to stop a Tong doctor with mystical powers, a girl evangelist and the ever-present vamp.

Norm Peer, and Mike Klesius will play Hyde and Sheek, the detectives. Dr. Fu, the mystical doctor, will be played by Jim Gilligan while Dave Belcher will play the assistant, Ah Heuie.

Susan Oglethorpe, the girl evangelist, and Thrush, the vamp, will be portrayed by Gerry Tackis and John Kennedy, respectively. Paul Laughlin will be the chief of police.

Rounding out the cast are Don Kempf as Grace, Jerry Gobright as Millie, Joe Lynch as Elsie, and Jim Lynch as Yap.

Bill Yong will be Yee Tong, Tom Kopczynski will be Ring Aling, Gerry Cordarell plays How Cum and Mike Rafferty plays Hu Shee.

Joe Costa and Bill Lyons are cast as One Eye and the lamp lighter, in that order.

Directing the play is Miss Betty Green. Faced with the difficult task of making the production perfect, Miss Green believes "that this year's T' n T production will be as enjoyable and as entertaining as past productions."

Concerning the difficulties faced by Miss Green, Mr. Pequignot said that "the Chinatown motif adds certain problems to the production; mainly in the use of dialect."

Lunch Schedule For Mother's Day

Lunch for all resident students, except those escorting their mothers to the Junior Week luncheon, will be served in the new C and F cafeteria net Monday.

Students will enter by way of the locker room entrance and will leave by way of the far entrance (North).

all students should observe these regulations:

1. Students will eat in three sittings. The first sitting will be from 11:20 to 12:00. All students desiring to eat at this sitting must be in the cafeteria and seated by 11:40.

2. The second sitting will be from 12:20 to 1:00. All students desiring to eat at this sitting must be in the cafeteria and seated by 12:40.

3. The third sitting will be from 1:20 to 2:00. All students desiring to eat at this sitting must be in the cafeteria and seated by 1:30.

There are a limited number of openings for tenors and basses in the Villanova Singers for the coming year. Auditions will be given every Tuesday between 6 and 8 o'clock at Vasey Hall.

THEY DON'T CARE

The disappointing turnout at Student Council nominations last week is keen demonstration of the apathy among many of the students.

An overflow crowd in the Pie Shoppe when something of class importance is being enacted just across the road, is a sure sign of disinterest.

We do not favor a small group of students guiding the destiny of any campus organization. Many of the activities when laid on the shoulders of a few take too much time. The eventual result can be lower grades.

When a group is organized, though, and each member is willing to put in an appropriate and well spent period of time, success is assured. Some of those nominated in last week's session might not be proper candiates for student office.

If some of the ineffective are elected however and a class event fails, those in the Pie Shoppe sipping their coffee can have no complaint. They'll need an excuse, though. And sipping coffee in the Pie Shoppe is not a valid one.

SOMEBODY ELSE'S MONEY

The objective of any system of education is the development of a thinking responsible student. The responsibility which most acquire at Villanova is not merely a by-product of education but in truth a result of it.

Some undergraduates, however, feel that acceptance of any form of responsibilty need not come during college days. It will come, they rationalize, when it is time to receive the diploma and "meet the world."

This is merely an introduction to something which should not remain unsaid.

The recently opened two-million dollar Commerce and Finance building has already seen examples of childish and unnecessary destruction. Names have been carved in desks, lighted cigarettes have burned the floor, and coat hangers have been needlessly broken.

Those few who refuse to accept the responsibility of maintaining a fine building do not even merit our words. They deserve only our pity.

LIVE WHILE YOU LIVE

Sunday afternoons in the Springtime are not usually spent studying. Some drive to nearby resorts, others lose a little Winter tightness by exercise. Others ruin their posture and their eyes resting on the living room couch watching the ball game.

Not that we have anything against any of these activities, but we do have a suggestion. Philadelphia is a wonderful city. It is full of museums, parks and national shrines. Many suburban people as well as even Philadelphians themselves have never taken the time to visit Independence Hall or the Art Museum.

So our suggestion is to get out next Sunday, unless we have a monsoon so typical this time of year, and visit some local spot of interest.

We can't insure a good time. This is left to the individual. But if millions have been there and returned a little more cultured, the site must be worth examing.

JAZZ ANNOYING TO CONCERT FAN

To the Editor:

While I am a Junior and think myself loyal to the class, the question arises instantly of why we had to have a jazz band during the Junior Week festivities.

It seems to me, and I think myself a rather normal individual, that there is little place for jazz on a modern university campus. We are here primarily to learn beautiful things. Certainly I don't consider jazz beautiful.

Of course, many of the readers of the paper think that jazz is better than what they term "long hair music." I feel though that in the interests of better enjoyment of Junior Week such a concert could have been scheduled. I shall talk to friends among the Sophomore Class and urge them to avoid inviting a jazz group to campus next year.

SUNBATHERS NOT FOR BASEBALL

To the Editor:

I was in attendance at the Villanova - Scranton baseball game last Saturday. As I walked from the entrance next to the Field House, across the track and over to the baseball diamond, I was struck by the large number of students sun bathing in the stadium.

I ask you, editor, and I ask all the members of the student body, why didn't those sunbathers have enough loyalty to walk fifty feet or so and watch the ball game. Are they too lazy or just don't they give a darn?

Really, I don't expect the attendance to be any better next week, but this is just to protest the miserable demonstration given by the sunbathing students.

Integrity On Trial

We're concerned over the recent hearings of the Senate subcommittee investigating corruption in labor unions. Under the chairmanship of Senator John McClellan (D-Ark.), this committee has been responsible during the past two years for the great change in outlook towards unions and leaders.

The committee has most recently been questioning members of the Philadelphia Teamsters local 107. Chief Counsel for the committee, Robert Kennedy, has changed the officers of the local union with misuse of teamsters' funds.

When the officers appeared before the membership in Philadelphia last Sunday, they were greeted with a petition signed by members and wives of members stating complete confidence in the leaders.

The petition explained that since the present leaders came into office members have always had "food on their table, shelter over their heads, and a little to put aside."

Under the previous group of leaders, the petition stated, jobs were scarce and the necessitites of life were not always available.

We can thus see why many members of local 107 carried the leaders on their shoulders Sunday and cheered them with nothing short of fervor. Despite this loyalty, however, and the proven ability of the union leaders to produce better conditions, this question arises:

If the Senate subcommittee is able to substantiate its charges—Does this end, i.e., better living conditions, justify the means, i.e., chiseling leaders? The members will have to answer this question. It could be one of empty stomachs versus a clear conscience.—L. M. O'R.

FACULTY READY FOR 'BIG' GAME

To the Editor:

This is just a note to your Mr. Jay Borff who last week in his Muff Day article had a statement attributed to a faculty member concerning the upcoming Junior-Faculty softball game.

The faculty member appeared unsure of victory. I can speak for the entire team that we will battle every inch of the way and attain success.

EXPLANATION ASKED ON CLARK COLUMN

To the Editor:

Your political writer, Mr. John P. Kelley, last week in a column called Political Roundup, said that Senator Clark's renege on a proxy vote given in charge of Mr. Dilworth demonstrated the "political power of Joe Clark."

Mr. Kelley declined to comment on wether or not Senator Clark was justified in the withdrawl of his proxy. Certainly if he had faith enough in Mr. Dilworth to give him the vote originally, wasn't it a breach of trust to suddenly withdraw the vote.

Kelley states that the vote was withdrawn because Clark while Mayor had various conflicts with Moore. Few readers know anything about these conflicts. As a resident of Philadelphia, I am interested in what is taking place in the city.

As Mr. Kelley states, Clark is being considered for the Presidency. Should we not then hear more about him?

'What Is A College Girl?'—A Novice Answers

By JACK CURTIN
Managing Editor

Between the childishness of high school and the dignity of marriage, we find a sturdy creature called the college girl. College girls come in assorted weights, heights, sweaters and sneakers, but all college girls have the same creed: to spend every second of every minute of every weekend engaged in social activities.

College girls are found everywhere—talking to, dancing with, seeking out, ignoring, following, holding hands with or running from boys. Schoolmates rib them, administrators punish them, alumni envy them, high school students idolize them, teachers criticize them, college boys adore them, adults tolerate them and parents worry about them. A college girl is excitement in lipstick, Adventure in bermudas, Pride in an evening gown and the Best of Young Womanhood in a polo coat.

Womanhood in a Polo Coat

Cherchez La Cigarettes

When she won't give you a tumble, a college girl is dull, stuck-up, conceited, unfriendly and lacks personality. Just when you finally think you've begun to impress her, she has to go home, sees a friend she must talk to, meets an old boyfriend, has to go buy cigarettes, asks you who that boy is across the room or completely changes the subject.

A college girl is a composite—she has a taste for champagne, an intellect for the theatre, a desire for extravagant parties and a passion for weekend trips. But, more often than not, she is just as happy at a neighborhood movie. To her date, she has the grace of a ballet dancer, the intelligence of a professor, the beauty of a movie star, the personality of a politician and the charm of a princess.

Good Ol' Grandma

To a rejected suitor, she has, for all practical purposes, the personality of a hound dog, just enough intelligence to stay alive, the charm of a truck driver, no personality whatsoever, only the slightest conception of how to dance correctly and is as attractive to him as his own grandmother.

To her parents, a college girl is someone who never studies enough, dates the strangest boys and is not as serious, far-sighted or intelligent as they were in their yester-year. She is their burden of joy, and never seems to fully appreciate what they have done for her.

A college girl likes Ivy League schools, trips on weekends, proms, dates with cars, filter-tipped cigarettes, football games, big men on campus, souvenirs, scarves from boy's colleges, being pinned, knee socks and the quiet satisfaction which comes from telling her friends about an enjoyable date. She is not much for studying, staying in on weekends, blind dates, boys who jilt her friends, parental admonitions or wearing the same outfit very often.

The Grace of a Ballet Dancer

Wait'll Next Year

No one else looks forward so much to the end of the school year and then can't wait to get back. Nobody can generate so much excitement before an important dance, radiate such hope in a fraternity pin or be so forlorn alone in her room on a Saturday night. Nobody else can get so much pleasure from a simple phone call or speak with such wisdom on a crowded dance floor. No other mind could have crammed into it the appropriate remark for every occasion, the location of everything in her purse, every dance step conceivable, things she must or mustn't do when with a particular date and still remember the exact time she is due back home.

A college girl is a wonderful creature—you can criticize her, but you can't ignore her. You can say you think she's a phony, but you can't stay away from her. You can put her out of your life, but you can't put her out of your mind. Might as well admit it—be you college boy, parent or teacher—she is a part of your world, a symbol of the unknown future.

She is an untiring, determined kid doing her best to get the most of these happy and informative years. And, when you're low and discouraged, and feeling injured because someone has done something to hurt you, she can make you feel fine again in a flash with just two softly spoken words—"You're wonderful."

You Can't Stay Away from Her

Strictly Opinion

We Have It Rough-Almost

By BOB PINTO

It's hard to believe now, that someday you will have a hard time remembering Villanova distinctly. Your life will be mostly behind you and the sharp outlines of your memories will be smoothed, even obliterated by time. You will be the old man on the block who can remember back as far as the Second World War. You will describe to the youngsters an age glorified by memory.

"Why I can remember when a college degree was something that you strove for." You will speak slowly now, and the youngsters will watch your beard move as you talk. "Like it is now, every gyro operator and structural originator has one. But they're still just hacks and ditchdiggers to me. And school was school then," you'll say looking sternly into young eyes. "It was a system that could make a man. Twenty hours of classes a week, a week mind you, and I had to drive one of those automobiles that you've seen for forty-five minutes in the morning to get to school then back in the afternoon, and never driving over fifty miles an hour." They will smile at this revelation of your primitive beginnngs.

Blood and Guts Football

"We didn't have it soft like you kids. And it showed in the sports. We had men of real skill and strength. Now take this four dimensional air foam game of football you play. Why that's kid stuff. We used to just line up on a field and go at it. There was a lot of blood and injuries and once in a while a death. Four or five touchdowns made a high scoring game, not like now with the lively plasto that they use. All the sports were hard and tough. They produced the kind of men that you can't find anymore."

"But how come most of the records are better now?" one of them will ask, not really wanting to destroy what you have said, but just to stimulate your ramblings. The answer will be perfectly obvious. "Well, the conditions and the training are the reason. These fellas nowadays do nothing but practice, then when they start to tire, they just hop in a vibro, take some nutrio pills, and they can start right in again. We had to wait for our strength to return naturally, and after a tough meet or game, that could take a day or more.

You Couldn't Take It

The records may be a little better now, but the men aren't. If any of you had to go back seventy-five years, you'd be able to take it for about a week and then you would just fold up; because you're not tough. You've lost the real meaning of meeting nature hand to hand. In a way I feel very sorry fou you."

You will tell them over and over in many ways that your era was the best. That now life is soft and has lost its zest. That your age was better than their's. And the unbelievable part is that they will believe you.

Report From India

"Excuse me Sir Winthrop, how was tiger hunting today?" "Fine," Sir Winthrop said, removing a well-killed tiger from his right shoulder and throwing it upon the ground. "Very good, in fact." He looked down at me through large green eyes and smiled broadly. "Who are you?" he said. I told him and he laughed loud, picked me up and sat me on his shoulder. I pulled his ear, and mussed his hair. He liked me.

We walked back to his tent and he sat me on a broad wooden table next to his freshly poured cup of tea. "Tea?," he said. "Yes thank you," I answered. "You know, I never thought you existed," he said. "You do exist, don't you?" "I mean," he stuttered, "you are here and sitting in my tent?" I smiled excitedly, "yes, yes, I'm really here." I liked him too.

Rough Nite in Bread

I slept in the bread box in the kitchen tent that evening. Apparently Sir Winthrop didn't have a regular bed for me. I ran to meet him the next morning as soon as he left his tent.

Who's Blue

The sight of me shocked him, and he blinked his eyes unbelievingly. He tried to avoid me but I kept pulling at his trousers. He tried to kick me. I cried. "You're blue," he screamed, "Your little and blue."

"Last night was enough, I thought I was dreaming." "But I wuv you, I wuv you to bits," I said. He shot me with his tiger gun.

WUV AND KISSES,
RAMAR

A Final Thank You

By PAT NICHOLSON

This may sound a bit strange, but I'm sorry to say that it appears that my days and my columns at Villanova are fast coming to an end. Before the end of the year I hope to write two more columns for the VILLANOVAN. One will be an evaluation of the Student Council this year and its prospects for the future.

My last column I hope will be devoted to my favorite topic, The Spirit of Villanova.

Therefore, I want to take this opportunity to thank publically those members of the student body who have given so generously their time and effort to assist the student government of Villanova University.

This list naturally begins with the other officers of the Student Council, Don Kempf, Lou Pinto, and Bob Murphy. They have contributed greatly to the Student Council both here at Villanova and in our relations with other colleges and universities.

Besides the officers of the council, many other students have been extremely active. The standing committee chairmen Joe Murphy, Paul Laughlin, Leo Rudegeair, Tom Whalen, Gerry Degroft, and again Bob Murphy have all done their share.

Leo Rogers and Bruce Irving, Spirit Committee chairmen, certainly guided their group through an outstanding year. Paul Yurchak, our NFCCS Senior Delegate, has greatly increased Villanova's prestige in the National Federation of Catholic College Students. In addition he placed the NFCCS Commission in its proper perspective on the Villanova campus. Chuck Santangelo, our NFCCS Junior Delegate has done a good job with the NFCCS Travel Program.

A large number of underclassmen have been extremely active on the Student Council or in student government work. Juniors Jerry McGrath, Bill Murray, and Jerry Hepburn, Sophomores Tom Hoffman, John Mulcahy, and Tom Moakley, and Freshmen Jim Lynch and Frank Dunn have been exceptionally active members. This underclass participation is very important as it provides good experienced leaders for the future.

Worthy of special mention is the work of Gerry DeGroft, Bill Murray, and Ralph Vecchio on senior cars, Jerry McGrath on area clubs, Frank Delany on the Knights of Columbus, Tom Whalen and Dave Ogle on the used book service, Don Kempf, Tom Hoffman, and Tom Moakley on the constitution and on intercollegiate affairs, and Clem Birch and Bob Mulcahy for their advice and assistance.

Again I want to sincerely thank these and all the other members of the Student Council for their wonderful efforts this year.

On May 7, 1958 many of the members of next year's Student Council will be selected. I urge you to elect men who you know will do a good job. The sincerity and ability of next year's council members will have a great effect on the future of student government here at Villanova.

WHICH OF THESE WILL REIGN AS JUNIOR QUEEN?

Which one of these lovely ladies will be crowned queen of Junior Week? An answer to this question becomes more and more difficult as each day adds new beauties to the ever-growing list.

Fortunately, the judging of the contest is in the hands of the experienced Bob Cummings, who will narrow down the field to five finalists.

After Bob submits his list of finalists, a panel of faculty members will decide who will reign Queen. One thing we are sure of, the choice will be a difficult one.

LOVIS ADAM

Lovis, a private secretary for a local real estate firm, will be escorted to the Junior Week festivities by Industrial Administration major Bob Cunius. Lovis has blond hair and stands five feet five inches.

School NROTC Unit Drills, Prepares For Spring Review

With the advent of spring, Villanova's midshipmen are once more to be seen on the Mendel Field parade grounds on Tuesday afternoons from 2:30 to 4:30.

The immediate object of the Tuesday drill sessions is preparation for the annual spring Admiral's review which will take place in the Villanova Stadium on Tuesday, May 20.

Awards Given

Rear Admiral Ephriam R. McClean, Jr., USN, Commandant Fourth Naval District will review the Villanova midshipman battalion. Awards will be presented to several midshipmen at this time The review will be proceeded by an open house in Commodore John Barry Hall.

Company competition ended on Tuesday, April 15. Bravo Company won the battallion colors this year. The announcement of the color company took place at the annual midshipman formal ball last Friday evening.

Awards were presented to the officers of the winning company by Captain Neil R. Curtin, USN, Professor of Naval Science and commanding officer of the Villanova NROTC unit. William Oates, senior engineering student was the midshipman commander of the winning company.

Decided on Points

The winner of the company competition was decided on the basis of points awarded for excellence in drill, intramural sport, physical fitness competition and miscellaneous things such as the Red Cross blood drive in which the NROTC, representing approximately one-tenth of the total enrollment, contributed approximately one-third of the blood donated.

The NROTC battallion annual spring formal ball was held last Fridsy evening at the Club Del Rio in Manoa, Pa. The ball was dedicated to the senior midshipmen and was co-chairmaned by senior midshipmen John Moynihan and John Craft under the direction of the midshipmen recreation committee.

O-C Final Concerts Tonite, Tomorrow

The final program of the current Opera-Classica season will be given tonight and tomorrow in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Tonight the program will feature two stereophonic sound tapes: Tchaikovsky: Violin Concerto with Jascha Heifitz and Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 4 with Rubenstein.

A day-hop concert will be given tomorrow at 10:30. Saint-Saens Symphony No. 3 will be featured.

The deadline for application for admission into the society has been extended to April 30. Completed applications should be submitted to room 317, C and F building.

Charles Fritz, president of the Opera-Classica Society, was the guest of Rudolf Serkin, famed pianist at a tea given by the Philadelphia Orchestra last week.

New Graduate Science Program To Open

A new program, especially designed for high school science and mathematic teachers, will be inaugurated by the Graduate Division of Villanova University this summer.

Courses will be offered on a graduate level in the following areas—biology, chemistry, mathematics and physics.

The successful completion of 30 credit hours, plus the passing of a comprehensive examination, will lead to a Master's degree in the teaching of science. No thesis nor language examination will be required.

Five Summer or Less

The entire program can be completed in five summers or in a shorter time if courses are taken also during the fall and spring terms.

Since the program is designed to serve especially those who are required to teach two or more of the sciences, candidates for the M.T.S., may divide the total 30 credit hours among two or more areas most suitable to the background and needs of the individual.

Interesting Presentation Stressed

All courses are designed to impart those concepts of fundamental principle and modern developments in science which are of particular significance to the high school teacher and to demonstrate how this material may be presented in a manner calculated to evoke student interest and response.

Many Benefits

These courses will give high school science teachers the benefits of coming together in a university environment for their mutual help.

The teachers will increase their knowledge, deepen their understanding and enliven their interest in the subjects they are teaching.

The available teaching aids and laboratory techniques will be presented to the teachers.

The teachers will have the opportunity to make important contacts which can furnish illustrative materials for their own use.

The program coordinator will be the Reverend J. Bernard Hulbert, O.S.A., of the physics department.

Semper Fidelis Elections Thurs.

The Semper Fidelis Society has rescheduled its election of officers for tomorrow president, Jack Goodyear announced.

Phi Kappa Pi Frat Elects Driscoll To Presidency

Joseph Driscoll, junior Mechanical Engineer, was elected president of Phi Kappa Pi fraternity at a special meeting last week.

Driscoll succeeded Leo Rudegair as president. He was the former treasurer of the fraternity and a member of the class steering committee.

George Fraunces, a five year Electrical Engineering student, was named vice-president.

William Christman, Mechanical Engineer, is the new secretary. He succeeds Joseph Krackeler.

William Smith was named treasurer of the fraternity succeeding Joseph Driscoll. Smith is a Mechanical Engineer.

John Dineen will represent PKP on the student council. Dineen is a junior Electrical Engineer.

Corey To Head Debating Society

James W. Corey Jr., President of the Intramural Council, was elected President of the Beta Gamma Debating Society, at a special meeting last week.

Corey, who succeeded Robert O'Connor, is a junior social science student. He has been active in the society for the past two years.

Corey is also chief announcer for WVIL and an officer in the Villanova Singers.

Junior Arts student John R. Serafin will remain vice-president. He has been with Beta Gamma for two years. Serafin is a staff member of the VILLANOVAN and a regular NROTC student.

Frank R. Cunningham, junior Political Science major, was named corresponding secretary. Cunningham is currently a member of the class steering committee.

Oscar Scogna, junior C&F student and chairman of the Junior Dinner Dance will act as recording secretary. Sophomore Dominic Costa was elected treasurer of the society.

Merkert Elected To Head AIEE-IRE

Robert Merkert, Editor-in-Chief of the VILLANOVA ENGINEER, was elected president of the AIEE-IRE at a special meeting last week.

James McCullough was named vice-chairman while Frank McBride was named AIEE secretary.

Robert Wagner will hold the position of secretary of IRE. Wagner is a member of the Junior Class steering committee.

Joseph Mingione was named treasurer and William Christman, associate editor of the VILLANOVA ENGINEER, was named Student Council representative.

The annual drive for student membership in the Augustinian Seminary Guild will take place this week, chairman Jack Garrity announced Monday. All proceeds will help provide for the education of one seminarian.

Carmosky Heads Physics Club

John Carmosky, junior Physics major, was elected president of the Physics Club at a special meeting last week. Carmosky succeeded John Solarski.

Carmosky was formerly vice-president of the club. He is a regular NROTC student.

Succeeding Carmosky as vice-president is sophomore James Brazel, also a Physics major. Brazel will represent the club on the student council.

Albert Casella, a freshman, assumed the duties of treasurer.

The Student Council Election Committee has announced that nominations for office in the freshman class will be re-opened tomorrow at 10:30 in rm. 208 Vasey Hall, since so many frosh missed the first nominations because of a Commerce and Finance school meeting.

It was also announced that, in the Sophomore Class, where only one man is presently listed for the resident C and F council post, anyone can be nominated by approaching the Elections Committee up to 48 hours prior to the election.

Holds Two Villanova Records:

Holup Got Few Headlines, But He Will Be Missed

By FRED GREISIGER

At graduation this year Villanova's track team will lose many top athletes, among them such stars as Ron Delany, Phil Reavis—men whose names have been in the limelight constantly.

But on the other hand, less noticed athletes will also graduate, men who also have helped to make Villanova a winning team.

One of these unsung heroes is hurdler Bob Holup.

Bob, now a 22-year-old senior, came to Villanova from Perth Amboy (N. J.) High School, where he ranked with the best track athletes in the state.

Record But No Victory

In the National High School Indoor Meet, Bob hurdled his way to a tremendous 7.3 sixty, three-tenths of a second under the old record, only to come in second to the very great Milt Campbell.

Also in high school, Bob ran a 14.1 in the 120 high hurdles, which at the time set a national scholastic record.

Although not his specialty, he broad jumped an impressive 22-11½ in high school, which acquired the national championship for him.

Holup is one of the few athletes ever to have scored in three consecutive IC4A meets. This year his three points for third place meant the difference as Villanova narrowly edged Manhatten to repeat as champion.

Wants A First

Bob has picked up points for second, third, and fourth place finishes in the past, but he aspires to gain the coveted five points for first place in the up and coming outdoor IC4A's which will be held at Villanova Stadium.

Bob holds the all-time Villanova records for the 120 high and 220 low-hurdles.

While he has broad jumped in dual meets in college in the past, he has never really taken that event seriously.

This year, however, Bob is planning a revision.

Will Work At Broad Jump

Along with his hurdling he plans some intensive practice in the broad jump.

When asked about his favorite meet, his unequivocal answer is, "The Penn Relays."

Bob will compete in the University of Pennsylvania's famous extravaganza for the last time in a Villanova uniform on Friday and Saturday.

Of course his studies occupy most of his time (He's a marketing major in the C & F school), but Holup finds time to participate in the Opera Classica Society and the Varsity Club.

He's A Poet

When asked about his hobby Bob smiled. "Don't laugh, I enjoy writing and reading poetry."

He also likes to listen to hi-fi with a preference for musical comedies.

Bob is an unusual C & Fer in that he took a number of Arts electives—mostly philosophy courses.

Dave Intrabortolo, Bob's roommate and most avid follower, seemed to know more about Bob's accomplishments than did Bob.

He's Impeccable

When asked if his buddy had any idiosyncrasies, Dave responded that he had one—that of being fastidious, almost to a fault. This cleanliness is obvious upon entering Bob's room in Sullivan Hall.

During his summer vacation Bob works for a construction company. After work he relaxes by sailing on nearby waters.

Bob looks to the future with optomistic anticipation. He plans to continue his track endeavors after graduation either with a club or with the armed forces.

He would like to try for a commission in the Coast Guard, after which he hopes to acquire a salesman's position.

BOB HOLUP

possibly the toughest mile relay field in the history of the Penn Relays. Included in the field are Ohio State, anchored by the great all around track star Glenn Davis, IC4A champion Pittsburgh, Manhatten, Morgan State, S. M. U. and Abilene Christian.

Besides competing in the all-important relay championships Villanova track stars will seek individual honors in a number of other events. Top Wildcat candidates for individual championships are Bob Holup in the 120-yard high hurdles and Phil Reavis in the high jump.

Reavis, Holup Win

These two men, along with the sprint medley relay team, won top honors at last Saturday's Queens-Iona Relays held at Randall's Island, New York. Reavis jumped 6-1½ to easily cop the high jump, while Holup covered the 120 high hurdles in 14.9.

The sprint medley team, composed of Collymore, Blackburn, Stead and Delany, held off a strong Manhatten team which battled the Wildcats all the way.

The mile relay team of Sydnor, Stead, Delany and Collymore managed to place only third behind Manhatten and Morgan State, while the Villanova freshmen mile relay team placed fourth behind Manhatten, Yale and Morgan State.

Other Placers

Other Wildcats placing in the meet include Ron Brady and Norm Cyprus, who vaulted 12-6 and 12 to place third and fourth respectively in the pole vault, and John Buckley and Kent Lydic who were fourth and fifth respectively in the broad jump.

In the overall team score of the Queens-Iona Meet, Villanova placed third with 25½ points behind Manhatten with 45 and Yale 36½.

Reagan

Also Paul Tomczyk has been moved from end to halfback to fortify that position.

Quarterback Jim Grazione seems to be performing up to early expectations but Reagan moved Frank Ficca from half in order to add depth to the quarterback position.

Should Grazione's shoulder miseries return he could be shifted to halfback where he spends some time every day working out. In that case Ed Roehre, little used until now, might fill Grag's shoes.

Paczkoskie Question Mark

At fullback Reagan has three dependables—juniors Gene Paja and Joe Nardo, and soph Leon Horin. Untested freshman flash Vince Paczkoskie is still a question mark. He was re-injured slightly last week.

On the whole the most gratifying aspect of the spring seems to be the team morale.

Led by O'Pella, the squad seems to be eager and ready to take on all ten 1958 opponents, six of which will be encountered at Villanova's Goodreau stadium.

This attitude of course might make for the increase on the win side of the ledger that Coach Reagan has predicted.

Golfers Open With 2 Wins

Last week the Villanova golf team opened its 1958 season with two victories in as many days.

In the opening match against Temple Friday, senior Joe Lewis led the way with a three over par 74 on the Oak Terrace Club in Ambler, Pa.

With scoring based on the Middle Atlantic College rules (One point for each nine and one point for the match) Lewis, Reggie Zurinskas and Jay Gibney scored three each. Team captain Frank Kruse scored two points and Ron Zurinskas and Nick Aquilino one point a piece.

Saturday, the team traveled to Scranton University where Nick Aquilino was low man with an 8 on the Fox Hills (Pittstown. Pa.) course which was not in the best of condition.

In the 9½ to 8½ Villanova triumph Bill Mawn and Jim Gay joined Aquilino in scoring three points while Jim Gibney provided the winning margin scoring a very important ½ point.

Today the golf team meets highly rated University of Pennsylvania and the nation's number two team last year, Penn State University in a tri-team match. The match will be held on the Plymouth Valley Country Club in Norristown.

Life-Saving Drills Held By Red Cross

More than 100 students are expected to take part in the third session of the annual Red Cross life saving course tonight at 6:30 in the field house pool.

Swimming coach Ed Geisz, who heads the program with assistant coach Jack Lumsden, said he was "very pleased with the huge and definitely unexpected turnout."

"No more entrants can be accepted now," Geisz announced.

Instructing in the course are Connell O'Donnell and James O'Leary. They are being assisted by Louis Desfasses, John O'Connell and Frank Keefe.

The Red Cross program is offered by the university to any of those who wish to earn a certificate for life saving, Geisz explained.

These certificates are needed by those who intend to take summer jobs as life guards or swimming coaches.

The entire course is scheduled to run six weeks on Wednesday evenings from 6:30 to 9:30.

Ryan To Captain 'Cat Five; Coach Optimistic At Fete

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Basketball coach Al Severance is fed up with playing .500 ball or there-abouts. He believes that Villanova is ready to step into post-season tournament play.

The greying, veteran coach told 300 persons at the eighth annual basketball banquet of the Villanova Club of South Jersey last Thursday that he foresees "big things for Villanova in basketball next year and for years to come."

That statement and the announcement that Joe Ryan, junior guard from St. Joseph's Prep in Philadelphia, will captain next year's Wildcat five, were the big news items of the affair.

Praises Seniors

Before telling the gathering his thoughts on future prospects, Severance paid tribute to three graduating seniors—Tom Brennan, Jack Kelly and Bill Brennan.

Tom, who was given the Alumni Award for being chosen most valuable player, received the highest praise from Severance for his high-caliber center play against some of the finest pivotmen in the country. "He suffered under many handicaps," Severance said, citing the death of Tom's father, "but he was wonderful."

Severance paid tribute to the moral-building attributes of Kelly, and the importance to the club of Bill Brennan, playing college basketball for the first time.

'We'll Be Real Good'

"With greater scoring punch from Ryan, improved play by the rest of the returnees, and the added spark of the freshmen coming up, we're going to be real good," said Severance.

He termed the present freshmen "vicious, not giving any quarter, nor asking any. They'll fight and claw. It's going to be a lot of fun to see the competition between the upperclassmen and the freshmen.

"It will make us a winning team."

Bob McNeill of St. Joseph's and Guy Rodgers of Temple shared the Michael Saxe Memorial Award for the city's best player. Jerry Agnes, '38 received the man-of-the-year award for loyalty to the school. James Leaming, Sr. '10 got another award for loyalty.

Sunny Skies, Fans Favor Intramurals

Bands of Intramural softball activities, encouraged by sunny skies and noisy bands of admirers, swung into full schedule last week.

The Zorches combined strong pitching and sharp hitting as they overpowered the Jokers, 23-3, in the 5.30 Mendel League.

Joe Fitzpatrick, star of the Saracens in the same league, received a fracture of a bone of the wrist, when he was involved in a first base collision. His team topped Terry's Terrors, 16-15, in a lively battle.

Murphy's Dukes completely overpowered Ray's Dukes, 20-1, in the 5.30 Sullivan League.

'Cats Use Pitching To Win

By JOE FITZPATRICK

The big story of the 1958 Villanova baseball team has been pitching. And who's to say that Jack Kelly has not been the big feature?

The senior southpaw registered his third sparkling performance of the year Monday when he struck out 14 and allowed only four hits as the Wildcats jolted previously unbeaten Delaware 5-4 on the Blue Hen campus.

Kelly had chalked up a 6-0, 4-hit, 18-strikeout effort against Princeton on Wednesday, in his first outing, Jack lost to Penn though he gave up only three hits and whiffed 11.

Kelly Imitated

Sophomore Bob Kropiewnicki kept pace with Kelly by besting Scranton 7-0 on Saturday in the 'Cats only other action last week. It was Krop's second win of the year against one defeat.

As Kelly was blazing 'em by the Delaware hitters his Villanova mates were backing him with a nine-hit attack which inclued three hits by catcher Hank Nichols and a 330-foot home run by left fielder Paul Borian. Borian's blow proved The margin of victory.

Delaware had run up a streak of ten straight victories prior to Monday's defeat. Some observers had rated the Blue Hens the best team in the Middle Atlantic District.

Delaware's Gene Walton and Jim Bryer hit homers off Kelly, the first round-trippers Jack has given up this year.

Nichols and Borian also provided the scoring punch in the game with Princeton. While Kelly fanned the Tigers Nichols and Borian were collecting two hits each and driving in three of Villanova's six runs.

Krop Keeps Royals Cool

Kropiewnicki was as hot as the weather on Saturday, but he kept the visitors from Scranton cool by whipping the ball right by them. The sensational right hander struck out 11 Royals, allowing only two hits.

Behind Kropiewnicki's fine pitching the Villanovans tied into Scranton ace Jim Flanagan with an 11-hit attack.

Sophofore Fred Anthony and and senior Nichols joined pitcher Kropiewnicki in collecting two hits each.

Nichols on Hitting Spree

Nichols has hit safely in 5 out of 6 games and he is the proud possessor of a .454 batting average.

The charges of Coach Art Mahan will endeavor to prolong their three game victory skein when they meet a very good Penn State University team Wednesday on the home diamond. Lafayette will follow the Nittany Lions in on Friday.

Arm Blurs - So Did The Ball

Bob Kroplewnicki whips his blazing fast ball plate-ward in a two-hit performance aganst Scranton on Saturday. .he burly Sophomore won his second game of the year in shutting out the Royals, 7-0. He struck out 12.

Reagan Must Solve 'Ifs'

At the end of last season Villanova football coach Frank Reagan predicted that his Main Liners would win more games next year.

There are many "ifs," however, between the dismal 3 won 6 lost record of the past season and an improvement in 1958.

The Wildcats are currently involved in their 20-day spring drills. They are hoping that some of those "ifs" will become certaintics within the next week or so.

Reagan Experiments

The line has been left somewhat thin—particularly in the guard and tackle slots. Coach Reagan has been forced to experiment with position changes in order to fill the apots vacated by Don Luzzi and Eddie Michaels, Jr.

Sophomore Joe Fitzpatrick, who saw limited service at guard in the 1957 campaign, has been moved to tackle as has beefy (218-pounds) junior end Jim Tobin.

Soph center Ed Lemkin has temporarily been shifted to guard and might win a starting berth. His staying there depends upon the improvement shown by the rest of the centers—Tom Fletcher and Jim Palmer, both juniors, and freshman Alex DeLucia.

O'Pella, Craig, DeLucia Back

Of course there will be some stalwart performers holding down accustomed spots.

Gene O'Pella is back at the end position which he played so well last year. Gene will be joined at end by soph returnee Paul Heron and frosh Tom Boyle, among others.

Mike DeLucia and Bill Craig return at guard and tackle respectively. Sohps Pud Nagle, Frank Cappeletti, Jim Osborne and Dick Keyser will add interior depth, as will a large crop of freshmen led by Larry Sopko and Joe Luzzi.

Backfield Promising

Reagan is very pleased with the backs. Halfbacks Dave Intrabartolo and John Daniels have both looked good in early workouts, as has Jim Ward.

Wildcat Track Team Seeks Penn Relay Victory Record

By BILL VINCENT

Those murmurs of "Come Eleven!" emitting from the stadium this week are not a floating crap game. That's the Villanova track team hoping to set an unprecedented record of eleven major relay crowns in four years at the Penn Relay Carnival.

The team has garnered eight laurels in three years, taking the medley distance for two years in a row and the sprint medley and mile relay three years running.

Due to their performances in the Quantico and Queens-Iona Relays, the Wildcats appear to be in good shape for the sprint and distance medley relays.

Ron Will Anchor

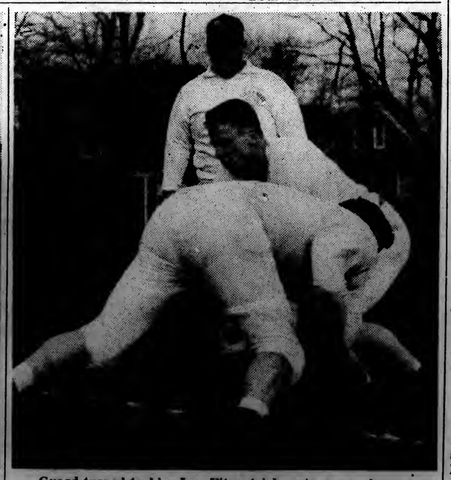
Both of these Wildcat teams seem to be strong, mainly due to the fact that they will be anchored by Olympic champion Ron Delany. Delany will run the final mile in Friday's feature distance medley and will return Saturday to run the anchor half mile in the sprint medley.

Preceeding Delany in the distance medley will be Vic De Maio, Ed Collymore and Bob Godesky, while Collymore, Jim Blackburn and Charlie Stead will run the other ehree legs in the sprint medley.

However, the bigest problem confronting the Wildcats trackmen this year is the mile relay. Missing from this year's team is Charlie Jenkins, who anchored Villanova to three straight Carnival Mile Relay Championships.

Tickets for the Penn Relays, to be held at the University of Pennsylvania's Franklin Field Friday and Saturday, are now on sale in the Field House ticket office. The price is 65c a ticket.

Depends on Colly



Therefore Coach Elliott must rely on IC4A sprint champion Ed Collymore to fill Jenkins' shoes on the anchor leg, while Delany, Stead and Sydnor run the other three quarters.

To make things more difficult Elliott's charges will face

Guard-turned-tackle Joe Fitzpatrick acts as a dummy as one of his teammates practices his blocking technique under the watchful eye of his coach John Sandusky.

At Last!

One year ago, we were saying how great it would be. Six months ago, we though it would be all messed up. One month ago, we moaned "Where's the date and the money?' One week ago we stood in line for tickets. Yesterday, it started.

Junior Week, 1958. Junior Week for the Class of 1959 has arrived.

After months of preparation, including the selection and rejection of innumerable bands, the manufacture of 20,000 flowers, estimated conservatively, and the problems attached getting hotel reservations for Mom and date, we made it.

It all started last May when the class swept Vic Ludmerer and his list of candidates into office. Ludmerer, an organizer, immediately solicited the aid of other sophomores, mainly Electrical Engineers. Almost immediately began Junior Week preparations.

During the summer a few determined and serious-minded students made frequent trips to Philadelphia hotels and New York booking agents in an effort to at least solve a few of the many where-to-dine and who-to-pay problems.

Early in September, Ludmerer announced his complete steering committee. From these, the president announced, would be drawn most of the actual chairmen of the events. A special planning committee was set up to coordinate all activity.

Week by week in the Fall, the VILLANOVAN published one or more "Day Chairmen." Many class members thought they were the only ones not named to a high administrative position.

The monthly class meetings were always lively affairs, with frequent disturbances resulting from charged autocratic tendencies of some chairmen. But everybody emerged from the Vasey Hall (then C and F) auditorium smiling, sometimes sadly, but broadly.

Last January, Ludmerer announced that "plans were nearing completion." Last February Ludmerer announced that "plans were nearing completion." Last March Ludmerer announced that "plans were nearing completion."

Two weeks ago Ludmerer grinned as he wrote a Junior Week schedule on the blackboard. Plans were completed.

Let's enjoy it.

President's Message

Dear Junior:

Junior Week is finally here. It has been the goal toward which we have been striving for the past three years. I am certain that before this week is over, each and every one of us will have a tremendous store of memories

The question arises, who is the ultimate cause of a successful Junior Week? The President is merely an organizer. His degree of success is determined by the efficiency of his chairmen. The chairmen are the keystones for all social functions. The chairmen, however, could never hope to fulfill their missions without the backing of dependable class workers. Therefore the ultimate success of Junior Week is due to teamwork . . . teamwork of the chairman and his team—the workers of the class. It is to these men that I am very grateful.

I have been extremely proud to serve as your president for the past year. I feel that I have greatly benefitted from this experience. For I am much richer from getting to know, just a little better, some of the great people that fortunately are members of our class.

I hope that Junior Week will be nothing short of fabulous for everyone.

Very sincerely yours,
Vic Ludmerer

Festivities Planned For Mother's Day Celebration

BY LARRY O'ROURKE

Today, Mother, is YOUR day at Villanova.

We welcome you to our campus home away from home for this 24th annual Mother's Day celebration.

On this, the traditional opening of our long awaited Junior Week, we join together at the Sacrifice of the Mass at 11 A.M. The Mass, celebrated by class moderator, Father Henry Weeks, is planned to be held at Our Lady of Good Counsel outdoor grotto.

In the event of rain, we shall move indoors to the University Chapel University President, Father James Donnellon, will preach the sermon.

Immediately after the Mass, Don Kempf and Ken MacGillivray, co-chairmen of today's events, and their mothers, will plant our class tree in front of the Chapel.

The blue spruce class tree was presented to the class by Mr. John Gozo, Sr., father of a Junior in the Commerce and Finance school. Mr. Gozo, who lives in Long Island, is in the landscaping business.

Following the tree planting, we shall enjoy a luncheon in the resident dining room in Dougherty Hall. A chicken saute meal will be served cafeteria style.

At 1.30 in the Field House Pool, the Villanova undergrduate nurses will present a watercade. Under the guidance of the intramural department, this event promises to be one of the day's highlights.

In the Field House a half hour later, Juniors will present entertainment, both amateur and professional, that is sure to be both nostalgic and amusing.

For baseball fans, and what Junior's mother isn't after listening to the blasts from the television all summer, Villanova will meet a strong Temple nine.

The diamond Wildcats, currently sporting a winning record, always provide interesting never - say - die action.

"Where'd that picture come from?" more than one Junior will ask at 4 P.M. when the Diaper Dan photos go on display in the Dougherty Hall lounges.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will be said by Father Weeks in the grotto at 5 this afternoon.

A catered dinner will be served to Juniors and their Mothers in the Field House at 6.30. The roast beef dinner will be served by Smyth Caterers, a local firm.

More than 550 Juniors purchased tickets last week for the Mother's Day events. Because of the large size of the class and the great demand for tickets, the sale had to be closed last Thursday.

By the time the banquet is over tonight, mother, we shall certainly say, "We're glad we bought our tickets on time. We had a wonderful time. Thanks, mom."

The cover of the 1959 Junior Week issue is the result of some hard work on the part of Feature Editor Bill Christy and Photographer Editor Al Lawler. Lawler came up with the general idea, and Christy worked many long hours preparing the final copy. The VILLANOVAN Editoral Staff feels the whole cover effect is symbolic of the Junior Week festivities.

The insets, or small eliptical shots, signify all the major events of the week, while the background photo of the campus chapel denotes the spirit that is Villanova. The class flag on the bottom of the page signifies the 1959 stamp of approval on the whole affair. Junior Week is under way!

The editor would like to thank all those who have helped with this special Junior Week issue of the VILLANOVAN. In particular, he would like to extend his gratitude to Bill Christy, Frank Connolly, Tom Goldschmidt, Jack Curtin, Frank Dynan, Ray Quaglia, Paul Buckley, Joe Fitzpatrick, Jack Kelley, Don Kempf, Gerry McGrath, John Hone, Doug McClatchy, Tom McKenna, Jack Serafin, Bill Gallagher, Bill Christman, Joe Perozziello, Sam Pietrofitta, Frank Cunningham, Bill Washington, Bill Walsh, Frank Fleming and Jay Borff.

Special thanks also go to sophomore Al Lawler, who is responsible for most of the photographic work seen on these pages.

Proudly We Welcome Our 'Best Girls'

BY JACK CURTIN

Today is one of those days which will live with the Class of 1959 for a long time. Perhaps, when planning for Junior Week, a class thinks of it as a purely social function, but as the festivities approach, it becomes more and more apparent that your "best girl" won't be here for the Prom and Dinner Dance—she'll be here today.

Mother's Day is the initial event of Junior Week and rightly so. We start off this week of celebration with our mother, just as, many years ago, we began our life under her loving care and guidance.

Yes, Mom, this is a week which honors the entire Junior Class, but today the glory is all yours. And it's a glory well deserved.

We owe an awful lot to you, more than we owe any other living person. Your love, sacrifice and help have been among the most important forces in our lives. You have been with us in our happiest moments and, when we needed you most, during those times when things seemed darkest.

You heard us speak our first word, Mom, and were there holding our hand when we took our first steps. And during those first years, it was you who fed us and dressed us and played with us.

You cried with us during our first haircuts, and watched us go off to school that first day with a slight twinge of sorrow — your little boy was growing up.

We relied on you pretty much in those days, Mom. We still do. You got us up for school and helped us with our homework and cleaned us up after our schoolyard fights. And you were the proudest person in the world the day we were graduated into high school.

Outwardly, we suppose we drifted a little bit away from you in the next few years, as all youngsters do when they reach their early teens, but underneath, you were still the greatest person in the world as far as we were concerned. And when we needed help, you where always there, just as you had been all our lives.

You watched us go out on our first date, and, in many cases, taught us how to behave there. You cheered us in plays, football, basketball and baseball games and any other thing we attempted. You met us at the door, waiting for our reports.

You were a nervous wreck when we first got our driving licenses and sat waiting for us late into the night after our proms. Then came graduation and college.

It's been almost three years now, Mom, since we've come into this new world, where we are taking the final steps on our road toward manhood. We haven't much time left at Villanova.

So, today we'd like to show one of the nicest persons we know everything there is to see at one of the nicest places we know.

Relax and enjoy yourself, Mom. Meet our classmates and friends, get a good look at the world we live in. We want you to get to know them as we have.

And when its all over, and we walk away from the Villanova campus, tired and happy, we'll be going to many different places. Some of us to the place where we live, others to hotels and boarding houses.

But to all of us, it will be going home. Because Mom will be with us.

Ludmerer Credits Steering Committee

By JACK SERAFIN

Junior Week marks the culmination of the work and effort of one of the least known and yet one of the most important groups in the Junior Class—the Junior Class Steering Committee.

This committee served throughout the year as the main guiding force in the successful formulation and completion of all Junior events. Through this group, Junior Class President Vic Ludmerer was made aware of the class' desires.

The committee itself is composed of 44 members, Thirty of these men were selected at the beginning of the school year while the remaining 14 are members of the executive committee of the class. The executive committee of the Junior Class is made up of all Juniors who were elected to office either this year or in the previous year.

By the integration of these two groups into one body whose purpose was to plan all Junior activities, the group was able to attain a closer class unity and thereby more successful schedule of class activities.

Under the leadership of Ludmerer, the group took suggestions from the members of the Junior class as a whole, and to these added their own ideas. Men were assigned to investigate the possibilities of each of the suggestions, and the merits and demerits of each was discussed in the meetings.

A Steering Committee meeting preceded each class meeting held during the year. In addition to these, there were many special meetings called during each semester because of the many ideas and plans that were presented by members of the class.

Representation on this organization was equally divided between resident and day-hop Junior students, thus assuring that all elements within the class were well provided with the means of presenting their varied opinions concerning any of the activities that might be held.

When asked by this reporter what his opinion of this year's steering committee was, Ludmerer stated. "Through their constant offering of ideas and opinions, and their generous giving of time, the members of this committee have formed the keystone of the class policys."

Members of the committee were: Clayton Thomas, Tom McPherson, Buddy Carlin, Bill Hearn, Joe Driscoll, Lou Kubinac, Jim Hull, Don Brown, George Matouk, John Fischetti, Tony Rossi, Bill McCann, Frank Cavalier, John Moran, Frank Cunningham, Marcia Marlow, John P. Kelly, Dick Deasy, Oz Scoana, Bob Wagner, John Rumbarger, Ben Hynes, T. Walker Lloyd, Zack Cienkowski, Ed Knepley, Jack Lane, Bruce Irving, Joe Krackler, Vic Ludmerer, Matt Brennan, Ken MacGilliray Bill Hixson, Jerry Hepburn, Bob Murphy, Don Kempf, Jim McElhenny, Bill Murray, Art Greenwood, Bill Christy, Pat Kelty, Al Sheppard, Frank Fleming, Pete Leemhuis.

Tired Blood?

BY JAY BORFF

Do you feel rundown? Does slight exercise tie your muscles in knots? Are you winded after running to your 8.30? Are you overweight? Are you a Junior? If so, there's an event for you in this year's Junior Week Muff Day on Wednesday afternoon.

Unlike last year, the events have been designed like those at a Fourth of July picnic. They're meant to be fun and no athletic prowess is needed.

For serious trackmen there will be a 100-yard dash and a cross country race, but the majority of the events will be laugh getters. Among these will be an egg race, wheel barrow race, sack race, and a chicken fight. Somewhere between the serious and the fun, there will be push-ups, a tug-o-war and weight man's relay.

Two events have been designed especially for the obese and the brawny. The weight man's relay will be run by four men, two over 200 pounds and two over 180 pounds. Men 210 pounds and over are eligible for the Darryl Stearns Memorial race. This quick reducer will be 100 yards.

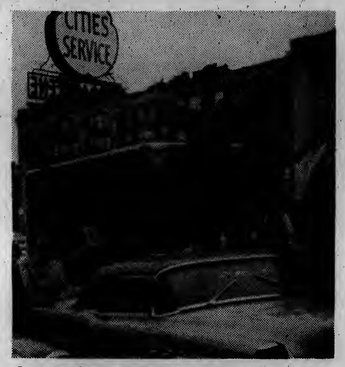
Residents have been making up teams from Juniors in the same wing or on the same floor of dorms. The day-hop entrants, eager to prove the value of home cooked meals, have made up teams from among their non-resident friends.

Anyone wanting to enter can apply up until 12.30 P.M., Wednesday at room 313 Sullivan. No prizes will be given but scores will be kept to decide the Muff Day winner.

The activities will begin at 2.40 P.M. on Austin Field. Co-chairmen Bill Hixson and Jim Klein have decreed that the uniform of the day will be Bermudas. At 3 o'clock, the Juniors will toy with the faculty in a softball game. The seniors are expected to succumb a little less easily in the game with the Juniors at 4.

Since this is the biggest Junior Week sports day ever staged, the co-chairmen urged both contestants and spectators to turn out. It should be hilarious.

This Is Villanova — And You Are There



The Class of 1959 Thru Three Stages

As freshmen we were badgered, bothered and bullied by everything from whitehats to final exams. We made it through both, but is was a toss-up as to which was worse.

We arrived as sophomores and debonair men of the world. Rounds of dances, picnics, and parties coupled with the awe-inspiring responsibility of being whitehats made us realize our growth.

Social spheres enlarged in junior year, as we paid our regular visit to a neighboring village—Boston, 300 miles away. We came in truckloads to help the traffic problem.

BY BILL CHRISTY

You arrive at Villanova in '55, a little worried, shyly confident and very confused. Almost immediately you are assaulted by a horde of screaming madmen known as "whitehats." They range in actual size from mammoth Tom Brennan to diminutive Ted Macri, but to you they all look ten feet tall and possessed with the idea that we have all been raised on a steady diet of bearmeat!—complete with the exclamation point. You learn the Alma Mater and meet a few friends. And you have your start towards the Villanova spirit.

The social season starts early, as it always does at Villanova, this year with the Owl Hop. You are introduced to a form of mob hysteria in a crowded gym known as the Villanova dance. Picnics, mixers and bull sessions take up most of your time for the next few months. A rarely-seen football team compiles an unimpressive 1-9 record, but you know that things will get better when your freshman team, headed by Jim Grazione, gets to the varsity level. You sign up for 67% of the activities offered on campus, then quickly drop them upon introduction to the most unpleasant of Villanova traditions—exams.

You make it through this ordeal somehow and relax in the old Pie Shoppe over a pinochle deck comparing scars with your new-found friends and making resolutions for your second semester.

After mid-semester vacation the pinochle and the resolutions both dissolve as we attempt to rival the AFL-CIO with our own Student Union Building. You miss the cards but you have foam-rubber seats and plastic spoons as consolations.

The basketball team is compiling an unimpressive record but again you find consolation in your class and the record-breaking frosh team under Joe Ryan. You're a part of Villanova now but there are a few things that you don't quite understand—just a few, though.

Freshman elections are here and you find that your class is not only the largest in the school, but the noisest. Don Kempf and Al Sheppard are given the honor of upholding our honor on the Student Council—but—What's all this fuss about nurses—you like girls.

This affection finds an obstacle in its path as a local institution conducts a purge on social drinkers. You abandon the local chapter of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and find that trips to more distant sources of championship are bothersome, but worthwhile.

It's March and a prompt payment to Rogers Peet Company makes you a real Villanovan. The acquisition of a blazer transforms a seeking novice into a debonair man of the world. In your newly acquired role of playboy, you casually wait until the last minute to get a date for the Soph-Frosh dance—and are introduced in desperation to the enigma of the college man—a blind date.

Before you have time to plan the Spring round of picnics another election is upon you—this time for all the class officers. The issues of the heated campaign resolve themselves and although you're not quite sure if you are voting for class officers or a new type auto engine, you select Ken MacGillivray and his V-6 ticket (or most of it) to lead your class in its sophomore year. In a cloud of all-night cramming for exams and under the dire threat of Saturday classes next semester, you pack up for an intellectual summer vacation.

During the summer you read three books and return to campus educated and tanned. The relief of seeing Belle Air moved to avoid Saturday classes is short-lived as you take over the other end of orientation and find yourself wishing there were a way to do away with Monday classes.

A new spirit has come to Villanova and Pat Nicholson has discovered a very powerful set of vocal chords. The spirit shows well in the class above us as they expand the Basca Awards night into a weekend featuring a bonfire rally, memorial dance, a round of parties and an Eddie Condon jazz concert.

There still aren't quite enough home games to suit you, so you join a thousand other Villanovans on a trek to the town of bans and beans for your own version of a Boston Tea Party (with a lot more party and a lot less tea.) The results of the game as well as the trip were happy as Villanova trounced Boston University, 27-13.

You return just in time for the first offical social function of the class of '59—the Sophomore Cotillion. The "Night in (a rather crowded) Wonderland" is followed up by Saturday's Florida State Game. This is your first weekend with a car permission, so you take part in the spectacular motorcade before the game. The team takes one right on the "I" but you're finally able to bid a not-too-fond farewell to Municipal Stadium as a home field.

The football season ends on a happy note as the Wildcats attain their first winning season in four years. You finally find time to make a visit to campus and notice that it's in the condition of a giant sandbox, with two buildings in construction at the same time. You find it encouraging to see that the University is making as much progress as you are.

You are a past-master at cramming for exams by now, so you don't have much trouble with them and can devote your time to following winter sports. Basketball turns out a bit depressing but you have the consolation of knowing that yours is the best college track team in the world.—They would have taken third place in the Olympics earlier in the year if they had entered as a country. Ron and the boys had taken the AAU championship, so a week later you join in another mass movement of Villanovans to the IC4A's championship in New York. They take this one too and you spend quite a while letting New York know that Villanova is in town.

Your stay at home is rather short-lived for in a few weeks it's time for a return engagement in New York—this time for St. Patty's Day. The wearing of the green is extended to your complexison, as you spend the next week rcuperating, but soon things return to normal.

The monsoon season comes with its daily mud baths, but finally Spring breaks through and elections are again upon you. They are still noisy, with promises coming fast and furious, but your attitude has changed. You now take a serious view of class management. So, instead of an auto engine you select an explosive—and TNT candidate Viv Ludmerer is chosen class president.

Before the year's end you have ordered your class ring and without consciously realizing it—you have become a part of Villanova.

The events of this year are too recent to recount. You have a few jumbled memories that all seen to run together in retrospect. When you returned after a hurried summer, you realized that you are a Junior now and it's time you starting studying. You saw Sheehan Hall open to house another 400 residents, you had another great Basca weekend, and a second rather wet, Boston trip that had equally wet results.

In the present semester, you've been subjected to snow and Saturday classes but you've gained the happy prospect of senior cars and had your Ring Dance weekend. Another new building has come to campus—for the Commerce and Finance school. You've seen Villanova grow.

But you know too that this growth isn't confined to buildings and enrollment. With the start of Junior Week—your biggest social event in college—you've begun to realize another growth—in yourself. You may know only a few isolated facts but have gained some realization of what you don't know. You've learned to meet people and you've become friends with many of them. You and your classmates have grown together, from Villanova freshmen to Villanova men. You've learned the spirit of Villanova—and your part of it.

Our times at Villanova have't always been perfect, but we learned how to enjoy victory. We'll always remember the "V" that stands for both Villanova and victory.

We Salute

Class Officers 1959

Vic Ludmerer - President

Vic, one of the many who descended to Villanova from the Long Island area, has none the less made quite a reputation for himself.

He is a resident, member of the school of C and F and also a Marine NROTC student, through which he expects to receive his commission. At the completion of his tour of duty, Vic hopes to resume studies either toward a CPA license or graduate law.

The popular Junior Class President has distinguished himself in many activities. Last year he was Class Vice President, ticket chairman for the Belle Masque Society, publicity chairman for the Spirit Committee, and a member of Pershing Rifles, DPE fraternity, and Alpha Psi Omega, honorary dramatics fraternity.

Matt Brennan - Vice President

Matt is the man who has brought experience to Villanova. He is twenty-five-years-old. He served a four year hitch in the Navy after his graduation from high school in Mineola, L. I., the same school attended by class president Vic Ludmerer.

In the Navy, Matt spent most of his time in the Mediterranean sea area, for many the serviceman's dream, but at the same time gained the common sense that has earned the respect of his classmates. The Navy recognized this and so by the time of his discharge, he had attained the rank of first class Petty Officer.

For relaxation Matt sometimes plays the piano, at which he is quite proficient.

Bill Hixson - Class Treasurer

Bill is one of the "Southerners" of the school, from Washington D.C., where he attended Archbishop John Carroll High School.

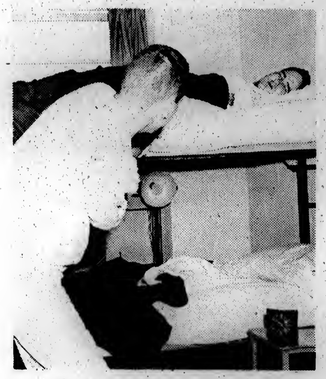
He is 20 years old, a resident Mechanical Engineering student, interested primarily in the field of Thermodynamics, in which he intends to specialize.

His main hobby is studying cars, not through their performance, but through their construction, and so he spends much of his spare time in the grease pits tinkering or analyzing the current Detroit creations.

Ken MacGillivray - Secretary

Ken, a representative from Chicago, Illinois is a 20-year-old student in the Arts school. With his background and the training he has received here in the NROTC, he hopes to become a frogman after graduation.

Piano playing, singing and composition of poetry are some of his talents, also some of his relaxations.



Along with these, however, according to Don Kempf, his roommate, are some radical idiosyncracies, exemplified by his purchase of half dollar notebooks for every course.

YEARS PASS BUT THEY REMAIN THE SAME

SHEP

OWEN

BY DON KEMPF

The year is 1984 and I'm sitting in my office reading a book of the same name by George Orwell. I put the book down and am about to plan the party platform for the next world election, when the phone rings.

"Hello, Don, this is T. Walker Lloyd. I just called to tell you that I won't be able to pick you up for the twenty-fifth re-union tonight. My helicopter broke down!"

"Yeah, sure T," I said as he hung up. Somehow it figured—good old dependable T.—and my mind wandering back to my college days.

I arrived at the reunion a little late. As I walked through the door a short man with thick glasses comes towards me. I don't recognize him until he speaks, "Hi, Don. Got a cigarette?" He's John Rumbarger.

I see another guy who's bald as a billiard, but he's got a slide-rule in one hand and a bottle of hair grower in the other, and he shouts, "Hey Don, its me, Frank Cavalier."

As I'm trying to cross the room some six and a half foot monster I remember as "Gino" is catching a football thrown by some other guy called "Graz".

"Boy, what a pass!" I says, when this scholarly looking gentleman with a library book under one arm interrupts, "I read in this book that a pass necessitates the complete overturn of the upper shoulder blade, Donald. That was obviously a lateral." I recognize this to be the Doctor Lemhuis whom I'd read so much about lately in the newspapers.

I'm headed across the room to chat with a bearded fellow wearing an olive branch and a toga and quoting Shakespeare, who is obviously Owen Kline, when I'm distracted by a loud clamor to my right. I turn and see two rather fat figures in a heated discussion. One has red hair and the other has no hair at all.

"McGrath," says the red-head, who by his "line" is easily recognizable as Frank Fleming, "the Pres said the other day that . . ." "Now just a minute, Frank, according to Cardinal . . ." Yeah, it's them all right.

I see a guy with curly blond hair, greying at the temples. "Hi, Shep—or should I say Admiral Sheppard—how goes it?" "Well, kid," he says, "I ain't married yet—but I've been in love 4,327 times since we graduated."

At this point it becomes impossible to talk to anyyone because of somebody playing "Malaguania" on the piano in the corner. I walk to the corner and see that the regular piano player is bound and gagged and that the guy now playing has "MacGillivray, K.A." stenciled on his T shirt.

I am about to say hello when some curvacious blonde—at once perceivable as movie star Moonsheen Marlowe—grabs the mike to announce that the new president of the Alumni Association is the Nobel Prize winner for poetry, Ray Quaglia, with Bill Christy losing by two votes, as usual.

There are others too, 800 in all. I may not recognize them all, but I remember them.

We'd seen a lot together: the parties and the picnics with their laughs; and the campaigns and elections with their fights. And it was fun—because for the whole four years it was happening, we were together.

I remember our Junior Week; the anticipation, the excitement, and the morning after.

As I look around the room and think about it all, I wonder why I'm here. I knew they'd be the same. I guess it's because they're called "1959" and I'm a part of them.

"Hey, Don."

"Yea."

"Got another cigarette?"

Bob Cummings, On and Off Stage: On- Don Juan, Off -Father of Five

BY RAY QUAGLIA

When most of us picture Bob Cummings, we picture the flashing Don Jaun of television who weekly portrays an unattached, well-dated fashion photographer. We picture him surrounded by beautiful feminine charmers and forever in the midst of an unfolding dramatic episode.

The Charles Clarence Robert Orvile Cummings of real life, however, is much different than the Bob Cummings of television. He spends most of his time surrounded by his five children, and in the company of his beautiful wife, the former screen actress, Mary Elliott.

Bob started his dramatic career at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York City. Because of financial difficulties, he was forced, after only six months of dramatic training, to discontinue his dramatic endeavors.

All of his spare time during these months was spent in calling on theatrical managers and agents, in the hope of gaining a part in one of the Broadway plays. The Broadway plays at this time, however, were mostly English plays employing English actors. Bob Cummings therefore, exerting his well-known television personality, pawned his belongings and borrowed enough money to purchase a round trip steerage ticket on a boat to England.

He remained in England for twenty-nine days, and adopted a suprisingly authentic British accent as well as the British stage name of Blade Stanhope Conway. He had a picture taken in a new suit and sent it, together with a letter, to New York managers and producers, as a herald of his planned trip to America. When he acted his first dramatic role in John Galsworthy's play "The Roof," he played not as Bob Cummings, but as Blade Stanhope Conway, the youngest actor, author, manager, and director-producer in England.

When British actors and British plays began to fall from favor, Bob once again displayed his versatility and daring. A good-looking native born Texan was needed for a starring role opposite Margaret Sullivan in "So Red The Rose." Bob Cummings was the good-looking native born Texan chosen for the portrayal, (Bob was born in Joplin, Missouri) and he has been a favorite with movie audiences ever since.

Just as our description of a perfect Junior Week judge fits Bob Cummings, so our description of a perfect successful personality fits him equally as well. With all of his professional responsibilities, his valuable time was given freely to a job well-done. We Villanovans thank him sincerely.

Mr. Francis N. Cavalier
P. O. Box 41
Villanova, Pennsylvania

Dear Mr. Cavalier:

As per your instructions I have selected the five finalists for your Queen Contest. I am listing them alphabetically as follows:

Nancy Brittingham
Micki Lonsain
Bunny Noonan
Nancy Stein
Ann Tushim

This has been a most pleasant, however just about the most difficult task I have ever had. Honestly, I have never seen so many really beautiful girls. There are at least four or five others whom I would like to have included as runners-up; however, since you needed five only I had to discipline myself.

Again, this has been a pleasure and an honor. Please extend my best wishes to the students and faculty at Villanova, and to yourself and your staff.

Cordially,

Bob Cummings

This is Pulchritude Ala Cummings, Final Judging to be Made at Prom

BY PAUL BUCKLEY

Here they are, the five finalists in the 1958 Junior Week Queen Contest. One of these young ladies will reign at the Junior Prom.

Frank Cavalier, Chairman of the contest, was kept quite busy with the number of entries that came in throughout the contest. The deadline for pictures had to be extended to allow the rush of pictures to be sent to Bob Cummings.

All pictures were relayed to movie and television star Bob Cummings in California. As Bob Collins, the model photographer in the weekly Bob Cummings Show, Mr. Cummings has developed a keen eye for beauty as is evidenced by the amount of pulchritude seen on the show.

Mr. Cummings regretted that he couldn't choose more that five finalists. He said that he had never seen so many really beautiful girls, however, he disciplined himself and made the selections.

Each of the five girls chosen by Mr. Cummings are as lovely a miss as could be desired by a Villanova Junior.

As was done last year, the identities of the Queen and her Lady-in-waiting will remain a secret until the night of the Promenade.

The Queen and her court will reign over the Prom and the Dinner Dance on Saturday night at the Sheraton Hotel.

The first of the five finalists is Nancy Brittingham, a blue-eyed sophomore at West Chester State Teachers College. Nancy is nineteen-years-old, is 5'4" and has light brown hair. She makes her home in West Chester, Pa. and is studying elementary education.

Civil Engineer Mike McShea is the lucky date of Nancy. Mike also lives in West Chester.

Next we have Micki Lonsain, a secretary for Union Carbide Inc. She will be escorted to the Prom by John Taormina, a Marketing major. Micki is 5'2" and a blond. The Marketing majors never had it so good.

Bunny Noonan, a student at Philadelphia School of Office Training will attend the Prom with Villanova's new basketball captain Joe Ryan. Bunny hails from Gladwyne, Pa. She is 5'3" and a blue-eyed blond.

Green Mountain Junior College and Great Neck, New York are home to Nancy Stein, the date of Marketing major Bob Thiel. Nancy is a statuesque beauty 5'7" and has brown hair and blue eyes. Nancy is eighteen-years-old.

A Chestnut Hill College Freshman, Ann Tushim will grace the arm of Paul Ritter, another Marketing major. Petite Ann is nineteen-years-old and is five feet tall. She is majoring in Fashion Design.

BMOC Shows Gullible Date How He Did It

BY FRANK DYNAN

"Oh Axil, its beautiful, it's actually gorgeous," exclaimed Sally Sot excitedly. She hunched her shoulders as a tremor ran through her and she tightened her two handed grip on the arm of Axil Grastete, handsome and debonair Villanova junior. "Everything's so modern and so . . . I don't know . . . fabulous".

Axil gazed slowly around the Grand Ballroom of the Sheraton Hotel without emotion. "Yeah, it's pretty nice," he agreed. "We thought it would be the nicest place we could find for our dinner dance."

"Oh, it's perfect. Aren't you excited, Axil?"

"A little," he allowed grudgingly, "but I'm kind of used to this sort of thing."

"You're so lucky," Sally said seriously, "I've never been anywhere like this."

"You haven't?" Axil asked in surprise. "Well, don't worry, I'll show you what you've missed." Sally tightened her grip some more and smiled gratefully. Both went silent for several minutes, as Sally drank in the splendor surrounding her.

"Dinner's not 'til six-thirty or seven," Axil said with a bored expression. "What do you want to do until then? How 'bout an appertif?"

"A what?—apairteef?"

"A cocktail," Axil explained condescendingly.

"Oh!—could we?"

"This is the main bar," Axil said, as he and Sally walked up to the long bar along the rear wall of the Ballroom. "It's all right, but later I'll show you the two portable bars on the balcony."

"What would you like?" he asked, as the bartender approached them. After Sally hesitated for several moments, Axil turned to the bartender. "Give the lady a champagne cocktail and I'll have a martini—very dry".

After receiving their drinks, they resumed their silent inspection of the Ballroom.

"Dinner should be very good."

"What are they having?" asked Sally.

"Let me think . . . there's Fresh Fruit of Florida . . . that's the appetizer . . . then Soup du Jour . . ."

"What's dujour soup?"

Axil frowned and continued: "Top Sirloin of Beef, Delmonico potatoes, string beans au beurre . . . that means with butter," he added with a trace of sarcasm" . . . "and Sheraton ice cream with melba sauce."

"Sounds fabulous," said Sally.

"I wasn't really satisfied with it but they wouldn't listen to me," he said as he downed his martini in a single gulp. "I thought up some really tremendous plans but they didn't always agree."

"Were you the one who planned this?" burst out Sally in surprise.

"Well, I didn't help officially, I mean, you know as a chairman or anything." "Axil admitted modestly," but I was sort of an advisor. I talked to Oz Scogna and Mike Axt and Johnny Fischetti and them and gave them a lot of ideas.

I don't tell everybody, but the Sheraton Hotel was my idea," he added confidentially. "You know the Villanova Junior Class is the first college class ever to have an affair hree?"

And did you get Paul Judge's Band for them?," she asked, impressed.

"Not actually," he answered, "Greg Dean took care of that. You might say I helped everybody . . . advised them. Macia Marlowe, Harry Devlin, Bill McCann, George Bielitz, all of them. They sort of asked me for advice. How 'bout another drink, we've got time."

Axil ordered two more of the same.

"It's really big, don't you think, and everything's so fabulous," Sally gushed, after Axil had gulped his second very dry martini.

They silently watched as the ballroom began to fill up.

"Axil, what's the band like? What are they going to play?"

"Oh, they're so good, Sal," said Axil "The theme's going to be "Moonlight Serenade" . . . They'll play an hour and a half of numbers with moon in their title. Come on, let's find our table."

They left the bar and walked along among the tables. "You know, I'm glad I helped Oz and them. I think everything's going to turn out pretty nice."

Sally smiled and tightened her grip. Axil stopped.

"I can't find our table, Sal." He stood looking around with a confused expression on his face.

"Do you know these fellows walking over? Maybe they can help us," Sally said.

"No, I don't know them but I'll ask anyway."

The two fellows in question approached them. "My name's Oz Scogna," said one, "and this is Johnny Fischetti. You look confused, can we help?"

Week Chairmen Greet Moms

Dear Mom,

This is it. Yep, after three years of looking forward to its arrival, it's finally here . . . this is Junior Week! It's fitting that you should be here with us at this point of our college careers, for after this week, things won't quite be the same for any of us, Mom. By the time we realize that Junior Week is over, we'll have become seniors. "Senior" is an impressive and a distinguished sounding word—but it's also a sad word. It implies the end of our undergraduate days entering the service, facing the business world and saying goodbye, for what could be the last time, to something which we have grown to love very much in the past three years—that thing we're always writing home about, "The Guys."

We've been in the educational system for some fifteen years now, Mom, and we couldn't have made it without you. Somehow you made Dick and Jane, mother and father and Spot seem a lot easier and a lot more fun back in first grade, you were always there with your loving words of help and encouragement. Maybe we're busy now with technical knowledge a little beyond your ken, but we still look to you for advice and counsel, and we always will.

You made us what we are, Mom. You were always there . . . that time when we were in third grade and the fifth grader pushed us in the mud; that time the eighth grade dance came around, and we didn't know how to dance; The time we had the big dance and you loaned us ten bucks to get us through the weekend. Yeah, Mom, we could always count on you.

We'll be seniors soon and then college graduates, but, I guess, we'll always be your loving children, who will look to you for guidance so long as you shall be spared to us.

Welcome to Villanova's Junior Week, and God bless you.

Bob Murphy and Joe Schneider
Chairmen of Junior Week

Wilbur de Paris and his combo whip up a Jazz storm. From left to right are Wilbur de Paris, the versatile trombonist. Aubrey Shepherd on banjo, Wilber Kirk beating the skins, Omer Simeon blowing the licorice stick, Henry Turner (partially obscured) on he bass violin, Sonny White seated at the ivories and Sid de Paris on trumpet. All will be seen at the Field House on Tuesday.

Stan Rubin and his Tigertown Five really get around. They'll play intermission jazz at the Junior Prom, Friday night. Two years ago the combo was enplaning for Monaco to take part in the festivities celebrating the wedding of Grace Kelly and Prince Ranier III.

Innovations Featured At 1959 Junior Prom; Williams' Band Plays

BY FRANK DYNAN

Even the most seasoned prom-goer will find this year's Junior Prom full of surprising innovations.

Prom Chairman Jerry Hepburn and his clever decorations committee under Matta Mazza, have designed the layout, embodying a Roman Holiday theme, to pleasantly startle everyone.

With the bandstand off to the side of the dance floor, the stage will be used to produce a striking three demensional effect which should immediately attract attention.

In the center of the dance floor will be a Roman chariot from which will radiate golden rods. Lights with hued filters will shine on these to create a brilliant aura of color. The novelty does not end here. Refreshments will be served from lion-shaped fountains which will have punch flowing from their mouths.

The decorations committee, rarely honored, but without which the Prom would be a flat, colorless affair, will be paid a special tribute in the lobby. There will be pictures of the decorations in various stages of progress, and all who worked on them will receive notice.

Another feature of the 1958 Junior Prom will be continuous music. Buddy Williams and his band, playing before a floral backdrop, will supply the normal output of music.

Stan Rubin and his Tigertown Five, whom many will remember from the Sophomore Cotillion, will liven up the intermissions. Williams and his group are known for their smooth, danceable music. They are not new to Villanova; they were a big success at the 1955 Junior Prom. Rubin's combo will make a big hit with those who prefer a faster tempo occasionally.

The crowning of the Prom Queen will take place about 10:30. She will be picked from among the five finalists chosen by TV star and noted judge of beauty, Bob Cummings. Four faculty members will act as judges.

To remind the Queen of her triumph in later years, she will be presented with a gold statuette along with a bouquet of beautiful roses.

GERRY HEPBURN
Headed Prom Committee

Roses will also be given to her maid of honor. The three ladies in waiting will be awarded corsages. The pictures of the finalists appear in today's issue of the VILLANOVAN.

Since innovation is the recurring characteristic of many of the Prom arrangements, it is only natural the favors should also be different. They will probably be distributed as the girls leave, to prevent them from being misplaced. What they are will be a well kept secret until Friday night.

Several outsiders must be given credit for their indispensable help with the Prom decorations. Joe DePalma, chairman in charge of flowers, received the help of his family in making the floral trimmings. Help with the flowers was also given by an order of nuns in Wayne.

Matt Mazza has received much professional advice from James Waters, a decorator who has worked on the Miss America Pageant. Waters also donated some of the decor.

Pre-Prom arrangements indicate an affair which will be thoroughly enjoyed and long remembered. From the standpoint of music, novel decor and favors, the Junior Prom of the Class of '59 promises to rank among the best ever staged at Villanova.

Do You Like Your Jazz Dixie Style? Hear Wilbur de Paris Tuesday Night

BY BILL CHRISTY

All you ever get to do at most Steering Committee meetings is raise your hand when someone asks "all in favor," or listen to announcements about things you already know. But at one a few months ago, I was awakened from my state of semi-consciousness adopted for such occasions at the mention of a subject very close to my heart—the Junior Week Jazz Concert.

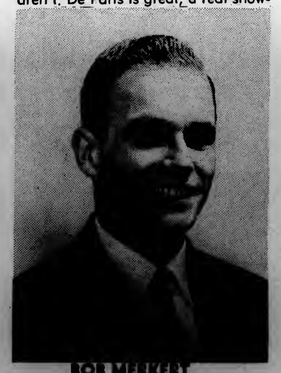
I'm a real Dixieland fan and was a bit concerned that our progressive class might have decided for a progressive jazz group—like Dave (I'll master chopsticks yet) Brubeck—I was relieved to find this was not the case.

Bob Merkert, the man who's president or editor of almost everything, had been appointed to commandeer the event. This news I received with rather mixed emotions, as I didn't know Bob from any other Junior Electrical Engineer. I found that my doubts were unfounded. His first announcement was that we would have a Dixieland band—I was happy. His second statement was that it would be Wilbur de Paris—I was ecstatic.

Everything I had heard about de Paris' doings at Jimmy Ryans in New York was the highest of praise. But I had never seen him personally. To make up for this deficit and since the next weekend was St. Patty's Day anyway, I thought I'd look into him a little further.

As a matter of course, on every trip to New York, I make my first stop at the Village. There's a place down there called Nick's that features a pretty good group—the Manhattan Jazz Band—so I stopped in.

I was standing at the bar (there's no minimum there) wearing a small hole in the floor with my toe, when I got into a conversation with a gentleman at my right. He liked Dixie, I liked Dixie—we talked Dixie. He was somewhat of an authority on the subject, a member in good standing of the 3.00 a.m. crowd that tours the spots up that way.



He congratulated me on my taste in music, telling me I was listening to the second best Dixieland band in the town. I asked the natural question and was reminded of my reason for the trip—a visit to Ryan's and the de Paris group.

Ryan's is a rather low-ceilinged, corridor-shaped spot, but the acoustics are good even if the drinks aren't. De Paris is great, a real showman. As he owns half of Ryan's (he's now engaged in the longest two week run in history— he was signed for a two week stint three years ago), Wilbur doesn't play very long sets, giving the customers time to buy enough liquid refreshment. I nursed my first beer during the break and looked over the program provided for the non-buying, reading clientelle.

The line-up features seven pieces with Wilbur himself playing the 'bone.' The group is sort of a family affair, as Sidney de Paris, a brother, handles the trumpet. Clarinet is covered by Omer Simeon and Henry Turner strums the bass violin. The essence of good Dixie—the banjo—is handled by Shep Shepherd, and Sonny White and Wilbur Kirk take care of the piano and drums, respectively and respectfully.

The rest of the write-up was the usual build-up. It said that de Paris was the best thing that ever happened to music, that he had played for everyone from the King of Africa to snowbound eskimoes. Imagine my chagrin when I found most of it to be true. He's one of the two top value trombonists in the country, has toured extensively, and has played with such people as Louis Armstrong and Duke Ellington.

So now de Paris is coming to Villanova (by the way, I did leave Ryan's —eventually.) and I've had my ticket for three weeks—I paid a week before they were printed. I've been down here at the Field House for three days, waiting to insure myself of a good seat. The concert starts tomorrow night at 7 and goes until 9.30—short, but will be sweet. Don't miss it—and if you do come, bring me a sandwich.

Efforts Of Chairmen Resulted In An Unforgettable Junior Week

BY FRANK FLEMING

To most Juniors this week is but the biggest social fling of their college years, but to the men comprising the various Junior Week committees it is the result of many months of planning and hard work. On the shoulders of these men rested the responsibility of turning a school week into an unforgetable week-long "blast."

The men most responsible for the success or failure of the week are Junior Week co-chairmen, Bob Murphy and Joe Schneider. They were in charge of overall planning and coordination for the entire week. Both Schneider and Murphy are resident engineers. Murphy also holds the office of treasurer in the University's student government.

In charge of today's Mother's Day program are Ken MacGillivary and Don Kempf. Both are History majors. MacGillivary, who hails from Evanston, Ill., was president of his class during sophomore year and is currently president of the Villanova Singers. Kempf, who has been a member of the Student Council since freshman year, served as vice-president of that organization this year.

Working on the Mother's Day committee are Chuck Fritz and Bill McCann in charge of the luncheon. Handling the banquet are Ray Lopez and Paul Hessler. Publicity man for the day is Gerry McGrath. Ticket sales were handled by Jim Hull and Gary Mara while Tony Rossi took care of special arrangements.

Mike Marra and Ed Condon are in charge of the favors with Frank Connolly and Duke Goodwyn organizing the popular Diaper Dan contest. Programs for Mother's Day were prepared by Jim McElhenney and John Murray. Ray Quaglia and John Rumbarger arranged the day's entertainment. In charge of the Aquacade were Marge Bonner and Jim Corey.

Planning Wednesday's Muff day is Bill Hixon while Jim Corey is working with the Intramural Department as coordinator of the Amatuer night activities. Arrangements for the Wilbur DeParis jazz concert were made by Bob Merkert.

C and F student Oz Scogna is chairman of Saturday night's Dinner Dance. Working with Scogna on the dinner dance arrangements were Mike Axt and John Fischetti, co-ticket chairmen. George Bielitz prepared the programs for the affair while Bill McCann selected the menu and floral arrangements. Arranging for music and photographs was Greg Dean. Hotel arrangements and publicity was the responsibility of Harry Devlin. Marcia Marlowe contrived the theme for the dance.

BOB MURPHY

JOE SCHNEIDER

Junior Week Co-Chairmen

Gerry Hepburn was the harassed chairman of the Junior Prom. Matt Mazza prepared decorations while Frank Cavalier planned the Junior Queen Contest. Lou Kubinak led the patron drive with George Bielitz setting up the program.

John Fischetti and Mike Axt were ticket co-chairmen, Ed Zeaser and Bob Baker planned the list of refreshments.

We're sorry if we missed any men who helped to prepare for this fine Junior Week. We want to thank, though, all those who have contributed in any way. They worked to make this week one of the most memorable in our lives.

Class Moderator

Father Weeks Gives His Guidance, Shows Path To Class Success

BY RAY QUAGLIA

The success of our Junior Class may be measured in many ways; the high academic standing of the group as a whole, the scope and fruitfulness of our social activities, and the numerous honors brought to the University by the actions, both in sports and in scholastics, of the individual students.

If it were necessary to give reasons for this success, to list the interacting principles which make up the class of '59, we would place at the head of this list, along with excellent student leadership and a tremendous amount of spirit within the class as a whole, the outstanding guiding effors of our class moderator, the Rev. Henry F. Weeks, O.S.A.

Fr. Weeks graduated from Villanova's seminary with the class of 1942. He then proceeded to the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C., where he received his masters degree in Mathematics. This was followed by further graduate work in the same field at the University of Pennsylvania.

Between the years 1946 and 1951 Fr. Weeks served as a member of the Villanova faculty, teaching both Mathematics and Religion. He was then called upon to serve as a member of the Augustinian Mission Band touring the East coast while they were conducting a series of retreats and missions.

Since Fr. Weeks returned to Villanova, he has been kept very busy by his various duties. He teaches both Freshman and Senior Religion courses, besides acting as chaplain at Rosemont College and serving as prefect of Dwyer Hall. Last year, he was moderator of our sophomore class and was noted for the particularly active part which he took in student activities, a part which is only surpassed by that which he played, and continues to play, in our present Junior year.

The difference which a moderator such as Father Weeks makes to a class, any class, is impossible to put into words. It is the difference between a college career spent in enjoyment, and one spent in the hopeless bungling of class affairs. It is a large part of the difference between success and failure.

Goldschmidt, Marley, Wagner Tops Scholastically

BY JOHN HONE

Seven hundred and sixty seven remain from the class of more than 1,100 that matriculated at Villanova in September of 1955.

Of the present Juniors, 359 are in the Commerce and Finance school, with 32 percent enrolled in Marketing. The various divisions of Arts and Sciences have a total for 216 Juniors with the General Arts program comprising 95 students. The School of Engineering, with four majors, enrolls 192 Juniors. The Electrical Engineering major has 99 of the Junior engineers.

The three Juniors with the highest cumulative grade point average, in each school, are Thomas C. Goldschmidt—Liberal Arts; James A. Marley—Commerce and Finance, and Robert J. Wagner—Engineering.

Goldschmidt, posessor of the highest cumulative average of all Juniors, is an English major from Gloucester, N.J. A graduate of Gloucester High School, he was class valedictorian there. As a student at Villanova, he has attained the Dean's List every semester and scored a perfect mark of 4.0 twice. He is the Associate Editor of the VILLANOVON and a member of the Literary Club. With an eye towards the field of journalism, Tom hopes to attend graduate school.

Morley, an Industrial Adminstration major, lives in Glenside, Pa., and is a graduate of LaSalle High School. He spent two years in the Armed Forces before entering Villanova in 1955. He has been named to the Dean's List every semester

An Electrical Engineering major, Wagner lives in Northeast Philadelphia at 1459 Higbee Street. He graduated first in his class from LaSalle High School. An active joiner of extra-curricular activities, he is a member of Phi Kappa Pi, AIEE-IRE, and is on the circulation staff of the VILLANOVA ENGINEER. In addition he has been on the Ring Dance Committee and is now a member of the Junior Prom and Junior Class Steering Committees.

The top students in each school listed alphabetically are:

In Commerce and Finance: Patrick C. Campbell—Pre-Law, John M. Hone—Accounting, James A. Marley—Industrial Administration, Charles D. McClain—Accounting, Francesco J. Pacheco—Finance, John T. Taormina—Marketing, Edward A. Utsch—Accounting, and Edward L. Ward—Industrial Administration.

In Engineering; Thomas J. Beslin—Mechanical Engineering, James R. Clark—Chemical Engineering, Louis J. Gale Electrical, Raymond J. Hepburn—Civil Engineering, Robert J. Merkert — Electrical Enigeneering, and Robert J. Wagner also Electrical Engineering.

In the Arts and Sciences: Robert F. Baxter—Mathematics, John S. Fields—History, Thomas Gaynard—Physics, Thomas C. Goldschmidt—English, John J. O'Donnell—Education, and Clayton Thomas—General Arts.

JOHN RUMBARGER: "Boy, the Channel was rough today."

It's been over a month now since the letters first went out—or maybe you're a Junior and haven't heard about them. You remember that day that a member of the Mother's Day Committee came around and asked for the addresses of those planning to go to the Mom's Day activities; well, that's when it began.

Those addresses were used to send out the letters for this year's "Diaper Dan" Contest. And since then the moms have cooperated as the plot thickened.

The moms answered Diaper Dan Chairmen, Duke Goodwyn and Frank Connolly, by sending in over 400 pictures of their "prides and joys". The pictures were closely guarded by the committee, being chuckled over only in the darkest of the night.

Today the whole story will be brought to light at 4:00 when the final "Baby of the Year" and his diaper clothed court are chosen in Dougherty Hall.

Prizes will be awarded to the mothers of the Champ and his partners in the play-pen. Judging will be based on originality and . . . well, just look at these samples.

CHARLEY STEAD

FRANK HANSCHUR

JOE MICHELL

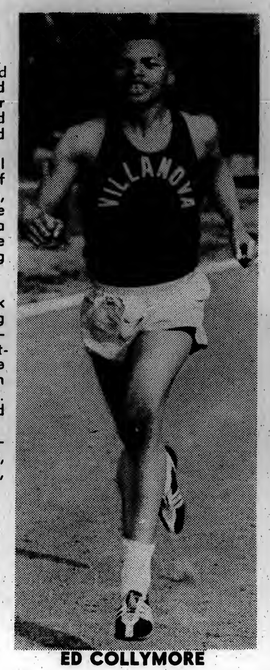
In practically every intercollegiate sport participated in at Villanova, members of the Class or 1959 play a vital, almost indispensable part.

In track and field, for example, there is Ed Collymore, certainly one of the world's finest sprinters. Ed hold the national AAU and IC4A indoor. 60-yard titles and the outdoor IC4A 100 and 220-yard diadems. He anchors Villanova's crack mile relay team, as well.

Charley Stead has been a member of the mile relay team, for two years. Between quarter-mile stints, Charley finds time to do some mighty fine high-jumping. He tied for first place in the IC4A indoor meet as a sophomore, then came back to take second place this year. Jack Van Dusen is a hurdler.

Vic DiMaio, at his best outdoors, runs the half-mile on the distance medley team and the quarter-mile on the mile relay squad.

The football team boasted of no less than 14 juniors, the most noteworthy of whom were Gene O'Pella and Jim Grazione. Gene's bruising play from his end position has set him up as a future professional choice. Jim assumed the number one quarterback position last year after sharing it with Bill Magee the year before.

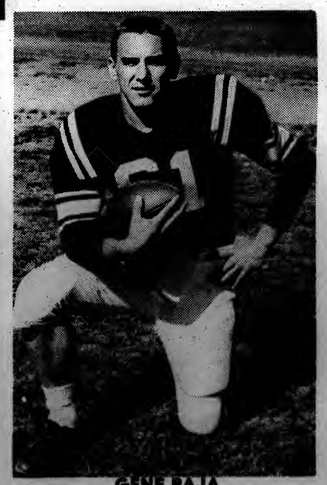


Two other juniors are rated among the stick-outs on the football team—guard Mike DeLucia and tackle Bill Craig. Other third-year men on the squad include ends Gerry Billings and Jim Tobin, tackles Paul Morra and Bob Vincent, centers Tom Fletcher and Jim Palmer, quarterback Ed Roehre, halfback Tom McPherson, and fullbacks Joe Nardo and Gene Paja.

Next year's basketball team will have three members of the Class of 1959 on it, led by captain Joe Ryan, hustling guard who at times is one of the best scorers in the Philadelphia area. Joining him will be George Emma, possessor of a wonderful long set shot, springy-legged Ken Harrison and tall Matt Brennan.

Baseball coach Art Mahan has six juniors on his squad, chief among whom is Emma, starting first-baseman. Frank Hanschur is another first-baseman. Bob Vincent starts in the outfield, while Joe Michell and Ralph Kowalkowski are on the pitching staff. Ray Lenzi subs in both the infield and outfield.

Juniors on the swimming team included Larry Palacio, Jim Gregory, Joe Mason, Bob Pinto, Bill Gilhool, John Rumbarger and Jerry Cechony.



The golf squad includes juniors Nick Aquilino, Roger Gaire, and twin brothers Reggie and Ronnie Zurinskas. Representing the Junior Class on the pistol team are Jim D'Arcy and Paul Lang, while the rifle team includes Chris Kloss and Bill Hearn.

Murphy New Council Head

By PAUL BUCKLEY

Robert A. Murphy, junior Electrical Engineering student, was inaugurated Student Body President at a joint meeting of the Student Council Monday night.

Murphy, a 20-year-old resident from Lawrence, Mass., was unopposed for the office. He was nominated Thursday night by former senior Class President Clem Birch.

Murphy succeeded Pat Nicholson as undergraduate president. He pledged "to try to follow in the fine tradition and example set up by Nicholson."

At Villanova, he is a member of the Spirit Committee, AIEE-IRE, and was treasurer of the Student Council the past year.

Murphy, who is attending Villanova on a Navy scholarship, was valedictorian of his Central Catholic High School graduating class, and recipient of the scholastic excellence medal.

Hoffman Veep

Thomas Hoffman, recently re-elected Liberal Arts resident representative from the Class of 1960, was elected vice-chairman of the council during the same meeting.

Hoffman has been extremely active in the council in the past

Turf 'n' Tinsel Comedy Show Opens Tonite

By FRANK DYNAN
News Editor

Who's Foo?

That's been the question around campus for the past three weeks, and it will be answered tonight when the annual Turf and Tinsel musical comedy production opens in the Field House at 8:30 tonight.

"Who's Foo," an original all-male show written by Alumni Director George Pequignot, will run through Saturday night, and stars Mike Klesius and Norm Peer as Hyde and Sheek, a detective team.

Gilligan Is Foo

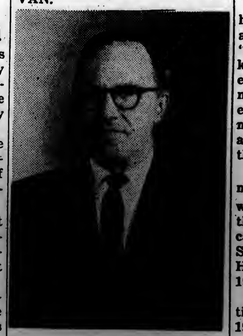
Jim Gilligan will play Dr. Foo, while Mike Rafferty and Bob Dilks will portray rival tong leaders in the take-off on the slap-stick detective movies of the 1930's, which uses Sax Rohmer's fictional creation, Fu Manchu, as its victim.

Major female parts will be handled by Gary Tackas and John Kennedy, and Don Luzzi plays a supporting role as a Police sergeant.

Dave Belcher, Paul Laughlin, Don Kempf and Gerry Gobright also hold important parts in the production.

Music By Whalen

San Francisco's Chinatown is the scene of the story, in which two detectives try to stop a Tong War. The music was written and arranged by Robert Whalen, the university's Athletic Secretary, who was instrumental in organizing and supporting T 'n' T.



The play is under the direction of Miss Betty Green, and trite characters and situations typical of Hollywood movies are burlesqued throughout.

Tickets are priced at $1 for students and $1.50 for general admission, and are on sale in the Pie Shoppe and at the door.

John Calpin To Be Given Award At Villanovan Fete

John C. Calpin, political writer for the Philadelphia EVENING BULLETIN, has been named the winner of this year's St. Augustine Award.

Announcement of Calpin's selection as the third winner of the award was made by The Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., Dean of the Graduate Division and moderator of the VILLANOVAN.

JOHN C. CALPIN
Awards Winner

Presentation of the award will take place at a dinner for the staff members of the publication on this Friday evening, at the Drake Hotel. The Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., President of Villanova, and other school officials will be among the 200 attending.

The award named for St. Augustine, patron saint of printers, is given for distinction in the broad field of journalism was first presented to James T. Quirk, publisher of TV Guide Magazine. John Facenda, prominent television commentator, was last year's winner.

"The selection of Mr. Calpin has given added lustre to our award," Father Rongione said. "His success is the result of a keen combination of professional excellence, deep sincerity and moral courage, all quietly but effectively applied. His career might serve as a wonderful example to young people entering the journalism field."

Calpin, a native of Mount Carmel, Pa., has been associated with The BULLETIN for more than thirty years. He was educated at Germantown High School and Temple University. He joined the paper's staff in 1925 as a district reporter.

Calpin progressed to the position of assistant city editor in 1931 and served in that capacity until 1947. During this time, he earned a reputation as an astute student of politics and business.

He served as Philadelphia correspondent for BUSINESS WEEK Magazine from 1944 to 1946 and wrote for NATION'S BUSINESS in 1947. He is recognized as a national authority in his field.

LaSalle To Give Honor Degree To Fr. Donnellon

The Very Reverend James A. Donnellon O.S.A., University President, will receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from La Salle College on May 22, it has been announced.

Father Donnellon will receive his degree, conferred for outstanding service in the field of education, at LaSalle's Founder's Day activitics.

Founder's Day is the feast day of St. John Baptist de LaSalle, the founder of the Christian Brothers, who teach at LaSalle.

The day's ceremonies will include a Mass at 4 p.m., to be celebrated by Augustinians from Villanova. The sermon at the Mass will be delivered by Father Donnellon.

At 5:30 p.m. there will be a convocation at which he will be given his degree.

It has also been announced Fr. Donnellon will receive another honorary degree from Merrimac College on May 31.

Campus 'Phone Service To Be Restored Soon

The Bell Telephone Company has decided to restore campus telephone service to normal, following negotiations with representatives of the Student Council.

Continuation of the service, however, is dependant upon the proper conduct of the student body.

The Council, in conjunction with the telephone company, has re-affirmed its faith in the students of the university, and has announced its belief that they will conduct themselves in a responsible manner in the future.

The Student Congress passed a resolution last Monday night condemning the improper use of telephones on campus.

The resolution provides for the public condemnation of those students, believed to be a minority, who are responsible for damaging Villanova's dormitory telephones.

Student Body President Pat Nicholson stated that credit for the resolution belongs to Bob Mulcahy, chairman of the committee which dealt with the telephone situation on campus, and Tom Hoffman, who assisted Mulcahy in his discussions with the Bell company.

1958 Bel Aire

The 1958 edition of the Belle Air Will be distributed to seniors tomorrow. Other students may pick up their yearbooks on Friday. The books may be obtained in the Belle Air office and the Villanovan office in Dougherty Hall.

Frank J. Dynan New Editor Of LYNX: Edition Tomorrow

Frank Dynan, General Arts Junior, has been appointed editor-in-chief of the 1958-'59 LYNX, it was announced last week by Mr. James Mitchell and Dr. John S. Phillipson, faculty moderators.

Dynan, a 20-year-old day-hop from Philadelphia, and News Editor of the VILLANOVAN, succeeds Frank Delany, who has served as editor-in-chief for the last two years.

FRANK J. DYNAN
New LYNX Editor

Junior English major Bill Christy will succeed John Kennedy as layout-managing editor. Christy another 20-year-old Philadelphia day-hop, has served as exchange editor on the 1957-'58 LYNX and is presently feature editor of the VILLANOVAN.

Other Editors

The remaining members of the editorial staff will be James Tague, Poetry editor; J. Michael Wesley, copy editor; Frank Connolly, art editor; Paul Buckley, publicity editor; Clayton Thomas, circulation manager; and Benjamin Hynes, exchange editor.

Peter Allard, Thomas Sweeney and Gerard Givnish will work with Frank Connolly as art staff assistants.

Retiring editor-in-chief Frank Delany has announced that the Spring issue of the LYNX will go on sale Thursday in Dougherty Hall.

Between the three-color cover will be featured articles that include an essay on conditions in Philadelphia called the Jungle by John McCoy and Joe Wheeler, poetry by John Snader, and short stories by John Kennedy and Frank Murtha. Essays by Bob Pinto, Bill Christy and Frank Dynan will also be included as well as other contributions of fiction and poetry.

No Plans

The new editor-in-chief has no definite plans for next year's issues at this early stage, but he has announced that he "would like all interested students to make use of their spare time this summer to write, and then to submit, their contributions early next semester."

Dynan emphasized that no one should be afraid to write because they fear a lack of ability.

A. Owen Klein Elected Belle Masque Head

A. Owen Klein, junior English major, was unanimously picked as president of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society at the Annual elections meeting last week.

Klein, a 21 year old student from Stockbridge, Mass., has been active for three years in Belle Masque as an actor and member of the business staff.

He has also worked on the Belle Air Yearbook and is the Associate Editor for the 1959 edition.

Klein succeeds Thomas Kimmel, a senior Science major from New Jersey. Harry Georges, a 20 year old C&F student, who was elected treasurer succeeds George Becht. Georges has been a member of the stage crew.

For the secretary position, Francis Flagella, a sophomore arts major was elected. Flagella has had acting experience during the past year.

Gerald McGrath was re-elected to his position as Student Council Representative. He has held this position for the past year and has conducted ticket sales for the organization.

The positions were announced last week by Father William Farrell, O.S.A., and Richard L. Duprey, director.

Phila. Mayor Calls for Help From Citizens

Mayor Richardson Dilworth, declared last week that the citizens of Philadelphia have contributed to city crime "because of their disinterest and lack of community spirit."

The Mayor spoke at a press conference in Philadelphia's City Hall. Representing the VILLANOVAN were Editor-in-Chief Larry O'Rourke, News Editor Frank Dynan and Feature Editor Ray Quaglia.

"We are faced with the problem of assimilating migrants from the South into city life. Citizen cooperation, not always forthcoming, is necessary to avoid problems in this work," the Mayor continued.

Dilworth explained that citizens of all ages, including college students, can share in the responsibility of good government. "Too many people let the other guy do it," the Mayor said.

The press conference was one of a series arranged by the Mayor's office and the administration reporters covering City Hall.

The highest reward for man's toil is not what he gets for it, but what he becomes by it.

Kenneth A. MacGillivray Re-Elected Singers Head

Mendel Bulletin On Sale Tomorrow

The final edition of the MENDEL BULLETIN will be on sale tomorrow, Richard J. Hamburger, Editor-in-Chief of the magazine, announced last week.

The edition will contain ten articles covering the varied aspects of the fields of biology, chemistry and physics.

Hamburger stated that the edition will mainly contain points of interest to pre-medical students.

Original articles have been submitted by John Capelli, Enoch Houser, and also Joseph Clark, Leo Jijanowski, Anthony Silvestri and Henry Whalen.

Kenneth A. MacGillivray, junior History major, was re-elected president of the Villanova Singers at a meeting last week.

MacGillivray was the organization's head the past two semesters, being the first junior to hold that position in several years.

Frank Connolly, junior English major and art editor of both the VILLANOVAN and the LYNX, was elected to the vice-presidency of the Singers, succeeding Paul Laughlin.

James Corey, junior Political Science major, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Corey's election, like MacGillivray's, was unanimous and uncontested.

The post of librarian went to junior John Carmosky, recently elected president of the Physics Club.

Sophomore Charley Carroll was named Student Council representative.

Recorder M. Skow At Convention

Meta D. Skow, University Recorder, represented Villanova at the meeting last month of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers.

The meeting was held in Cincinnati, Ohio. Topics discussed by the registrars included the problem of college admissions and the necessity of an adequate staff.

Members of the Knights of Columbus gather last week following the installation into the first degree of more than 150 Villanova students. The candidates will take third degree and thus become full members of the K. of C. this Sunday.

Breucker, Kerwin Circulation Chiefs

Gerard J. Kerwin, junior Electrical Engineering student, has been named co-circulation manager of the VILLANOVAN, it was announced Monday by Editor-in-Chief Larry O'Rourke.

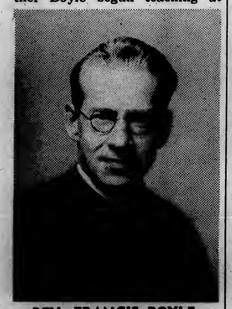
Kerwin, a resident student who lives in New York City, will assist Harry L. Breucker, junior Mechanical Engineering student, in the circulation department.

A member of the ASME, Breucker has been a staff member of the VILLANOVAN since 1956. Kerwin, a member of the AIEE-IRE and the engineering fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, has been associated with the paper for two years.

Lecture Here

The Reverend Paul Henry S. J., Professor of Theology at the Institut Cathloique of Paris, will lecture at Villanova on Wednesday, July 16, 1958.

The lecture and seminar will be open to all summer students. The exact time and place will be announced at a later date.



Fr. Francis Boyle Named C and F Assistant Dean

Rev. Francis X. Boyle, O.S.A., has assumed the position of Assistant Dean of the Commerce and Finance School, following his appointment last week by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon O.S.A. University President.

Father Boyle, a professor of Business Administration, will serve as the assistant to Rev. Joseph C. Bartley O.S.A. who has been the Dean of Commerce and Finance for 30 years.

The office of Assistant Dean was created to relieve some of the stress created by the tremendous expansion of the university's largest school.

A native Philadelphian, Father Boyle began teaching at

REV. FRANCIS BOYLE

Villanova in 1940 and has been the head of the infirmary since 1943.

He attended Villanova and Catholic University and received his masters degree from Oxford University in 1940. He later did graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania.

Copper-Nickel Alloys

Alloys of copper and nickel are among the earliest alloys of any sort known to man.

POETRY PRINTED

Two Seniors, Gerald La Karnafeaux, an English major, and John Snader, an Education major, have recently had their poems accepted for "Supernaculum," a National Catholic collection printed at St. Francis College in Brooklyn.

LaKarnafeux's poem is entitled: "Impressions and Sensations of the first winter's day in late fall."

Math Club Names Baxter

Robert F. Baxter Jr., junior Mathematics major, was elected president of the Math Club, at the last monthly meeting.

The twenty-year-old resident of Chester, Pa. has been active in the club for three years and is a member of an intramural bowling team.

He succeeds Joseph Celia as president. Celia, also a Math major, turned over the presidency to Baxter at a meeting last week.

Also elected to office in the club were junior Kenneth Corman, secretary and Sophomores Gerald Moore, vice-president and Paul Teufer, treasurer.

The Club went on a field trip to the Franklin Institute, April 24th.

At the Institute, they saw the Remington Rand UNIVAC. Mr. Charles Moench of the university Math department and a member of the institute's staff arranged the trip.

Ten Rejected After O-C Applications

Final applications for the Opera Classica Music Society must be submitted before Friday, it was announced yesterday by Anthony L. P. Angeline, club moderator.

"So far, only 32 students have applied for admission into the Society. Of these 22 have been accepted," Angeline said.

The Society, which will celebrate its fifth anniversary next year, has already prepared a schedule of next season's events. Live recitals, trips to concerts, and regular listening sessions have been planned.

The Rev. Joseph W. Paquette, O.S.A., will direct Opera Cassica concerts this summer.

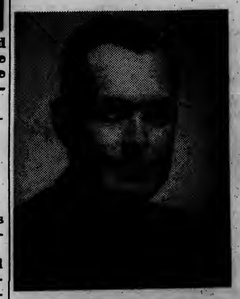
The Concert Workshop of the Society will broadcast the newly released recording of Giordano's Andrea Chenier tonight at 9 over WVIL. The club moderator will narrate the program.

Students and faculty members gather at a tea sponsored by the Literary Club and the Opera Classica Society after the first annual Villanova Art Show, two weeks ago.

Notre Dame President To Speak At Graduation

The Rev. Joseph C. Bartley O.S.A., Dean of Commerce and Finance, and students, attend a banquet with members of the American Cooperative Enterprise System Society. After the banquet the group held a discussion in the auditorium of Vasey Hall on current business problems.

The Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, President of Notre Dame University will deliver the commencement address at Villanova's 115th graduation exercise June 2nd.



Father Hesburgh will also receive an Honorary Degree at the exercises along with three other distinguished citizens.

Villanova will also bestow Doctorates on the Honorable John C. Ball, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court; Louis S. Wescott, Pittsburgh, Pa., contractor, and John A. Murphy, Philadelphia broker.

Holds Major Posts

Nearly 650 degrees in courses will be conferred at the exercises.

Father Hesburgh will receive

REV. THEODORE HESBURGH
Graduation Speaker

the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Science. He has been president of Notre Dame since 1952 when he was appointed at the age of 35.

In addition, he holds several major posts in the world education, science and public affairs.

Justice Bell was appointed to the Pennsylvania High Court in 1950 and served a year as Governor of Pennsylvania. He will be awarded the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws.

Own Contracting Firm

Mr. Wescott will be awarded the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Science. He is a 1925 graduate of Villanova University and is the owner of the Louis S. Wescott Contracting Firm in Pittsburgh.

The Honorary Degree of Doctor of Science in Economics will be conferred upon Mr. Murphy who gave considerable time and service to Villanova last year as chairman of its fund drive. Mr. Murphy is a partner in Reynolds and Company, brokers in Philadelphia.

Commencement exercises will be held in the University Field House at 11:00 A.M.

Seniors may now pick up tickets for graduation at the University Shop. There is a limit of five tickets per student.

Engraved graduation announcements are also available at 10c apiece. There is no limit on the number of announcements.

Navy To Present Awards At Spring Review Tuesday

The annual presentation of awards will highlight the open house and spring review of Villanova's NROTC battallion next Tuesday.

Rear Admiral Epharim McLean, Commandant Fourth Naval District will present a gold sword to Midshipmen 1/c David E. Borcik, for attaining top standing in his Naval Science class for four years.

Midshipmen Eugene Fogart, 1/c; Alan Mehldau, 2/c; Frederick Wiele, 3/c and Thomas Dillion, Jr. 4/c will be recipients of a plaque from the Navy League of Philadelphia for attaining the highest standing in their respective classes.

Leadership Award

The Valley Forge Chapter Reserve Officers' Association will present a medal to Midshipman William Scott, 1/c for displaying excellence in leadership and aptitude.

A subscription to the United States Naval Institue Proceedings will be awarded to Midshipmen 1/c Fogarty and George Christmann as the outstanding senior regular and contract midshipman respectively.

Midshipman George Hatton, 1/c, has won a subscription to the Marine Corps Gazette and a certificate of merit from the Marine Corps Association as outstanding senior Marine Candidate.

Borcik, will also be presented with a medal and a certificate of merit by the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association.

The Convair Company will present a certificate and a miniature airplane to the outstanding student entering flight training Midshipman John Moynihan, 1/c.

Weapons Award

A suitably engraved wristwatch will be awarded to Midshipman Frederick Wiele, 3/c, for excelling in the course of Naval Weapons.

Midshipman William Lieblein will receive a personal radio as the midshipman in the freshman class displaying the greatest understanding of the influence of seapower.

A personal radio will be presented to Midshipman Joseph Durocher, 3/c for excelling in the electronics phase of the Naval Weapons course.

Outstanding Junior

The Naval Reserve Composite Company of Villanova will present a brief case to the outstanding junior midshipman, Ralph Reynolds.

Tuesday's proceedings will get underway with an open house and demonstration of Naval Weapons in action in Commodore John Barry Hall from 2 to 3 p.m.

At 3:15 p.m. a helicopter will land on Austin Field with Admiral McLean and the Commanding Officer of the Naval Air Station at Willow Grove, Pa. This will signal the start of the battallion.

Marley Elected President of SAM

James Marley, Junior Industrial Administration student, was elected to the presidency of the Society for the Advancement of Management last Thursday.

Marley succeeds Thomas Whalen as the president of the society. Others elected at the time were John Barrone—Secretary; Kieran Devery—Treasurer; Robert Cunius—Student Council Representative, and Joseph Marozzi—Public Relations Director.

ICG Attends 23rd Annual Convention

The Villanova Chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government participated in the twenty-third annual state convention in Harrisburg on April 17. Forty-eight colleges and universities in the state attended.

The Villanova delegation was led by Chairman, Michael Heaney. The delegation had the most proposals passed by the General Assembly of the mock National Congress.

De Marco Gets Award

Mark A. DeMarco, a 1952 graduate of Villanova, has been named the winner of the second prize of $50 dollars in the Nathan Burkan Memorial Competition for 1957 at Dickinson School of Law.

Undergraduate Accomplishment

Pat Nicholson, loud and dynamic, turned the gavel of Student Body President over to Bob Murphy, soft and dynamic, Monday night.

Nicholson, the staunch Villanova rooter from Cleveland, has only a few days left at Villanova. They will probably be the quietest during Pat's last four years.

He will be thinking of the great physical and social growth of the school since 1954. New buildings, student trips, a general spirit of progress, have punctuated Nicholson's time here.

His contribution to Villanova was in the field of student government. He was the spearhead behind the reorganization of the council. He fought for the senior car program and the return of Fathers' Day to campus.

Pat provided effective council leadership during the past year. His enthusiasm and determination to have only the best said of Villanova were expressions of Pat's' desire and sincerity. His graduation next month will leave a big gap.

Murphy has already shown indications he will be able to fill it. Whether conversing in the Pie Shoppe or dorms or presiding over the Council, Bob has demonstrated leadership ability.

He has spent the past year in preparation for the role of Student Council presiding officer. His uncontested nomination gives proof to the justness of the admiration held for him by all Council members.

Murphy follows a fighter into office. He follows a man willing to sacrifice for the university. He has to live up a mighty tradition. We think he can do it.

Spend a Dollar

Philadelphia's Mayor Dilworth called on college students last week to aid in the fight against juvenile delinquency.

The hard fighting Mayor blamed much of the modern teenage trouble on citizens who are unwilling to take the time or the responsibility for helping wayward children. Those who sit back and suggest whipping posts and other tortures for juvenile offenders are merely adding harshness to an already overloaded pile of grievances.

Dilworth suggested that college students look around their own neighborhood for the underprivileged and neglected. They are the ones most likely to fall into trouble.

College students can talk to these and perhaps set some sort of positive example. Certainly the swearing, bragging youth at the playground who ignores children standing by when he enumerates his catalogue of sins is a prime cause in the delinquency problem. Too often children admire the kind of college students better never seen.

Saturday afternoon baseball games are a splendid excuse to round up kid brother and the neighboring boy and take them out for an afternoon's fun. Try it some day. It certainly won't hurt.

ALASKAN PROBLEM INTEREST LAGS

To the Editor:

Inasmuch as my ancestors came from the territory of Alaska, I have been interested recently in the discussions over admission of Alaska into the Union.

Many of my classmates have shown not even the slightest interest in the matter. I am sorry to see this, for unless college students think about the problems of their country now, they never will. College is the time for the molding of minds and opinions.

I realize that the school newspaper cannot come out and capaign for the admission or rejection of Alaska. The paper can however awaken the students to an appreciation of the problem.

JUNIOR EVENTS RUN SMOOTHLY

To the Editors:

Congratulations on your fine Junior Week paper. I would like to use the VILLANOVAN to express public thanks to a wonderful group of class officers who planned the week's affairs.

Most events, under the smooth handling of class president Vic Ludmerer, turned out well. The large size of the class, surprisingly enough, did not militate against real enjoyment. This year's class proved that even six or seven hundred couples can have a successful dinner dance and prom.

ENEMY OF JAZZ STILL AG'IN IT

To the Editor:

I attended the jazz concert during Junior Week after hearing a defense of jazz from my friends. I write again to tell you that now that I have sat through two hours of jazz, seen students clap hands and cheer wildly, I still do not like jazz.

I have hopes that many students will take to heart my advce: stay away from jazz. It is corrupting.

Springtime Refrain

"Hey, roomie, Let's go to a picnic."

"No, sorry, only twelve more days."

"Only twelve more days till what?"

"Till exams, friend, and professors have a horrible habit of asking the wrong questions. Like stuff I don't know."

"Oh, I'm not gonna worry about it until next weekend. Plenty of time to cram. I got it made. Most of my exams come later in the week. So, no sweat."

That's what happened last year. This June, of the two, only one is graduating.

We're Both Honored

We're happy this week to announce that John C. Calpin, noted political columnist for the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, will be the recipient of the third annual St. Augustine Award.

The VILLANOVAN presents this award annually to a person of honesty and integrity in the communications field.

It is not easy to be a political writer, especially on the municipal level. There are pressures from all candidates and parties, each one insisting on seeing their names in type. It requires a man of endless patience and dedication to maintain normality during some trying election periods.

Such a man is John Calpin. We've known him and watched him work now for several years. Even on hectic election nights does John keep his cofposure. He is a true newspaperman.

That's why we're proud to have John C. Calpin as our St. Augustine Award winner.—L. M. O'R.

Congratulations to:

Candidates Oz Scogna, Sheldon Pollock and Bob DeLisa who made it over the top in the class officers last week.

Frank Dynan, recently named LYNX Editor, who promises great things for next year.

Strictly Opinion

Ars Gratia Villanova

By BOB PINTO

The graduating seniors will go forth into this brave new atomic world with a smattering of culture because of it. They will be able to hold their heads high now for having seen it. What is it? That is what many asked when they saw it; it was the art show.

The art show was announced as the first annual, and we hope that what is implied by that is carried through. The amazing thing about this cultural touch is that it had many contributors, and that a lot of students (out of the number who know where the library is) have taken notice and commented on the show. There has been a good deal of criticism about the places given to certain works. The judges have been called quadrupeds of several orders by frustrated Van Gogh-s, but good or bad, understand or not, the art show has given us a little class.

Catholic schools are usually wide open for criticism on the culture angle. The claim is that our religion is restrictive and that this is manifest in our artistic development. With each new form through which our students can express themselves. we are raising the potential of the school. It should be noticed that not one of the pictures had a religious theme. This is a clear sign that the show was not under the persuasion of the faculty, as an objector might claim.

Shades of Dali

The abstracts caused the most comment of all the pictures. There is a feeling among the viewers that they could have done just as well by having an epileptic fit in a paint factory. This is like sayng you are as good as Mickey Mantle because you can catch line drives. If you have no idea of what to look for, then your subjective criticism of a work as bad, when knowing judges have called it good, only reflects the sparsity of your knowledge.

To ask the worth of this type art, is to ask what good are different colored clothes, or the varied styles of cars. The worth is in variety. We have a tendency to practicality and usefulness, but we also have a liking for the individualistic, for the unusual. And art is a unique interpretation which a sensitive person gives to an ordinary object, sometimes making it different than the way in which we see it.

Art is also an opportunity for some to create something completely new, only slightly related to reality. They feel that to create something new, with beauty and balance, is one of the highest skills of man.

Our art show may not have been this exactly, but it was good for the artists as a vehicle of expression. If we give it a chance, it may prove good for us.

Twilight Shadows Gather As Nicholson Bids Farewell To Beloved Alma Mater

By PAT NICHOLSON
SC President

It's over. Four wonderful years at the greatest university in the world—at least to my mind—are over. And there is nothing we can do to bring them back again.

Even those chronic complainers among us will have to admit that it has been a good four years, full of the laughter and tears that go to make such wonderful memories at those alumni reunions 25 years hence.

Yes, we have gotten an education at Villanova — it has made better men of us, and we can't help feeling that we have helped to make it a little better place too. We have both advanced in all phases—spiritual, academic, social and physical (at least, we both expanded).

A Few Griped

Oh, the Class of 1958 griped in typical college fashion, but in the end we cooperated with the Administration, and they helped us in every possible way to make things a little better all around.

In all, we've seen a lot of things happen in our short stay at Villanova. The matter closest to my heart has, of course, always been the spirit of the student body, and we can say we did something about that, all right.

The Class of 1958 read the now infamous article in the SATURDAY EVENING POST and went out and proved that it was all wrong. We leave Villanova with the reputation of having one of the most spirited student bodies in the East.

Reputation to Maintain

To those classes which follow us, I leave one word of advice. The Villanova reputation established in Boston, New York and Philadelphia must be maintained here on the Main Line.

Yes, the future spirit of Villanova is up to you underclassmen. By working together with the Administration, faculty and the alumni, you can build a greater Villanova.

As for the Class of '58, we are leaving Villanova with mixed emotions. We are looking forward to the future, confident that the education we received here will enable us to face most of the problems that lie ahead.

The Memories

However, we all are going to miss the games, rallies and social activities; and many of us will even miss the lectures, and that special girl (or girls) from Rosemont, Immaculata and Chesnut Hill.

I am confident that we, the Class of 1958, will do our part in the alumni. It is up to you to do your part here at Villanova.

When the last big game is over,
And when the last roll call is heard,
When the oldest pedagogue
Has had his final word
We (the Class of '58) shall come to Alma Mater
In our dreams again,
With a prayer for Villanova,
And a sweet amen.

Retches

What care I for other loves
....for other beauty?....
All I ever dreamed, I find in you....Your silken hair....
Oh so black the happiness of a million nights glow through .... your eyes.... beautiful eyes....So full of love and mystery....Whoa, girl....
Steady now....I'd love to take you in of course.... but after all, you're only a horse.

Shore Life Among The Cabana Crowd: Blacks, Slacks Stretch Shorts Allowed

By TOM McKENNA

Within a few weeks a mass exodus to that wonderland known as the shore will take place. The object of this summer sojourn, which occurs mostly on weekends will be to get a tan and make an impression on those two legged creatures who romp around the beach playing hard to get. As boys will be boys and girls will be girls—the boys will do some chasing and the girls will continue to romp.

There is one sad thing that may effect the boys interest in girls (if that is possible), and that is the advent of that dreaded chemise into girl's beachwear. Don't let it scare you, men, the girl is still inside that bathing suit, she's just trying not to show too much proof.

Chemise Sacks 'em

We have an idea that Villanova men will end the summer longing for the good old days when girls were stacked instead of sacked.

The sack, bag, chemise, or whatever you call it may be the big thing in female fashion, but nothing like it appears in men's fashions. The news in that field is wash and wear, lightness and color, with an emphasis on all three.

Everything is wash 'n wear, including some shoes. Suits, slacks, jackets, and shirts all can be dropped into a machine at night and be ready to wear in the morning.

Black is Back

Color abounds in every item of summer wear this year, vivid ones and pastels, but an old standard is again making its appearance on the scene—black. Many suggest that black or gray Bermuda shorts be worn with the new wash 'n wear dinner jackets as a summer formal. If nothing else, it will increase comment.

Besides the new pastels in dinner jackets, sport coats are also colorful along with accompanying slacks. The jackets will be available in stripes, checks, and solids. The most popular shades in the slacks should be tan, olive, and charcoal, but such shockers as vivid reds and Kelly green will be in evidence.

There is one combination of the above two that may become a uniform this summer. The blazer that was so popular in the '20's and '30's is to be combined with light weight white slacks, so maybe fashions are going backwards altogether.

No Short-Shorts

We doubt seriously that any males will be wearing the chemise on the beach, unless they are "very individualistic." The bathing suit for the man will be a bit longer, some coming down to the mid-calf. Cabana sets in Hawaiian prints will be seen on the more cavalier types, but the majority will continue to favor the Terry cloth pull overs with piping matching the short track shorts.

There are some sets that will feature the deep "V" cardigan sweater effect. Small checks and regimental stripes will remain the most popular designs with Indian madras prints winning the second place in popularity.

There are some more items that could be added, but let's not all be conformists, show some initiative and individuality in how you dress this summer and don't forget the accessories.

Retches

Spring is here! Not far off lies summer....stinking, sweaty summer....Our season dear....The long drives to the shore....breathing in the noxious odors of a bus or truck....you and I together....Oh the joy!....
the wonderful times!....I remember dear, that last day at the beach....frolicking among the waves....you, laughing as I dragged you further and furthur into the water....Oh the way you laughed!....a funny gurgling sound as you bit my hand....I laughed back and shook you lovingly....
I was having such fun.... but you turned blue and squashy in a while....you were so frail....and now I'm alone, so alone....in jail.

Publicly Speaking

Just Wait 'til Next Year

By BILL CHRISTY

This year's elections are over. At least I think they are, although one fellow handed me a collection of seventeen cards this morning as I entered the Pie Shoppe.

The election period was considerably shortened this time, presumably to save wear and tear on the elections committee and our paper-littered campus green. Campaigning used to last ten days, then it was reduced to a week. This year it went down to three days. I understand that next year elections will be held five minutes after nominations, so that none will have any idea who they are voting for.

Aside from the shortened period for campaigns, there were a number of other innovations this year. One sophomore figured out a way to beat the system entirely. He entered the polls five times dressed as a maintenance man to avoid a deluge of campaign literature, and voted for every man on the ballot. He didn't help anyone win, but he didn't lose any friends either.

Pi R Squared Over...

A classmate of this esteemed gentleman went about it a different way. It seems that if you take the total number of letters in the titles of all the positions, subtract the number of candidates running, then count to that letter in the alphabet and vote for every man whose name begins with that letter, you can't help but get the best man for the job.

Of course, the voters aren't very far ahead of the campaigners in the new idea field. One party carried the scheme of putting useful information on cards to its natural conclu-son. Besides the names and positions of the thirteen men runnng on the ticket, they included: the telephone numbers at all the local girls colleges, Villanova's sports schedules up to and including 1984, the batting averages of every man playing in the major leagues and selected winners at the fourth race at Hieleah for August 13. Very few of these cards were distributed, however, due to their prohibititive size—14x15 feet.

Third Party Treat

A new faction made its debut during the campaigning—the Free Thinkers. They have demanded equal time and space now that the elections are over. They held their first disorganization meeting two weeks before the elections. At nominations they sat actively silent, in hopes that no one would be nominated.

During the activity of campaigns, they set up an agressive secret service which started a whisper campaign designed at keeping everyone away from the polls.

Next year, think a bit, then vote.

V. U. Engineer Due Exam Week, Merkert Says

The final edition of the VILLANOVA ENGINEER will be distributed during the week of exams, it was announced last week by editor, Robert V. Merkert.

The issue will feature seven articles designed to interest the engineering-minded reader.

The article "Design and Application of a Constant Force Spring", was written by Richard A. Stotler and Paul M. Terruso. The spring designed will be applied to the retraction of a venetian blind from its extended position.

"Introduction to Magnetic Amplifiers" written by John T. Keane and Ronald G. Giannamore explains how the magnetic amplifier came into use and why it should be of special interest to Electrical Engineers.

This paper captured the local AIEE prize and was presented by its authors at the Pennsylvania State College in the Eastern prize paper competition.

Michael Kelly and Marc La Varn have written an article entitled "Video Tape Recording." The background, present status and possibilities of video tape are enlarged upon.

year, having been elected for the first time early in the second semester of his freshman year.

He succeeds Donald Kempf, a three-year council veteran, in his position.

Two newcomers to the council assumed the two other major council offices, as junior Bob Wagner and soph Fred Wiele captured the secretary and treasurer posts.

Wagner, a day-hop engineering representative, succeeds senior Lou Pinto as secretary, while Wiele, a sophomore engineer, holds Murphy's former position.

Senate Elections

All three of these elections were also uncontested.

In Student Senate elections held the same evening, junior Bill Murray, Gerry Hepburn, Gerry McGrath and Joseph Mason were named to office, along with sophomores Bill Vincent and Bill Henry and freshmen Frank Dunn and Bill Lynch.

The three class presidents and the council officers will serve on the senate with the eight new electees.

Three VU Grads Make Solo Flights

Three Villanova graduates, who entered the armed services following graduation, have made first solo flights at Pensacola Fla.

They are: Kenneth R. Yenni, of Beaver, Pa.; Gerald A. White, of Staten Island, N. Y.; and Francis X. Branon, of Cranford, N. J. They are continuing their basic flight training at Pensacola, Fla.

Navy Ensign John E. Ward, of Upper Darby Pa., has recently been commissioned at Pensacola, following sixteen weeks of pre-flight training. He is now stationed at Saufley Field Naval Auxiliary Air Station, undergoing primary flight training.

Micki Lonsain, lovely date of John Taormina, is crowned queen of the Junior Week Prom. Surrounding Micki are members of her court.

25th Annual Merit Awards Given to 265 VU Students

Two hundred and sixty-five students have been given Merit Awards for the 1957-58 academic year, it was announced today by Rev. Dante L. Girolami, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities. This is the twenty-fifth year the awards have been made.

The award is bestowed annually on students who are worthy of merit because of their consistent and effective cooperation in extra-curricular activities and who likewise enjoy good scholastic standing.

In all, 367 awards were conferred to students participating in 45 activities. Four men managed to win four awards apiece: Jim Corey, Jack Garrity, Leo Rogers and Leo Rudegeair.

Those on the Merit Award list may obtain their certificates in the Student Council Office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Paris Trip Prize For Campus Artist

One Villanova cartoonist may win a seven day vacation in Paris in the annual "Campus Cartoonist of the Year Contest" this month.

The cartoonist must prepare a drawing suitable for a greeting card of any description. Entry blanks are obtainable from local greeting card stores.

Applications and cartoons must be mailed before June 1 to Box Cards, Inc., 526 N. La Cienega blvd., Los Angelas, 48, Calif.

La Karnafeaux, Schubert Win Show Prizes

The first annual Art Show, co-sponsored by the Opera Classica Music Society and the Literary Club, was held last Sunday, May 4, in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Anthony Angeline and Charles Fritz, director and president of Opera Classica, and Raymond Burns and Joseph Kinney, director and president of the Literary Club, called the show "a tremendous success, because of the large number and excellent quality of the works received."

Oil Division Winner

Winner of the oil division was Gerald La Karnafeaux, senior English major, with his entry "Mosaic", second prize going to Thomas Sweeney a sophomore social studies major for the Wharf."

Frank Kramer and Joseph Schubert were awarded honorable mention for "Autumn Leaves" and "Stuttgart."

In the Water Color Division, Joseph Schubert received first prize for "Elfreth Alley."

Connolly Second

Junior English majors Frank Connolly and Robert Draghi were given second prize and honorable mention respectively, for "Marcote Village, Switzerland" and "Something."

Debators to Form Research Staff

James Corey, president of the Beta Gamma Debating Society, has announced that a research staff will be formed next year to aid the debaters.

The staff will be composed of students, who do not desire to debate, but who do have an interest in debating and will devote a few hours a week to the gathering of new evidence.

A writing staff will also be formed to aid in securing such evidence and in the copying and cataloguing.

These innovations are expected to aid the debating society in next year's competition, Corey said.

Ganz Elected Marine Group President

Bill Ganz has been elected president of the Semper Fidelis Society, it has been announced by Don Kempf, publicity chairman for the society.

The vice presidency will be filled by Bruce Irving, while Paul Molnar will be student council representative, Tom LoCasale will be secretary and Bob Delany will be treasurer.

The other winner in the April 27 elections was Bill Lovett, corresponding secretary. George Riehle was appointed as social chairman.

It was also announced that for the first time the outstanding P.L.C. senior will be presented with an award for his proficiency. It is hoped that this will become an annual affair.

This year Major General P. J. Nolan (retd) will present the award to Jack Goodyear, the retiring president of Semper Fi. The presentation will take place later in the month in the offices of the Director of the 4th MCRRD.

Captain J. J. Grace U.S.M.C. moderator of the society, has disclosed that in view of this year's enrollments in P.L.C., there are some 40 students eligible for membership in Semper Fi. These students are urged to look into the requirements for joining.

Elected Presidents

largest voting class, turned out in the spirited election.

Others elected to Senior Class office included Eugene Paga, Vice President; Matthew Mazza, Secretary and Michael Axy, Treasurer.

Senior Representatives elected were Joseph Mason, Resident Ants; John P. Kelley, Day-Hop Arts; Bruce Irving, Resident Engineering; Robert Wagner, Day-Hop Engineering; Resident C and F, Francisco Pancheo, and Day-Hop C and F, James McHale.

John Taormina was selected Alumni Representative.

Others elected to Junior Class offices included Ronald Dobies, Vice President; George Fay, Treasurer, and John Heffernan, Secretary.

Junior Representatives elected were Thomas Hoffman, Resident Arts; William Vincent, Day-Hop Arts; Frederick Wiele, Resident Engineering; William Henry, Resident Engineering; John Driscoll, Resident C and F, and Robert Godwin, Day-Hop C and F.

Elected as next year's Sohpomore Class officers were Robert Scalia, Vice President; James Rhodes, Secretary, and Joseph Shaw, Treasurer.

Chet Buttonow was selected as representative to the Student Council for the resident students while Thomas Chambers will represent day-hops.

A Correction

It was erroneously reported in last issue of the VILLANOVAN that in the elections for Phi Kappa Pi, William Christman, had been elected secretary and William Smith elected treasurer.

William Smith, Mechanical Engineer, was elected secretary and Lee Christensen, Civil Engineer, was elected treasurer.

Football player Gene Paja models the new varsity blazer that athletes are to be given the first time they earn a varsity letter. His finance, Rose Marie Altopiedi, secretary to the Vice-President for Student Affairs, admires Gene's blazer.

Grace Speaks At Banquet

Captain J. J. Grace, U.S.M.C., was guest speaker at the annual rifle-pistol team banquet which was held at the Elk's Club in Norristown two weeks ago.

Varsity pistol letters were awarded for the first time. Recipients of the awards were William Scott, James D'Arcy, Edward Byrne, Joseph Bizzano and Arturo Martinez.

James Abernathy, Chris Kloss, Frank Murtha, Louis Spevetz and William Hearn received rifle team letters.

The National Rifle Association club award went to Frank Murtha for rifle and William Scott for pistol.

Edward F. Hogan received the award for the most outstanding freshmen member of the rifle team.

Junior Paul R. Lang received the most valuable player award. Paul merited the award because of the time and effort expended on the team's behalf.

Senior Engineer James G. Abernathy received the Villanova Rifle-Pistol Club Award.

The award is given to any pistol-shooter who exceeds the 285 mark. Jim earned the award by shooting a 285 out of the possible 300 in a match with the Fordham team.

A corresponding prize for the member of the pistol team exceeding the 270 mark was presented to Junior James D'Arcy, who shot a 273 against the Holmesburg Pistol Club.

The captains of Villanova's rifle and pistol teams were also announced.

D'Arcy will lead the pistol team while junior classmate Chris Kloss will captain the rifle team.

Junior William Hearn was named captain of next year's rifle team.

Villanova's Bill Scott broke the national pistol-shooting record recently when he scored 292 points out of a possible 300 to win the National Rifle Association's individual competition.

One hundred and twenty-four entrants from the military academies and colleges throughout the country took part in the mail-in type match.

Senior Scott's point total was five higher than the old record of 287.

Golfers Split 6 Decisions, Draw Accolades From Penn

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

The enthusiastic members of the Villanova golf team have compiled a season's record of three wins and three loses.

In recent matches the Villanovans have defeated St. Joseph's, 5-2, while losing to two formidable opponents, Penn and Penn State.

On April 23rd, the Villanova team suffered its first two defeats of the season in a tri team match against Penn and Penn State.

Lose to Penn

The Wildcat golfers were defeated 5-2 by the highly rated University of Pennsylvania team. In this match, sophomore C&Fer, Marty Connelly won his match but Jay Gibney, Frank Kruse, and Joe Lewis ran into trouble.

Senior Gibney lost one up at the 19th hole and team captain Kruse lost one up at the 22nd hole.

Joe Lewis posted a very respectable 75 in a losing cause to Don Norberry's 70. Norberry has a 70.6 average, making him the best college golfer in the east.

Against the scholarship-laden team of Penn State (the nation's number two team last year) the Villanovans could do little. Marty Connelly lost one up and this was the closest the Wildcats came to victory in the 7-0 whitewashing.

Villanova Praised

Penn coach Bob Hayes, who is prepping his team for the Inter-Collegiate Championships at Yale on May 15th said, "Villanova is the best team we have faced beside Penn State". This is high praise indeed, for Penn State, with an 8-0 record, is probably the best team in the East.

Last week's bad weather kept the team idle, but with most of the tough opponents out of the way, captain Frank Kruse and the other members of the team are looking forward to winning all of their remaining matches.

Two days later the Villanovans met and defeated Saint Joe's 12-6 in a match played at the Cedarbrook Country Club.

Junior Nick Aquilino was low man with a two over par 74. Aquilino, Reggie Zurinskas, and Roger Gaire contributed nine of the Cats twelve points.

Frank Kruse, Joe Lewis, and Bill Mawn scored the remainder of the Villanova points.

Rematch with Penn

On May 1st the Villanova Golf team played a return match with Pennsylvania at the Plymouth Valley Country Club. Penn won 5-2 in a match that was much closer than the score would indicate.

Joe Lewis lost to Don Norberry, who posted a 39-32-71 on the par 72 course and Jay Gibney and Frank Kruse also lost.

Marty Connelly and Ronnie Zurinskas won and Nick Aquilino and Reggie Zurinskas appeared to have good chances to win.

At this point, it seemed as if a 4-3 upset win for Villanova was very possible but Aquilino lost one up on the 18th and Reggie Zurinskas lost one up on the 19th.

Villanova is, incidently, the only local team to have defeated Penn in the last twenty years, having turned the trick four years ago.

Catcher Hank Nichols belts out a single in a losing cause against LaSalle last Friday at the Wildcats' home grounds.

Rain Dampens Intramural Softball

By TOM MURPHY

The Major Leagues are afraid that the record for postponed games because of rain will be set this year. The Intramural Leagues of Villanova are plagued with the same trouble.

Relatively few games have been played this month because of the inclement weather and it has caused many games to be rescheduled at seven in the evening.

In the only game played in the 5:30 Mendel League this month the Fubar nine beat the Jokers 11-6.

In the 5:30 Sullivan League the Jokers beat the Spaghetti Benders 9-8 while losing to the Silky Sullivans 14-13.

The unbeaten Young Lions shut out the Playboys 10-0 in the only game played in the 5:30 Austin League.

The Young Lions of playing mentor Joseph Scancarella were led to victory by the fine pitching and hitting of Don "Pudgy" Gooley.

The Alumni Animals were romped in losing their first game. The Jolly Trotter turned the trick posting 15-3 tally. In the only other game played in the 4:30 Austin League the Jolly Trotters lost their first game to the Trumps, 9-8.

In early season play in the 5:30 Mendel League: Moby's Maruders 8, Zorches 5. The Fubar Nine beat Terry's Terrors by a score of 23 to 19 in a torrid slugfest. Simpson Schmooks 13, Saracens 12. Mobys Marauders won their second game by a score of 15-10, this time beating the thrice beaten Jokers.

The Silky Sullivans beat the Spaghetti Benders by a score of 9-7 in the only game played in the 5:30 Sullivan League.

In the 5:30 Austin League: The Lodge Boys beat Delta Pi Mu 11-6 before an audience of close to a thousand Villanovans overrunning Austin Field. Pat Nicholson won his second game with a one hitter, overcome by sloppy fielding.

Jim McNaney struck the big blow for the Lodge Boys, a three run round tripper to the side of Dougherty Hall. The Young Lions shut out the Clowns 5-0 while Zorros Terrors whipped Lana's A.C. 18-12.

In the 4:30 Austin League: The Jolly Trotters trounced the Duds 17-1. The Emanons shut out the Eastwingers 3-0. Chet Buttonow's diving catch with two out in the last inning saved Gerry Carlin's hard earned victory as the West Alumni Animals beat the Trumps 4-3.

In the 2:30 Mendel League: The Losers squeezed out an 18-17 victory over the Mu Mesons. One run was enough for the Trojans as they shut out the Progresso Players.

In the 10:30 Mendel League: The Sophomore Sluggers downed the Rocking Birds 7-1 only to be beaten by the Coffin Nails 13-5.

Scores in the 4:30 Mendel League read Slammers 12 Diamonds 6; Rocking Birds 3, Engineers 2; Slammers 12, Gators 3; Saints 3, W Company 2. The W. Czaus beat Nine Angry Men 17-8 in the only game played in the 12:30 Austin League.

Varsity Blazers

The Vice-President for Student Affairs, Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., has announced that begining next year a new system of athletic awards will be inaugurated.

The new system, brought about by a student council request that athletes be permitted to wear letters and sweaters on campus, will provide blazers for varsity lettermen in their sophomore year.

In the Junior year the conventional letters and sweaters will be awarded.

Seniors will receive the customary blankets which are imprinted with the letter "V."

Father Kemme said that because the new system will not go into effect until next year the letter winners this year will be given the award of their choice.

Three Dual Track Meets Prep Wildcats For IC4A's

BY BILL VINCENT

A scant two weeks and two tough dual meets stand between the Villanova track team and the IC4A outdoor championships to be held right here on the home campus Friday and Saturday, May 30 and 31.

The Wildcats face Quantico tomorrow and Saint Joe's next Thursday, both at home. A week from Saturday they travel to LaSalle to meet the Explorers.

Three former Villanova athletes will perform with Quantico. Miler John Kopil, two-miler Alex Breckinridge and field event man Ron Cherubini. Cherubini played tackle for the 'Cat football team for three years.

Nipped Cadets

The Wildcats squeezed through with a one point victory in a triangular meet with Army and Syracuse at West Point last Saturday afternoon. They out-scored the Cadets 82 to 81 while Syracuse managed to score only ten points.

Ron Delany, leaves for his native Ireland Friday to compete against some of the best milers in the world, including world record holder Derek Ibbotson, in a major race on Monday, as the Irish dedicate a new track and field stadium.

Delany will return to the Main Line campus immediately after the race.

The meet only proved what many observers had said about the Villanova track team: they're unbeatable in the running and jumping events but when it comes to the weights the 'Cats lose out considerably.

The Cadets swept the javelin, discus, shot put and hammer throw, compiling 44 points in these four events alone. However, the Mainliners took first place in eight of the nine running events and the other three field events to clinch the victory.

Tickets for the IC4A championships to be held in the Villanova Stadium, May 30 and 31, are now on sale in the Field House ticket office.

Student tickets are $.75 for each of the two days—the heats and preliminaries on Friday the 30th, and the finals on Saturday the 31st. All student tickets are for the South stands, the press box side of the stadium.

Additional tickets may be obtained for Friday at $1.25 apiece. Tickets for Saturday's finals are $2.50 for the North stands, where most of the finish lines will be situated, and $1.25 for the South stands.

Three Win Two Each

Standouts in the meet for Villanova were Bob Holup, George Sydnor and Ron Delany, each of whom won two events. Tolup won the 120 high hurdles in 14.4 and the 220 lows in 23.9. Sydnor captured the 220 in 21.6 and the 440 in a speedy 48.2.

Delany easily took first place in the mile in 4:18.3 and then came back to take the 880 in the track record time of 1:52.1. Delany and Sydnor also ran legs on the victorious Wildcat mile relay team.

Ed Collymore, IC4A sprint king, tuned up for the IC4A Championships by winning the 100 in 9.9 and taking second to Sydnor in the 220. Collymore also ran the anchor on the Wildcat mile relay team.

Revis Sets Meet Mark

Another defending IC4A champion, Phil Reavis, gave track fans a preview of what to expect in the IC4A's and other coming big meets by winning the high jump in a meet record leap of 6'7". Right behind Reavis was teammate Charie Stead. Stead also placed second in the 440 and the 220 yard low hurdles.

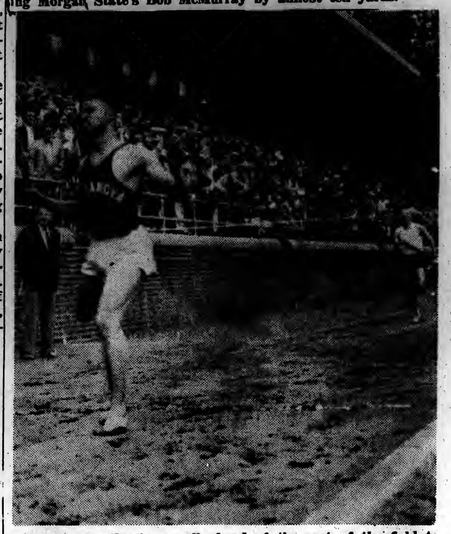
Other victors for the Wildcats included John Buckley in the broad jump with a 23'1" jump and Norm Cyprus and Ron Brady, who tied for top honors in the pole vaut, with a 13' leap.

Sophomores Jim Blackburn and Bob Godesky also gathered points for the 'Cats. Blackburn finished second behind Collymore in the 100 and placed third in the 220. Godesky finished a few yards in back of Delany in the mile.

Six Deserve Praise

Although the Villanova victory over Army this past weekend deserves much praise because of the great team effort involved, a few feeks ago six Villanova trackmen completed one of the most difficult tasks in Penn Relay history.

Vic De Maio. Ed Collymore, Bob Godesky, Ron Delany, George Sydnor and Charley Stead were responsible for three American relay championships, thus making Villanova the first team to win three championships three years in a row at the Penn Relay Carnival.



Delany ran the anchor mile in the distance medley and the final half mile in the sprint medley. He also ran a leg of the victorious mile relay team. Collymore ran three quarter-miles on the three championship relay teams, climaxing the day with 46 second flat anchor leg in the mile relay.

Stead and Sydnor each ran 220 stints in the sprint medley and came back to run the opening two legs in the mile relay. De Maio ran the opening half mile in the distance medley, while Godesky ran the three-quarter mile leg

440 In 46. Gives 'Cats Win

Ed Collymore takes the baton from Ron Delany at the start of the last lap in the mile relay of the Penn Relays, trailing Morgan State's Bob McMurray by almost ten yards.

Colly hits the tape well ahead of the rest of the field to give the Wildcats their fourth consecutive mile relay title and their eleventh championship overall in the last four years at the Relays. Ed turned in a blistering 46.0 quarter to win by nearly 15 yards over Morgan's McMurray, who is not in the picture.

Baseball Team Drops Two; Hopes for NCAA Bid Dim

By JOE FITZPATRICK

The Villanova baseball team has travelled the smooth road through most of the season but lately the path has become a rocky one.

The 'Cats had won seven games in a row before losing two out of the last three to two local clubs, Saint Joseph's and LaSalle.

The Monday loss to Saint Joseph's (7-4) dimmed Villanova hopes for an N.C.A.A. bid.

Joe Michell suffered his first defeat of the season at the hands of the Hawks. Joe had previously won two.

The game had only one bright spot as far as the Cats are concerned, that being Bob Vincent's solo home run, in the sixth inning.

Kelly Entainers Fathers

Before a capacity Father's Day crowd last Saturday the Villanovans bounced back from a Friday loss to LaSalle by downing Seton Hall 4-1.

Senior ace Jack Kelly sent the Pirates rowing back to Jersey with only two hits and Kelly's Villanova mates collected 10 hits to give the Villanova mainstay his fifth victory of the campaign.

Of Villanova's ten hits senior Joe Kolen, and sophomores Bob Vincent and Paul Borian collected two each.

Soph Bob Kropiewnicki bore the brunt of the loss to LaSalle. The Explorers scored five runs on five hits as they put an end to Villanova's seven game win streak 5-2.

'Cats Win Seven Straight

Before the loss to LaSalle the four most recent Wildcat victories were chalked up against LaSalle, Lafayette, P.M.C., and Army.

Joe Michell won his first game of the season by downing La Salle for Villanova's fifth victory of the season. Joe allowed only four hits and struck out nine in the 4-2 triumph.

Catcher Hank Nichols was the batting hero. Hank collected two hits, one of which was a big two run homer in the seventh inning.

The sixth victory came easy as the Wildcats routed highly rated Lafayette 10-5.

The Lafeyette victory was the third win of the year for Bob Kropiewnicki. In gaining his victory Kropiewnicki gave up only two runs but he needed help in the eighth from Jack Kelly.

Villanova gained its seventh and eighth wins from two service schools, P.M.C. and Army.

P.M.C. was the first of the service schools to fall and they fell hard. Joe Michell was the winning hurler and he allowed the Chesterites one run on six hits and behind Joe the Villanovans were raising tho roof.

The Wildcats scored 14 runs on 13 hits, the hitting stars were many.

George Emma led the way with three hits in six trips and Bob Vincent, Larry Masotti, and Paul Borian collected two hits each.

Michell to the Rescue

The Army win was victory number four for Jack Kelly but Jack received some great relief from Joe Michell who came on in the eighth inning.

Eddie Monahan led the way with two hits and Joe Kolen tied the game with a pinch single in the seventh.

Villanova's next two games are with Navy and Georgetown both are away games. The next home game will be with Saint Joseph's on May 19th.

The Hawks will be followed in by Penn on May 20th for the season's finale.

Election of the outstanding senior athlete will take place next Wednesday in Dougherty Hall from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. All students in the university are eligible to vote.

The coaches have nominated three athletes in each sport. The nominees must be approved by members of the university's administration.

Vol. 33—No. 23 VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. July 29, 1958

215 in Class of '58 to Graduate

Science Training To Be Offered Fall of '58

Three significant announcements were made last month by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President, indicating Villanova's tremendous progress and eminent reputation in the field of science education.

It was announced early in June that the National Science Foundation in Washington had selected Villanova among 85 outstanding colleges and universities in the country to participate in a teaching program designed to provide special training for high school science and mathematics teachers.

Part of an overall plan to increase the tempo of science education in our nation, the program is supported by federal grants. Villanova will offer its special training in the field of biological science.

It will accept some twenty-five applicants from a radius of 50 miles.

Training Hours

Training will be given outside school hours so that teachers may attend while serving full time in their own schools. About 30 meetings of the Teacher Training Institute will be held beginning with the opening of school in September.

The University also disclosed plans this month for the construction of a new multi-million dollar science building to keep pace with its reputation in the science field. Announcement of the plans was made by Father Donnellon during a dinner marking the closing of the University's 1957-58 fund drive in Dougherty Hall, June 30th.

Plans Not Complete

Plans for the new structure, which will make the sixth new unit since 1954, are not yet complete but construction will begin in the near future, Father Donnellon said.

A faculty committee is presently working on structural requirements for the different departments.

It was also announced that the National Science Foundation has awarded Villanova a grant of $15,000 for a basic research in chemistry. The project will be conducted by the University's Department of Research and Development and will be supervised by chemistry professor, Thomas H. Doyne.

THREE HONORARY DEGREES AWARDED AT SUMMER SESSION GRADUATION

BY SR. EDMUND MARIE, O.S.F.

More than 215 students will graduate from the Villanova University Summer School on Saturday, August 2, 1958.

For the first time in the history of the Summer School, there will be an Academic Procession which will form at Vasey Hall and proceed to the Field House.

Lay students will wear caps and gowns and Religious will carry hoods over their arms.

HONORED GUESTS

Presiding at the Commencement Exercises will be the Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A. Provincial of the St. Thomas Villanova Province.

Honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws will be conferred by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., President of the University.

The recipients of the degrees will be Joseph Mullray, attorney, builder and an alumnus of Villanova and The Rev. Joseph Bluett, S.J., President of St. Joseph College.

Walter Alessandroni
Graduation Speaker

The Graduation address will be delivered by Walter Alessandroni, Chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association and an alumnus of Villanova, who will also receive an honorary degree.

Morris Urges Nuns To Warn Pupils Of Red Menace

By Sr. M. Rosalima, C.S.F.

"There is a force successful and ascendant in the world today . . . its object to destroy everything that Villanova stands for everything that you in your vocation stand for . . ." asserted Judge Robert Morris in an address to a Villanova Summer Scool audience last Monday, in Vasey Hall.

An expression of earnest conviction, supplanting his quiet smile of greeting, the prominent lawyer, and former counsel for the United States Senate's International Security Committee proceeded to emphasize the actuality of the Communist menace to western civilization, the importance of recognizing its degree and proximity, and necessity of resisting it.

Noting how deficient the Soviets were just 12 years ago and how rapid their advance pointed out that er, Judge Morris pointed out that there were many factors assuring the success of that advance to which the U.S., as a nation, is guilty of contributing.

Twelve Years Ago

"Twelve years ago," pointed out the Judge, "we had a powerful army; we had the foremost Navy; we alone had the atom bomb.

"The U.S.S.R. was weak and confined to a relatively small geographical area. Industrially, scientifically, technologically, economically, they were practically bankrupt." In the past 12 years they have made inroads and advances that have gained them territory encompassing a third of the earth's surface.

WORKSHOP PROVES TOP NECESSITY OF GOOD UP-TO-DATE SCHOOL LIBRARY

By Sr. Rose Philippine, S.S.J.

Villanova's Library Workshop offered a golden opportunity for teachers to be ahead of the times. "The day of the recommended elementary library is past," states the Reverend Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., Villanova's librarian.

"The time is fast approaching when elementary libraries will be required by evaluating committees, and we must be prepared," he says.

An upswing of interest in libraries has resulted in the Library Workshop which was held at Villanova on Saturday, July 26th. A cordial welcome was extended to all the summer students and to all teachers and librarians, on or off campus.

Important Questions

Books are the tools of our profession, and as teachers, we have an obligation to know more about them than their contents. What are the library standards? How wide, how deep, should shelving be? What represents a good basic collection? What steps should be taken to establish a library? Every teacher should have the answer to these questions.

If you are, (and who isn't?) building a new school, or new addition, be articulate about the library before the blue prints are made. Be informed about standards and installations.

Villanova initiated the Press Conference and the Publications Workshop. Both projects are vitalizing forces, with enrollment and enthusiasm mounting each year.

The launching of the Library Workshop is another Villanova "Explorer", not designed to startle the space men, but to spark every teacher with intense vigor.

Conference Hears Discussion About School Publishing

To acquaint advisers with latest methods in the production of school publications and to furnish aids for the inexperienced advisers, Villanova University sponsored the Eleventh Annual Workshop of Catholic School Publications July 7 and 8.

Its scope including newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks, the program provided for the learning of new ideas as well as for the discussion of tried and proved ideas by scheduling clinics, lectures, and discussions.

Among qualified representatives of school publications and the public press directing the various activities were Mr. William T. Cooke of the Cooke Publishing Company, Sr. M. Franceline, S.S.J., M.A. of Cecilian Academy, Sr. M. Trinita, I.H.M., M.A. of John Hallahan High School, and Mr. John Ursprung, Jr.

Subjects Discussed

Subjects treated were instruction in the use of type faces and printers' measurements, copy fitting, format, layout, headlines, news pictures, and staff organization for the newspaper department.

Yearbook topics listed planning the book, the dummy, modern trends in copy, photographs, functional art, and staff organization.

Individual criticisms and evaluations of their respective publications were extended to advisers seeking such aid. Among the features of the program meriting high attendance was the demonstration of art techniques most suited to school publications by Sr. M. Trinita, I.H.M.

DEDICATION CEREMONIES

Immediately following the graduation exercises, the Academic Procession will proceed to the New Commerce and Fiance Building for the dedication of the latest structure on the Villanova campus.

Double Enjoyment—Be Sure You're Among the Audience Exercise Your Imagination in the Modern Fashion

BY SR. MICHAEL BERNARD, O.P.

Summer school! Villanova—And co-curricular activities! Numerous opportunities are offered the Sisters to develop their varied talents.

Good Entertainment

Foremost among these are the experiences afforded to those interested in theatre work, either before or behind the scenes.

Under the enterprising direction of Mr. Richard DuFrey, head of the new Graduate School of Theatre Arts, the summer theatrical group is staging two plays for our enjoyment!

First of all, will be presented a short curtain-raiser, sans curtain, "Parade At the Devil's Bridge," by Henri Gheon. This fanciful play has all the characteristics of good entertainment: it is brief, light, and thoroughly appealing to the imagination.

The main feature will be an impressive presentation of the allegorical morality play, "Everyman", edited by Esther W. Bates. Anyone who is familiar with the theme of this play realzes that it is a must on their summer schooi agenda.

The performances will take place the last week of July. The bulletin board will list the exact time and place.

Faculty, Students Mourn Villanova Senior's Death

Edward Michael Kelly, 22, of Scarsdale, New York, who had planned to attend Summer School and graduate in August, died in New Rochelle Hospital on July 5 of leukemia.

Mike, as he was called by his classmates, was the son of Mr. & Mrs. John C. Kelly of Scarsdale. Mr. Kelly, a prominent New York advertising executive, is a member of Villanova's Board of Trustees. Another son, James E., is a sophomore.

Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President, said the Solemn High Requiem Mass in St. Pius X Church, Scarsdale.

Cardinal Presides

His Eminence, Francis Cardinal Spellman, presided. Father Donnellon was assisted by the Rev. Daniel Falvey, O.S.A., and Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A.

News of Mike's passing was met with heavy sadness at Villanova. With his quiet good humor he had made many friends here.

A graduate of Cardinal Farley Military Academy, Mike entered Villanova in 1954. He had earned loyalty, leadership and diligence honors at Farley and those attributes were always obvious as he progressed on to his senior year at Villanova.

Active on Campus

He was active in intramurals, Turf and Tinsel and was a member of the Marketing Club. But most of all Mike was a regular guy, nothing special, wanting only to be liked and respected by those around him. The sorrow which greeted his death is testimony to the esteem in which he was held.

It is fitting that his attributes of leadership, loyalty and diligence were publicly recognized and we have the knowledge that his gentle, pleasant nature was rewarded at Villanova with affection and popularity.

But Mike had a tremendous measure of still another quality of which it took his death to remind us. He had the courage of a hundred men.

So while Mike Kelly would have preferred to be remembered as just a regular guy, he never will. His name will be recalled with reverence and respect. He came to Villanova as a boy and left a brave man.

READING MAKETH A FULL MAN

'Twas the feast of John the Baptist
When a voice from the wilderness cried,
"This course in Colonial Church History
Should be every true American's pride,
So a reading list
I now submit;
To the library
Each of you shall flit
And request the tomes prescribed."

"John Tracy Ellis", we were advised,
Is dependable, tried, and true,
John Gilmary Shea, though heavy at times,
Is sublime from the historian's view."
Then Catholic names
Like ardent flames—
Barry, Moylan,
Duffy, Ryan, McLaine,
In mountain-size listings up grew.

A fair contribution from Kirlin was gleaned
Quotations from Peter Gilday,
We borrowed some thoughts from Kennedy's,
book,
Scanned pages of Sister Augustin Ray.
Now with learning
We tussle,
From Riley
And Russell
As the calendar ticks off the days.

"Anathema be upon book reports,
Let the libraries grow from your pen.
Don't bury your talents; your genius unfold."
We heard daily some time after ten.
"Annotate,
Paraphrase,
Exegite,
Intro-gaze
Let the world know that writing's your yen."

For God and Souls

I have no thought for great, vast halls
Wherein heavy tomes are read,
Be mine the stright, the simple walls
Within which little feet are led
To walk with faith, Life's rugged ways . . .
Where God may enter in, always!

These walls I build must hold a fire
Sacred, ardent, Font of Life
To fill each soul with firm desire
To walk with Christ through joy or strife!
O! may our children rise to bless
The walls I build for happiness!
This, my dream, at long last is true!
This sacred trust, I share with you!
—Sr. Mary Colette, OSF

New Conveniences in Cafeteria Makes for Better Service

BY SR. ROSE ANITA, O.P.

"Eat, drink, and be merry!" Could this be the motto of mealtime here at Villanova?

Come along any day to Dougherty Hall, give your number to the guard at the entrance to the cafeteria, and you are on your way to a very pleasant experience. As you walk (or run?) down the long blue and white tile ramp, look to your left. Through the glass casement you will view the beautiful Villanova University Cafeteria.

What more pleasant atmosphere at meals, with soft music, air-conditioning and cheerful surroundings. The predominant color theme of blue and yellow aid the cheerfulness so outstanding in this particular dining-hall.

New Additions

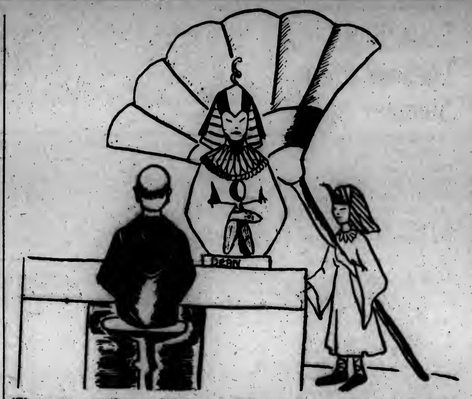
Several new additions have been installed this year, including the turn stile at the end of the counters, and the new counter where sugar, butter, cream, silverware and napkins are found?

And, of course, there were many exclamations on Monday, June 23rd when we saw the "tray conveyor" for the first time. At the end of each meal it is a source of fascination to watch the trays slide over the rollers into the dish-washing room.

And of course, during each meal what heart has not thrilled when the strains of the Alma Mater song comes through the loud speaker? We have even seen some sisters in the graduating class weep tears of sorrow? Truly loyal daughters of Villanova are they.

Loyal Helpers

The ladies and gentlemen behind the counter do their work "above and beyond the call of duty", to make all of us at Summer School feel welcome here.



A perfect example of this was the buffet supper we had on Sunday evening, July 6th. It would be very difficult for any restaurant to match the culinary display so artistically arranged.

Many hours of hard work were spent by our gracious friends in the cafeteria to prepare all the delicious and enticing trays.

The meals at Villanova are palatable and prepared with utmost diligence. We fully appreciate the efforts of the people who make our mealtime so enjoyable. God bless them for their efforts because they add to the unsurpassed graciousness which is part of the true spirit of Villanova University.

August Fifteenth

Assumpta est Maria in coelum!
Lo! the portals opened wide!
And Christ, the living Saviour
Was there, by Mary's side!
Sweet, tender words were spoken
(And all heaven listened in)
But none could e'er betoken
The depth of love wherein
He cried: "Madonna mia!"
Yet again: "Madonna mia!"
—Sr. Mary Colette, OSF

Wake Up and Listen! 'Tis Time To Act--A Call to Mission-minded Readers!

BY SISTER MARY ROSARII, O.S.F.

"Go ye, therefore teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Thus Christ commanded the first missionaries, a little group of men trained in his ideas and ways. He expected great things from these chosen ones, the Twelve Apostles.

So Christ set up His Church and gave it His orders. It was from the beginning a Marching Church. These first missionaries were not to wait until all the people in and around Jerusalem were converted before they should leave for other countries.

They were to begin at once and set out to the ends of the earth teaching the Words, the Life and the Death of Christ. So the Church has continued her work until the present day making Christians—other Christs—of all men, in spite of persecution.

Harvest Is Great

It is a slogan, "Be a Missionary and see the world." To a certain extent this is true; but to see the world as the missionary sees it, fills one's heart with sorrow as the words of Christ echo down the centuries: "The harvest indeed is great, but the laborers are few."

To whom does the blame go? Are we religious teachers partly to be blamed? How many of us are really mission-minded—that is, with heart, head, and hands? If not, then how can we train our pupils to be so? Why is Communism advancing? The Communistic teachers are, as it were, saturated in their philosophy and they surely strive to impart it!

Personally, I think we teachers do not inculcate sufficiently in the hearts of our pupils an interest and love for the foreign missions. As a result, those children grow up indifferent, and even if they are blessed with a religious vocation, they are inclined to leave missionary work to someone else.

It is for some, too much of a sacrifice to leave home, country, and loved ones, no doubt. What is lacking in the world today is the spirit of sacrifice. How many of our pupils spend around $.50 daily at the local luncheonette and must be coaxed to sacrifice $.10 weekly to feed a hungry child? Poor hungry children—happy to get a bowl of rice even without trimmings!

Irish School Days

When I look back to my school days at the Mercy Convent, Cork, Ireland, I can visualize the enthusiasm with which the Sisters encouraged us, and as it were, invigorated the God-given capacity to work and make little sacrifices for the spread of God's Kingdom. Even in the first grade we were encouraged to buy a "black baby," and we bought many.

The seeds of interest planted in childhood, nurtured by prayer and little sacrifices, help the future missionary (who may be among our pupils) to get courage and strength to leave all and armored, as it were, with the Breastplate of St. Patrick, the great Missionary, to go to foreign lands, seeking to bring Christ to all men and all men to Christ.

It is not difficult to stir up a feeling of sympathy from the depths of a child's heart when he hears stories of the missions or sees depicted in missionary magazines the sad plight of so many wretched and diseased children growing up unloved.

I have seen them in Egypt begging for food, snatching a little sleep on a dirty pavement, and actually scavenging for an existence. Poor children! Our well-cared for children readily understand that to be hungry, cold, or sick, and—worst of all—neglected, hurts just as much in Asia or Africa as it does in America, the land of milk and honey where so much is wasted!

Spiritual Aspect

The spiritual aspect of the picture must be stressed in our classrooms. Our pupils will realize their part as members of the Mystical Body of Christ. Because of His Human Nature, He saw every man as a brother. Following His example, we must love all mankind.

Here we have an opportunity of trying to wipe out some of the race discrimination that exists in our own United States against the colored.

When Christ said, "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven," was He thinking of the color of their skin, or of the beauty of their souls?

The hardships of the mission-fields should be stressed to the children, e.g., difficulty of language, climate, food, clothing. To these, the missionaries can accustom themselves, for, by the grace of God, mission-

Council Solves Lockout, Plans Summer Show

BY SISTER MARY LOUIS, O.S.F.

The Student Council is not for disciplinary purposes nor is it a recent Summer School innovation. When Father Boyle's office housed the sisters, Father had a representative group to act as an advisory board to better the conditions for sister residents. When the Dean of Women's office came into existence, it also assumed this responsibility.

As Miss Boyle explained, it is difficult to know exactly what the sisters prefer and hardly probable that they would complain to her, therefore, it is up to the council to keep ears and eyes open.

Through the members of the Board, such suggestions as supplying more benches near Sheehan and Sullivan Halls have been brought to the attention of our solicitious Dean of women. The installation of washers has been a big problem which as yet has not been remedied due to circumstances beyond Miss Boyle's control. Obviously, such anxious concern for our welfare supplies us with every convenience conceivable.

The present members, selected at random, possess a master key for the salvation of all the sisters on their respective floors. Are you locked out? Consult Sr. Mary Madelon, R.S.M.; Sister Mary Arthur, O.P.; Sr. M. Basil, S.B.S.; Sr. Rose Philippine, S.S.J.; Sr. M. Liguori, C.S.F.N.; Sr. M. Caroline Joseph, O.S.F. who will be glad to help you out.

Our chairman, Sr. Mary Arthur, feels, from the results of the questionnaire distributed, that we would all prefer our party to be held on July 25, from seven to ten. According to the same questionnaire, Father Burns and the seminarians have been voted our most popular type of entertainment with a unanimous agreement that the refreshments be "the same". So, here's to seeing you all at our Summer School Highlight. Bring your dancing slippers and appetites.

This We Will Remember

Alarm clocks going ting-a-ling
Hours before sane birdies sing!
Scurrying fast to beat the line
And not wait "hours" just to dine!
The easy way and, yes, how soon
We learned the Alma Mater tune!
The endless line that used to form
For treats and ice when it was warm!
Oral talks, and tests, and papers—
Whimsical, fanciful, professor-capers!
—Sr. M. Rosalima, C.S.F.N.

Vatican Collection Worth a Million To Paul Terruso

The Chinese proverb: "One picture is worth ten thousand words" takes on new meaning when you see Paul Terruso's Vatican stamp collection on display in the library.

Paul, a 1958 Villanova graduate, arranged a tasteful setting for his collection that would do credit to a show case artist. Wood frames of various sizes surround uniform black velvet matting, and serve to enhance the rich and variegated colors of the stamps.

A typed explanation interprets each set.

Paul's interest in stamps began early, and narrowed down to a Trieste collection when that government was unstable. Sets purchased at that time for a quarter became valuable quickly by reason of the frequent turnover in government.

Paul's favorite stamp agency moved to Italy, and it was then that he decided to concentrate his collection on Vatican City. No other government has such cosmopolitan interests, such religious appeal.

If you are concerned with architecture, see the set depicting famous facades; if the Swiss Guards engage your attention, a concentrated course of their history is before you in colorful miniature.

Father Grelis' New Course Very Technical, But Interesting

by Sr. M. Rosalima

Among newly organized and the more-than-slightly re-vamped courses included in various curricula, the Religion department boasts two, a Survey of Some Recent Interpretations of the Old Testament and Metaphysics of the Mass, both taught by Rev. Howard A. Grelis, O.S.A., A.M.

Available to a deliberately limited control group during summer courses, the survey of the Old Testament will be open to general attendance beginning with the fall semester.

To review and clarify problems traditionally associated with Old Testament interpretation, Father Grelis draws on studies made by contemporary Catholic Biblical scholars.

These, encouraged by recent Papal pronouncements and aided by modern scientific discoveries, have published new and helpful insights, the major portion of them within the past five years.

In a recent interview, the smiling, smile-seeking priest evaluated the particular merits of this course for both the religious and the lay student.

"Every Catholic should be well informed about the greatest book in the world, the Bible. He should endeavor to learn its message not merely for cultural value as world literature," he insisted, "but chiefly as a spiritual message for the nourishment of the soul.

"The teacher, in addition to personal value such a study holds for her, should be prepared to give a reasonable exposition of Old Testament accounts to the two chief types of pupils she encounters," he continued, "the docile, all-accepting ones and the questioning skeptics."

Anticipating the fall term when another of the courses he teaches, Metaphysics of the Mass, will be offered on a graduate level for the first time, Father Grelis described the change as one that has deepened course content and incorporated some of the latest literature on the subject.

"Besides a more profound study of Mediator Dei," Father planned, "we will also incorporate the monumental works of Rev. Maurice de la Taille, S.J., and that of Rev. Eugene Mazuresj, S.J. which has brought the former to a fitting completeness.

A familiar figure on the campus, Father Grelis has spent the past 42 years of his teaching career at Villanova. Initially an instructor in classics and religion, Father's program has included canon law, English, Greek, Latin, logic, moral theology, and psychology in varied assignments.

Besides teaching as a Villanova faculty member, Father has instructed Augustinian novices and Junior Clergy, nurses at Misericordia Hospital, novices in local institutions including those of the Holy Child novitiate and the Immaculate Heart novitiate of West Chester where he still teaches.

"My greatest boast," concludes Father Grelis, "is the fact that I consider myself one of the first pioneers in the field of Christo-centric religion. It was my pet postulate back in 1920."

Life's History—Call Number PZ4-A378Mi Displayed on Campus to All Book Lovers

By Sr. Rose Philippine, S.S.J.

"I thought I'd never get out of that Preparations Room! There's something awfully public about this New Books shelf, isn't there? Reminds me of a painter's auction.

Well, I'm not worried, really. I expect to go out much faster than THE DEVELOPMENT OF TECHNOLOGY IN THE 18TH CENTURY. Well, no, I'm not vain; it's just that almost everyone reads fiction, especially if it's about a well-known character like Michelangelo.

I wish you could see my jacket. When you go out, look for it on the bulletin board right inside the door. It's that striking gray and red one, marked "MICHELANGELO THE FLORENTINE, A NOVEL BY SIDNEY ALEXANDER."

Who asked for me? who didn't! The Art Department for one, thought I'd be useful as background material; the library staff felt the need for some really good fiction, and a complimentary write-up in THE CRITIC tied it up.

First, I had to be approved by Father Falvey for moral content, price, and suitability, then I went to Miss Kuhn, Father's secretary, for the acquisition slip. Next, a acquisition slip was sent to Mendel Business Office, and I was officially ordered.

When I arrived at the library, I passed from hand to hand, getting my invoice checked, the business entry made, and then I was ready for cataloging. The Library of Congress cards had been ordered in advance, so my call number, PZ 4-A378Mi was lettered in white ink, the pocket and cards were made, and here I am.

Come to think of it, the whole course is somewhat similar to the procedure necessary for an ambassador-to-be. He has to be recommended, tested for suitability, and . . . . . would you like to continue the simile yourself? There's a roving eye I'd like to catch! O boy, this is much more fun than being privately owned!

You move in such cosmopolitan circles!

aries possess self-sacrificing hearts.

However, the wants of the Missions are many and varied. Churches, church-supplies, vestments, schools, hospitals, etc. etc. are needed. Alas! How many millions of dollars spent on cigarettes by teenagers go up in smoke each year while so many missionary priests offer the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass in palmleaf chapels topped with the Cross of Christ?

Need For Prayer

Above all else, we must imprint in the minds of our children the need of prayer for the Missionary; this is the greatest aid. Let us remember the words of St. Paul: "Therefore, neither he that planteth is anything, nor he that watereth, but God that giveth the increase."

So with St. Paul, the great Missionary, let us pray unceasingly the Lord of the Harvest that He send laborers into His harvest.

Villanova To Add Courses in New Policy

September, 1958, will see the inauguration of a graduate degree program in the Department of Philosophy. This is in line with an over-all amplification policy in the Graduate School.

Most recently added is the Master in Secondary School Science program which was begun to aid secondary school science and math teachers who are required to teach two or more of the sciences.

Courses may be selected in biology, chemistry, mathematics and physics. Successful completion of 30 credit hours, plus the passing of a comprehensive examination will lead to a Master's degree in secondary school science. No thesis or language examination will be required.

Five Summers

The entire program, like many of Villanova's Graduate programs, can be completed in five summers, or in a shorter time if courses are taken also during the Fall and Spring terms.

A Graduate Program in Theatre is open to those students who hold a bachelor's degree from a reputable college and who can fulfill Villanova's admission requirements.

Twenty-four course hours plus a thesis lead to a Master's degree in Theatre Arts. A special summer workshop for Religious offers courses in religious drama, advanced play direction, stage lighting and design, and a seminar for special problems.

Contact Dean

Beginning with the school year 1958-59 Villanova will also offer a program of graduate work in Civil Engineering. For further information about any of these new programs, contact the Dean of the Graduate School, Villanova University, Villanova, Pa.

Villanova continues the dozen Graduate Programs that have been in effect with such popularity among students, especially from the religious congregations.

These include Master of Arts Programs in Classics, Education, English, French, History, Modern Languages, and Religion; and the Master of Science Programs in Biology, Chemical Engineering, Chemistry, Library Science, Mathematics, and Statistical Quality Control.

Four Villanova Alumni To Lecture on Campus

By Sr. Rose Philippine, S.S.J.

Four Villanova alumni will lecture on campus this summer.

John H. White, '50, will talk at the Library Workshop to be held here July 26. John is now on the staff of Random House, prominent New York publishing house.

Three former Villanovans will lecture to a class in Library Science, History of Books and Printing. Eugene McLaughlin, '53, has first hand experience in the printing business. Gene works for his father, who distributes supplies to binders of books. Mr. McLaughlin's main office is in Philadelphia.

Michael Quinn, '54, is on the staff of Quinn and Bodin of Rahway, New Jersey. This company is one of the leading manufacturers of books in the East. Mike will show a sound movie on book production. Recently, this picture was shown on television.

Harvey Satenstein, '43, president of Book Craftsmen Associates, has originated a unique plan, known as "SAS" (seasonally adjusted scheduling). By employing the seven month off-season facilities of a major manufacturer of yearbooks, and setting up a range of standard specifications, Harvey's company is now turning out short-run technical and scholarly books. They might not otherwise be produced at all, or would be produced at considerably higher prices.

SUMMER ALMA MATER (To that very familiar tune)

When the Summer Sisters gather
Out upon the campus green,
When the habits and the veils
Come stealing on the scene,
Loyal nuns of Villanova,
Sing a hymn of praise
To our dear old Alma Mater
And our college days.
Villanova, Villanova,
When we leave your sheltering walls,
We shall leave an echo in Both Sheehan and Sullivan Halls,
We will leave an echo ringing
In the silent night
While our memories are singing
Of the Blue and White.
When the last exam is over
And the last phone call is heard
When the Comprehensive markers
Give their final word—
We shall come to Alma Mater
In our dreams again
With a prayer for Villanova
And a sweet amen.

To Our Lady, Refuge of Sinners

Come, Lady,
Forth from the storm-swollen clouds.

In the mire of night
We are sunken, weeping.

Rise, Star
Rise, O Morning Star
More terrible than army
In battle array.

How can we mention
The name of the Lamb
In our slaughterous swampland?

Sin has fallen on us
Like the weary rain.

Rise, Star
That the sun appear.

In the mire of night
We are sunken, weeping.

Philosophy Department to Welcome Dr. Gallagher

By SR. M. JOHN HELENE, O.P.

The Department of Philosophy will welcome Doctor Donald Gallagher, one of the country's foremost educational philosophers, to its faculty in September.

Doctor Gallagher, a United States Fulbright scholar at the University of Louvain, Belgium, in 1952 and 1953, will be assistant to The Reverend Robert Russell, O.S.A., chairman of the philosophy department.

A native of Union City, New Jersey, Doctor Gallagher is a graduate of Saint Louis University, Missouri. He received his Ph.D. from Marquette University.

Taught at Marquette

Dr. Gallagher is a specialist in contemporary European philosophy and has taught philosophy and psychology at Marquette for many years.

Dr. Gallagher lectured at the University of Cologne, Germany, in 1953. He has delivered over two hundred lectures for the Marquette Faculty Speakers' Bureau.

Some three hundred contributions of his feature articles, book reviews, etc., have appeared in the "Saint Louis Catholic Weekly Newspaper" of which he has been the associate editor for four years.

Well Known Lecturer

Mrs. Gallagher is also a well known lecturer. Like her husband, she claims Marquette as her alma mater. Her talks cover the subjects on Christian marriage and family life.

The Gallaghers have two children: Paul, 14, and Maria Noel, who was born in Louvain on Christmas Day, 1952.

Appendicitis Strikes Nun; Was Summer Student Here

Rushed to the Fitzgerald-Mercy Hospital for emergency surgery, Sr. Mary Killian, R.S.M., hospitalized since July 8 and taken off the critical list July 12, is pronounced recovering slowly.

Sr. Killian, superior at St. Francis Convent, Harrisburg, and principal and teacher in the school there, suffered a ruptured appendix with complications.

Summoned to the aid of Sr. Killian by Sr. M. Cyrilla, R.S.M., a companion in studies, was Dean of Women, Miss M. Dorothy Boyle. Miss Boyle, who is also a registered nurse, immediately summoned an ambulance.

An English major, Sr. Killian has been devoting the summer session to concentrated work on her master's thesis. She also attended the Milton course taught by Dr. John S. Phillipson.

Nun Graduate Drowns In Cleveland Accident

Sr. M. Thomas Aquinas, of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament for Indians and Colored People, died last October 16 attempting to rescue her fourth grade pupil, Anita Black, from drowning.

Sister, who graduated from Villanova during the Summer of 1956 with a B.S. in education, plunged into the Chagrin River, just outside of Cleveland.

Her attempted rescue was unsuccessful. Both she and the little ten-year old girl were drowned.

Sister attended St. Rita's School and was a graduate of South Philadelphia High School for Girls. She had taught at Our Lady of the Blessed Sacrament School in Cleveland for nine years. Sister was voted one of Cleveland's Ten Outstanding Citizens for 1957.

During her last summer on the Villanova campus, Sr. Thomas Aquinas attended classes in child psychology and philosophy.

Shadows

Racing nimbly to and fro
In endless tag among bright leaves,
Elusive, skipping, wayward waifs,
From noonday glare welcome reprieves.

You cross my path and then recede
In motion graceful, agile, swift;
You trace a multi-linear sketch
Then soundlessly lose it in shift.

Echo of the Borgias

A bookworm there was ambitious and wise
Who thrived on knowledge, whatever its guise.
He'd breakfast on Chaucer and dine on Milton;
He'd sup on Beowulf; Voltaire couldn't wilt him.
He grew and he prospered without any care,
Whatever his taste, the author was there.
One day through an error both foolish and fatal
He bethought to explore a fourth level stack table.
There what a wonderous sight met his eye!
Typewritten papers stacked up pretty high.
He nibbled but couldn't determine the taste;
Then nibbled some more at a speedier pace.
He gorged himself thoroughly, quite unaware
He'd had much too much of poisonous fare.
And before he could utter an expert's decision,
He fell, put to death by rank composition.

—Sr. M. Rosalima, C.S.F.N.

Growing Pains

We used to live in Fedigan,
Have class across the way;
We ate our meals in Mendel,
And went next door to pray.

And now I wear bifocals,
I'm forty, fat, and fair,
I view with apprehension
A walk from here to there.

My first class is in C and F,
My second, Mendel Hall,
My third is in the Library,
(If I get there at all!)

O blessed be the good old days
Of buildings in a cluster!
When strength for once around the block
Was all we had to muster.

Honest John Murphy V.U. Police Chief Valuable Friend

BY SR. CLARE BERNADETTE, O.S.F.

Who is always wearing a pleasant smile? Who is always there when you need him? Who will find anything you lose? Who plays everyone's favorite records? Who?

Captain John Murphy organized the Villanova Security Force September 13, 1955, under the direction of Rev John Curran, O.S.A. The very same man who helps anyone in Summer School at any time is on duty during the winter session. One can ask any student and find that the boys have as much respect for him as the sisters.

Behind the pleasant smile is the story of a noble and courageous man who is at the same time loathe to speak of his achievements. Appointed patrolman in Philadelphia, July 27, 1928, he advanced through the ranks to Inspector of Detectives. Twenty-six years later found him Captain of Detectives.

During those twenty-six years Captain John Murphy established a reputation as Honest John Murphy. Due to his efforts in combating vice as a member of the Vice Squad, he was assigned Commissioner of that vital branch of the police.

Due to his achievements, he was selected as candidate for councilman at large in Philadelphia. His election returns record a defeat for Captain Murphy, but for us at Villanova it was surely a Victory in which Divine Providence cast the ballot in our favor.

Working and cooperating with Captain Murphy on the Villanova Force are fourteen men who adhere to a rigid schedule making it possible to have at least two officers on campus at all times.

Twelve of the present members are former policemen from Philadelphia. The thirteenth man formerly worked for the government; the remaining member was a detective in a private agency.

The duties of the Villanova Police should serve to raise even higher in our estimation these men who serve us so willingly.

The duties are:

1. the protection of life and property.
2. the enforcement of rules and regulations of the university.
3. the checking of all buildings in respect to fire equipment.
4. public relations with civil authorities; pertaining to public safety and the welfare of the

Snorkel Campus Pointers By a 1958 Summer Diarist

By SR. MARY IMMACULATE, O.P.

JUNE 23rd. In the heat of the day I arrived on Campus neatly packed among the voluminous belongings of my owner. I was really parched from the long journey, and was soon to be put to the most mechanical of work without so much as an extra drop of my favorite ink.

Filling out one form is bad enough when you're thirsty for a drop of washable blue, but filling out one right after the other—without time to even put your cap on—is too much to ask of even as good a Snorkel as I! Oh well, I shouldn't complain, IBM has done much to make our working hours shorter.

I ran into one real snag that day: Every time I thought I was finished, my owner met one friend after another and stopped writing to talk. I have to admit I rather enjoyed it, for renewing summer friends is one of the joys of summer school, so my owner says.

BY EVENING, I felt as if my day's complaints were wholly unjustified. I enjoyed a rest while everyone around me hustled and bustled to get rooms in order before the homework piled up.

Can you imagine my surprise when I found myself established in beautiful Sheehan Hall! You should have heard the Oh's and Ah's of my owner and friends as they examined every nook and cranny. Why do you know someone even took trunks up on the elevator? I'll probably get a real workout when they write this to their missions.

BUSINESS started booming for me when everyone signed meal tickets; I was loaned out to every Sister Thomas, Richard and Harold. I just have to tell you this! A few of my owner's friends got off to a good start . . . they locked their keys in their rooms and had to search for a master key, while others looked for the magic touch to get their keys to work.

ESTERBROOK told me a few were locked out 'til morning once and had to seek refuge on the top of double deckers. Glad I didn't belong to them; I'm not much for climbing.

JUNE 24th, Tuesday, I was up bright and early, but I had been prepared for the fray by a long cool drink the night before. It surely braced me for that race between the new C & F and Mendel.

That shoe leather express really gets one places! It takes me from cafeteria (I could almost weep ink drops, I'm so happy to hear the Alma Mater played at meals) to Chapel. (That's one place you can capture the unity, binding one community to another, whether in black or purple habits).

There's no dearth of activity on campus, be it for thespians or mermaids. I'm glad my owner doesn't favor riflery; I might end up with a broken point. Tho' I've heard from my friend Parker that those who do meet at the range make a marvelous team.

THE NEW BUILDINGS here must be in competition with the Brussel's World Fair; not a convenience has been omitted even tho' it rattles my inner tube when the horn blows at change of class in C & F.

Nostalgia creeps over me when I pass Vasey Hall, and I find myself calling it C & F. from force of habit. Many a paper I wrote in there!

"TIME MARCHES ON" and the best of pens must succumb to the task of homework assignments. Conditions are so conducive to study that it doesn't seem to take too long. Although I must admit I have quite a time curling my tip around some of those foreign phrases.

July 4th may be a national holiday for some, but not for us pens; we do double time then. I remember filling in a form about a Party. Now that's really fun! I'm looking forward to that as another example of the inimitable Villanova Spirit. You know, I think my owner's friends are getting in tune for it, for every so often I listen in on a song fest, harmony and all.

I'm off for Dougherty Hall now! One day I saw my owner and friend race trays! Imagine what a ride J'd get on one of those trays as they zoom down the tray ramp.

When the Villanovan comes out I'll get news from the rest of my pen pals.

Simpson Hall Accommodations Another V.U. Campus 'First'

By Sr. M. Rosalima, C.S.F.N.

Simpson Hall, resounding with the tap of dressy "heels" and the clack of the more casual "flatties" for the first time in its some 25 years or so of its existence, houses 13 resident lay women. Of these, seven are in the School of Nursing and five are in the field of education.

In the process of almost unceasing evolutionary changes affecting all facets of its development, Villanova University notes the accommodation of lay women residents another "first" on its list of summer school surprises.

Since the organization of the School of Nursing in 1953, women residents had been housed at the St. Francis House of Studies, Bryn Mawr, Pa., and in recommended and supervised local homes.

Other Students

Since September, 1956, the St. Francis House of Studies has been used exclusively for the out of town women students. With a major representation in nursing, women residents have also included law and education students.

This summer, however, with all the Sisters housed in Sheehan and Sullivan Halls, and with all other residence halls except Mendel left vacant, the administration has provided for campus residence.

Directly responsible to Miss M. Dorothy Boyle, R.N., M.S., Dean of Women, the students, as residents, are under the supervision of Sr. M. Inez, C.S.F.N. and Sr. M. Pelagia, C.S.F.N., acting housemothers during summer courses.

First Female Dean

Miss Boyle, the first woman to assume a dean's office at Villanova, has been with the university for five years. Initially a teacher in the School of Nursing, Miss Boyle, in addition to her office as dean, teaches in the Education department.

Geographical distribution of women residents includes eight from outlying areas in Pennsylvania: the Misses Martha Davis, Frances DeMasi, Agnes Leitz, Mahoney, Elizabeth McGarrity, Mary Ann O'Brien, Peggy Patelis, and Sally Staudenmeier; three from New Jersey: the Misses Alice Burlington, Betty Gianimarino, and Mary Pat O'Neill; and two from New York: the Misses Angela Colasanto and Marilyn McGahan.

2,116 Summer Students—An All-time High for Villanova University

By Sr. Mary Louis, O.S.F.

The enrollment of students here at Villanova this summer has reached a new high of 2,116 students.

This is 102 more than last summer. On campus are 1456, while 186 travel to the Hallahan center and still another 474 attend the various Villanova Extension centers.

There are 582 graduate students, 187 of whom are men, the remaining 395, women.

Academic List

In the Graduate School the field of Education has an enrollment of 158. There are 62 students in Mathematics, and 21 in Biology. The History department can boast of 90 students with 72 English scholars running a close third.

There are 65 future librarians, 25 Latin scholars, 21 budding scientists and 8 philosophers. The social sciences graduate students total 10. The Religion and Modern Language graduate department each total 19 students. There are two Chemical Engineers working on their theses with 20 special graduate students.

The theatre, a recently organized department of the Graduate Division, can boast of 10 students.

Many Orders

The 488 resident students are subdivided into priests from various dioceses and religious communities, brothers and lay students.

Among the sisters who reside on campus are numerous branches of Sisters of Saint Basil, Benedict, Blessed Sacrament, Casmir, Charity, Dominic, Divine Compassion, Divine Providence, Felicians, Francis, Grey Nuns of the Sacred Heart, Holy Family of Nazareth, Holy Names of Jesus and Mary, St. Joseph, Mercy, Most Holy Trinity, Notre Dame, Precious Blood, Presentation, Little Sister Servants of Immaculate Conception, Sister Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, and perhaps a few others.

The sisters lead in enrollment with a total of 1275 students. There are 522 men and 202 women totaling 724 lay students. Some 82 priests, 34 brothers and one rabbi prevent the campus from being an all-female religious cast.

J. G. Boardman Named to Head Fund Campaign

Mr. J. Griffith Boardman, Philadelphia insurance executive, has been named chairman of Villanova University's 1958-59 fund drive.

Boardman succeeds Mr. John A. Murphy, Philadelphia broker, as fund chairman. Murphy directed the 1957-58 phase of the twenty year campaign which was begun in 1954.

Villanova is seeking to raise twenty-one million dollars to offset a tremendous building program which has seen its campus nearly triple in size.

Formal Dinner

A member of the insurance firm of Boardman-Hamilton & Co., Villanova's new fund chairman assumed office during a formal dinner on the Main Line campus, June 30th, marking the completion of this year's quest for funds.

Members of the Executive Committee of the Board of Lay Trustees of the Development Foundation and Villanova's regular Board of Trustees attended.

A former State Secretary of Revenue, Boardman becomes the fourth campaign chairman.

Previous directors of the fund drive were Mr. Edwin K. Daly, president of the Horn and Hardart Baking Co., Mr. William F. Kelly, president of the First Pennsylvania Banking Trust Co., and Mr. James A. Farley, New York business man, who recently announced his candidacy for the United States Senate.

Philadelphia Native

A native of Philadelphia, Mr. Boardman was director of the Philadelphia Housing Administration in 1935 and 1936 prior to his appointment as Secretary of Revenue. In 1945 he served as Regional Director of the War Production Board.

In assuming the post of fund chairman he also becomes chairman of the Executive Committee whose members include: Mr. Alfred Laupheimer, president of General Public Warehouse Co., Mr. Samuel Cooke, president of the Penn Fruit Co., Mr. Clarence Tolan, retired businessman, Mr. Albert Nesbitt, president of John Nesbitt, Inc., Father McGuire and two former Chairmen, Mr. Kelly and Mr. Daly.

Florian Bartosic, Law School Prof, New Labor Monitor

The Court-appointed Board of Monitors of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters has announced the appointment of Professor Florian J. Bartosic, of the Villanova University School of Law, as Executive Assistant to the Board.

Professor Bartosic will be charged with the responsibility of drafting a model constitution for Teamster Locals. He will also supervise the conduct of elections and will serve as chief hearing officer for the Board.

Bartosic will be on leave of absence from his post as Associate Professor of Law at Villanova University Law School.

Before coming to Villanova he taught at the Law Schools of Yale University and the College of William and Mary. His specialty is Labor Law. He has also served as an attorney in the Office of the General Counsel of the National Labor Relations Board.

Nuns Prepare for Scholastic Wars With Rifle Drills

Under the congenial guidance of Dan Spada and his able assistant, "Tex" Coursey, some of the Sisters on the Campus are preparing for what may turn out to be a revolutionary method of school discipline.

These Sisters have become members of the Villanova Rifle and Pistol Club.

After completing a National Rifle Association basic course which consisted of a lecture on various safety precautions and proper position for firing, the students were ready for the command:

Ready on the right?
All ready on the firing line,
COMMENCE FIRING!

This, you see, is a course where the assignments are anticipated with "scholastic joy."

If you were to wander into the Naval Science building some afternoon, you would, no doubt, see six eager members of this club.

No, these are not their "summer whites"; all these Sisters happen to be Dominicans—four from Caldwell: Sr. Rita Francis, Sr. Ann Francis, Sr. Alice Matthew, Sr. Margaret Ellen, and two from Newburg, Sr. Adrienne and Sr. Ann Arthur. Sometimes they are joined by Sisters from other Communities, such as, Sr. Regina, Sr. Jane Francis and Sr. Stella. Pat and Grace Curran, two eager young ladies who are most anxious to hit that bull's eye, are also on hand.

The "Dean's List" for the rifle course consists of three Sisters so far: Sr. Regina with a 94, Sr. Alice Matthew with a 91 and 90 and Sr. Adrienne with a 90. Most of the other Sisters are close and will probably reach the magic number before the end of the course.

Thanks to the National Rifle Association Instructors who have given so unstintingly of their time and patience, the members of this summer's Rifle Club seem to be well on the way toward firing those shots into that 'Big Ten" for that coveted Perfect Score of 100.

GRADUATION

Fears Red Menace

Hands plunged deep into his coat pockets, he observed that for the last several years, the free world has stood by while one country after another moved over from this side of the orbit to the Soviet orbit; for the last six months, it has watched a heretofore unequalled acceleration of technological advance which has included the projection of three sputniks, each successively greater in size.

Soviets Ahead

"We have strained; we have struggled; we have tried to emulate what they have done"; stated the Judge, "but as of today, the Soviets are way ahead of us in the tremendous undertaking."

To emphasize the vital importance of this particular phase of the struggle, Judge Morris recalled the Senate subcommittee's warning that power over the future world would belong to the force that conquered outer space.

"He who dominates outer space will also dominate here below," he said.

U.S. contribution to Soviet advance has been made in various ways. In the post-World War II period, it not only gave Russia time to reorganize and revitalize her forces, but, through the foreign aid program, contributed in a far more significant way.

Naive Trust

In almost naive trust, scientific data of tremendous importance, acquired by the U.S. upon entering Germany, was turned over to the Soviets—a fact that astounded Soviet scientists in no small measure, later evidence revealed.

In foreign policy, Communists were able to throw over the Chinese National Government and gain Red China—a move which U.S. Far East policy at that time greatly aided.

Washington has refused to face the issue squarely—the message of Judge Morris advanced—and has not acted on many leads that were revealed not only by all external evidence, but through actual testimony.

"Every step they take, every course they pursue is calculated to realize the aspiration of world-conquest expressed in the last line of the Communist anthem," maintained the Judge. "We make concessions which serve only to feed their aggressive spirits."

Contribution to Soviet

There is another thoroughly inadvertent contribution the free world makes to Soviet success. This is the meeting, more especially the fraternizing, with Communists in the Summit talks. Countless pictures of social gaiety have been a great propaganda instrument, suppressing any hope that Communist-oppressed countries might entertain in regard to the western world.

Another grave propaganda device for the Soviets has been the magnifying of the incidents connected with racial integration in the U.S.

While Soviets have capitalized on every such contribution to their field of psychological warfare, they have experienced almost no retaliation whatsoever in this respect. Little Rock incidents have made the U.S. appear a biggoted country in Soviet satellite areas, but the actual immensity of Soviet atrocity in Red China, where 15 million Chinese have been exterminated by Communists ("only" 8,00 according to Red China), is little publicized in the free world.

Nationalists Vital

The Chinese National Government, located in Formosa, is of vital importance to the present situation. It provides a Chinese bulwark against communist-Chinese aggression. Should the issue result in active combat, the free world has in the Formosa line-up not only well-trained, front-line troops, but also a Chinese army facing a Chinese adversary.

No conceivable Communist propaganda move can possible construe that situation in the same manner that combat of white man against yellow might be construed.

Yet this vital issue of preserving the legitimate Formosan government is the next at stake. Recognition of Red China as a power in the U.N. assembly is a move proposed by Communist-dictated agents, and supported by those Americans who argue for "free" elections on Formosa.

"You have a voice; you can understand the problem. It may not be essentially spiritual, but it endangers the framework of your lives which makes provision for your way of life.

Appeal to Teachers

"You are the molders of our coming generation," concluded Judge Morris in a direct appeal to the audience comprised chiefly of teachers on all levels of education.

"If you can instill in the rising generation an understanding of the menace and add to that a spirit of resistance, you have accomplished a great deal.

"If you look at the way the world is going, we have at stake more than our lives, our fortunes, and our honor. We have at stake the loss of liberty, freedom—freedom of religion for our generation and countless generations to come."

Judge Morris, the father of three, native of Jersey City, has spent 17 years investigating Communism in the United States. Of the opinion that action against Communism is neither sufficient nor urgent enough, he is author of the recently released No Wonder We Are Losing.

Hurly-Burly Life 'Just Routine' For Summer Frosh

A Villanova freshman comes up to the plate with two strikes against her when she tries to express that "awEful," with emphasis on the E, first week feeling. Her time has been too limited to absorb the numerous advantages that await her. Her introduction to those monsters better known as bunk-beds finds her only once recovered from a double brain concussion. The latter is a blessing in disguise. Now, she has proof of possessing at least one requisite—a brain.

Seeing-eye dog needed . . .

The feelings of our music lovers sense nothing personal when Captain Murphy begins those unforgetable mealtime tunes with Sleepytime Gal as we grope our way to breakfast. More helpful than either the gliding music or sliding ramp is the amused twinkle which lights up the eyes of our friendly Checker when a little freshman confusedly confesses, "143 I THINK." Intuitively our brilliant Checker crosses out 341. And this from a Mathematics Major!! Oh well, we can always box the number. Or haven't you been educated in this profession?

Well Rounded Education . . .

For many years Villanova has aptly supplied any and every type course to fit the individual need of each student. No effort has ever been considered too great to meet each student's need. Although this is a universal opinion of all who have ever dealt with our Alma Mater, what many don't know is how well rounded a Sister's education here really is. This summer's students shall be an indispensible asset in preparing for those oncoming Jubilees upon returning to their respective missions. Mr. Specia, is there a patent on the new look you gave the watermelon? Perhaps you might even lend us your cheerfully cooperative crew. Not that Sisters on KP aren't cooperative. We average three frustrated cooks to each pancake.

Cooperation or Conspiracy . . .

Be it conspiracy or cooperation, there is no limit to the correlation of subjects among Professors. When Professor Emilotti promises to help you bridge that gap (all right, chasm) that's causing a mathematical inertia, it does not stop there. Just take those constants and variables right into your Epistemology class. Equally cooperative, this versatile Professor will permit you to use them to refute the theory of Relativism. I'm sure you will agree, having two such professors is like hitting a homer with all bases loaded.

And now we are one . . .

Sit out on the campus for only a half hour and you already have that certainty that even the insects have that feeling of oneness we humans so love about Villanova. Such a wholesome atmosphere is so hard to define . . . but then, is it? It is as obvious as it is sincere that each and every one of our dearly loved Augustinian Fathers endeavor to have happiness permeate the atmosphere. A minutes stay and you feel if you are happy you belong. And so, a summer school student at Villanova is happy to say she belongs to this one big happy family which can not help radiate the true joy felt by everyone who lives here.

Dinner Dance, Prom Moved From Nov.

By JOHN J. CURTIN
Of The Villanovan Staff

Senior President Oz Scogna will announce the moving of the class weekend from November to April during the initial meeting of the Class of 1959 on Oct. 9, it was learned today.

Scogna told the VILLANOVAN that he has requested and received permission from the Administration to move the Belle Air Ball and senior dinner Dance from the Nov. 21 weekend chosen last year to April 10 and 11.

Reasons Given

Scogna gave five reasons for the change:

1) Conflicting dates with surrounding colleges, such as Rosemont and Chestnut Hill, which

OZ SCOGNA
Announces Prom Change

also have proms listed for the November weekend.

2) The requests of a number of students in the class.

3) The probability of a more efficiently run weekend with more time to work on arrangements.

4) A wider selection or prominent bands will be available to the class in April.

5) The probability of better weather conditions.

Ended Rumors

The announcement by Scogna, an accounting major, to this newspaper put an end to the various rumors that were building up on campus.

Scogna admitted that one of the rumors, concerning a spliting of the weekend, did have some basis. He said that he had considered the possibility of holding the Belle Air Ball in November and moving the Din-

It's not a lynching, but the crowd is screaming for blood—Keydet blood. The sceno is the spirited rally held on campus last Thursday night in preparation for the Villanova-VMI grame. Frosh provide a big boost for rally.

Students To Attend Mass For Grid Team Saturday

The entire student body will attend Mass and receive Holy Communion for the football team at 8 a.m. on Saturday in the University chapel.

Bob Merkert, chairman of the Religious Affairs Committee created by the Student Council worked out with athletic director and football coach Frank Reagan the plans for what they hope becomes a tradition before every home football game.

When the plan goes into effect Saturday, the football team will be playing away at Boston. Merkert hopes however that students will still join with the team at Mass.

The football squad will play Detroit at home next week. Then the team and student body can actually assist at 8:30 a.m. Mass.

For the non-resident students the cafeteria will be kept opened Merkert said.

The players, themselves, have always attended Mass and received Holy Communion prior to the games.

Merkert said today that students who are interested in football games can join the committee at its first meeting on Thursday at 7:15 p.m. in the Vasey Hall auditorium.

Since it is standing presidential committee, it is open to all members of the student body.

Some of the other activities which might be included in the committee's program include the reinstitution of devotions in front of the shrine of Our Lady of Good Counsel, speakers on religious topics, pre-Cana and similar instructional discussions, and pamphlet selection and distribution.

One Hundred Register By Car Deadline

Application for senior car privileges has been closed and will not reopen until November, Bill Murray, senior Finance major, who is handling the program for the Student Council, said today.

Those seniors who failed to apply for the privilege during class registration or last week can do so in November. Application is done quarterly—in September, November, January and April.

Approximately 100 members of the Class of 1959 have thus far taken vantage of the newly-won right to ask the Administration for permission to keep a car in the campus area.

Names Approved

The names of those who were approved by the Dean of Men, Rev. George J. McLaughlin, O.S.A.; the vice-president of Academic Affairs, Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A.; and the Chaplain, Rev. Norbert W. Whitley, O.S.A., were posted on the bulletin boards this morning.

Permits to keep a car parked at any local garage will be issued to the approved applicants if they come to the Student Activities Office between 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. today, Thurs-

Father Kelly Gives Retreat On Thursday

Rev. Francis X. Kelly, O.S.A., of Archbishop Carroll High School, Washington, D.C., will conduct Villanova's annual Day of Recollection tomorrow.

Because of the school's increased enrollment, and the size limitations of the Field House, resident students will meet in the morning, and day-hops in the afternoon, Rev. Norbert W. Whitley, O.S.A., Chaplain, announced.

The women students will have separate exercises in the University Chapel during the morning.

Rev. Robert Welsh, secretary to the provincial, will conduct the retreat for women.

The morning schedule for the women and the residents is to begin with Mass and an opening talk at 8 a.m., followed by conferences at 9 and 11.

The day-hop exercises will begin at 12:30 p.m. with Mass and a talk. Conferences will be held at 2 and 3:30.

Women and resident students will be able to go to confession at 10 a.m., and again at 11:30; confessions for day-hops will be heard at 2:30 and 4 p.m.

It is expected that a large part of the student body will receive Holy Communion on First Friday. Masses will be held in the University Chapel at 6, 6:45, 7:30, and 8 a.m. and 12 noon.

Exposition of the Most Blessed Sacrament will continue from 6:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Friday.

Marshall To Talk On Civil Rights Topic

By LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE
Of The Villanovan Staff

Thurgood Marshall, Nergo leader in the fight for school intergration in the South, will speak tonight at the opening session of the annual Villanova Law Forum.

Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has long vigorously promoted the cause of Negro rights.

He will discuss "The Struggle for Civil Rights—1958" at the Moot Court Room in Garey Hall at 8.30 p.m. Law Professor William B. Ball, director of the series, announced yesterday that some seats were still available.

Highly Qualified

"No person in the nation is more qualified to discuss the civil rights issue than Marshall," according to Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School.

Marshall, who is 51, was graduated from Lincoln University and Howard University Law School, in 1933. He was soon admitted to practice at the Maryland bar and in 1939 received admittance to present appeals to the U. S. Supreme Court.

A strong exponent for the rights and dignity of his own race, Marshall entered the fight for Negro equality in 1934 when he was named NAACP counsel in Baltimore.

Citizenship Fight

Soon recognized as an excellent attorney and argumentarian, he was appointed special counsel in active charge of legal cases to secure and protect full

Four Candidates To Vie For Soph Treasurer Post

Dick Schneider, Roger Allen, Martin Reddington and Niel Vaughey are the candidates in an election for Treasurer of the Class of 1961 to be held this Friday between 10:30a.m. and 2:30 p.m. in the Alumni Hall Gym.

The four candidates were nominated at a special class meeting called by Sophomore President Bob DeLisa last Thursday evening and conducted by Student Council Elections Committee chairman John P. Kelley.

The special election was necessitated when Joe Shaw, elected to the position of Treasurer last May, did not return to school this semester. Class Secretary Jim Rhodes has handled the treasurer's duties in the first few weeks of school.

Schneider is an engineering student, while the other three candidates are from the Commerce and Finance school. A fifth candidate, John Oberlies, engineering, withdrew his name from contention following the meeting.

The class also heard DeLisa announce the appointment of Mike Kuckelman and Bob Queen as co-chairmen of the Sophomore Cotillion, to be held Oct. 24. Kuckelman is a C and F student, while Queen is studying engineering.

Class Vice-President Bob Scalia was named chairman of the MUFF Day activities to be held Oct. 14.

Pinto Names Staff Editors For Belle Air

Bob Pinto, Editor-in-Chief of the 1959 Belle Air, has announced that Owen Klein, Al Stoughton and Bill Christy have been chosen Associate Editor, Managing Editor, and Feature Editor, respectively, of the '59 Yearbook.

Klein, a senior English major and president of Belle Masque, will work closely with Pinto in over-seeing the progress of the yearbook.

Stoughton, a senior engineer, and photography editor of the Villanovan, will plan the layout, while Christy, another English major and managing editor of the Lynx, will be in charge of the various features.

Also named to the editorial staff were Larry Palacio and Ed Shea, Senior Section Editors; Frank Connolly, Art Editor; Jack Curtin and Tom Goldschmidt, Co-Sports Editors; and Sam Pietrofitta, Photo Editor.

Editors of the various divisions of the University will be Tom McKenna, Arts; Joe Krackeler, Engineering; Gerry McGrath, Commerce and Finance; Eileen Grayson, Nursing; and Al Lawler, Navy. Tom Forkin will be Typing Editor.

Pinto also announced that senior picture retakes have been scheduled for Oct. 9 and 10. Junior pictures will be taken on Oct. 2; sophomore pictures are set for Oct. 16.

Murtha Plans French Club Reorganization

The French Club will hold a reorganization meeting Thursday morning at 10:30 in Room 101 Classroom Annex.

Frank Murtha, club president, announced that all students, regardless of their backgrounds in French, may become members.

As in the past, the calendar of activities will include speakers and French language records.

It is also expected that the French creative art contest, successful last year in its inaugural, will be repeated.

Biological Tests Planned for Here

Villanova has been selected as a teacher-training institute by the National Science Foundation for the Biological Sciences, it was announced last week by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President.

The in-service institute will be conducted as part of Villanova's Graduate and Part-Time Divisions. A Bachelor of Science degree and at least eight credits in general biology and general chemistry are required.

Training will be given outside regular school hours so that teachers may attend while serving full time in their own schools. About 30 meetings are planned for the Institute during the 1958-59 academic year.

The program, supported by federal grants, is intended primarily for high school science and mathematics teachers. It will cover some 85 colleges and universities in the United States.

Bill Washington, station manager, confers with Sam Pietrofitta, chief engineer, about the operation of equipment in the studios of WVIL. in preparation for the Villanova-VMI game. The station began fall broadcasts last Monday.

Dates For Law School Admission Test Released

The educational Testing Service has announced that more than 50 law schools throughout the country now require or recommend applicants to take the law school admissions test.

The test will be administered on November 8, February 21, April 18, and August 1, for those wishing to enter law school next fall. But scholarship applicants have been urged to take either the November or February tests.

For the convenience of applicants, examination centers have been set up throughout the country, including one here at Villanova.

The service said interested students should first inquire at the law school of their choice whether it requires the exam and the suggested date.

Application must be made to the Educational Testing Service at least two weeks before the test date and must be accompanied by the $10 fee.

The 1958-59 National Program for Graduate School Selection has also been announced by E.T.S. The graduate record examination is required by many of the country's graduate and professional schools.

This test will be given on Nov. 15, Jan. 17, April 25, and July 11. It is a two-section test. The aptitude and advanced sections may be taken together or on separate days.

Necessary Time

Registration must be made to the Education Testing Service at least 15 days before the test.

Information concerning either of the Law School Admission Test or the Graduate Record Examination may be obtained from Father Sullivan's office or by writing to the Educational Testing Service 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey.

Belle Masque Readies Play For Nov. 5

Richard L. Duprey, head of the graduate department of Theater Arts and director of Belle Masque Dramatic Society, feels he may have another hit on his hands, after hearing the first reading of "Tiger at the Gates".

Belle Masque scored well last year with Bernard Shaw's "St. Joan" and Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew," and it looks like Jean Giraudoux's classic indictment of war will rival those two in success.

Performances are scheduled for the Field House starting Nov. 5 and running through Nov. 8.

Poetic Diction

Christopher Fry, noted for his plays in poetic diction, has made the translation from the French.

Owen Klein and Barbara Chambers head the cast, as Hector and Andromache, respectively. Klein is president of Belle Masque.

Other importants roles are to be played by Bill Friend, Alen Willig, Ray Kantra, Lynda Lynch, Barbara Ann Burke, Dianne Viti and Mary Shaffer.

Others In Cast

In the cast, too are Connie Donohue, Link Hallowell, Tom Flynn, Margaret Brown, Mike Keating, Martin Reddington, Peter Allard, James Lynch, Tony Provensano, John Dagney, Roger Mullen, John Cannon, John McGarry and Frank Thornton.

Richard Cavanaugh, member of the faculty in the Graduate Department of Theater Arts, will assist Duprey with the direction.

Capt. Higgins New Naval Science Prof.

Captain John W. Higgins, Jr., USN, has been named Commandant of Midshipmen and Professor of Naval Science at Villanova.

He is one of five new officers who were appointed by the Naval Department to replace those transferred from the school's NROTC unit to other assignments.

Higgins, who comes to Villanova from a position as Commander of a destroyer division in the Atlantic, replaces Captain Neal R. Curtin, USN, who has retired with the rank of Rear Admiral.

Curtin had been Commandant of Midshipmen at Villanova for the past three years.

The other changes involved: Major John J. Rooney, USMC, a graduate of Ohio University, who replaces Captain John Grace, USMC, as Marine Officer instructor. Grace has been transferred to Fort Benning, Ga.

Lt. Martin J. Gillan, 111, USN, who takes over the navigation instructor's assignment from Lt. Cdr. George J. Rehe, USN.

Lt. Robert J. Zemaitis, USN, who becomes orientation instructor in place of Lt. (jg) Eldon E. Park, USNR.

Lt. (jg) Donald C. Paulson, USNR, who takes over as engineering instructor from Lt. Richard N. Peterson, USN.

Captain Higgins, a resident of Somerville, Mass., has, since World War 11, served as an instructor at the U. S. Naval Academy, and completed a tour of duty in the Western Pacific. He was also a special assistant for Congressional liason to the Chief of Naval personnel.

Moritz Announces Placement Plans

Registration for senior interviews is now underway, John B. Moritz, placement director, has announced.

Any senior desiring interviews with the recruiters in the spring of 1959 should fill out a card at the Placement Office giving details and degree to be obtained upon graduation, Moritz said.

The senior will then submit two duplicate forms with two wallet-size photographs. All information must be returned to the Placement Office by November 14.

An information sheet about the Placement service and another explaining details of the proper procedure is available at the office. Office hours are from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1 to 5 p.m.

Last year, more than 140 corporations and government divisions held 2367 student interviews, which resulted in 375 job offers, 140 of which were accepted.

Singers To Appear at Law Mass

The Villanova Singers, augmented in numbers by the freshmen who recently passed their auditions, begin what president Ken MacGillivray calls a "busy first-semester schedule" by singing the Red Mass for the Law School on October 8.

Herbert Fiss, director of the singers, who holds the same duties with the St. Joseph's College and Rosemont College glee clubs, announced that the Singers will also appear at the capping ceremony for the nurses on October 12.

They will also take part in the entertainment on Parent's Day, October 18, when Villanova's football team plays Wake Forest. Following that, there will be the Military Mass on November 22.

New Philosophy Chairman Among Faculty Additions

Some 27 new members, including two priests and an assistant chairman of the philosophy department, have been added to the University's 1958 faculty.

Three Augustinians have been transferred to Monsignor Bonner High School. Replacing them are Rev. Benjamin Kiernan, O.S.A., an instructor in History; and Rev. Edward Nolan O.S.A., a religious instructor. Rev. David Duffy O.S.A., Rev. Harry Erdlen O.S.A., and Rev. Thomas C. Kenny O.S.A. are the transferred priests.

Dr. Donald A. Gallagher has been appointed associate professor and assistant chairman of the Philosophy Department.

The lay additions to the faculty include: Dr. George Alapatt, instructor, Political Science; Mr. Ralph A. Bellas, instructor, English; Mr. Conal Byrne, associate professor, Finance; Miss Catherine Connolly, instructor, Nursing; Mr. Gerald De Wit, instructor, Psychology; Dr. Leo Fittabile, assistant professor, English; and Mr. Donald A. Gallagher, associate professor and assistant chairman, Philosophy.

Also Mr. Ronald J. Giannamore, instructor, Electrical Engineering; Lt. Martin J. Gillan, III, assistant professor, Naval Science; Capt. John W. Higgins, professor, Naval Science; Mr. Ventkatarama Krishnan, assistant professor, Electrical Engineering; Mr. Victor S. Krupitsch, instructor, Modern Languages; Miss Mary E. McBride, instructor, Public Health; Mr. Edward E. Myers, instructor, Electrical Engineering.

Also, Admiral J. H. Nevins, Jr., instructor, Political Science; Mr. Kenneth F. O'Driscoll, assistant professor, Chemistry; Lt.jg. Donald Pualson, assistant professor, Naval Science; Mr. Joseph Privite, instructor Biology; and Mr. Lucien Roy, assistant professor, Mathematics.

Also, Mr. James Schuster, instructor, Civil Engineering; Miss Anne Shields, instructor, Nursing; Mr. J. Robert Snyder, associate professor, Chemical Engineering; Mr. Joseph Venuto, assistant professor, Geology; Mr. Yao Nan Yu, visiting professor, Electrical Engineering; Lt. Robert J. Zemaitis, assistant professor, Naval Science.

Five Appointed to Developm't Board

Five outstanding Philadelphia citizens have accepted appointments to the Board of Directors of Villanova's Development Foundation, it was announced recently by the Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., director of the University fund raising organization.

George Friedland, vice-chairamn of the board of directors of Food Fair stores; J. Beresin, President of Berlo Vending Corporation; G. E. Burens, Vice-President of General Electric Corp. R. G. Rincliffe, president of Philadelphia Electric Co., and L. G. L. Thomas, president of C. H. Wheeler, Manufacturing Co., are the new directors.

The five were formerly members of the University's advisory board of lay trustees, but will now assist in directing the activities of the foundation.

J. Griffith Boardman, Philadelphia insurance executive, is General Chairman of this year's phase of the fund drive.

Villanova began a twenty year fund raising campaign four years ago and is seeking to raise twenty-one million dollars.

Many of the Philadelphia area's prominent business, industrial and professional leaders have been aiding the University in its quest for funds.

Washington Reveals Full WVIL Schedule

Radio station WVIL began its 11th year of broadcasting on the campus with a full evening of programs last Monday.

Bill Washington, station manager, slated most of the popular programs of last year, and announced that other innovations will be made soon.

Other student executives are Jim Corey, personnel director; Jim Hull, business director; Gary Mara, program director; Sam Pietrofitta, chief engineer; Bill Hearn, traffic manager; and Dick Phelps, studio engineer.

Midshipman William Lovett tests his command presence on a freshman NROTC student. "Full yer gut in", he snarls in the best tradition of the DI, and the frosh are introduced to Navy drill.

Administration Deflates Council On NSA Entrance

By JOHN J. CURTIN
Of The Villanovan Staff

The Administration has turned down a Student Council motion that Villanova join the National Student Association.

Council Chairman Bob Murphy made this announcement at the opening meeting of the 1958-59 student governing organization on September 16.

Murphy said that the Administration did not feel that the NSA—considered by some as the "voice of the American students" throughout the world—had enough to offer Villanova to warrant joining the organization.

He also said that the Administration pointed out that some of the NSA policy resolutions are contrary to Church teachings.

However, Murphy added that he had reason to believe that if the council were to prepare a report weighing the advantages and disadvantages of joining the organization, similar to that presented with the senior car program last year, the administration might be favorable to another application.

High Attendance

The council chairman also commended the council members on their better than 80 per-cent attendance at the initial meeting and gave them a short lecture on their duties and obligations for the coming year.

"Student government is a two-way street," he admonished, "It is a privilege granted by the Administration, not a right, and is up to the members here to see that they carry out their duty toward the Administration as well as towards the students."

Vice-chairman Tom Hoffman addressed the council concerning orientation plans and Secretary Bob Wagner revealed plans for the first annual Parents' Day, October 18 when the football team meets Wake Forest.

A second meeting—this one running three and one half hours—was held on September 23, during which the council presented some of its programs for the coming year.

Motions Reviewed

Among the motions reviewed were ones concerning a new financial program, possible lengthening of library hours, the publication of a student directory (subject to a poll of the student body), the possibility of outdoor graduation and the establishment of a placement committee to assist senior class president Oscar Scogna in a program to attempt improvement of the senior interview program.

The council also passed a resolution concerning student abuse of the telephones in resident dormitories and established a plan whereby, in a roll call vote, the way a member votes will be listed next to his name.

Murphy also announced that the Intramural Council has taken over the Basca Weekend ceremonies and urged all campus organizations to select their Homecoming Queen contestants by October 7.

He also said that there will be a competition among the organizations for the best float in a half-time parade during the Detroit game that weekend. A citation will be given the winning organization.

Murphy appointed sophomore Jim Lynch to assist Wagner in his secretarial duties.

Jerry McGrath, Tom Moakley and Bill Murray will be the three student Executive Vice-Presidents of the 1958-59 Student Council.

Under the tri-vice-presidency system set up by the new council constitution, Chairman Bob Murphy announced at the initial meeting of the council this year that he had appointed McGrath, a senior Industrial Administration major, to head the Student Goverament committee; Moakley, a junior Electrical Engineer, to head the Student Affairs committee, and Murray, a senior Finance major, to head the Educational Affairs committee.

Other appointments by Murphy included: Presidential Standing Committees—Spirit, Bruce Irving; Student Activities, Bill Christman; Religious Affairs, Bob Merkert.

Congressional Standing Committees—Ways and Means, Jim Corey; Elections, Jack Kelley; Fraternities and Societies, Joe Mason; Social Affairs, Bill Hixson; Academic Affairs, Gerry Hepburn; Student Union and Special Affairs, Fred Welle and Jim McElhenny.

Junior Chuck Santangelo was elected NFCCS senior delegate and Moakley was named junior delegate in an election last May.

Besides Murphy, other council officers are Tom Hoffman, vice-chairman; Bob Wagner, secretary, and Welle, treasurer.

Building Rules Topic of Law School Meetings

The School of Law will conduct a series of "town hall" meetings, tentatively set to begin November 15.

These meetings are being planned in connection with the Law School's research project on zoning and building regulations for the Home Builders Association of Philadelphia.

The Law School undertook a two-year study of building and zoning regulations for the builders last spring under a $13,000 grant.

First Meeting

The first of the "town hall" meetings will be devoted to the highly controversial "one acre zoning" case recently decided by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, involving Bilbar Construction Co. and Eastown Township.

Law school Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein also announced the appointment of Professor William B. Ball, of the law faculty, as director of the research project, succeeding Professor John Stephenson, who will continue as an advisor.

D. Barry Gibbons, Media attorney, will serve as a research associate.

Zoning Rules

Villanova's project represents the first comprehensive survey to be made of fall zoning and building rules and regulations in more than 200 townships and boroughs in Delaware, Montgomery, Chester and Bucks Counties.

"We think that the results of the study may also prove of value to other areas in the nation experiencing similar population growth," Reuschlein said.

"As an aid to local governments officials, municipal planners, the home building industry and community residents, the project will publish comparative studies of such rules and regulations, in addition to formulating resolutions to legal problems in areas of difficulty created by existing law."

Student Tax, NSA Discussion Topics At Workshop Here

An organizational meeting for all students interested in working for the Student Government Commission of the Philadelphia region National Federation of Catholic College Students will be held next Thursday, Oct. 9, at 10.30 a.m. in the Student Council office.

The commission will run workshops to discuss student elections, student tax, the National Student Association, and freshmen orientation.

The purpose of the workshops is to bring together the members of student government and those interested in it, from all the schools in this region, to introduce new ideas and programs, McGarth said.

'Engineer' Lists Staff Openings

The deadline for material for the first issue of the Villanova Engineer is October 10, it was announced this week by editor Bob Merkert.

The Engineer, moderated by the Rev. John J. Vrana, O.S.A., is in its 25th year of publication. This year there are openings for underclassmen, particularly in the art field.

Merkert asked anyone interested in art to apply at room 344 Sullivan Hall. Other positions are available in proofreading, writing, typing, circulation, layout, and photography.

In this year's magazine one of the four schools of engineering will be featured in each issue to help freshman decide upon the particular fields.

The Engineer will also treat the various phases of work that may be entered after graduation.

Merkert said all copy should be given to Bill Christman, 334 Sullivan Hall, John Dinneen, 310 Sullivan Hall, Joe Lauson, 352 Sullivan Hall or to the Engineer office.

A New Library Policy

We heard a lot of comments among the Villanova student body about the new "closed stack" policy of the school library.

It seems quite a few don't approve of not allowing students into the stacks to look fo the books they want. They say that the new program has lessened the convenience of the library, and that they won't be able to work as well under the new system.

Well, we agree with them that it's easier to do research when browsing is possible. Browsing also helps the students gain a better knowledge of the basic books in each particular field.

However, it's nobody's fault but their own that the stacks are now closed.

The thing is, Villanova has found out that it isn't economically sound to run a library with open stacks. Why? Because of students who have no regard for school property.

When the library had the open stack system, we lost thousands of dollars a year in stolen books. Last year, trying to find an answer, the library still allowed students in the stacks, but they had a guard posted at the door to make sure that every book taken from the library was checked out.

So, while it may be hard on the students, Villanova's stacks will be closed this year, just as they are in many college and university libraries. It's a shame that it has to happen in a Catholic university.

There's nobody to blame but the students.

How Long Will It Last?

Once again it's a new year at Villanova, and once more there are telephones in all the dormitories. We wonder how long it will stay that way.

It seems that every year it starts off the same way—all phones are in working order and there are no problems.

But then the "wise guys" go to work with their hooks and other gimmicks, and soon the phones are out of order. And there's no getting them fixed, not under the new policy of the Bell Telephone Company. They decided last year that they would not repair any phones put out of order by student tampering.

They put all the phones back in order over the summer at the request of Student Council, which has passed a resolution condemning student breakage of the phones, for they know that telephones that are out of order this year will stay that way.

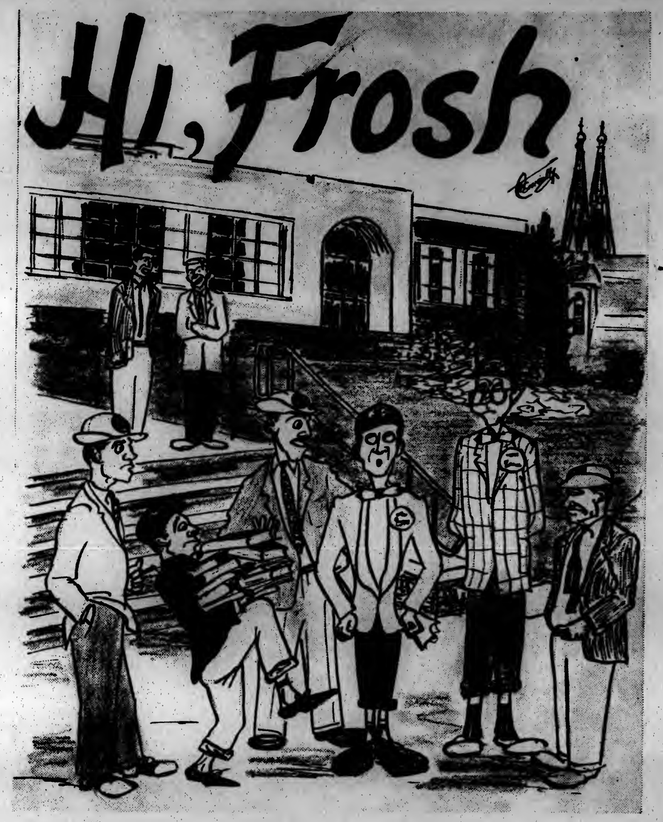
And, aside from the moral consideration of the problem—for it is the same as stealing when you cheat the company of its money on a call—there's always the inconvenience to others to be considered.

Many times a student in one of the dorms has to be reached immediately, either by his family or some associate. With no telephones working, often they can't get in touch with him. And all because somebody wanted to save a few cents.

We hope it will be different this year.

'That Little High School Bunch'

Last week, after the West Chester game, the West Chester Daily Local News had this to say:



"We lost the football game but we sure had the better band."

For a band that three years ago was called "the greatest little marching band in the East" by telecaster Red Grange after the Game-of-the-week against Boston College, the Villanova Marching Band is a pretty sad outfit today.

Paul Hessler, secretary of the band, says that there is good spirit among those who are now members, but "the rest of the school acts like it doesn't know the band exists, or just doesn't care.

"Herbert Fiss, our director, has done a wonderful job," says Hessler, "and he deserves better support. New equipment is needed, repairs are needed, but I'm certain the Administration will not agree to spend more money unless the students show by greater participation they are really interested."

There are still four home football games left to erase the painful memory of what one fan referred to as "that little high school bunch."

With The Editor:

Today, as freshmen celebrate their second week on campus, and upperclassmen purchase the last of their semester's texts, "affairs academic' at Villanova approach what we call normalcy.

Of course, the bewildered Frost, who have been humiliated and scorned, will find any charge in atmosphere welcome!

As autumn replaces Indian Summer and the brown leaves flutter aimlessly to campus paths, paces and intellects quicken. Rallies and dances are replaced by lectures and that bane of the collegian-term papers.

November brings its midterm exams and a trip home to thte traditiotnal Thanksgiving dinner, while December school days are made doubly hard by sleepless nights spent in earning holiday money.

Recovery from New Year's eve partities is rapid by necessity as profs and stude cram the last few hundred pages making ready for final exams.

February, March, and April are synonymous at Villanova with prom preparatitons, snowball fights, and Palestra.

As spring khaki replaces flannel, the tennis racquets and golf bags come out of hiding — the time when seniors gaze about sadly, and juniors celebrate their biggest of all weeks.

And as the year closes, the general opinion is, "May exams are never as tough as January's. They just never seem to end."

This is all in a roundabout way of welcome back. Life at Villanova is all too short. Freshmen soon become seniors. Don't waste the years. There are are too few of them.

That Time of Year

by Bill Jones

Now is the time of year
When a student begins to look,
With many a sigh of woe,
Into his empty pocketbook.

He sees with great alarm
And with greater despair,
That this thin little vault
Is so terribly, terribly bare.

He writes a letter home,
And asks for a little dough.
But in the sweet reply
The answer is always no.

Villanova: Big Brothers Is Watching You

RECENTLY returned from a summer among the international set pictured above, Bob Brothers, a Villanova senior, has decided to take up his pen for a look at Villanova's campus life. Bob will be familiar to upperclassmen an one of the leaders of the back to Methusala beard movement of last year. His will be one of the columns featured in the new Villanovan policy of different and varied humor columns in the coming year. The title of this column, "File 13," stems from Bob's experiences in the Army. During his stay with that organization, Bob penned quite a few literary masterpieces for his camp newspaper, most of which landed in "File 13," the army term for wastebasket.

BY popular requests, made mostly by himself, Ray Quaglia returns again this year OK. He had been camped at the door of the Villanovan office since July 23, with a pile of 47 columns in his hand, so we didn't have the heart to refuse him publication. The fact that he now holds the position of feature editor has nothing to do with his reapperance, Due also to popular request, "PUBlicly Speaking," by Bill Christy, will not appear, for at least as long as we can hold him off.

MEIN Kempf and your Kempf, Don Kempf will be back as can be seen from the bit of nostalgia that appears at the right.

BUT the feature pages of this year's Villanovan (and in the future, they will be plural) will not be all comedy and opinion. There will be articles both serious and series, designed to interest all Villanovans, from freshman to senior.

AMONG those planned are personality features of prominent figures, political analyses, and for the seven intellectuals on campus, we may include a few book and drama reviews.

THERE is much more planned, but this hole is almost filled anyway. That will be the Villanovan feature section for this year. We hope you like it. If you don't, tell us. We probably won't listen, but it will be nice to hear from you.

"Who do you have for English?"

"Fifty Dollars for six books!"

"Well, if I switch my Ethics with History, then my English can move to Tuesday and I'll be out by noon on Fridays."

It's September again and the Main Line adds about 3500 Villanovans to its roster. As usual freshmen are wearing "regs," sophomores are demanding early blazers, juniors are thinking of junior week, and seniors are walking around trying to look rather sage and unimpressed by everything.

KEMPF

Rah!

It seems strange to be a senior and I'm not sure I like it. Gone are the confusion, boldness, and carefreeness which respectively signify the first three years. Reality is only nine months away, and the awareness of this fact seems to bring about an inner change in the senior. He is anxious but, at the same time, he is hesitant. And the new privileges he has acquired with his seniority only reminds him of this transitory period he is experiencing in which he must prepare both to leave one way of life and enter another.

Yes, the senior is beginning to realize that "The Good Old Days" will become a very real part of his vocabulary in all too short a time.

As always the campus has an air of the new and the familiar. To the freshman all is new and for the upperclassman there are new courses teachers, and living quarters. But such familiar scenes as the Chapel spires, the pie shoppe, Rosemont's "T" House, and an ex-roomie are good to see again.

Rah! Rah!

And so another year of college life begins, already new memories are being made—

Frosh View First College Days with Fear and Hope

By TWO FRESHMEN

The summer months are over and the day is here. Villanova, and to eleven hundred of us a whole new world opens. Our first impression of V.U. was one size. We were impressed by the spaciousness of the campus, by the size of the student body, and by the length of the line of frosh waiting to be "reg-istered".

As we were first taken on a guided tour of the campus, many thoughts ran through our mind. Will we be accepted as true Villanovans? Will we ever gain that collegiate air which seems to belong to upperclassman exclusively? Are the nurses the only girls around here? What kind of a guy will my roomie be? What is Kelly's?

That night we had our first group activity, a meeting with the white hats and a stupendous movie in "WHOSEASCOPE" and — "WHATASOUND". We watched the exciting action as the skipper of the Nautilus made a courageous but vain attempt to overcome his speecp difficultly. "Oscars" are awarded to great motion pictures; this one is slated for the Navy's "goat".

As the first week progressed we encountered many of the traditions of Villanova. These included carrying the upperclassmen's bags, and reciting school songs and cheers upon a white hat's request.

We found that Orientation had at least prepared us for summer jobs as porters or singing waiters.

This was the lighter side of Orientation Week, the most lasting impression we received was that of the school spirit displayed by the white hats in particular and the upperclassmen in general. We feel that some of that spirit has rubbed off on us and that now is the time for a word of thanks to those white hats whose voices interpreted for us the meaning of Villanova.

Anyone Know Richie?

By BOB BROTHERS

Son Richie left for big V.U. amidst tears from his family and shouts of good will from his friends. He arrived here, a quiet, unobtrusive young gentleman, and would have never been thought of differently if he didn't have a habit of writing carbon copies of his letters, and if he hadn't made friends with an upperclassman who specializes in rifling wastepaper baskets. Peruse these few lines. How many of you know a thousand Richies?

To his parents;
Dear Mom, Dad and Family,

Everything is swell at Villanova and I've been studying very hard. Classes run from 8:30 until 4:30 each day, and I'm loaded down with homework every evening. This hardly leaves me much time to go to any dances or football games, but I realize that my purpose in being here is to study not to play. Of all the night spots in Philadelphia I haven't been in one of them, and with only about 100 girls on campus and 4,000 men, you can see that I don't date much.

I live with a very nice bunch of guys in the dorm, and they're very helpful in developing my studies. They all come from very nice families, and on Saturday night, we usually go to a concert or play chess in the dorm. Of course it's very difficult to go to many concerts when you don't have much money, but I realize that one must sacrifice for the sake of knowledge.

Richie

P.S. Just in case you were thinking of sending me some money, please send it in cash. It costs ten cents to cash checks on campus, and I never have much money.

To his buddy;
Hi Ho Jackerino,

How's the boy? Let me tell you, this Philly is one crazy town. I haven't been to bed before 4:00 o'clock any morning since I got here, and I'm really having a ball. The courses are a breeze, and once I get this attendance system figured out, I'll have most of my time to myself. I was slated to live in one of the dorms when I first got here, but I took one look at the rules and regulations and headed for the door. I've moved into a private apartment off campus with a bar next door where they don't ask questions about anything.

Of all the night spots in Philly I haven't been in one of them. Of course it just opened Saturday night, but give me time. I've met some real weird intellectuals, and have developed quite a taste for the crazy snacks at the Encore Room and the Gilded Cage. The only thing that's been retarding my progress is money. But I expect the old man to come through with a new bundle very soon.

Dick

To his girlfriend;
My dearest Jane,

Villanova is a very lonely place without you. The studies are very difficult, and each night I walk the streets alone wishing that you were at my side. They say that this is a very beautiful campus but when you are alone nothing is beautiful.

I love you with every breath I breathe; with every beat of my heart, a heart that would be broken without you. Oh what I wouldn't give to be in New York now. But don't worry, I'll be home soon and I'll have so much to tell you.

The Little Guy Meets A Dirty Shoed Beatnik

By RAY QUAGLIA

I was strolling bown behind the library the other day, trying to find the shiny new stone that I lost last year, when I saw this fellow crushing ant hills with dirty sneaker of his left foot. He was giggling madly and clapping his hands as one by one he finished off the stragglers who were scurrying frantically in all directions.

I waited till he was finished and asked him what he was doing.

He liked me and tweeked my cheek as he said, "Op Sa, Daddio, Op Sa." I looked at him strangly and asked him what "Op Sa" meant, but he didn't answer. He just bent over and began putting the crushed ants into a white business envelope.

"Are you one of the local beatniks?" I asked. "Op Sa, daddio," he answered. "Are you really beat, and drink a lot of coffee and all?" I asked. "Op Sa daddio," he replied. Are you really an intellectual?" He just looked strangely into my eyes and all of a sudden I knew that he was. I fell to my knees and began to help him fill the envelope with crushed ants.

Electrical Engineers Top Spring Dean's List With 4.0

Five Electrical Engineers topped the list of 14 students who attained a perfect average for the second semester of last year.

Seniors Patrick R. Gallagher and Niel F. McAllister and juniors Louis J. Gale, Robert J. Wagner and Harold R. Grubb were the 4.0 electrical engineers.

Also included in the elite group of 4.0's were Kathleen M. McCabe and Doris I. Miller, senior nurses; accounting seniors Joseph A. Walheim and John M. Wesley; and Gerald A. Dougherty; freshman Joseph F. Diaco and junior Sandor Peskin, biology; education junior John F. O'Donnell; and physic senior John E. Solarski.

Following are the students who made the Dean's List with averages of 3.0 or above:

ner Dance to April, but decided that it would be better to keep the weekend intact.

The class president also revealed that he had appointed Harry Devlin, another Accounting major, as Dinner Dance chairman, and Greg Dean, Arts major, as co-chairman of the prom. Another prom chairman will be named later.

Hixson Basca Head

The only other appointment revealed by Scogna was Bill Hixson, mechanical engineering student, as chairman of the Basca Memorial Dance, to be Friday night of Homecoming Weekend, Oct. 10.

day or Friday with the following:

A note of approval from the student's parents;

A note from the garage owner;

A $5 registration fee for car rights for the entire year.

Weekend Permission

Murray said that the Administration has given permission for the approved cars to be parked in the university parking lot over weekends.

Seniors without cars, who who might have occasion to drive registered cars belonging to other persons, may obtain permission through the normal application channels. No fee or notes are necessary.

Wildcats Play at Boston College Saturday

Will Reagan's Umbrella Still Leak?

By JACK CURTIN

Rain is what's worrying Frank Reagan this week — a rain of Don Allard passes that could lead Boston College to victory when the Villanova Wildcats visit the Eagles' Alumni Field Saturday.

And if that rain starts, all Reagan has for protection is a mighty leaky "umbrella" defense.

The Main Liners, who topped the country in the pass defense department two years ago and were still among the leaders last season, have found that things are different this time out.

FRANK REAGAN

Expecting Showers?

JIM GRAZIONE

Doubtful Quantity?

They were poor in that field in the season's opener against West Chester two weeks ago. In Saturday's 33-6 defeat at the hands of Virginia Military Institute, they were worse.

Defense Blamed

VMI completed six of 11 tosses in humiliating the Wildcats, and most of the time there wasn't a defender near the receiver. While the Keydets receivers were fast and shifty, and quarterback Bill Nebraska was hitting them with almost perfect tosses, the Main Liners spread-backfield formation was still woefully weak.

And Allard, the Eagles' field general, is one of the nation's top passers. If he has a hot afternoon, BC could hand the Wildcats a defeat for the fourth year in a row. Last season they pounded out a 12-9 victory in almost a foot of rain and mud.

However, there's a possibility that Allard might not take the field against Villanova. The Eagles' ace, who was fourth in the East in total offense last season, injured his leg in the first half of Boston's loss to Syracuse Saturday, and had to sit out the rest of the game..

And the Eagles aren't the same team without Allard on the field. They held a 14-0 lead at the halfway mark, but fell 24-14 in the second half as the Orange started to move.

Brown Impressive

But, Allard in the line-up or not, Boston College is still considered one of the top teams in the East this year, and second-string quarterback Bill Brown also showed a fine passing arm when he took over in the second half of the Syracuse loss.

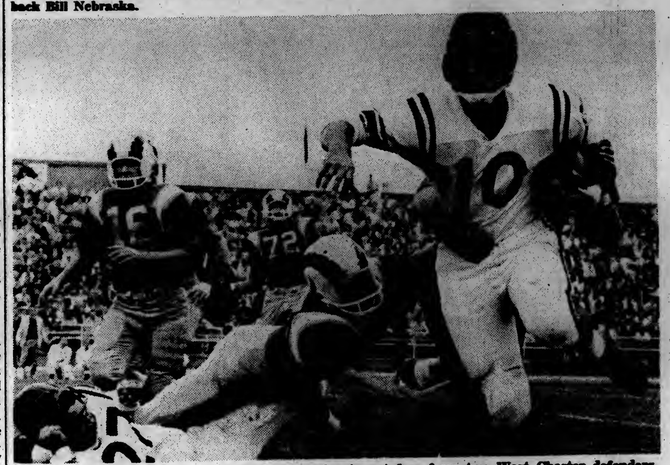
Which leaves Reagan with plenty to worry about. Not only does he have to tighten up his pass defense, but he has to remember leg injuries to quarterback Jim Grazione and sophomore halfback Billy Paczkoskie. While neither injury was too serious, both players could be doubtful quantities this week.

But there are still some bright spots on the Villanova horizon. Such as:

1) The fine showing of third-string quarterback Ed Roehre, who took over the team in the second period of the VMI loss when Grazione was injured and handled the directing job almost the remainder of the game. Roehre, who had never before throw a pass in varsity competition, completed six of 17 against VMI, and did an excellent job running the ball and directing the team.

Ficca Outstanding

2) The outstanding offensive performance byjunior halfback Frank Ficca, who carried the ball 13 times and picked up 63 yards to top Villanova in that department.



3) The successful introduction of the powerful "T" formation into the team offense. The power play gave the 'Cats the strongest general offense they've had in years ,even though they ran only the basic "T" play, in which the last man in the line-up behind the quarterback carries the ball. Should Reagan add more plays off the "T", the Main Liners could pose a strong scoring threat.

4) The fact that Villanova, for the first time in quite a while, didn't fumble the ball at all and was penalized only once, that for an off-sides violation late in the game.

A fifth point,still indoubt, is the possibility that second-string quarterback Wayne Kautter, who injured his arm before the season started, may be ready for Boston action. Kautter could give the 'Cats a much-needed punter, for they were also weak in that department Saturday.

Tom Heron and VMI's Sam Horner leap unsucessfully for a pass thrown by Kaydet quarterback Bill Nebraska.

Jim Grazione, Wildcat quarterback, struggles to get free from two West Chester defenders, one of whom has been blocked by Dave Intrabartolo. Grazione picked up 10 yards on a roll out during the drive which netted the first touchdown of the game.

'Cats Win Opener

VMI Tops Villanova, 33-6

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

The Villanova football team lost, 33-6, to a speedy, efficient Virginia Military club last Saturday, after opening the season with a 28-14 victory over West Chester State Teachers College.

Against the Teachers, the 'Cats ran a few basic plays and a single pass pattern, realizing that Boston College and VMI scouts were on hand.

However, against the Keydets, Frank Reagan unveiled a bag of tricks which featured a smooth-operating "T" formation. Working from this and the more familiar "T", the Wildcats backs out-gained their opponents, 243 yards to 127 on the ground, and had 22 first downs to 11 for the Keydets.

Cats Frustated

But it was a day of frustration for 6800 Villanova fans, as three Wildcats drives stalled on the eight, four and nine yard lines, and the pass defense, so stalwart for two years, showed the effect of graduation.

The 'Cats scored first on a 78-yard, 17-play drive of almost all "T" plays, which was capped by a nine-yard touchdown pass from Jim Grazione to co-captain Gene O'Pella.

The lead lasted just 13 seconds, however, as Pete Johnson, a 9.9 100-yard sprinter, grabbed the ensuing kickoff on his three and raced it all the way back for a TD. Sam Horner ran around end for two extra points.

The flashiest scoring play of the day occurred when Art Brandriff grabbed a pass in the falt, sidestepped two Wildcats, and cut back through 33 yards of tacklers for a TD. Other VMI scores came on a 30-yard toss from Bill Nabraska.

Second-Stringers Shine

Other VMI scores came on a 30-yard toss from Bill Nabraska to Carl Kasko; a seven-yard run by Horner, and a 10-yard burst by Johnson.

It was a day for second-string quarterbacks. Nebraska was everything VMI coach John McKenna, a Villanova graduate and former assistant coach, could have asked for, and senior Ed Roehre was the surprise of the day for Wildcat fans as he cleverly engineered several long, though abortive, marches.

Frank Ficca, a 170-pound junior halfback who saw very little action last year, carried 13 times, mostly as back man in the "I", for 63 yards.

Jim Grazione and Bill Paczkoskie were both hurt in the second quarter. Graz reinjuried a thigh muscle originally hurt in practice. Paczkoskie banged his "good" knee. Both should be in good shape for the Boston College game, however.

The first "weekend" of the Villanova social season will begin Friday with the traditional Nick Basca Memorial Award and Dance, followed by the Homecoming football game on Saturday against Detroit.

Moritz Talks To Seniors On Thursday

By JOHN J. CURTIN
of the Villanovan Staff

John A. Moritz, Villanova's placement director, will announce several changes in the placement system to the Class of 1959 at the first Senior class meeting tomorrow.

Moritz will address the class at 10:30 tomorrow morning in the Vasey Hall auditorium.

Ed Zeaser, Industrial Administrations major, head of a special class committee on placement, announced today that Moritz will explain in detail changes instituted as a result of student complaints brought to him by the class committee last May.

Zeaser, vice-president of the Society for the Advancement of Management, was appointed to form the committee by class president Oz Scogna following last spring's elections.

Suggested Changes

The committee — Ed Shea, Jack Fields and Jack Kelley, Arts; Bob Cunius, Commerce and Finance, and Joe Cooke, Engineering — suggested several changes in the program to Moritz shortly after their appointment.

The chairman told the VILLANOVAN that Moritz has made some changes, but that 'I don't know if they were a result of our report."

Zeaser also stated that "it is most important that seniors become familiar with the placement system now, as those who had the most trouble last year were those who let it go until the last minute."

Literature in Library

The committee has also arranged with the library for literature from the various interiewing companies to be placed in the reference room.

"More members are needed on the committee," Zeaser added, "for we are going to continue to help the Placement Bureau with the Senior program and will also serve as guides for the interviewers when they come to campus."

Data on job offers to last year's seniors was released by the Placement Office today.

Director John A. Moritz revealed that engineers ranged from $400 to $577 a month with a median of $455, while Commerce and Finance students ranged between $350 and $480 with a median of $390.

Moritz said that returns from the Arts majors were too scattered to furnish a range of salaries, but that, in general, "they would be about the same as the Commerce and Finance scale."

Practicing for next Sunday's ceremonies in the University Chapel are Marian White capping Angela Colasanti both sophomore nurses. Caps will be bestowed by the Very Rev. Father Henry Greenlee O.S.A., Provincial of the Eastern Province at 4 p.m.

Soph Nurses To Get Caps In Chapel Ceremony Sunday

This Sunday, caps will be bestowed on the sophomore Villanova nurses by the Very Rev. Father Henry Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial of the Eastern Province.

The Rev. Charles McFadden, O.S.A. of the Philosophy department will be the speaker at the ceremony in the University Chapel at 4 p.m.

Students will be presented to Father Greenlee by Sister Mary Alma, C.M., Dean of the Nursing School.

During the ceremony, lighted candles signifying the continuance of the Christian ideal in nursing will be presented to the students by the dean of nursing.

The nurses will recite a pledge composed by Father Klekotka. The pledge is based on the Hippoctatic Oath taken by doctors. The pledge reflects the acceptance of the will of God by the nurses.

The nurse promises to apply herself diligently to the pursuit of nursing ideals and to imitate Mary in charity, purity, devotion, and loyalty.

The girls to be capped are:

The caps, which will be presented to the students by Mrs. J. Novack and Miss Shields of the Nursing Division, resemble a sacred host. This symbolizes the life vital to each person who aspires to happiness as an angel of mercy.

The caps carry the colors of the Blessed Virgin Mary—white and blue.

Vaughey Elected Soph Treasurer

Neil Vaughey, Commerce and Finance Major has been named Treasurer of the sophomore class in a special election held last Friday.

Of the 203 sophomores who voted, Vaughey polled 110 votes to 65 for Richard Schneider and 28 for Roger Allen.

Vaughey takes the place of Joseph Shaw, who was chosen last spring in the regular election, but did not return to school.

As Treasurer of the sophomore class, Vaughey will be responsible for the accumulation of funds for the junior year. With Bob DeLisa, president of the class, Vaughey will help to formulate the plans for the year.

The special election was conducted with a minumum of publicity. There was a marked absence of posters and signs that have characterized the elections of the past.

John P. Kelly, chairman of the Student Council Elections Committee, supervised the election procedure.

Hixson Chairman:

Paul Judge Will Play At Basca Dance

By THOMAS A. McKENNA

The Nick Basca Memorial Dance will open the Homecoming Weekend on Friday night from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m., it was announced today by Bill Hixson, chairman for the sponsoring senior class.

The dance is held annually in honor of the former Villanova star football player and World War II hero, Nick Basca.

Tickets for the dance are now on sale in Dougherty Hall and may also be purchased from members of the ticket committee which is under the co-chairmanship of Lou Kubinac and Hap Georges, both senior Finance majors.

To Scholarship Fund

The proceeds of the dance will be donated to the University Seminary Scholarship Fund which will entitle an Augustinian Seminarian to a college education at Villanova.

The dance will be highlighted by the announcement of the Homecoming Queen. The queen

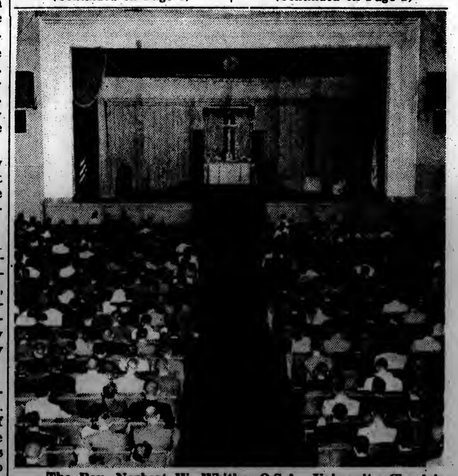
Acclaimed by Spirit Committee chairman Bruce Irving, as the "chance to show the Alumni true Villanova spirit," it will include all the activities which have become popular in recent years.

The agenda Friday night will begin with the judging of the hall decorations, this year to be done by the Intramural department.

Students will be able to vote for their choice for Villanova's 1958 Homecoming Queen tomorrow between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. in Dougherty Hall.

Five finalists will be chosen by this voting, and the queen will be selected at the Nick Basca Memorial Dance.



Donated by Alumnus

The history of hall decorations at Villanova dates back to the beginning of the Wildcat-Temple series and continues up to the present day. The award, donated each year by alumnus William Connolly, was named the Nick Basca Memorial Award after World War II in honor of the Villanova football player who lost his life in that war.

It is planned that the marching band and the fire engine, which has become an institution at Villanova rallies, will lead the judges and costumed students on their inspection of campus dorms.

After the award everyone will return to the rear of Villanova

Executive Committee Out, 'Not Practical': Scogna

By JOHN J. CURTIN
of the Villanovan Staff

The Executive Committee of the Class of 1959 has been discontinued by president Oz Scogna.

The committee established by the officers of the class in sophomore year was deemed "not practical" by Scogna, who said that it "was dropped because it, along with the Steering Committee, gave us too large a body to work with.

"In fact, it defeated the purpose of the Steering Committee."

Scogna added that the committee, which provided for all past and present class officers to be members of a special presidential advisory board, had grown "out of proportion" to the size of the class.

The class constitution provides that the president may discontinue the committee at his discretion. Ken MacGillivray was president when the group was originally formed, and it was continued last year under the regime of Vic Ludmerer.

Meeting Tomorrow

Scogna also reported that he would give a complete report on all matters to date at the class meeting tomorrow, as well as a preview of what is planned for the future.

The senior class president announced a 30-man Steering Committee last week, which, with the 17 class officers, gives the class a 47-man directing body.

Scogna said that the committee was picked by him in conjunction with the other officers, with six main points being considered: dependability, integrity, individualism, affability, experience, leadership and class popularity.

All 47 Listed

The committee is as follows: Joe Driscoll, Ben Hynes, Joe Krackeler, Bill McCann, Bob Krallinger, Bill Hixson, Joe Cooke, Greg Dean, Jack Curtin, John Fishetti, Harry Devlin, George Hare, Lou Desiderio.

Tom Brady, Mike McShea, Jim Hull, Gary Mara, Ray Lopez, Frank Lamprecht, Frank Miller, Lou Kubinac, Jim Corey, Walker Lloyd, Bob Merkert, Joe Schneider, Tony Rossi, Fred Feld, Bill Gilhool, Larry Carlin,

The other class officers, aside from Scogna, are Gene Paja, vice-president; Mike Axt, treasurer; Matt Mazza, secretary, and council representatives John Taoramino, Jim McElhenny, Joe Mason, Jack Kelley, Don Kempf, Art Greenwood, Bill Murray, Fran Pacheco, Jim McHale, Bob Wagner, Bob Murray, Bruce Irving and Gerry Hepburn.

Woody's Contract Nixed by Switch

Senior class president Oz Scogna admits he is glad he was able to move the class weekend from November to April, but says that it wiped out a lot of work.

Especially in the band department.

"I'd rather the class chose the band than just the officers and chairmen," says Scogna, "so I'm glad we have this added time, but the change sure did away with time and effort on the part of co-chairman Greg Dean."

Dean was busy all summer considering bands such as the Dorsey, McKinley, Brown, James and Heath aggregations, and even had a contract from Woody Herman at his home at the time of the change.

"While any of those bands would probably have pleased the class," said Scogna, "now we can be sure that we're going after bands the class wants by putting it up to a vote. The other way, we didn't have time to do that."

A co-chairman of the prom to work with Dean will be named in the near future. Scogna revealed that a man is under consideration, but did not release his name.

SAM First Meeting To Discuss Agenda

The Society for the Advancement of Management will conduct its first meeting of the year tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in Room 214 C&F.

The officers of SAM will discuss the agenda for the coming year, including student conference

Co-Eds Needed To Assist On LYNX Staff

The Lynx, campus literary magazine, will hold a meeting today at 3.30 in the student publications office.

Editor-in-chief Frank Dynan said the meeting will introduce the staff members who could not attend last week's session. Applications from underclassmen will be received and plans for publication will be revealed.

"All editors and managers are expected to attend this meeting, as assignments will be given out," Dynan said.

Freshmen and underclassmen are also invited to attend. Openings are still available for anyone interested in association with the magazine," Dynan continued.

Positions Available

Dynan announced that the copy, publicity and circulation staff will need aid in particular.

Discussing major problems of the Lynx, Dynan listed two; student apathy and lack of sufficient usable contributions.

"Too many students either don't know the Lynx exists, or don't care," Dynan said.

"In need of correction are certain common misconceptions about the Lynx", Dynan continued, "notably that it is strictly an Arts magazine. There is something in each issue of the Lynx appealing to all segments of the campus."

All Sections

On that subject, Dynan called for students from all sections of the undergraduate schools to attend the meeting.

He noted that "there are, surprisingly enough, opportunities for members of the fair sex on the Lynx staff.

"We have as yet to receive literary contributions from the young ladies, but nevertheless recognize that they have talents useful to the magazine.

"The girls have an excellent opportunity awaiting them in taking an active role in a strong student activity," Dynan continued, "and only their appearance at the meeting will be indicative of their willingness to work."

Council Defeats Revised Room Selection Proposal

By PAUL A. BUCKLEY
Of The Villanovan Staff

A proposed change in the method by which resident students select their rooms was defeated following a heated debate during last Wednesday's Student Council meeting.

The motion by senior Commerce and Finance resident representative Bill Murray, providing a plan whereby students would pick rooms in the order of their cumulative averages rather than by selecting numbers as in the past, was downed in a close vote.

Murray was supported in the lengthy debate by Francesco Pacheco and Pete O'Brien, while Jim Corey, Don Kempf and Bob Merkert formed the bulk of the opposition.

Murray claimed that the proposed system would supply incentive to students to work for better grades, and said that it would help to build up Villanova's academic standards. He pointed out that Georgetown and Notre Dame use the system.

'No Hypocrisy'

Corey replied that the job of the council is to reflect student views, and that they would be "hypocritical" in approaching the Administration with such a proposal without student backing.

The motion was defeated in a voice vote.

The only other debate of the evening came on a proposal by junior class president Sheldon Pollock requesting the moving of the Ring Dance to the November weekend recently vacated by the senior class.

That set off Kempf and Corey again, this time on a discussion of parliamentary procedure.

Eventually things were straightened out, and a proposal by Kempf that Pollock and the Social Affairs committee of the council get together on a discussion of the move was passed.

Hoffman Proposes

Other motions passed included two by vice-chairman Tom Hoffman. One provided for a Student Government Week on campus, and the other for the continuation of the Freshman Interview program started this year. Hoffman also presented a constitutional amendment which would change the membership of the Student Senate, to be voted upon at the next meeting.

Other important motions included two by council chairman Bob Murphy. One provided for the appointment of a committee to prepare a detailed report on the advisability of joining the National Student Association, and the other re-established the council suggestion box in Dougherty Hall.

Murphy also gave a detailed report on his trip to the National Federation of Catholic College Students' convention this summer.

The meeting lasted three and one-half hours.

Homecoming

Stadium, where a giant bonfire rally in preparation for the Detroit game will be held before the dance.

Queen Pictures Displayed

Pictures of the finalists of the Homecoming Queen contest will be on display at the dance in the lobby of the Field House. Students and their dates will vote for the queen as they arrive. The winner will be announced at the dance but her coronation will wait till the half-time ceremonies of the football game on Saturday.

A float parade through the stadium before the game will inagurate Saturday's festivities. The floats will be designed and entered by various campus organizations.

The NROTC drill team will introduce the half-time ceremonies, which will feature the crowning of the homecoming queen.

Teachers May Submit Poetry Manuscripts

Teachers and librarians are invited to submit poetry manuscripts for consideration for possible inclusion in the Annual National Teachers Anthology.

The closing date for the submission of manuscripts is Jan. 1.

Student Urged To Purchase Parents' Day Grid Tickets

Students wishing to sit with their family at the Parents' Day football game should arrange this during the week of October 13-17, Bob Wagner, parents' day committee chairman announced last week.

"Much confusion and inconvenience can be eliminated if the students purchase their parents' tickets at the same time as their own rather than having parents send their money to the athletic office", said Wagner.

"With this in mind; the athletic office will hold all money received from parents without sending out tickets," Wagner announced .

Any student who suspects that his parents have already sent their money should make this known when he makes his own reservation so that his parents may be seated with him," he added.

Tickets for parents, friends and relatives are $3. Student tickets are free, as usual.

O'Shea New Opera Society Moderator

Opera-Classica Society will present its second evening of music for this semester tomorrow at 7:30 in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The program includes Berlioz' "Symphony Fantastique" and two of Bach's "Brandenburg Concerti."

Refreshments will be served after the music program.

President Chuck Fritz, senior Finance major, has extended an invitation to all who would like to become members, and also to those who just like to listen to good music.

The other officers are Bill Bennett, junior electrical engineer, vice-president; Clem Novitsky, senior C&F, secretary, and Andy Sheehy, senior C&F, treasurer.

Dr. Robert O'Shea, of the Philosophy Department, is moderator, replacing Anthony Angeline, who has left the university.

Five Members Return To Villanovan Band

The Villanovans, campus dance band, have five men returning from the group of six which played at dances and parties last year.

A year ago the group played for the Charity Ball, the Marketing Club Dinner-Dance, the Nurses' Dinner-Dance and it was chosen to represent Villanova at a benefit show for Valley Forge Hospital.

The five returning members are Carlo LoVecchio, clarinet and the tenor saxophone; Lou Martucci, pianist; Jay McAndrews, drummer; Dick Morrison, bass fiddle and tuba, and Al Massey, trombone.

Auditions are presently being held for a trumpet player.

contest is being handled by the Spirit Committee.

Students will vote for the five finalists in the day-hop cafeteria. At the dance, students will vote for the Queen and her court as they enter.

Judge To Play

Music will be provided by Paul Judge and his orchestra. Last year he provided the music for the Ring Dance and the junior Dinner Dance. Tickets for the affairs are priced at $2.50 per couple.

Hixson announced that Joe Krackeler, senior chemical engineer, will handle the refreshments, while Ed Knepley, an electrical engineering senior and Dick Kerr, industrial administration major, designed the decorations.

The theme of the dance—which will pertain to football—will be kept secret until Friday evening.

Howard Lanin Society Band Signed For Soph Cotillion

Howard Lanin, whose society dance band has played in most of the better ballrooms in the Country, has been signed to play at the Sophomore Cotillion on Friday, Oct. 24.

Bob Queen and Mike Kuckelman, co-chairmen of the dance, inked the Lanin band last week.

Lanin, whose brother, Lester, also directs a dance band, played at Rosemont College last spring.

Bob DeLisa, president of the sophomore class, announced at the class meeting last week that the Villanovans, the campus jazz combo, will play during intermissions.

'Good People' of Both Races Vital, Says NAACP Counsel

"What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world . . ?" seems to be the meaning of this gesture by Rev. Francis X. Kelly O.S.A. delivers a sermon to male students in the Field House. Fr. Kelly conducted this year's Day of Recollection for Villanova's male students in the Field House last Thursday.

By LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE
Of The Villanovan Staff

Thurgood Marshall last week told the opening session of the third annual Villanova Law Forum that the problem of integration could only be settled by the "good people" of the South.

Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, left the solution of race problems up to "the good people, both white and Negro".

Some 450 persons, including students of law, judges, and members of the NAACP crowded their way into the freshman classroom of the law school for the radio broadcast message.

Marshall was greeted at both the end of the speech and end of the following questioning period by long applause.

Recent Action

The chief counsel outlined the recent court action involving the NACCP. He clearly explained the struggle for integration in Central High School in Little Rock.

Blaming the Little Rock situation on "a political preying on the prejudices of the people," Marshall accused Arkansas Governor Faubus of "ruining the education of both races of students at the school.

"It is now impossible for the children of Little Rock to receive college accredation," Marshall said.

"It is obvious," he continued, "that Faubus is truly hurting the youth of the state of both races who might want to continued their education."

Other Occurrences

Marshall pointed out that similiar circumstances were occurring in Virginia and West Virginia.

"The cry of the segregationists is that violence will erupt if integration is forced," the NAACP counsel continued, "but this is not the case.

"Violence only occured in Little Rock after Faubus called in troops," he added.

Praising the recent Supreme Court decision ordering immediate integration, Marshall explained that "even one minute of delay now would be unconstitutional."

Trained Lawyers

The Supreme Court decision was won by trained lawyers, he added, and the major part of the solution to the bigotry is now "up to the people.

"The good people of the South, both white and Negro, must champion the cause for racial equality. They must now realize that integration is not

Remaining Senior Pictures Taken Thursday and Friday

Senior pictures for those persons who missed the photographer in the spring will be taken Thursday and Friday Oct. 9 and 10 in the faculty lounge.

This will be absolutely the last chance to assure the appearance of seniors' pictures in the 1959 Belle Air.

Also, those dissatisfied with their first proofs may have their pictures retaken at this time.

No appointments will be necessary at this sitting. Students should come up to the second floor of Dougherty Hall at their earliest possible chance on the stated days. The photographer will be there from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. except for a short lunch period.

There is no obligation to the studio other than a fee of one dollar to pay for the picture which will go into the yearbook.

Jim Hull Named Bat. Commander

Senior Accounting major Jim Hull will be the Battalion Commander for the Villanova unit of the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps program for the 1958-59 school year.

Hull will head a battalion staff that includes four engineers and a political science major. All are seniors.

Executive Officer will be electrical engineer Joe Schneider, Operations Officer will be civil engineer Bill Lytle, Supply Officer will be electrical engineer Ed Knepley, Adjutant will be political science major Jim Corey, and Chief Petty Officer will be mechanical engineer Tom Breslin.

Company officers will be Ken MacGillivray, History major—Alpha co.; Gerry Hepburn, civil engineer—Bravo co.; John Murray, Arts major—Charlie co.

Chemistry major Bill Lovett will head the drill team.

Sophomore Blazers Fitted Next Week

Sophomores will be fitted for their blazers on October 15 and 16.

The fitting will take place on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. A ten dollar deposit must be paid at the time of fitting.

Three styles of blazers will be offered this year—the Ivy, the moderate Ivy, and the two-button.

Lennox Guest At K Of C Breakfast

Father Ludwig, O.S.A., Council, the school's Knights of Columbus council, will hold the first function in its history on Sunday when the members attend a Communion Breakfast.

The council, organized on campus last spring, will hear 9 o'clock Mass in the St. Thomas of Villanova chapel, and then drive down Lancaster Pike to Stouffer's Restaurant.

Sheriff William Lennox of Philadelphia County will be the main speaker. Guests will include Joseph McGraurey, past district deputy, who helped set up the Villanova council, and William Gallagher, present district deputy.

Dr. Eugene Powers, Dean of the night school and Grand Knight of the Father Ludwig Council, will preside, while Deputy Grand Knight Larry Carlin, senior engineer, will be master of ceremonies.

Tickets, at $2.50 apiece, are being sold by Andy Sheehy (224 Sheehan), Dr. Powers (first floor Vasey) and by all members of the executive council. They are only on sale through today.

'New Deal' For Band

"We want to put a band on the field that the students and Alumni can be proud of—but we need help to do it."

Those are the words of Ed Boucher, president of the Villanova Marching Band. Our editorial last week kicked off a drive for more membership in the band, one that upped the membership from 29 to somewhere around 40.

That's a start, but, as Boucher says, more help is needed.

It's coming from at least one quarter. The Administration, realizing that with the return-to-campus football movement an impressive band is sorely needed, has begun a drive of its own to improve Villanova's less-than-enviable position.

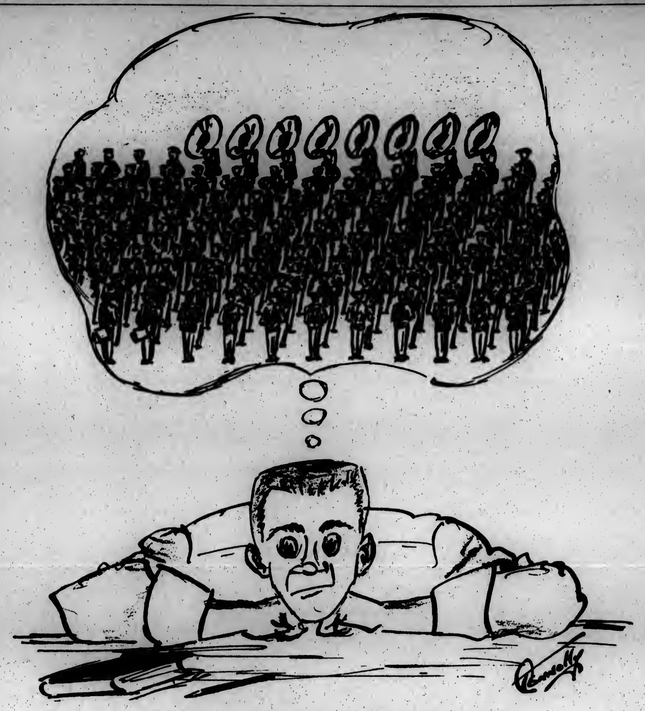
For one thing, the Rev. Henry R. Syvinski, O.S.A., has been appointed moderator of the organization, to assist faculty director Herbert Fiss in its management.

For another, the Administration has arranged with the student leaders of the band to have them submit a list of suggested improvements in the present set-up.

They will suggest such things as new uniforms, new instruments, and methods to get new members interested—and keep them interested—in the band.

In fact, it is even hoped that, within the next few years, the band will have pre-school practice to prepare for the early home football games.

Thus, it can be seen that the Administration and and the present band members are doing their part in the movement to improve the band.



That other bit of help that is so desparately needed must come from the rest of the student body, especially those who can play musical instruments. The band, just like our athletic teams, is always on public exhibition, so it too deserves the spirited acclaim of all students, but it is musicians that are needed most.

Boucher and students director Jim Hull have worked out several new formations and maneuvers for the band, but they still don't have enough members to carry out all of them.

With Homecoming this weekend, and the first Parents' Day the following one, two more home games and a proposed Army trip after that, the Villanova band still has four or five appearances at least on tap.

With men like Boucher and Hull directing them, and with the full support of the Administration, you can be sure that the band will be there to represent Villanova.

But, with the support of about 20 more members, they could go right back up to the top where they were three years ago—the best little marching band in the East.

Is It Wishful Thinking?

Letters To the Editor

To The Editor:

As Catholics, we are supposed to believe in the power of prayer, the joining of our minds with the Divine Mind of God. Yet there are some Catholics who apparently do not believe in prayer. It is disheartening and highly annoying to see people leaving church while the priest is still saying the Last Gospel.

Since when have Villanovans refused to stay for the prayers at the end of Mass ?

Knowing the danger of Communism to our way of life how can anyone refuse to stay for the prayers at the end of Mass ? To emphasize the importance and necessity for prayers to convert Russia, did not the Blessed Virgin Mary appear at Fatima and ask such prayers ?

These questions should be answered by that minority of Villanovans who were in such a rush to leave the residents Mass on our Day of Recollection last week.

The universal Church needs the active support of all her children, including those Villanovans who are truly good Catholics. Such should be every one at Villanova.

James Corey

With The Editor:

Digging through the weekly mail bag we uncovered a letter and clipping from a Villanova grad of '56 who has made good in the fourth estate.

Coincidentially, the clipping by the grad, Jack Eddinger, was from his news story in the Bethlehem, Pa. Globe-Times about of all persons—a '54 graduate, now a law student, who this past summer hitchhiked across the country.

Francis A. Cunning, 26, of Bethlehem, was the law student who traveled 3,600 miles by the cheapest form of transportation possible—his thumb.

Let's let Eddinger tell it:

Cunning dressed in old army fatigue clothing, boots, a dilepidated canvas hat and and carrying a field pack fitted with a horse-shoe roll and sleeping bag, set out from Bethlehem on June 16. He received his first ride from West Bethlehem entrance of the Lehigh Valley Thruway, where he took the first position at hand, "which wasn't the best because the passing automobiles were going 60 mph.'

He made it to Harrisburg without difficulty and from there got a ride on the Pa. Turnpike to Cleveland.

He spent the night sleeping in the back yard of a cafe after getting the owner's permission. To add to the misery of his blistered feet, it rained that night. "Well, if nothing else, it proved that my sleeping bag didn't leak. I was somewhat worried about it,' he said.

In Chicago, he stayed at the home of an Army buddy. In Milwaukee he stayed at the home of another friend where he set up his immediate base of operations, for his visits to the city's museums, galleries and impressive structures.

Arriving at his destination in Minneapolis at 2 a.m., he was unable to awaken his friends, and fearing his being devoured by a large hound, he crawled into his sleeping bag, zipped it over his head, and slept on the enclosed porch. He greeted his friend in the morning from a pile of rumpled khaki.

He rode to Sacramento with a graduate-student friend, stopping off at the Black Hills National Park in South Dakota. On the journey westward his friend slept in motels but Cunning would hear of no such softness, sleeping in roadside fields.

"It was rough," he said, "but it's economical.'

The trip from South Dakota through Wyoming to Utah's salt flats lived up to all expectations of temperature.

They drove on to Sacramento where he spent three weeks at a friend's home. They arrived in San Francisco on July 27, 32 days from Bethlemhem.

Asked whether he would attempt it again, Cunning replied, "No, traveling like this fits the old Irishman's comment on marriage, 'You don't know what true happiness is until you've married, then it's too late." —L. M. O'R.

The Most Rev. Francis J. McSorley, O.M.I., a native of Philadelphia, was consecrated Vicar Apostolic of Jolo Philippine Islands, and Titular Bishop of Sozusa in Palestine today at the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul, 20th and the Parkway.

Bishop-elect McSorley, who is 44, is a member of the Religious Congregation of the Oblates of Mary Immaculate. Before his elevation of the Episcopacy by Pope Pius XII last July 24, he served as Vicar Apostolic of Zulu, also in the Philipines.

Season Starts Slow, but:

'Goldilocks' Brightens Philly's Theatre Scene

GALLAGHER

By BILL GALLAGHER

So far, the theatre season in Philadelphia has been a disappointing one. Of the first four shows (one musical, two dramas and a comedy), only one had entertaining qualities. The musical "Goldilocks" stood far above the other three plays.

"A Swim in the Sea", the season's first drama, seemed an exercise in hysteria, blessed only by sensitive performance and an interesting central idea.

The second act of "A Hatful of Fire" bordered on soap opera so wearisome it would put housewives to an early nap. "Once More, with Feeling" is billed as a comedy. It is amazing the liberties they can take in advertising these days.

Dandy Dancing

For the second consecutive year, the first musical of the season featured memorable dancing. Agnes DeMille's contribution to "Goldilocks" is a major one. Her ballets and jazz steps show taste, inventiveness and spirit. If Walter and Jean Kerr's script could show the same qualities throughout, the show would be a great one.

Unfortunately, the slim plot slows down time and again. This is a pity, for there are very hilarious moments: a silent filmmaking sequence, sarcastically funny repartee and a final scene that is a panic.

The tale concerns a confidence man-type movie producer in days of the nickelodeons who is determined to produce the first epic. His plans become thwarted by an acid blonde that he has put under contract and by a yearling brunette who wishes she had.

Blonde Wants Out

The blonde wants to quit showbusiness to marry a millionaire. Their subsequent battles form the bulk of the plot. As every theatre goer knows, Walter Kerr is a guiding light that shines brightly as drama critic for the New York Herald Tribune.

As co-author and director of "Goldilocks", his task is to cut some twenty minutes from the plodding scenario and to be more definite in his direction. At times, Barry Sullivan, the male lead, seemed most unsure of himself (Don Ameche replaced Sullivan in Boston).

Elaine Stritch and Pat Stanley do well in their portrayals of un-cooperative star and too cooperative fledgling. Miss Stanley stopped the show on several occasions as she sang and danced the big production number "Pussyfoot" and when she began the second act with the comic ballet, "Lady in Waiting". Her performance will electrify Broadway.

Leroy Anderson's pleasant score is masterfully conducted by Lehman Engel. The settings and costuming by Peter Larkin and Castillo respectively are both effective and magnificent. Their contributions repeatedly brought deserved applause. The last scene, wherein the producer fulfills his dream of an Egyptian spectacle, drew bravos from the audience.

A Little Guy Having Fun Bags Himself A Hungry Hun

QUAGLIA

By RAY QUAGLIA

I was sitting home one day after school closed for the summer, trying to figure out whether I would wear a black Homburg or a grey one when I got to be a big lawyer, when all of a sudden I got hit by this real nostalgic mood.

I ran upstairs, grapped my crummy, stinking old pipe, put on an old wrinkled shirt and a filthy pair of tennis shoes, mussed my hair, picked up my beat copy of the "Rubaiyat of Omar Kayyam," and headed for the Pie Shop.

I sat there for about an hour, looking real intellectual, as if I was contemplating some great theory or something, when I noticed these three guys and three girls looking at me kind of weird like. I kept reading the old tentmaker half aloud, and when I was leaving, I stopped at the door and gave one of my mysterious backward glances. Boy did I really crack them up! One girl looked like she was about to do a two-and-a-half gainer into her coffy container. They thought that I was really great stuff, being a dirty looking intellectual and all.

Well anyway, I was on my way to the library to stand around outside for a while, when I saw this kid standing next to A. C. playing with a paper bag.

Attila Balls the Bag

Was he having fun! He was giggling like mad and balling that old bag up and throwing it here there and everywhere. I watched him for a while, smoking my pipe and smiling sagely, when all of a sudden, he grabbed the bag, ripped it up, spit on it, and stalked away like he was old Attila going off to chop up a few rival Huns.

Well anyway, he sat down against the building and started growling like a bear or something. I walked up to him and asked what was wrong and he said that he felt fat. I sat next to him on the grass and told him that he wasn't so very fat, because he was a pretty big guy and it didn't show much.

He smiled and said, "Do you think so?" But before I could answer his expression changed again and he told me that he was fat, and that he would always be fat, because he ate too much.

I Love Veal Cutlets

He wriggled around in front of me and yelled, "do you know what ?" "No," I said softly, "What ?' "I have a friend who's an intellectual see," he said, "and this kid is only half as big as me and looks like death warmed over." He looked away for a second and then grabbed my already wrinkled shirt and began yelling, "He's starving for the sake of knowledge when I had eight veal cutlets for supper last night! Eight stinking, lousy veal cutlets while my intellectual buddy starves! Me, who watches Wyatt Earp, and Zorro, who even bought a comic book two weeks ago, I eat eight veal cutlets and my buddy starves!" As he yelled, he accented each syllable by banging my head against the siding of the building.

I tried to calm him down and told him that he was fortunate to have had eight veal cutlets and asked him why he didn't ask his friend to have dinner with him. He looked at me with an agonizing look, stood up while still staring into my eyes, and as he backed slowly away from me he said, "That's just it. I wouldn't share those eight veal cutlets with anyone, not anyone in the world. He could starve and I'd still eat eight veal cutlets." He hung his head, put his hands in his pockets and dissappeared behind the building.

I wanted to follow the kid and be his friend, but my pipe had gone out and besides, I was already playing with his paper bag.

Support of Faubus Shows Irrationality

By JOHN P. KELLEY

The average American in these perilous times is poorly informed with regard to the affairs of his country, state, and municipality. If approached and asked who the Secretary of the Treasury is, he will proably reply with the answer — Who cares ? — or something similar.

Often public opinion in a free state is controlled by emotion rather than reason. Attitudes concerning the racial question vindicate this point. The concepts of integration and segration have a multitude of proponents. Morality and law tells us that integration is a right, while emotion causes many in the South to feel that segregation is the proper pratice.

'Awful Faubus'

Southern newspapers and officials, such as Orval Faubus, concentrate on the emotions of their followers rather than their rationality. These people in turn influence their neighbors and generate irrational opinion and action. The result of this is catastrophic—breeding hate of the United States throughout the world.

We, as Villanova students, should take the time to analyze both domestic and international affiars. By doing so, we educate ourselves and carry out our duty as good Americans. It is we who are supposed to be part of the intelligentia of public opinion.

'95% of Russian People Oppose the Soviet System'

"We must realize that the Soviet government does not represent the will of the Russian people," said Dr. Victor Krupitsch, a native-born Russian, in a recent interview with a member of the Villanovan staff.

"95% of the people are opposed to the soviet system of government, but under the new system of Kruschev's regime and its heavy pressure, they can do do nothing to help themselves."

"The Russian people are the real victims of Communism—not the free world."

Dr. Krupitsch, who is among the newly appointed faculty members of Villanova, was born and educated to the high school level in Central Russia. During the second World War, he fled to Germany because of a wave of political unrest which relocated his entire home town and sent his father to a Siberian slave camp.

Low Level Talk

He remained in Germany along with thousands of other Russians until the war was ended. There was an obvious hint of pity for his fellow countrymen in his voice as D. Krupitsch related that the majority of Russians in Germany after the war were forced to return to their home country. He was one of the fortunate few who were allowed to enter the United Sates.

Dr. Krupitsch is sure that the U. S. could come to some peaceful settlement with Russia, if it could bypass the state and deal directly with the Russian people.

"Above all, we must have faith in the Russian people," he said. "We must be prepared to deal with a bivalue country; the Soviet Russia that would dominate the entire world, and the people's old Russia, the country that they love so well."

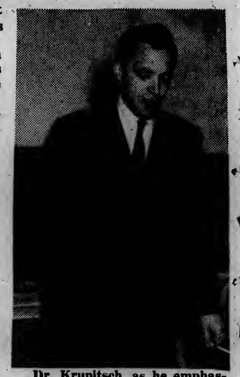
36 Hour School Week

When asked to comment on the Russian school system, Dr. Krupitsch said, "In the Russian middle school (high school), there is a very rigid static program. The student has no choice of courses and there is no advancement of an unqualified student. If he fails a course, he repeats the course."

Dr. Krupitsch continued by saying, "The Russian school week is six days, approximately six hours a day, with the emphasis being placed on practical subjects which are taught in an objective manner. Two hours of the school week is alloted for compulsory military training and youth of 12 years of age spend some time in government sponsored calisthenics classes with an eye to the military.

"Every able bodied person must spend at least two years in the Red army, and there are no qualified college R.O.T.C.'s; rather the officer candidates go to special government institutions."

Stress Liberal Arts



When asked if he felt that the Russian schools were superior to our own in the scientific fields, and whether enough stress was placed on scientific education in this country, Dr. Krupitsch said; "Stress must not only be placed upon science, but upon spiritual needs also. Scientists with no spiritual training are not fully competent; they become more machine than man."

"Your country needs more emphasis on the Liberal Arts—on the nature of man. The spiritual interest must be made just as attractive as the scientific interest. The knowledge that our scientific achievement lies in knowing more about God and his works will give our scientists an advantage unattainable by those under an atheistic form of government."

Dr. Krupitsch received his Ph.D from the University of Penn. and taught at the University of Michigan before coming to the Villanova faculty. Besides Russian, English and Slovac, he is also proficient in the Greek and German languages.

Russian Studies A Must

Remarking upon the ability of American students to grasp the Russian language, he said, "My previous students at the University of Michigan corresponded with me in Russian, and with few mistakes. Russian is not difficult; people see the alphabet is different and immediately conclude that the language is hard to master.

Dr. Krupitsch, as he emphasizes the necessity of a spiritual goal in modern science.

He also advocates increased emphasis on the study of the economic and social history of Russian and its literature, as well as the Russian language. Dr. Krupitsch feels that a large part of the inadequecy of our dealing with Russia has resulted from lack of knowledge in these fields.

"Communism as conceived in Russia today is a new thing; history cannot cope with it. When a new disease becomes prevalent you must study it intensely in order to combat it."

The Cruel World Crushes The Idealist's Illusions

College is a funny thing. It's here where a pimply faced kid is made ready for the world. It's here where myths are shattered and the boy forms a cocoon of disbelief until he can face reality as a man.

I met a guy in a bar this summer. We started to talk about college. He was on the G. I. bill and was at a neighboring college whose symbol is a big bird. College was a step down for him. He had been in the World War II; Iwo Jima in fact.

Were You A Flag Guy ?

"Hey that must have been something," I said.

"Yeh!" he turned to his glass and said no more.

"There isn't a chance that you are one of the guys on the flag. You know, those guys who raised the flag like John Wayne, and all ?"

"No, but I was there. I watched."

"From a bunker ?"

"No, I just stood and watched."

"You had guts."

"No, I was carrying the flashbulbs."

"Yeh but you could have been shot."

"No the area was clear."

"Yeh but . . . "

"Listen you dumb punk, can't you get it straight? It was a posed picture. There was nobody around. It took a half hour to get it right."

"You liar!" I yelled.

"Well then tell me this. Since when does it take five guys to put up a skinny little pole ?"

"It could have been heavy."

Sniff, Muddy Posers!

"It was hollow aluminum so they wouldn't get tired posing. We threw mud on them five minutes to make 'em look just right. Came up good on panchromatic #3."

"Yeh but how about their faces,—you don't pose that."

"We asked the commander for five of his most haggard looking men."

"Well, maybe that picture was posed, but there must have been a real flag planting in combat. That's traditional."

"Actually, one of the captains did have a flag, one of those 25c ones. He stuck it in the ground after the battle was over."

I had had enough. I was older and wiser already. I finished my drink and started to leave. He yelled at me as I left, "guess what else ?" I didn't want to hear, but what could I do. "Eisenhower kicks his balls out of sand traps!" "You bar scum!" I yelled back through tears.

So here I am now, clutching my shattered nalvite to my sobbing breast. I keep looking from my window down to Goodreau Stadium and wondering if that was really West Chester we beat. I have been poisoned.

Is Our Campus Doomed To Thirst?

By SHELL E. KEATS

As I passed Mendel Hall on the way to my last class, I heard a profane outburst coming from the Hall's Bubble room. My natural curiosity made me investigate the cause of the picturesque cursing. I entered and found a workman stymied in his efforts to repair the milk machine. With him was a repairman from the telephone company.

I asked the cause of the trouble and received the reply, "Some damn kid tried to beat the thing again."

"Does this happen often?" I asked.

The Bugs Use Slugs

"It doesn't happen much, but we get more calls to come here than anywhere else. Most of the calls are because someone tampered with the machine or tried to use a slug."

By this time the machine was working again, but not before an expensive part had been replaced,—a part ruined by someone trying to use a slug. I then noticed a heavy padlock in addition to the lock contained in the machine. I asked jokingly, "Are locks like this used as standard equipment?"

No! A Robbin' Robin

He seriously replied, "No, the lock was put on since the machine was robbed."

"Was the thing robbed by someone here?"

He turned away laughingly saying, "No-one knows who hit it, but the school paid us back."

As I moved on toward class I realized that the repairman had used "kids" to describe some of students here. I guess he was right.

Campus Cans Classics 'Cause Fencing Failed

by Don Kempf

"One need be neither an adept tennis player nor skilled in the art of fencing in order to be a member of the Opera-Classica Society."

As this startling and fateful announcement was being whispered through the halls of the numerous campus buildings —spreading like wildfire from Villanovan to Villanovan; a tall, lean figure, clad in an overcoat with upturned collar and wearing a concealing hat, stepped out of the darkness of his basement office and into the light—never again to return. And the door swung closed on the darkness.

Strange as it may seem, that very same night a few students who had gathered together for discussion in a dimly lit room in Sullivan Hall, were bemoaning the fact that the "fencing and tennis playing" clause was being dropped by the Opera-Classica Society.

Foil Is Foiled

They were not members of the Society—nay, they were not even prospective members. And yet these few bemoaned the passing of "the clause;" for even as the orders for foils and racquets were being cancelled, they could read the handwriting on the walls.

For these were the anti-intellectuals, the conformists—or so they fashioned themselves (but perhaps they were not)—and they took this simple statement as a prophecy of things to come. Victory, they felt, was theirs. Why, they did not know. But they knew that victory was now a matter of time alone. And they were sad in their victory.

The Name's the Same, But . . .

Oh, there were Opera-Classica posters on the bulletin boards this year—but they were not the same. They may have looked the same: but they were not.

In spite of the "circumstances hampering our first concert," the facts remain that less than fifteen members were present.

All is doomed and there is no hope—save in the flickering light burning in the eyes of a distant figure carrying a copy of Plato's Dialogues under one arm and an Iroquois Indian War Chant recording in the other.

—Perhaps this light is enough.

Literary Club To Meet In Library Thursday Night

The Villanova Literary Club will hold its initial meeting of the year in the Library, seminar two, Thursday night at 7 o'clock.

President Jack Curtin announced that the meeting will be a short business gathering to take account of the membership and to formulate plans for the coming year.

He added that all members, new and old, are welcome to attend the meeting.

The Literary Club was formed two years ago by a group of English majors as a sounding board for the intellectual ideas among the student body in the fields of literature and drama. The organization hears prominent speakers, conducts group discussions and runs symposiums in conjuction with other colleges in the area.

The other officers of the club are Tom McKenna, vice-president; Paul Buckley, secretary, and Larry O'Rourke, treasurer. All the officers are senior English majors.

Raymond Burns, of the English department, is moderator.

Physics Institute Meets on Thursday

The Villanova chapter of the American Institute of Physics, formerly the Physics Club, will hold its initial meeting of the new semester on Thursday morning at 10:30 in the Physics Lab (405 Mendel).

The purpose of this meeting will be to welcome new members and to discuss the plans for the coming year.

Events of past years have included field trips to near-by industries, guest speakers and talks by participating members.

Technical Positions Open in Government

The U. S. Civil Service Commission has recently announced the availability of several technological positions in various federal agencies in Washington, D. C., and throughout the United States, as well as some overseas areas.

Applications for these positions will be accepted until further notice and must be filed with the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. C. Application forms may be obtained from the Commission's Washington office.

Persons appointed to these positions, which have a salary range from $4,980 to $12,770 a year, will administrate or supervise the performance of work of an applied technological nature.

Hi-Fi Music Show

The 1958 Philadelphia High Fidelty Music Show will be held at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, Friday through Sunday, under the sponsorship of the Institute of High Fidelity Manufacturers.

Belle Masque Practice

What apears to be pre-exam cramming or an English seminar, is really the cast of Belle Masque's next presentation, "Tiger at the Gates" by Christopher Fry, reading their lines. Scheduled for the Field House from Nov. 5 through Nov. 8, the play is under the direction of Richard L. Duprey, head of the graduate department of Theatre Arts.

Foreign Students Get Special English Course

A course devoted exclusively to foreign students has been introduced by the English Department.

To be taught by Dr. Leo Fittabile, assistant professor of English, it is designed to improve the foreign student's knowledge of the English language.

Department Lists New Courses

Villanova this year has inaugurated three new courses in the Philosophy department curriculum.

For the first time in the University's history it will be possible to obtain a master's degree in Philosophy. A graduate school in philosophy was inaugurated during the summer and will continue during the regular school year.

Rev. Father Robert P. Russell, O.S.A., department head, also announced three new courses in the undergraduate school.

They are the Life and Writings of St. Thomas Acquinas, Modern Philosophy, and The Writings of Aristotle.

New C & F Library To Open Next Semester; Mrs. Miriam Milligan Appointed Head

The new library on the third floor of the new Commerce and Finance building will be opened by next semester the Rev. Joseph Bartley, Dean of the C. and F. school announced recently.

The highly technical library, open to C. and F. majors only, will have seating capacity for over fifty students.

Mrs. Miriam Milligan, formerly of the University of Pennsylvania and the Philadelphia Art Alliance, has been named head librarian.

She will be assisted by the library Committee, composed of C. and F. faculty, in the operation of the facilities.

The basement of the new school houses a self-service cafeteria with menus offering the student anything from beef stew to ice cream, all dispensed from modern vending machines.

A restful atmosphere is offered the student whether he is eating, studying, or listening to Beethoven's sixth symphony that emanates from the juke box.

On the ground floor is found the 2500 lockers that are available to C. and F. day-hop students. Classroom sizes vary from the huge lecture halls seating over 150 to the small discussion rooms with a capacity of 30.

These features will offer the students the most adequate facilities conducive to scholarship found on the East Coast, Father Bartley said.

Planned to alleviate the crowded conditions in the Dougherty Hall cafeteria, the new Commerce and Finance Building cafeteria has recently opened. It features self service machines and a juke box.

Eng. Profs Edit Lit. Anthology

Two associate professors of the Villanova English department have recently edited an anthology of world literature.

"Rendezvous, A Prose Reader," edited by the Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A. and Prof. Joseph W. Ratigan has been included in this year's English curriculum. It is the first book ever to be produced by members of the English department.

Meant to be an introduction to literature, its contents range from essays on people, places and events to articles on art, and representative short stories.

Some 80 percent of the literature, which is ageless and countryless, has never before been anthologized. None of the art work has ever appeared before in a volume of this kind.

"We, the editors, have tried to collect prose units which are readable, informative and pertinent to literature study," Ratigan said. "I believe that the book is a pleasant mixture of literature and art."

Tom Peretti Aids NFCCS Committee

Tom Peretti, junior political science major, has been appointed as vice-chairman of the NFCCS Philadelphia Regional Student Government Commission it was announced by Jerry McGrath, chairman of the commission.

McGrath further stated that on Thursday there would be a meeting of all those interested in working on the commission at 10:30 in the Student Activities room, the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

Last Sunday, at the regional council held at Gwynedd Mercy Junior College, a tentative program for the commission was released.

Marshall

only a responsibility but a moral duty," Marshall said.

During a question and answer period following the address, Marshall called the "residential segregation of the North" one of the NAACP's major concerns.

"The same people who denounce segregation in the South refuse to practice integration in their own neighborhoods," he continued.

"But the recent law passed in New York state will prove a strong weapon against residential segregation," he added.

Forbids Discrimination

Marshall referred to the recent state bill which forbade sale or rental of public or private property because of race.

A similar bill has been introducted in City Council in Philadelphia by Councilman Marshall Shepherd.

The NAACP lawyer told one law student that contray to charges made by some Southern attorneys, the 14th amendment was validly ratified by the necessary number of states.

"I can assure you," Marshall added, "that NAACP lawyers have carefully studied all the aspects of the case."

First Speaker

The chief counsel was the first speaker in a series of six to be given this year at the law forum.

Law Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein said the series is designed primarily for the benefit of law school students, but the general public is generally invited to attend.

The series was planned this year by William B. Ball, of the law school faculty.

Richard Avil To Moderate AIEE-IRE

John B. Clothier, chairman of the Electrical Engineering department, has resigned as moderator of AIEE-IRE.

Clothier was succeeded as moderator by Richard D. Avil, professor of Electrical Engineering.

Several other AIEE-IRE announcements were made at a meeting last week.

John Dougherty, of the Philadelphia Electric Co., will adress the membership tonight at 7.30 in room 215 Mendel Hall on "Direct Current Transmissions".

National Frat

Chairman Bob Merkert announced that it "seems likely that the national electrical engineering frat, Eta Kappa Mu, will have a chapter on campus next year".

Merkert also listed three other chairmen to aid in AIEE-IRE planning.

Ed Coccogna is to organize field trips, John Avil will arrango for evening speakers while Jim McCullough will head the recently formed athletic leagues.

Field Trip

A field trip has been planned to Cromley power station and Plymouth Meeting substation of the Philadelphia Electric Co. on October 16. There are 60 tickets available and they will be issued first to seniors, Merkert said.

The society's bi-weekly paper. The Circuit, came out with the first edition recently. Editors are Charlie Kallfely, Ted Leddy and Jim Fitzsimmons.

Phi Kappa Pi Receives 50% Of Inter-Frat Ball Profits

Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering fraternity, received more than 50 per cent of the profits from the Inter-Fraternity Ball, General Chairman Jack Curtin announced today.

Curtin, representing the Arts and Sciences' Liberal Arts fraternity, reported that PKP sold 220 of the 405 tickets sold by four fraternities, and that over $600 in profit would be turned over to the fraternity under the percentage system set up early in September.

Delta Pi Epsilon, Commerce and Finance fraternity, was second in ticket sales; while DPM and Lambda Kappa Delta, the pre-medical organization, followed in order.

The dance was held Sept, 26, with almost 500 couples in attendance. Al Raymond and his orchestra supplied the music.

Aside from Curtin, other chairmen were Irv Keller, LKD—decorations; Ron Zurinskas, DPE—tickets and publicity, and John Dinneen, PKP—special plans.

Stacks Stay Closed Says Fr. Falvey

The Rev. Daniel Falvey, O.S.A., Villanovan librarian, confirmed last week that the library stacks will be closed permanently.

Closing the stacks, which has been under consideration for three years, is the result of the abuse of library privileges by a minority of the students, Falvey said.

"I am convinced the ideal way of running an educational library is to have open stacks," Father Falvey continued. "It is better not only for the faculty and students, but also for the library staff, however, experience has proven that a small percentage of selfish students make this impractical.

The Librarian agreed that the new system prevents browsing but on the other hand, serious students will benefit in the long run.

"Students who have long overdue books may deposit them in the slot circulation desk," he added. "No questions will be asked and a credit will be made at the business office if one is due."

Chicago, Ill.-(I.P.) Outside employment has a definite effect on college students' grades.

Students working more than 12 hours a week have somewhat lower grades than those working fewer hours or not at all, it was revealed in a survey conducted at Illinois Institute of Technology.

Poetry Group Wants 'Scripts

The National Poetry Association has announced its annual competition for senior and junior college students.

The closing date for the submission of manuscripts is Nov. 5.

Any student is eligible to submit his verse. There is no limitation as to form or theme. Shorter works are preferred by the board of judges, because of space limitations.

Each poem must be typed or printed on a separate sheet, and must bear the name and home address of the student, as well as the name of the college attended.

There are no fees or charges for the acceptance or submission of verse. All work is judged on merit alone.

Manuscripts should be sent to the National Poetry Association, 3210 Selby Avenue, Los Angeles 34, California.

All students who are citizens of the United States are reminded that they are required by law to register for the draft within five days after they reach their 18th birthday.

Day students who commute to Villanova should report to their local Selective Service board for registraton.

Nothing satisfies like the
BIG CLEAN TASTE OF TOP-TOBACCO

REGULAR KING

Senior PLC's Bob Redpath (l) and Joe Mason (r) seem to be in the custody or representatives of the Philadelphia Officer Selection Office prior to being led to the brig at Quantico. Redpath and Mason spent twelve weeks at Quantico this summer to obtain a USMC commission through the Platoon Leaders Class. Having successfully completed the course, both will be commissioned this June at graduation.

Platoon Leaders Program:

Marine Corps Officers Seek Candidates In Dougherty Hall Interview Series

Marine Corps personnel engaged in officer selection are seeking candidates for the Marine Corps' P.L.C. program in Dougherty Hall through Friday.

P.L.C.—Platoon Leaders Class—is a program designed by the Marine Corps exclusively for freshmen, sophomores, and juniors in college, enabling them to secure a commission in ground or aviation without interfering with studies.

No drills or military science classes are required during the school year; all training is completed during the summer months.

Freshmen and sophomores take their training in two six-week periods at Quantico, Va., while juniors must complete their training in one twelve-week stretch.

Study History

At Quantico the student is instructed in military history, customs of the services, small unit tactics, care and use of the M1 rifle and leadership.

In keeping with the Corps' tradition of building men, an important part of the summer is physical training, including marches into the field where combat exercises are held.

Upon successful completion of the 12 weeks training, and graduation from college, the graduates will be commissioned as second lieutenants and must serve three years active duty and three years active reserve.

While in training, candidates may choose aviation provided they meet the requirements. If aviation is chosen, the new officer will be sent to Pensacola, Fla., for flight school. If ground duty is requested, they will attend Basic School at Quantico.

'C' Average Needed

To be eligible for P.L.C. students must be U.S. citizens between the ages of 17 and 26, in sound physical and mental health, a member of an accredited college or university, and not majoring in medicine, dentistry, veterinary medicine, pharmacy, music, art, or theology. In addition he must maintain a "C" average in school.

The officer selection teams will answer any question and fill in details of the program. Current members of P.L.C. are welcome to discuss their problems with them.

Civil Service Co. Schedules Exam

The Civil Service Commission has begun accepting applications for its Federal Service Entrance Examination to be held on November 15.

The Exam, which is administered to junior, senior and graduate students, is conducted in order to obtain college caliber students for top government jobs.

Salaries of these employees have been raised, and a candidate who is accepted may earn from $4,040 to $5,985 a year. Exceptionally qualified persons are desired, and a bonus will be paid for them.

Approximately 5,000 applicants are accepted annually. Additional test dates are scheduled monthly through May, 1959, the tests to be given at over 1,000 places throughout the country.

Additional information may be obtained from the Villanova placement office or by writing the U.S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D.C.

Dr. McClain Announce Biology Lecture Series

Dr. John A. McClain, head of the Biology Department has announced a series of lectures given in conjunction with a the National Science Foundation In-Service Course in Biology.

Dr. L. V. Heilbrum, Professor of Zoology at the University of Pennsylvania, distinguished physiologist, teacher, and lecturer, spoke at the first of these lectures last Saturday.

Modern stainless steel commutor trains are now operating on the Pennsylvania Railroad's Main Line to Paoli. The cars, designed and built by the Budd Co. of Philadelphia, are being considered by the PRR to replace the older cars now in regular service.

Indians Beat U. S. Gyrenes To Quantico

Centuries ago, Powhatan Indians in Virginia settled at a river landing they called Quantico, meaning "by the long stream."

During the Revolution, this secluded settlement on the broad Potomac River served as a port for our "Potomac Navy," which raised havoc with enemy coastal operations.

In 1917, the Commandant of the Marine Corps chose the site as a training area, established a permanent post there the following year.

Today, this historic town is the location of the United States Marine Corps Schools, where all future Marine officers receive their training.

Each summer, thousands of U. S. college men are selected to go to Quantico, as candidates in the Marine officer training program known as the Platoon Leaders Class. Training during the two summer sessions of six weeks each is exacting and rugged. PLC (as they are called) learn the rudiments of leadership, gain proficiency in the science of military tactics, marksmanship and amphibious operations.

Quantico is a vast proving ground for leadership, where officers are made, trained—and tested.

Semper Fidelis Society Holds Meeting Thurs.

A re-organization meeting of the campus Semper Fidelis Society will be held 10:30 A.M. tomorrow, at Barry Hall.

Proposed topics of discussion include the annual dinner-dance to be held early in November, and the Quantico-Villanova game in which campus Marines may help in welcoming the Leathernecks.

Scientists Say, 'Lie Down And Think Imaginatively'

Scientists probing the mysteries of the human brain at various colleges and universities have come up with some surprising new conclusions, reports the October Reader's Digest.

Among the findings were the facts that it is as easy to think hard as not to think at all. The scientists also discovered that the individual thinks more imaginatively when lying down and more forcefully when standing.

Most startling was the fact that how much you talk to yourself is probably the most accurate measure of your intelligence.

Dr. Hugo Beigel of Long Island University tested subjects in different postures. He discovered thinking is more complacent lying down. Associations are freer, ideas have wider range. Stand up, and thinking becomes energetic; decisions come faster.

A University of Massachusetts psychology professor suggests that the extent of our "conversations" with ourselves may determine how intelligent we are. Verbal cues are commonplace, he says though they may not be audible. How much we use those cues influence the extent of our learning and the power of our reasoning.

Ever feel tense while studying? You should, says a Lehigh University psychologist. He found that during concentrated mental effort, tensions flow over the muscular system in waves.

That should come as no surprise to anyone who's ever crammed for examinations.

The brain of the average human male weights 1,400 grams, or 49.3 ounces, according to the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology. The average female brain weights 125 grams less.

Dr. Cressman Attends SEA Conference

"A devoted teacher receives double pay—he not only receives his salary but also the satisfaction and pride of a job well done."

This was the key-point of a speech given by Doctor Fred W. Bryan, at the third annual Allenberry Work Conference for the Student Education Association of Pennsylvania at Boiling Springs on Sept. 27.

Dr. George R. Cressman, moderator, and John F. O'Donnell, president of the Villanova Chapter and vice-president of the Southeastern District, were delegates at the Conference.

"Our teaching positions are being filled but we have a crying need for devoted master teachers. The road to becoming a good teacher, traveler alone, is difficult. But with the help of good teachers and a strong professional organization, the way can be made interesting and successful," advised Dr. Bryan.

The meetings were sponsored by the SEAP-PFTA Committee of the Pennsylvania State Education Association and were designed to make student programs in SEAP chapters more effective and functional.

Chemistry Dept. Will Hold Seminars

The Chemistry Department will conduct a series of seminars beginning on Oct. 15 and continuing on each succeding Wednesday.

The programs will feature several speakers of renown from the field of chemistry.

Dr. George N. Quam, head of the department, urges all interested students to attend.

Nursing Division Receives $15,000

Villanova's School of Nursing has been awarded a grant of $15,000 for the inclusion of a course in mental health in the Nursing program.

This was announced recently by Sister Mary Alma, C.M., head of the Nursing Division. The grant is primarily a teaching grant to enable collegiate schools of nursing to include courses in phychiatry in the study program.

It is believed that through such a teaching program the student will better understand the emotional aspects of health and illness.

The grant will be used for the employment of a mental health consultant and other lecturers needed to enrich the program in mental health.

Belle Masque Has Major Cast Change

Belle Masque moved into its second week of rehearsal today "Tiger at the Gates" by announcing a major cast change. Barbara Burke of Immaculata College, has succeeded Peggy Brown, of Rosemont College in the role of Andromache.

Before the change, Miss Brown was assistant stage manager and understudy.

The society also announced that it has added an additional day of playing time. It will run now till November 9.

Alphabet For Blind Has Only Six Dots

The famous alphabet of the blind, designed by Louis Braille, is composed of only six dots, reports October's Reader's Digest.

The many different symbols, 63 in all, are formed from different combinations of these. Applications of this to modern living include Braille labels on canned good and a Braille cookbook.

The world's largest publishing house for the sightless is the American Printing House for the Blind in Lexington, Kentucky.

Stamp Campaign Aids Seminarians

A term-long drive on campus to collect used postage stamps for the seminarians has been announced by Bill Hixson, president of the Sanctuary Society. He appointed Joe Cacciola, chairman of the drive.

In previous years the collection of stamps has netted amounts in the thousands of dollars, providing tuition money for seminarians in need.

Cacciola said that if possible boxes would be placed on every floor, in every hall, on campus. It is requested that students tear the cancelled stamps from their letters and drop them in the boxes. Foreign and high denomination stamps are especially valuable.

Red Mass of Holy Spirit Opens Law School Year

On Monday the School of Law marked the opening of the new academic year with the celebration of the traditional votive Mass of the Holy Spirit.

It is known as the Red Mass from the fact that red vestments are worn by the celebrant and ministers and also because the English judges attended in their scarlet robes.

The date selected marked the opening of the new term of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The Celebrant was the Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President. The Deacon was Rev. Robert E. Regan, O.S.A., chairman of the Department of Religion, and lecturer in Ethics in the law school.

The Subdeacon was Rev. Robert P. Russell, O.S.A., chairman of the Department of Philosophy. The preacher was Rev. Thomas J. Welsh, J.C.D., a member of the Metropolitan Tribunal, Archdiocese of Philadelphia.

The music for the Mass was sung by the Villanova Singers under the direction of Herbert Fiss. Law Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein was at the organ.

Members of the bench and bar and the public were in attendance.

Research, Novice Groups Inaugurated By Debaters

"The key words this year are expansion and improvement, expansion of the societies program and improvement of the program", says James Corey, president of Beta Gamma Debating Society.

At the society's initial meeting this year, Corey welcomed the new additions to the society and outlined the program for the year.

Featured in the "new" Beta Gamma were the formation of a research committee headed by Joseph Remy, sophomore chemistry major, and a novice committee under the co-chairmanship of Leo Burke, senior I. A. major and Thomas Pfieffer, junior chemistry major.

New Officers

Corey introduced the officers for the year. John Serafin, senior History major, will serve as vice-president, Oz Scogna, senior Accounting major, recording secretary; Frank Cunningham, senior Political Science major, corresponding secretary, and Dom Costa, junior Arts, treasurer.

It was announced by Corey at the meeting that the society has received a bid to the Johns Hopkins debate tournament.

This tournament features teams from many prominent Eastern colleges.

Last year, Beta Gamma posted a record of 63 wins and 27 losses in intercollegiate competition. In tournament competition, the society received a first place verdict at Swarthmore, a second place at Brown and a third place at Kings College.

First Trophy

The Kings tournament marked the society's first trophy in competition.

There are still a few positions available on the research committee, Corey said. Applicants will be interviewed at a meeting tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. at 104 Vasey Hall.

Joe Krackeler Named Chairman In Phi Kappa Pi

Joe Krackeler, senior Chemican Engineering major, has been named head of the executive committee of the Phi Kappa Pi Fraternity.

Joe Driscoll, senior Mechanical Engineering major, who is the newly elected president of the frat, made the announcement.

Other officers of the frat are Committeemen Jim Woodward, Ed Condon, Joe Corcoran, Bill Christman, and Leo Rudegaire.

The junior members of the committee are Paul Kuhn, Jim Foley, Mike Marinak, and Vince Cuczella.

Sophomores on the board are Paul Crawford, John Oberlies, Dick Fiorelli, and Brian Scully.

John Dinneen has drawn up plans for a float in the homecoming parade before the Detriot game Kackeler announced

The 1958-59 officers are president Joe Driscoll, vice-president George Fraunces, secretary Bill Smith, treasurer Lee Christenson, sergeant at arms Stan Cieslelski, and student council representative John Dinneen.

Security Agency Lists Dec. Tests

The National Security Agency, a part of the intelligence system of the Federal Government, has scheduled a Professional Qualification Test to be given at 78 schools on Dec. 6.

The test has been especially constructed to supplement other available information of prospective candidates.

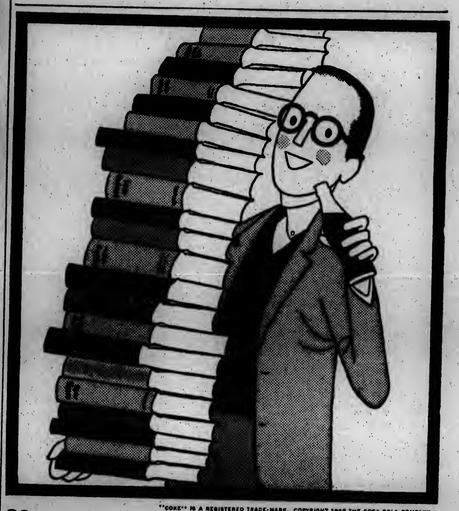
The National Security Agency can utilize majors from many diverse fields. Any native-born citizen of the United States who is a holder of, or at least a candidate for, a bachelor's degree is eligible to take the test.

Interested students should complete applications and send them to the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N. J. Further information and applications may be obtained from the Placement Office.

The Villanova Health Service urges all students to get their complete set of polio shots. The shots can be gotten at any time in the infirmary for $1.

Seven VU Nurses At Valley Forge

Seven Villanova senior nurses now studying at the Valley Forge Hospital in Phoenixville, Pa., are the first such group from a nursing school which has been allowed the use of the hospital's modern facilities.



The girls are using the special clinics, the occupational and physiotherapy departments and others which are included in the curriculum of the Senior Medical-Surgical Seminar.

During the summer, the girls, along with similar groups from Georgetown University and Washington Missionary College, received training in tuberculosis training at Glenn Dale, Md., Hospital.

The hospital, run under the auspices of the District of Columbia, reserves its program for the collegiate basic degree schools.

Ellen Stewart, Regina Bausher, Susan Simmons, Rosalie Ghilardi, Joanne Zaremba, Barbara May and Mary Esther Screen were the Villanova nurses.

The LYNX, Villanova's literary magazine, needs contributions from student writers. If you have written any essays, short stories, or poetry please submit them to Frank Dynan or Bill Christy in the student publications office, or to the faculty moderators in the English office. All undergraduate students are eligible.

Unknown Graduate Funds Listed In New Directory

Complete information on how to obtain graduate study funds, ranging from $200 up to $10,000, is now available in the second volume of the WORLD-WIDE GRADUATE AWARD DIRECTORY.

Over 250 universities and foundations from almost every State, and over 100 foreign universities have sent information to be included in this new volume.

Among the awards are many that have gone begging in former years because qualified applicants didn't know about them. This guide to graduate study awards is published annually by The Advancement and Placement Institute to provide the needed communication link between administrators of assistance programs and potential candidates.

Current information about the fellowships, assistantships, scholarhips, loans, prizes, and self-help programs includes candidates' pre-requisites, place of application and descriptions of the study programs.

Copies of both volumes of the WORLD - WIDE GRADUATE AWARD DIRECTORY may be ordered from the Institute, Box 99H, Greenpoint Station, Brooklyn 22, N. Y. The price is $3.00 for each volume or $5.00 for the two volumes.

Freshmen Get Chance To Lose "Regs"

Muff Day—the day when the frosh presently undergoing the rigors of orientation get their chance to get rid of the "Regs" —will be held next Wednesday, Oct. 15, instead of Tuesday, as announced previously. The events will begin at 3:30.

If the freshmen defeat the sophomores in the athletic events scheduled, they will no longer have to wear their "Regs". If the frosh lose to the sophs, they must wear the beanies, et al for a certain period thereafter.

The athletic events scheduled are a tug of war, egg toss, hula hoop, push ball, foul shooting, horseshoes, three legged racing, football pass and punt, standing broad jump, golf drive, 220 yard dash, 100 yard dash, and a touch football game.

All sophomores except the varsity athletes are eligible to compete. Those interested should see Bob Scalia, Room 32, Sullivan Hall.

The word "Muff" stands for "Move up forward freshmen." The day of athletics has traditionally marked the finish of the freshmen's initiation into the university.

Anything Can Happen

By JACK CURTIN
Of The Villanovan Staff

The thing that makes Villanova's athletic teams so interesting is their unpredictability. In the short period of time that we have been thriving on a steady diet of Wildcat performances, we have always been amazed at the Main Liners' complete reversals of form at various points during the season.

Take last year's football team for example. On paper, they were great. Before every game, they were acclaimed as a top-notch unit, capable of crushing any of their opponents. During the game, more often than not, they pushed their opposition all over the field. After the game, their foes generally called them "one of the best teams we ever played against." No doubt about it, they were one of the finest grid teams that Villanova has ever been able to field in many a year.

And yet they lost with such consistency that it is a tribute to coach Frank Reagan's excellent physical condition that he didn't emerge from the season as only a shattered remnant of what he once was.

Or how about the basketball team of last year? The same hoopsters that were deprived of an upset over the top team in the nation, West Virginia, by the wrongest call that any referee has made in the history of sport, could finish in a last-place tie in the city. A tie with a mediocre University of Pennsylvania team which, man for man, didn't belong on the same court with them.

Even the track team, which reached a level over the past two years that no other collegiate unit will approach for quite a while, always had its dark moments. The Milrose Games in particular always seemed to spell disaster for the Wildcats, whether in the person of a mile relayer who fell flat on his face and dropped the Main Liners right out of the race or in Don Bragg, one of the greatest collegiate pole-vaulters of all time, missing three consecutive times at 13'6". Only the fabulous Ron Delany was able to escape that jinx.

Or there was last season's baseball team, which started out like a house afire, then stumbled through a prolonged losing streak to eke its way into the NCAA finals. And what happened? Despite a masterful pitching performance by Bob Kropiewnicki, the Wildcats lost in the first round—on a passed ball in the ninth inning!

Now a new year is under way, and heaven only knows what's in store for the Wildcats this time out. That's why last Saturday's upset over Boston College came as no real surprise to the upperclassmen. Nor did the trouncing by Virginia Military Institute two weeks ago. They were startling perhaps, but not surprising—not on your life. You can't be surprised when you've learned never to expect the probable.

So we've got a bit of advice for the incoming frosh. Take pride in your athletic teams. Cheer them. Defend them against attacks. But don't bet on them. This is Villanova, where anything can happen.

And it will.

NOTE TO ALL YANKEE FANS—In case you haven't noticed, fellows, if the Yanks lose their year's World Series—and they will—it will mark the third time In four years that the supposedly invincible Bombers have gone down for the count against the National League's best. Without anyone's really having noticed, Casy Stengel's paid warriors have let the coveted "best team in baseball' title slip right through their money-soiled fingers.

In fact, if you really take a close, impartial look at the state of things, you sort of get the impression that the almighty ones aren't really so much after all. Man for man, they are nothing like the rampaging Yanks of old.

In case you haven't noticed, the boys from the big city have hardly been the dominating team in this series. Instead, they seem to be a little unsure of themselves, a little bit like mere mortals.

It could be all over for the Yanks this afternoon, and, if not, they're almost sure to come to the end of the line tomorrow. But don't feel bad, fellows, after all, it's for the good of baseball.

And, the glorious ones did manage to salvage something from this series. They finally beat Lew Burdette.
Trouble is, even the Phillies can do that.

Freshmen Rally, Down Army

The will to win plus a great overall team effort were displayed by the Villanova freshman football team as it came from behind to gain a 16-16 tie with the Army plebes at West Point on Friday.

Army racked up an early 16-0 lead over coach Eddie Michaels' squad, but the Wildkittens refused to wilt.

In the first period the Cadets scored on 3-yard plunge by quarterback Dennis Bennett. Shortly after Bennett's score, halfback Jimmy Houchins tallied on another short run.

Fight Back

Not satisfied with their 14-point margin, the Army frosh added two more points on a safety late in the first period.

The Wildkittens waited until the final period before they came surging back.

Quarterback Tom O'Rourke, only recently switched from halfback, started the uprising when he hit end Ron Meyers with a 35 yard pass for the first Villanova score.

The second touchdown came on a six-yard run by Bob Capone, a powerful runner.

O'Rourke threw to end Frank Sylvester for the first two-point conversion, while Capone plunged for the second.

Coach Impressed

The fine line play of Orazio Nastase and Dick Ross, helped the undermanned Wildcats to counteract the Army depth.

Coach Michaels was pleased with tight play of his team. There were individual standouts, but the coach was impressed by the manner in which the team team worked as a unit.

The next freshman game will be with West Chester's jayvees on Oct. 17 at home.

The young Rams will be followed by an always strong Bullis Prep eleven. The Bullis game will be played on Oct. 24 in Maryland.

Henry Impartial To PAT Ruling

Discovered: one man in football who has an impartial attitude toward the two-point conversions rule. It doesn't bother him, Jim Henry told diners at the Maxwell Club's first weekly luncheon at the Warwick. Henry, LaSalle College athletic director, also is a leading grid official.

"The officials still only have to do their jobs, whether a team kicks, runs or passes," Henry pointed out. "The pressure is on the coaches."

Henry said a more disturbing new rule for officials is that which requires them to check in every player at the start of each half as well as all subs, because "it takes some of the officials' attention away from the actual game."

Weekly citations were presented to backs Walter Acuff, Haverford School, and Ralph Triboletti, Northeast.

Army Is Leader In Lambert Poll

Army, which won its first two 1958 football games in impressive fashion, today led the first weekly balloting for the Lambert Trophy, emblematic of Eastern major college supremacy.

The Cadets, who last won the trophy in 1953, received 9.9 points in the first voting by coaches, sportswriters and broadcasters.

Pittsburgh, which swept its first three starts, was second with 9.0 points. Navy was third with 7.2, Holy Cross fourth with 6.4 and Syracuse fifth with 4.4.

Senior football manager Dick Faulk has requested that all students who want to be managers should report to Charley Farnem in the basement of the Field House sometime this week.

Three managers are needed —a junior, sophomore and a freshman.

GEORGE GOBEL: "Love usually blooms at night . . . but the bloom usually goes to seed when the fellow and the girl get a good look at each other in the daylight."

New Training Method:

Swimmers Are Landlubbers

The swimming team started drills last week, but as of this writing not a man has touched the water. It might be a month before any swimming is done.

It's all part of a new training method installed this year by coaches Ed Geisz and Jack Lumsden.

They have the swimmers engaged in strenuous calisthenics designed to toughen, strengthen and lengthen muscles, especially in the chest and abdomen.

The idea behind it is that the swimming season is so long—six and a half months—that there always has occurred a natural letdown near the end of the journey.

Won't Tire Out

The calisthenics will assure greater stamina and cut down on fatigue.

In theory, strengthening the chest and abdomen muscles will keep the swimmer "higher up in the water", thus cutting down on water friction and increasing speed.

"Body building" pre-season training is the brainchild of Bob Kiputh, renowned coach of the Yale swimming teams, who first put it into operation 25 years ago.

The success of the Yale teams is proof enough of the system's merit. At least Geisz and Lumsden think so, for they wrote to Kiputh during the summer, requesting particulars.

The Water—Finally!

After approximately four weeks of "body building," the swimmers will hit the water for distance swimming to build up endurance, after which they'll turn to stroke analysis, starts and turns, and wind sprints.

One point about the new system that Geisz and Lumsden especially like is that it eliminates staleness from too much time in the water.

"By the time we've completed the calisthenic period, the boys will be hungry for the water," said Geisz.

Long Lake

Lake Superior extends for a length of 350 miles.

Ties Required

Railroads in the U. S. use about 130 million rail ties every year, enough to build 43,000 miles of track.

Studies Force Joe Mason To Sidelines for Semester

Joe Mason, who as a junior last year was the outstanding sprinter on the swimming team, has informed swimming coach Ed Geisz that "academic reasons" will prevent him from completing this semester.

Swimming has always received the best part of my time," said Mason, "and with graduation coming up next June, I feel that I must devote more time to my studies.

"Then, too, there are financial obligations which I assumed this past summer and which will entail part time work this semester," said Mason.

Mason became one of the most valuable members of the swimming team last year after one-season layoff caused by his transferring from the University of Pittsburgh at the end of his freshman year.

Mason told the VILLANOVAN that he might do some extra collegiate swimming on occasion, but that regular participation in school meets was completely out.

Joe is taking a general arts curriculum and will receive his commission in the Marine Corps upon graduation. He took PLC training at Quantico this summer.

VU Runners Open Slate At St. Joe's

With the youngest team he's had in years, Coach Jim Tuppeny sends his cross country squad against St. Joseph's College at the Hawks' course on Friday, in the first of five meets for the season.

Only one senior is listed among the runners—Vic DiMaio Jersey City, N. J., who has been chosen captain. There are two juniors—Bob Godesky, Long Island, and Bill Tinney, Phoenixville, Pa.

Sophomores are Tim McNamar, Tulsa, Okla.; Lance Hugelmeyer, Long Island; Hank Neil, Morristown, N. J.; Gene Rogers, Morristown, and Nick DeAngelis, Upper Darby, Pa.

After the St. Joseph's meet, the rest of the schedule reads: Oct. 25—St. John's, home; Nov. 4—Temple, home; Nov. 11—LaSalle, away; Nov. 17—IC4A championships at van Courtland Park in New York.

The VILLANOVAN is looking for more staff members. Interested? If so, contact Jack Curtin (326 Sullivan) or Tom Goldschmidt (316 Sullivan).

Wildcats, Detroit Eye Burke Trophy

The Cyril J. Burke trophy is on the line this Saturday afternoon when the Titans of Detroit visit Villanova Stadium to battle the Wildcats in the 1958 Homecoming game.

Detroit, Villanova's traditional and oldest rival, will hit the Main line with a team described in the nation's press as "vastly improved," and with a 26-13 victory over Quantico Marines last Friday evening under its belt.

Coach Wally Fromhart will run his team out of the standard wing T formation in an effort to retain possession of the Burke trophy, dedicated to the memory of a Villanova alumnus.

The Titans took hold of the cup last year, topping the Wildcats, 16-9, at home, on their way to a 6-3 season.

Another Winning Season?

Two years ago, the Main Liners picked up an 8-7 victory over their rivals, ushering in the only victorious Villanova grid season in the past five years. That was the first victory in a 5-4 season.

But if coach Frank Reagan hopes that he will come up with another win this year to keynote a second victory season, he'll have a job on his hands.

The Main Liners' pass defense, which went from poor to great between the VMI and Boston College games, will have its hands full with quarterback Lou Faoro, who completed 48% of his tosses last year, and the thin Wildcat line will have to stop the rushing of mercurial halfback Billy Russell.

But Reagan has one advantage he didn't have a week ago—he knows the secret of his team. They play better when they're hurtin'.

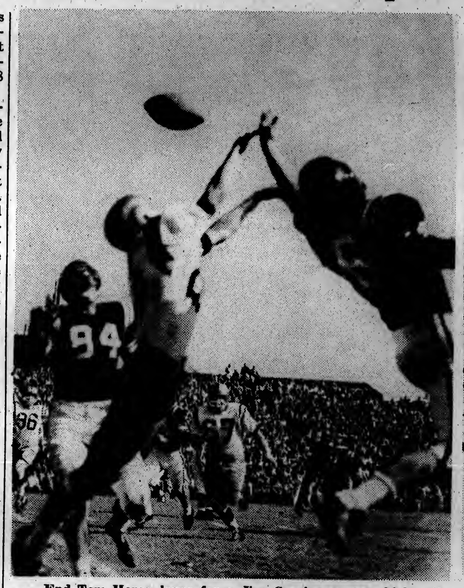
Graz' Best Showing

Quarterback Jim Grazione, burdened by a sore shoulder and a pulled leg muscle, but on the greatest performance of his career against BC Saturday.

So did halfback Dave Intrabartolo, who picked up 98 yards off Villanova's new I formation to lead all players in that department.

And speedy halfback John Daniels played a big part in bolstering the pass defense. While Grazione was undoubtedly the star of the game and knocked down the extra-point pass that would have tied the game, Daniels was all over the field, and many observers felt that he was the difference in the VMI and BC games.

Another bright light was the performance of fullback Gene Paga, who filled in so well for the injured Leon Horin that he kept sophomore Billy Paczkoskie on the bench.



Can Use Rah Rah

And, if nothing else works, Reagan can depend on a pep talk, which, according to the Philadelphia press, played an important part in last Saturday's win.

According to one story, Reagan's halftime citing of the frosh team's startling 16-16 tie with Army last Friday played a big part in the 'Cats vigorous showing in the second half.

Another told of Grazione's being incited to his shining performance by the words of a friend, who told him that he had never lived up the greatness expected of him.

Whatever way he does it, Reagan wants this one. It would be mighty nice to have that trophy back.

End Tom Heron leaps for a Jim Grazione pass which sails high over his head, as a Boston College defender guards him closely. Gene O'Pella (84) moves in, but he, too, cannot reach the pass.

John Daniels bats away a pass intended for Boston College halfback Jim Conclough. Daniels was a power on defense in the Wildcats' upset 21-19 victory over the Eagles at Boston last Saturday.

'Cats Upset Odds, Beat BC, 21-19

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

Senior quarterback Jim Grazione justified four years of talk by expectant Villanova fans as he led the underdog Wildcats to a brilliant 21-19 upset win over a determined Boston College team last Saturday.

Graz has only shown us spurts of his great ability. However, Saturday, in the role of a doubtful starter, he gave the crowd of 12,000 a game long exhibition of his talents.

He scored two touchdowns, one on a 53 yard run, and passed for another. He ran around ends for the game deciding two points conversion, and on defense, knocked down BC's attempted two-point conversion, and intercepted two passes at key points in the game.

Playing without the services of three starters, the win by the short handed Cats made them 2-1 on the year. On the other hand, the defeat was the second of the year for BC, who last week lost 24-14 to powerful Syracuse, after opening the season with a 48-8 romp of Scranton.

Penalty Hurts

Boston College scored the lone TD of the first quarter on a 64 yard drive that was aided by a VU pass interference penalty which gave the home team the ball on the one. Jim Conclough carried it over for the Eagles, but the conversion attempt failed.

Don Allard, the ace-New England quarterback, a hero of the last two of the three straight BC victories over the Wildcats, watched the game with a cast on his injured knee.

Bill Brown, Allard's sub who himself went into the game the 15th leading passer in the country, found it difficult to penetrate the Cats strenghtened pass defense. He completed only 6 of 23 attempts, and had four passes intercepted.

Graz grabbed one of these in the second period and returned it to the BC twenty-three. A 15 yard penalty slowed the Cats' scoring movement, but a pass to Gene O'Pella at the 10, and the big fellow's rugged 9 yard run with the grab set up the single yard sneak by Graz for the score.

Never Lost Lead

Larry Sopko, a sophomore guard, kicked the point, making it 7-6. Having now secured the lead, the Cats did not give it up the rest of the way.

Gene Paja, senior fullback who took over when Billy Paczkoskie was shaken up, intercepted a third period BC pass and returned it 31 yards to the Villanova 39.

Here, workhorse Dave Intrabartolo, who gained 98 yards in 21 carries, broke away for 14 yards, and three plays later, Graz and speedy John Daniels combined for a 44 yard touchdown pass play. Graz went around end for two points and the Cats led 15-6.

Long Keep Play

BC made it 15-13 on a fourth period TD drive, but three plays after the kickoff, Graz faked, rolled out and ran 53 yards for a touchdown without an Eagle laying a hand on him.

Another BC score made it 21-19, but Graz broke up the pass for conversion, and that was the end of the scoring.

The press chose Graz and O'Pella the outstanding back and lineman of the game respectively.

Also outstanding in the team's first road victory since it beat Boston University two years ago were Intrabartolo, Daniels, Paja, the out-weighed Villanova line and, really, the whole ball club.

Basketball Managers

Any sophomores or freshmen interested in becoming basketball managers should contact Charley Farnam in the locker room of the field house or Vince Bifferato in 239 Sullivan.

REQUIESCAT IN PACE

His Holiness,
Pope Pius XII

A Modern Saint

Eugenio Pacelli, who as Pope Pius XII was Shepherd of the Fold and Vicar of Christ on earth for 19 years, was laid to rest on Monday beneath St. Peter's Basilica in Rome.

Pius was a living symbol of the modernity of the Roman Catholic Church; he was also the epitome of the sanctity that has been the Church's since the time of the Apostles.

The late Pope was intently interested in science. He steadfastly opposed the belief that there is an irreconcilable conflict between science and religion. Once he said he thought that estimates by scientists that the world was a billion years old, seemed to be supported by all the evidence.

In a 1950 Encyclical letter, Pius said that the Church had no objection to qualified research into Darwin's theory of evolution. Many churchmen had denounced all theories of evolution, but the Holy Father said that evolution in no way contradicted the teachings of the Church, provided it is recognized that "souls are immediately created by God."

Throughout his reign, Pius took time to address scientific conventions which met in Rome. He astounded his listeners with his knowledge of the latest inventions and advances in basic science. By some unknown means, he learned the facts concerning the first atomic explosion before they were given to the world at large.

In recognition of the ever-broadening base of the Church, Pius, when he raised the Sacred College of Cardinals to its full strength of 70 for the first time in 250 years, did away with the majority the Italian hierarchy had long held.

Pius gave his backing to a movement which has modernized the habits of many religious orders. He encouraged closer ties between the various orders, in order that the primary mission of the Church—the salvation of souls might be better implemented.

Taking note of modern living conditions and habits—with night working hours—he made important changes in the regulations concerning the fast before Holy Communion. The effect of the altered rules was that reception of the Blessed Sacrament rose in numbers steadily.

Under his direction, the churches scheduled afternoon Masses so that working persons could fulfill their obligation on Sundays and holy days of obligation without undergoing hardships. Then, too, the new Communion fast rules allowed these workers to receive the Blessed Sacrament while still eating their regular meals.

At a time when the United States was taking an increasingly bigger role in the affairs of the Church, Pius was close to the American public. Before he became Pope, he visited this country—the only Pope who ever came here at any time in his life.

Pius, ever the modern man, took an interest in sports. Once, when the Harlem Globetrotters basketball team was visiting in Rome, he had them put on a special exhibition for him.

Yet this modern man—defender of science, opponent of Communism and Nazism, champion of peace—maintained the essential spirituality of the Church.

He had a special devotion to the Mother of God. It was he who proclaimed the dogma of the Virgin Mary's Ascension to Heaven, as the climax to the 1950 Holy Year Jubilee. At that time he said to have seen the "Miracle of the Sun."

During his 19 years at the head of the Church, Pius took part in the canonization of 32 new saints,

Football Game, Open House Features of Parents' Day

This Saturday is Parents' Day, offering the parents of Villanova students a double attraction—open house on campus and the football game with Wake Forest.

The day is being sponsored jointly by the University Student Council and the Athletic Department.

In addition to the game Saturday afternoon, the activities for the day include open house on campus beginning at 10:30 A.M., and a concert by the University Band in front of Dougherty Hall at 11:30 A.M.

To be of service to those who may care to eat on campus, both the Dougherty Hall cafeteria and the C&F snack bar will be open.

The game half-time activities will include an address by the Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., President of the University, and an address by Robert Murphy, President of the Student Body.

Following the addresses of welcome, the Villanova Marching Band and the N.R.O.T.C. Drill Team will present a special half-time show honoring the parents.

Francis X. Reagan, athletic director and head football coach, hopes to have the fathers of the players wearing their sons' numbers seated on the field directly behind the bench.

Since this is the first Parents' Day at Villanova, the scope of activities for future Parents' Day will be determined by the success of this year's day.

Admiring a plaque given to the Father Ludwig, O.S.A., Council for enrolling the most new members in the Knights of Columbus insurance plan, are (left to right) Buddy Carlin, deputy Grand Knight of the Villanova Council; Frank Haas, who was instrumental in starting a council here; Dr. Eugene Powers, Grand Knight; and Sherrif Lennox of Philadelphia. They met at the Knights' Communion Breakfast last Sunday.

Junior Class President Lists Committee Heads

Sheldon Pollock, junior class president, announced the chairmen for several of the major functions of the class at the first class Steering Committee meeting last week.

The 93-man committee—largest in the history of Villanova—heard Pollack make the following appointments:

(1) John Driscoll, Industrial Administration major and Ray Rafferty, Liberal Arts, co-chairmen of the dinner dance, to be held May 2.

(2) Dan Spada, Marketing, and Maucher, Electrical Engineering, co-chairmen of the prom, to be held May 1.

Mother's Day Heads

(3) Bill Galm, Mechanical Engineering, and John Wallin, Marketing, co-chairmen of Mother's Day, to be held April 27.

(4) Class vice-president Ron Dobies, chairman of the Charity Ball and Orphan's Outing.

The Ball is listed for Dec. 5; the outing, originally scheduled for Dec. 13 and 15, is still tentative due to a mix-up concerning that date.

Pollock also announced that Con O'Donnell, political science major, was in charge of the class float in Saturday's Homecoming parade.

More Appointments

Several committees to handle class affairs were also announced by the president.

Among them are a general entertainment committee to handle all music for class functions, a publicity committee and a ticket committee.

Vic Manfredi, Pre-Law, and Carlo Lavechio, Arts, will chairman the first committee, while the chairmanships of the other two will vary with each event.

Francis Boes will act as public relations director for the class.

No Junior Week Head

Pollock told the gathering that there would be no over-all chairman of Junior Week this year "because I feel that it would create confusion as to the different functions."

Ring committee chairman John Mulcahy, appointed by Pollock last year, announced that juniors could order their rings on Nov. 20, 21 and 25. He announced that there would be no second fitting of rings this year as in the past.

The steering committee unanimously selected the Broadwood Hotel as the site of the dinner dance.

Law School Will Choose 'Moot' Team

The Villanova Law School's national moot court team will be selected tomorrow night in the court room at Garey Hall at 8:30 in the final round of a series of moot court arguments.

A team of sophomore students will face seniors Edward J. Carney, Leon A. Mankowski and Gerald Stockman in a hypothetical case involving the United States government versus a corporation which broke a federal statute.

The sophomore team will be made up of the winners of Monday's initial round in the competition. The two teams that night were Willian B. Colsey III, John J. Guilfoyle, Edward J. O'Malley and Patrick M. Ryan vs. Henry C. Lucas, David H. Moscowitz, Peter G. Nyhart and Robert G. Sur.

The best advocates determined tomorrow night will represent the law school in the regional interschool arguments in Philadelphia in November.

Should they win there, the Villanova team will go into the national rounds in New York.

A Cornell University professor tells a story aimed at encouraging writers who have trouble getting their material published.

Professor Morris Bishop says two works by Peter van Dugrefin, a Swiss-French poet of the 15th century, were published for the first time recently as part of a student's thesis.

Rebel Theme Planned For Soph Dance

Bob Queen and Mike Kuckelman, co-chairmen of the Sophomore Cotillion, have announced that the theme of the dance, which will highlight the sophomore social season, will be "A Southern Plantation."

The decorations under the supervision of Roger Allen, Bob Bohn, and Andy Stenicky, call for converting the Field House into a replica of a southern plantation.

Friday, October 24, has been set as the date for the dance, which will run from 9 'til 1 p.m. Howard Lanin and his society dance band will be featured with the Villanovans playing the intermissions.

The charge for admission will be $3 per couple. Free refreshments will be served during the evening. Dress is informal.

Remaining chairmen for the event include: Joan Flood, Mary Chapman, and Eileen Greyson, programs; Paul O'Rouke and Tom Chambers, Refreshments; Dave Benon, tickets; Dan Walsh and Bob Brogan, band; and Bob Scalia and Tom Donohue, publicity.

Venezuelan Here On Scholarship

Francisco Pacheco, a senior in business administration, and native of Venezuela, is attending school this year under the scholarship program of the Creole Foundation.

He is one of 64 Venezuelan students sponsored at U.S. colleges by either the Creole Foundation or the Creole Petroleum Corporation.

Retreat System Revamp Allows Them on Weekends

Rev. Norbert Whitley, O.S.A., University Chaplain, has issued a statement of clarification of the regulations concerning the annual retreat for seniors and juniors.

The new policy was originally announced at the time of registration, but some confusion still exists in students' minds.

"The basic rule calls for all seniors and juniors to make the retreat at Villanova at the close of the first semester, that is, from Sunday, January 25 to Wednesday, January, 28," said Father Whitley.

"However, those who wish may substitute a weekend retreat at any approved Laymen's Retreat House, but certain conditions must be fulfilled beforehand," said Father Whitley.

The conditions are:

(1) The retreat must be made some weekend prior to the regular retreat, that is, not later than the weekend of January 16 to 18.

(2) Notice must be given to the Chaplain's Office of the earlier retreat. The Chaplain's Office of the Office will then write to the retreat house to get official confirmation of the fact.

Those who plan to make the retreat over a weekend prior to the regularly-scheduled one have been advised by Father Whitley to make arrangements early.

Anyone wishing a list of the Laymen's Retreat Houses can obtain one at the Chaplain's Office. This list is not exclusive, however, and any approved retreat house may be used. The usual donation is $15 for the weekend.

Sophomores and freshmen will make their retreat in second semester.

Biology Seminar Starts Thursday

The Villanova Department of Biology will attend a National Science Foundation seminar on Thursday at the University of Pennsylvania. The seminar will be held in room 10 of the zoological laboratory building at 4:00 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Professor Tadao Todo of the faculty of Medicine at Kyushu University, Japan. The subject of his lecture will be "The Electromicroscopy of Ultrathin Sections of Mycrobacteria."

All interested biology students are urged to attend.

Pre-Law Society Meets on Thursday

The Pre-Law Society will meet on Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in room 201 Commerce and Finance Building.

Procedure necessary for entrance to Law School will be discussed by Richard Ruane, moderator of the Pre-Law Society.

New members are invited to attend.

Alumni Club Meeting

The Diamond State Club, Villanova's Alumni society in Maryland, held a meeting last Thursday night in Baltimore. Art Donavan, defensive tackle for the Baltimore Colts, was guest speaker.

Rosemont Junior In Masque Lead

Margie Brown, Rosemont junior, will replace Barbara Ann Chambers of Immaculata as Andromache, female lead in "Tiger at the Gates," the current Belle Masque production now being readied for presentation.

Also announced was that Jim Lynch would switch from the role of Busirus to Abneos, John McGarry once again taking the role of Busirus.

Belle Masque's impressive publicity display, the large growling tiger now in front of Dougherty Hall, was constructed by the stage crew to bring attention to the play, which will run from Wednesday, November 5 through Sunday, November 9.

Director Richard Duprey, Director of the Theater Arts Graduate has expressed satisfaction with progress so far.

Placement Director Moritz Warns Seniors to Prepare

John A. Moritz, university placement director, told the seniors last week that they "should begin preparations for job interviews at once."

The director said at a class meeting that there is a library of information in the placement office, and that other material has been put in the library's reading room by Ed Zeaser, chairman of the placement committee.

He advised the seniors to obtain forms as soon as possible. When filled out, the forms will contain all pertinent facts, together with pictures and three recommendations from faculty members.

After the student checks over the list of 140 corporations who will visit the campus next spring, and decides the firms in which he is interested, Moritz will send a copy of his form to each of them.

A week before each firm is to come here, those who originally signed up for that firm will go to the placement office to obtain a time for an interview.

On December 7, the placement office will hold its annual Career Forum. Starting at 10 a.m., three speakers will talk on the preparations for an interview, what the student should expect from the recruiter, and what the recruiter expects from the student.

John A. Moritz, Villanova's Placement Director, warns the seniors at a class meeting last week to start thinking of their post-college plans.

Reading Program Now Available

A six-week Reading Improvement Course is now being given by the English Department.

The course is considered to be highly beneficial to anyone interested in improving their reading habits.

The course will be repeated during December and January. Anyone interested in enrolling for the course can apply at the Guidance Office, room 51, Mendel Hall between 9 a.m. and noon, and 1 and 5 p.m.

All books and materials are included in the fee of $25. All students are eligible to apply for the course.

Smoker, Athletic Program Planned by Campus K of C

The Father Ludwig, O.S.A., Council, Villanova chapter of the Knights of Columbus, will hold an on campus smoker soon, it was announced recently by Grand Knight Dr. Eugene Powers.

Powers, dean of the night school, said the smoker will help to bring together council members on campus and serve as an introduction for applicants to council activities.

The dean also announced the formation of a recreation program for council members including athletic participation in the three major sports.

At a meeting of an estimated 75 council members in Vasey Hall auditorium two weeks ago, it was established that the campus K of C members would form athletic groups apart from the intramural leagues.

Initiation Soon

A call for new members will be issued soon, Deputy Grand Knight Larry Carlin, senior Industrial Administration major, said, and initiation proceedings will follow.

The other officers of the council were introduced at the meeting. They are:

Irvin Keller, junior Arts, Chancellor; Matt Brennan, senior IA, Warden; John Castanzo, senior C and F, Fred Wiele, junior Engineering, and John Driscoll, junior C and F, trustees, and Herb Lettau, Inside Guard.

Other Officers

Three faculty members hold other positions in the council. They are The Rev. Norbert Whitley, O.S.A., University Chaplain, also council Chaplin; Dr. Robert O'Shea, Philosophy department, Treasurer, and John Mattesich, Economics department, Financial Secretary.

Other officers are Joseph Sutton, senior Arts major, Recording Secretary, and Tom Moakley, junior Arts, committee chairman.

Three candidates for membership in Lambda Kappa Delta, the pre-med fraternity, exhibit the hula hoops they have to use in their initiation. From left to right, they are George Hurley, Sam Sarbello and George Wernert—or as they are known around the frat, purity, body and flavor.

McKenna to Speak To Literary Club On Fitzgerald

The Literary Club will hold a seminar discussion of a paper on F. Scott Fitzgerald prepared by vice-president Tom McKenna at its next meeting on Oct. 23, president Jack Curtin announced last week.

The paper, titled "Mrs. Parker Comes At Noon," deals with the autobiographical elements in the author's writings.

The first meeting, attended by what the president called the "nucleus of the organization," saw the club arrive at several decisions, such as the running of a literary contest said the inauguration o fa policy of concentrating on modern authors.

Details of these and other plans will be announced within the next week.

Curtin also pointed out that, unlike the past two years, the club will be open to the members of all divisions, and not restricted to English majors.

LKD Initiation Planned

Lambda Kappa Delta, the campus pre-med fraternity, held initiations of new members last week.

Adopting a new policy of combined reception and orientation, incoming freshmen met with the chairman of the Biology department, Dr. John H. McClain.

Announced as officers for 1958-59 were: senior James J. Rocco, president; junior David Brian, vice-president; sophomore Dominic Diorio, secretary; sophomore Robert Steeb, treasurer; and junior Irving Keller, Student Council representative.

SAIL ON, SAIL ON!

I suppose October 12 is just another day to you. You get up in the ordinary way and do all the ordinary things you ordinarily do. You have your breakfast, you walk your ocelot, you go to classes, you write home for money, you burn the dean in effigy, you watch Disneyland, and you go to bed. And do you give one little thought to the fact that October 12 is Columbus Day? No, you do not.

Nobody thinks about Columbus these days. Let us, therefore, pause for a moment and retell his ever-glorious, endlessly stirring saga.

Christopher Columbus was born in Genoa on August 25, 1451. His father, Ralph T. Columbus, was in the three-minute auto wash game. His mother, Eleanor (Swifty) Columbus, was a sprinter. Christopher was an only child, except for his four brothers and eight sisters. With his father busy all day at the auto wash and his mother constantly away at track meets, young Columbus was left pretty much to his own devices. However, the lad did not sulk or brood. He was an avid reader and spent all his waking hours immersed in a book. Unfortunately, there was only one book in Genoa at the time—Care of the Horse by Aristotle—and after several years of reading Care of the Horse, Columbus grew restless. So when rumor reached him that there was another book in Barcelona, off he ran as fast as his fat little legs would carry him.

The rumor, alas, proved false. The only book in Barcelona was Cuidar un Caballo by Aristotle, which proved to be nothing more than a Spanish translation of Care of the Horse.

Bitterly disappointed, Columbus began to dream of going to India where, according to legend, there were thousands of books. But the only way to go to India was on horseback, and after so many years of reading Care of the Horse, Columbus never wanted to clap eyes on a horse again. Then a new thought struck him: perhaps it was possible to get to India by sea!

Fired with his revolutionary new idea, Columbus raced to the court of Ferdinand and Isabella on his little fat legs (Columbus was plagued with little fat legs all his life) and pleaded his case with such fervor that the rulers were persuaded.

On October 12, 1492, Columbus set foot on the New World. The following year he returned to Spain with a cargo of wonders never before seen in Europe—spices and metals and plants and flowers and—most wondrous of all—tobacco! Oh, what a sensation tobacco caused in Europe! The filter had long since been invented (by Aristotle, curiously enough) but nobody knew what to do with it. Now Columbus, the Great Discoverer, made still another great discovery: he took a filter, put tobacco in front of it, and invented the world's first filter cigarette!

Through the centuries filters have been steadily improved and so has tobacco, until today we have achieved the ultimate in the filter cigarette—Marlboro, of course! Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! Great tobacco, great filter, great smoke! And so, good friends, when next you enjoy a fine Marlboro Cigarette, give a thought to the plucky Genoese, Christopher Columbus, whose vision and perseverance made the whole lovely thing possible.

And thank Columbus too for Philip Morris Cigarettes, for those who want the best in non-filter smoking. Philip Morris joins Marlboro in bringing you these columns throughout the school year.

SUPREME COURT HONESTY

Two Supreme Court decisions on racial discrimination earned front page headlines the other day.

Arkansas' favorite son, Governor Orval A. Faubus lost another chance to further stall intergration in Little Rock High School when the Supreme Court refused to review an injunction against use of troops in the integration fight.

The ruling continues the order issued last year which halted Faubus' use of National Guardsmen to deprive Negro children the right to attend school.

Another important decision of the high court involved the Philadelphia Girard Collage case. The Supreme Court for the second time refused to listen to new argument on the order to ban admission to two Negro boys wishing to enter the college.

This ruling meant that the court was upholding the decision of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court which established that it was legal for the private directors of the college to carry out normal school operations.

In the latter order, then the Supreme Court acted to prevent integration while they continued to outlaw illegal means of enforcing segration in the Faubus appeal.

The decisions proved for those who have doubted the honesty of the court that cases are being tried on legal merits. Court decisions are not being rendered on the basis of pre-judged "feelings" of the members. as some have charged.

In the past few years the court has declined a great deal in popularity. Various attempts have been made to limit the power of the court.

The courage and honest convictions of the nine men in black must accept the challenge to preserve the rights of all men and the Constitution that guarantees those rights.

FREE STUDY AVAILABLE

Seniors interested in continuing their education via the scholarship method are urged to look at the inside news pages of the VILLANOVAN this week.

We have printed stories almost inviting eligible students to apply for Fulbright and Marshall scholarships.

Each year hundreds of opportunities for further study go begging because students simply don't apply. Here are chances for some to study with others footing the bills.

A Modern Saint

more than had been created by any other Pope in the long history of the Church.

The priests, teachers and students of Villanova University mourn—in union with Catholics and non-Catholics alike throughout the world—the passing of the greatest representative the Catholic Church could have had in the ever-changing world of today.

But the Church merely lost a man; God has gained a saint.

Letters To The Editor

To The Editor:

During the past few weekends those attending the Villanova home games and parking in the University parking lots have been charged fees by an organization that is obviously operating under a concession granted by the school administration. While there is nothing wrong in this procedure I don't think that it is the best possible means of gaining the additional revenue.

If the parking operations were handled by a group of students either under the supervision of the school or student council there would be a larger margin of profit than under this present system. There are many uses to which this excess money could be put. Since Villanova is not fortunate enough to have a large endowment fund it hasn't been possible for them to offer a large amount of scholarships in the past.

The establishment of a Student Aid Fund with the profits from the parking lots in order to aid qualified students would seem to alleviate this situation to some extent.

Former Villanovan Mourned

A letter from a secretary to the late Pope Pius XII has been received by John C. Kelly of Scarsdale, N. Y., expressing the Holy Father's regret at the death of Kelly's son, Edward, a former Villanova student.

Edward Michael Kelly, known as Mike on campus was a senior planning to attend summer school and graduate in August, when he died of leukemia last July in New Rochelle Hospital. He entered Villanova in 1954 after graduating from Cardinal Farley Military Academy. While here he was active in Turf and Tinsel, intramurals and the Marketing Club.

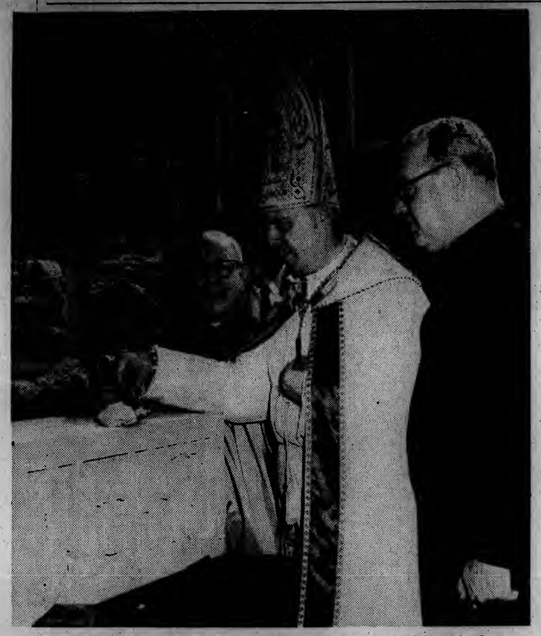
Kelly's father is a prominent New York advertising executive and a member of Villanova's Board of Trustees. He numbers among his close friends the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University president.

Father Donnellon celebrated Mike's Solemn High Requiem Mass in St. Pius X Church, Scarsdale. Assisting at the Mass were Rev. Daniel Falvey, O.S.A. Villanova librarian, and Rev. George McLaughlin, Dean of men, O.S.A. His Eminence, Francis Cardinal Spellman presided.

SEGRETERIA DI STATO
DI SUA SANTITÀ

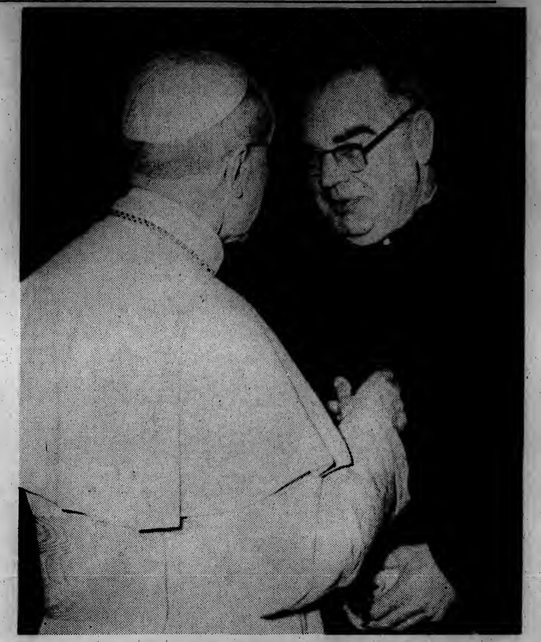
Vatican City, July 31, 1958

Dear Mr. Kelly,



The Holy Father has given me the revered charge of sending you this acknowledgment for your letter of July 9th, whereby you informed Him of the death of your son Edward Michael.

His Holiness bids me extend to you and to your wife and family the expression of His paternal condolence, and, with the renewed assurance of His prayers, He lovingly imparts His paternal Apostolic Blessing to you and to all your dear ones as a pledge of heavenly consolation and comfort in your bereavement.



With the renewed assurance of my high esteem and cordial regard, I remain,

Yours sincerely in Christ,

Mr. John C. Kelly
247 Park Avenue
New York 17, N.Y.

Bishop Peter Canisius Van Lierde O.S.A., Papal Sacristan who has charge of preparations for the cornation of the next Pope, visited Villanova in September, 1957. Here the Bishop dedicates the cornerstone of Sheehan Hall while the Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, chairman of the Board of Trustees, the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, University President, and student representative Robert E. Mulcahy, III, look on.

The late Pope Pius XII and Father Donnellon confer here during the University President's visit to Rome in 1957. Father Donnellon and the Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., of the English department, toured Europe in celebration of their 25th anniversary in the priesthood. The priests were granted a special audience with the Pope.

Augustinian At Pope's Bedside

Bishop Peter Canisius Van Lierde, a member of the Order of St. Augustine, was at the side of Pope Pius XII right up to the late Pontiff's death, and he said the first Requiem Mass for the Holy Father.

The Bishop, a visitor to Villanova last year, holds the positions of Vcar General of Vatican City, Assistant at the Papal Throne and Papal Sacristan.

The position of Papal Sacristan has been held by an Augustinian for more than 700 years, a privilege extended by the Holy Father for distinguished work. Bishop Van Lierde took office five years ago, and will serve until his death.

Bishop Van Lierde, the highest ecclesiastic figure in Vatican City's government, has charge of all liturgical ceremonies held at the Vatican including the impending coronation of a new Pope.

He is also protector of the relics of the saints and the treasury of Sacred Vessels and Vestments. a collection whose value has defied estimation.

His Excellancy, a native of the Netherlands, was raised to Knighthood by Queen Juliana of that nation.

Solemn Ceremonies Surround Selection of Next Pontiff

A curious collection of man-made things is involved in the selection of a new "Holy Father" for the Roman Catholic Church.

A small black stovepipe . . . bricks and boards . . . slips of white paper . . . and wads of wet straw.

Man-made things, all . . . but each with a special significance in one of religion's most important ceremonies: The solemn election of a new Pope.

Only bare necessities are taken into the resplendent Sistine Chapel inside the Apostolic Palace. But the 55 Cardinals who gather there represent the Church hierarchy.

Smoke Signals

By ages-old tradition, the progress of the balloting of the Sacred College of Cardinals will be announced to the world in thin wisps of smoke from a small black stovepipe protruding from the roof of the Sistine Chapel.

If the smoke that curls up periodically is black, it will mean that none of the Cardinals has received the required two-thirds, plus one, vote—and another ballot must be taken.

A puff of white smoke will inform the world that the Sacred College has elected a new supreme sovereign to guide the lives of Catholics everywhere.

The smoke is produced by burning wet straw with paper ballots that have been cast or burning the ballots alone. Wet straw is dropped into a small stove inside the chapel to produce the black smoke that means no Pontiff has been chosen. White s m o k e—signifying an election—comes from burning the paper alone.

Time Limit

The Apostolic Constitution provides that the selection of the Holy Father shall be a highly secret affair. And it must be done within 18 days after the death of a Pope. Fifteen days, plus an optional three days, are permitted for the arrival in Rome of Cardinals not present at the time of the Pope's death.

Just prior to the convening of the conclave, the cardinals gather in St. Peter's Basilica and attend the Mass of the Holy Gospel.

Then, in solemn procession, they enter the outside conclave of the Apostolic Palace and retire to their assigned rooms. The following morning they enter the ancient Sistine Chapel, which then is sealed off from the outside conclave.

The Cardinals will be sealed in the chapel with bricks and boards. There are small iron beds, kneeling stools and simple chairs in a few rooms of the walled-off area.

Solemn Oath

Mass is celebrated and the Cardinals repeat the "Veni Creater Spiritus." They renew a solemn oath to elect as Pope the Cardinal whom they deem to be most worthy, and to guard the secrecy of the conclave.

Three Cardinals are appointed to supervise the counting. Each Cardinal is given a ballot.

Their ballots filled in, the Cardinals one by one walk to the altar on which a large golden chalice has been placed.

Holding his ballot high, between thumb and forefinger, each kneels before the altar in prayer. He then rises and pronounces the following oath in Latin:

Christ Is Witness

"I call as witness Christ the Lord, who will one day judge me, that I select him whom, according to God, I deem most worthy to be elected."

After one of the 55 Cardinals has won by the necessary two-thirds margin of votes, his fellow churchmen will gather around and the dean of the Cardinal-Deacons will ask in Latin:

"Do you accept your election to Supreme Pontiff, which has just been Canonically concluded?"

A single word then from the lips of the chosen one . . . "Accepto (Latin for 'I accept')."

PRAY FOR...
THE POPE OF PEACE

Noon Mass for Pius During Mourning

The noon-day Mass celebrated daily in the University Chapel, is being offered for His Holiness Pope Pius XII during the nine day official mourning.

The Office for the Dead was recited in St. Mary's Hall last Thursday evening by the Professed Clerics. They attended a Solemn Requiem Mass for His Holiness on the following morning.

On Sunday evening, the Fathers of the Monastery recited the Office of the Dead and on Monday morning the Administration and members of the student body attended a Solemn Requiem Mass with Absolution.

In lieu of the usual night prayers said in the Chapel and attended by the resident students, it is planned that Holy Mass will be said for the repose of the soul of the deceased Pontiff on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings.

Ministers at Monday's Mass were: the Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial of the Eastern Augustinian Province, Celebrant; The Very Rev. James M. Hurley, O.S.A., Prior to the Villanova Monastery, Deacon; the Rev. Charles F. Kropp, O.S.A., Sub-prior of the Villanova Monastery, Sub Deacon; and the Rev. Norbert W. Whitley, O.S.A., University Chaplain, Master of Ceremonies.

Professed Clerics of St. Mary's Hall acted as minor ministers and sang in the chlor.

Midwinter's Summer Dreams

By BILL CHRISTY

CHRISTY

The twilight shadows are gathering earlier every day and the campus green is giving every indication that the summer is over—except in the Pie Shoppe. Despite the passing of the World Series and the return of the head cold commercials on television, summer lives in the world of monogrammed sugar and plastic spoons—at least in conversation.

Most of the "war stories" of summer vacations seem to get more preposterous every year, but many remain the same. The men that joined the Navy stoutly maintain that they did get to see the world. Of course, in some cases the world consists of a small oil port in Texas, but at least it's travel. The Philadelphia draft-dodgers are still expounding the delights of Ocean City and Wildwood.

A new vacation spot became popular this year. It's a quiet, scenic town in Virginia, where quite a few Villanovans spent a leisurely six weeks. I understand it's a Spanish-type town complete with siestas and a facinating night life. It has a Spanish-sounding name too—Quantico.

Arts Men Fend for Themselves

The best tales of adventure stem from the students' varied summer employment. Of course, most of Villanova's engineers were snapped up on the day of final exams to work their seven hour week at four figure salaries, so little has been heard from that quarter. The Commerce and Finance majors spent their time in the cold cruel business world amassing vast hoards of money, so it's up to the less specialized Arts men to provide the tales of colorful experience.

Two that we know were able to land very lucrative jobs as camp counselors in Vermont. Both returned with beautiful mocassins, eighteen lanyards each, and many money pouches. They are now trying to convince Mainline shopkeepers that wampum is money.

The government took on quite a few of our boys as postmen this summer and according to one of them it's the easiest job he ever had. In the morning they give you a bag of letters and all you have to do is put new stamps on them and deposit five letters in each mailbox you see as you tour the city.

Small Fella Finds His Niche

One of the smaller members of the literary fraternity took employment with a local department store. His education in liberal fields prepared him for an integral role in the shoe department. Besides, he was the only applicant small enough to fit in the spaces they use for the shoe boxes.

Some of the summer jobs led to unusual Fall occurrences. The members of one day-hop car pool are complaining that their driver, who drove a cab all summer, won't move his car unless they bring along an alarm clock that ticks like a meter.

Journeys In Journalism

An English major, of a journalistic bent, spent the summer lauding the talents of a local football team for the West Chester Daily Local News. He still hasn't recovered from the shock of having to write up the West Chester-Villanova game for the VILLANOVAN.

There are a lot more of these tales. Spend some time in the Pie Shoppe and you're sure to hear some good ones. Speaking of good ones, did I tell you what I did this summer? I got this job as a .....

Hot Tip On Attire From A Young Country Squire

By GLEN PLAID

There I was casually strolling across Campus, minding my own business and wondering where my next Martini was coming from, when out of my right orb I perceived a furtive looking character following me. I immediately knew who it was. I slowly retreated as this extremely short person with all the press stickers glued on his clothes menacingly approached. It was that nitwit who writes the "Little Guy" column for the Villanovan. He carefully reached out and fingered the narrow lapel of my exquisitely tailored Hopsack Tweed sportcoat, with the slanted pockets and tapered sleeves. I told him to take his grimy mits from the fine textured material, and his eyes turned sick and glassy as he fell to his knees pleading for another touch. It was then that I had my chance.

I hasuly dragged this miserable sobbing individual to a standing position. We agreed that if I was given column space in the Villanovan I would condescend, and let him touch my elegant attire. I waited until admiration of it was not enough and when he needed a touch . . . to shorten a long story, I bribed the "Little Guy".

Finally, I have arrived, En Esquire, your utterly modish fashion expert. In the coming issues, I shall guide you along the road to good grooming in the heckling and haughty manner that is customarily my advice and you will become the well dressed gentleman, or at least a sophisticated delinquent.

In order not to burden your adolescent minds on first acqaintance, I shall deliver my introductory discourse on the subject of collar buttons.

At all expense, avoid purchasing what I consider a hairy collar button. Included in this category are square or oblong collar buttons, colored or glazed collar buttons, and felt or fur collar buttons. Choose rather, one formed of brass, silver or gold, round in form and small in size. Most important, choose one that will fit the collar hole. I leave you now to mull over an elementary but weighty problem.

Shows of Strange World Promise Broadway Success

By LARRY O'ROURKE

A bit of mild but old fashioned lampoonery appeared on the Broadway stage Monday, as veteran comedy writer Howard Teichmann's "The Girls in 509" made its New York bow.

The rapid moving show, featuring a unique setting, and occasional satirically funny lines, just finished a two week stand at the Walnut St. Theatre in Philadelphia.

Making good use of the dignity of Peggy Wood and the impishness of Imogene Coca, the show lampoons politics, especially Republican, politicians of of both parties, newspaper techniques, and social workers.

Dirty College Gang!

The story deals with a middle age spinster and her neice who go into exile for 25 years in a New York Hotel after the Democratic victory in 1932. The girls flee the "New Deal," they say, because they fear their thousands of shares of General Motors stock, patents on cellophane and nylon and large bank accounts, will be useless when the "college professors" of Franklin Delano Roosevelt take over the nation's economy.

The girls hide-a-way is discovered by a reporter for a New York tabloid. His story interests a worthless mid-west journalism professor who sets out to get the "scoop" for the New York Times. His misadventures with Miss Coca provide the setting for the flippant dialogue.

Philly Cracks Again

The play might not be accepted by New York critics who could object to having their names carelessly bandered about the one-set stage.

But for usually somber Philadelphia, the show was fairly well received. Broadway jokes directed at Republican traditionalism and conservatism were appreciated by the audience.

The lampoonery, so needed, but yet so little used in this modern, over-sensitive world, and the galety of the two girls, more than makesup for the literary deficiencies in the script. "The Girls in 509" will outlast the current theatre season in New York despite the critics.

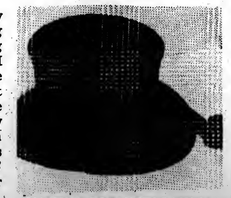
By BILL GALLAGHER

Based on the best-selling novel by Richard Mason, "The World of Suzie Wong" will be a best-selling play. One has the feeling that regardless of censure by the New York critics, this Joshua Logan production will run for many, many months. Suzie, expertly portrayed by France Nuyen, is quite enchanting, a delicate and unconventional heroine. Her world, however, is sordid and deviod of subtlety; Mr. Logan has aimed low, and hit the target squarely.

Degraded World



Filled with drunken sailors "on the town", destructive monsoons, filthy shacks that crumble into a pile of nothing, leaving the dead strewn under them, this world has forced Suzie to work in a brothel. Here she meets, and falls in love with, a struggling young artist who refuses to have anything to do with her until she stops "working". The tender scenes evolving from this conflict of ideas and the eventual compromises that ensue, are the finest things this play has to offer, along with the performance of Miss Nuyen and Jo Mielziner's spendororous settings.

Sales Sky High

Having the largest advance sale of any drama to ever open on Broadway, "Suzie' will have no trouble drawing customers. Pardon the pun, but that's the trouble with her: she's too commericial.

'Horn Rims' Harasses An Anti-Intellectual

By DON KEMPF

As I was walking down to "Old C and F" the other day, paging through the latest copy of Photoplay magazine, a fellow with horn-rimmed glasses stopped me and asked a question.

"Who is the Secretary of the Treasury?" he demanded.

"Who cares?" I replied.

What's A Politalk?

"Just as I suspected," he shouted, "just like all the rest of the —You'll pardon the expression—'Average Americans.' We intellectuals know who the secretary of the Treasury is in these perilous times. Why, we intellectuals keep well informed on all the affairs of this Country, State, and even this Municipality."

"Who cares?" I again inquired, still expecting an answer.

"Who cares! Who cares! Do you realize that often public opinion in a free state in controlled by emotion rather than reason."

Come The Revolution . . .

At this point I wondered how he wished to have this problem solved. We could eliminate the free state, I thought. And while I pondered this—and also the thought of eliminating emotions—he continued his lecture.

On and on he went—morality, integration, newspapers, Faubus—all these terms I heard as I continued my thoughts. And then I began to smile.

"What are you smiling about?" he said in an angry tone. "You should take time to analyze both domestic and international affairs. Why, you are supposed to be part of the intelligentia of public opinion." And then he turned and walked away.—his horn-rimmed glasses rather steamed.

A Happy Non-Intellectual

I watched him as he faded into the distance, and I thought about many things. I thought about the intellectuals; and I was happy not to be one of them. I thought about why I had smiled. I didn't know why. But I had smiled, and I was glad that I had, and somehow it didn't seem to matter why.

I thought about the Secretary of the Treasury—I still didn't know who he was. And then I remembered that the horn-rimmed fellow had never answered my question.

"Who cares?"

Need Money, Buddy?

By BOB BROTHERS

BROTHERS

It is not so difficult to meet expenses these days. In fact, you meet them everywhere. The best things in life are free, but only scholarship students get through Villanova that way. The rest of us have to cash war bonds, get a job, write home, or depend on the GI bill for income.

Two years ago my parents got a new garbage disposal unit and my summers have been spent in removing the neighbors' garbage for a small fee. I was greatly affected by the recession since people were eating everything. The secret of survival has been the magic word: improvise. Here are a few tested tips on how to make your money last longer and go further.

1. Carry around a lot of $2 bills. Sooner or later a cashier will mistake one for a $5 bill, and you'll be $3 ahead every time this happens.

2. Date Rosemont girls. They always have cookies and other goodies in their social rooms. Fill your pockets.

3. Never order soup in the cafeteria. Simply ask Mary for a cup of hot water for your ulcer. Then pour in bottled ketchup, stir well—Voila! You have wonderful tomato soup for nothing.

Dried Fish Gives Light

4. After a wedding in the Chapel sweep up rice. Get there before the birds.

5. Pencils are taboo. There are only two sharpeners on campus. Pens used to be available at the Post Office but now if you steal one of those 15-cent ballpoints, you can be fined $500 and put into the clink for three years. Sorry, can't help you on this one.

6. Cigarettes are expensive. Smoke a pipe. Fifteen cents worth of tobacco will last a week. And you will get so frustrated trying to keep it lit that you will give up smoking altogether. Extra tip: coeds prefer a man who smokes "Mixture 79". It smells like money.

7. High prices a problem on those weekends in town? Save money at the theatre with our helpful economy hint: Sneak in.

8. Need a desk lamp? Did you know that a fish called the eulachon is so oily that, if it is dried and a wick is stuck to it, it will burn like a candle. You could probably to the same thing with a whale, but your roommate might complain.

9. You'll need books. Go "halfies" with a night school student and share them.

What, Another Richie?

10. If the girl friend back home wants something with a Villanova monogram, send her lumps of sugar or a couple of tea bags.

11. Large sinks in Mendel Hall labs are perfect for doing laundry. You can make extra cash by doing it for everyone in your dorm.

12. Be a WIBG tipster, "Tell the World," or guess the identification of "Mr Happy".

13. If you have drained your parents of resources you might try other members of the family. . . .

Dear Li'l Brother:

My, you certainly are good with the Hula-Hoop. Sure wish that I could do as many twirls as you, but I'm getting older. I have a BIRTHDAY next week. Mother tells me you made a lot of money selling newspapers during the strike last summer. How is your electric train ? Don't forget who gave it to you. . . . .

Incidentally readers, we would cordially welcome your green stamps, soap coupons, cereal boxtops, popsicle wrappers, Raleigh coupons and CARE packages.

White Elephant Wanes As The Donkey Grows Fat

By J. P. KELLEY

Many gridiron classics will be witnessed this fall as in previous years. The greatest clash of all however, will not be a football game, but the state-federal election held throughout most of the country. On election day the people will decide on the records of their state governments and those of the Congressional and Executive branches in Washington. From all indications it appears that they will decide in favor of the Democratic Party, thus electing more Democratic Governors, Senators, and Congressmen.

The Republican Party is on the defensive nationally. Our people are very much concerned with these issues of the recession, foreign policy, defense, and corruption.

Let's consider two of these issues.

The Recession

In April, 1957 Vice President Nixon told the U. S. chamber of Commerce that the American economy had reached a record high. This prosperity however had a false basis as many of us now realize who sought employment this past summer. Hence, because of the recession, the G.O.P. is forced to do without the prosperity campaign which brought great gains in 1956.

Foreign Policy

In August 1955 John Foster Dulles said that "one of the first things I did as Secretary of State was to get to the Middle East . . . At that time the Suez was a center of controversy and potential strife. Now, as a result of patient effort, in a spirit of conciliation, the problem of the Suez has been successfully resolved."

French Students Lack Breadth in Arts Studies

By JIM GILLESPIE

EDITORS NOTE—This is the first in a series of three articles by a Villanova student who has recently returned from a years stay in France. The articles will treat various phases of French life, and will be based on an insight gained from traveling throughout Europe, and from studying at the Universities of Montpellier and Grenoble.

The French universities are state run and state supported. The administration concerns itself with nothing other than the quality of the lectures which are given, and the school authorities do not concern themselves in the least with the private lives of the students. In France the student stands alone against the system.

There is no one appointed to handle student difficulties, nor is there anyone to help the foreign students choose their courses or aid them in the complex registration. The school business office admits anyone to the courses who has passed the required examinations and can pay the seven dollars registration fee. There is no tuition.

Study Hall Cafes

It has been estimated that seventy-five percent of the students who enter the Sorbonne, the University of Paris, fail to complete their courses. This is due to the fact that students cannot find decent places in which to live so they often have to study in cafes.

Also the students are not required to attend class and often are allowed to purchase a copy of the notes from the professor. The few who succeed in passing the series of examinations in their field are to be congratulated for their self-control and persistance.

I do not consider the French system of liberal education equal to its American counterpart. According to the standards of Villanova, the Bachelor of Arts curriculum is designed to give a broad education in the Humanities and so equip a student that he may appreciate the fundementals of Western Christian culture.

On the university level the French have nothing similar to our curriculum. When the student enters the university he specializes in one field of the arts and sciences such as American Literature. The more intensely he studies in this field the more certificates he receives, but there is no degree similar to BA.

Who's Treasurer ?

I found students who were learned in such fields as American literature, but whose opinions in fields of philosophy, politics, and economics were very immature.

Of course before entering a university, the French student must spend about four or five years at a lycee, where he receives a general education in history, languages, and science. But I do not feel that the normal student is mature enough at the age of seventeen to complete his liberal education as the French educators do. One good point of this system, however, is that students in such university divisions as engineering have had at least a decent background in the liberal subjects.

The school year is divided into three semesters. The first semester, called the Vacation Courses, begins September first. The entire university does not open at this time, only the divisions which take care of foreign students who want to learn the language and the divisions which give re-examinations to students who have falled their course in the spring.

The winter semester, which begins the normal school year, starts November first and ends February twenty-eighth. The spring semester begins March first and ends about June fourteenth. The students have two weeks off for Easter and two weeks off for Christmas.

Willing Professors

The professors were good lecturers, and were often noted authorities in their field. Lectures were formal in nature and were not supplemented by any required text, but rather by outside related readings. Students could not volunteer questions since there was only one lecture a week for each course. If the student's question had not been answered during the course of the lecture, and if he really was interested, he found the professor only to willing to answer them after class. The amount of information derived from these lectures, together with the number of outside readings expected, made the courses as good as any I have ever had, and in some instances quite superior.

Little Soviet Girlskys Pummel Cindy's Pumpkin

By PETER ALLARD

I have just purchased a birthday present for a four-year-old and destructively inclined godson of mine. The present, for two reasons, was a book: First, a book will not frustrate his as will an unbreakable toy. And secondly, it may remain whole long enough to give him his first contact with printed words.

This book is an anthology of nursery rhymes, and, while leafing through it, I recalled an article I had read on "The Wonder of Soviet Education." Regretfully, I must admit that there is little in American nursery rhymes that will inspire four-year-olds to great scientific feats. Most of them go something like this:

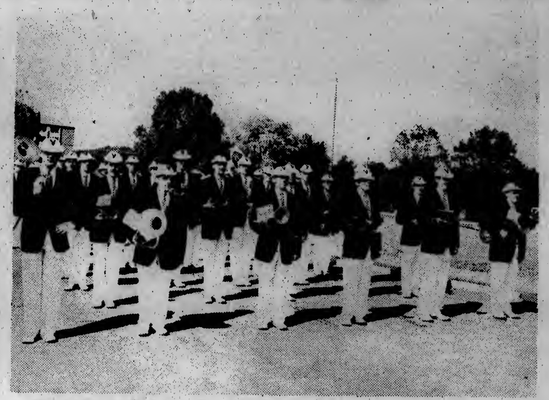
What are little girls made of?
Sugar and spice
And everything nice
That's what little girls are made of.

Left Wing 'Til Twelve

This sort of blatantly distorted fact would be intolerable in a Soviet nursery rhyme. Theirs, I imagine, are more truthful and relevent to scientific facts:

What are little girlskys made of?
Carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen,
And unsaturated anion acid groups
That is what little girlskys are made of
By the Glorious People's Republic.

This is not the only inconsistency in our nursery rhymes which suggests that they are subversively promulgated. Innocent children are still reading anti-labor fairy tales like Cinderella, in which a left-wing fairy godmother forces six mice to pull a pumpkin coach in a clear violation of the local teamster's union contract. And there's that pro-vivisection blurb about a cow who is forced by scientists to jump over the moon only to be carefully barbecued upon re-entering the atmosphere. I could go on.



The problem of education has roots which go deeper than the schools. Children are barely able to walk before they are the object of subtle and insidious propaganda. I think we should start by abolishing nursery rhymes. Then "Little Golden Books", and then grades one through five.

Shall we get started?

The Color of A Homecoming Day

The junior class's float, featuring a model of the university chapel, parades before the stands during the ha!"time show.

The band, revitalized somewhat since its previous appearance at the VMI game prepares to take the field for its part in the homecoming festivities.

Bill Confoy, senior engineer, and his date, Kathy Sanner, who was selected Homecoming Queen at the Nick Basca Dance last Friday night, ride in a convertible before the alumni and students.

Sullivan Hall's prize-winning decoration, which won the Nick Basca Award for the second straight year, featured a huge Wildcat. Jim Klein, senior engineer, supervised the work.

Fedigan Hall's Homecoming decorations for the Nick Basca award, which drew a second-place vote from the judges, makes a prediction which the football team made certain came true.

"Engineers" on Display

The Villanova Engineer, the university's engineering periodical, marks its impending first issue and the celebration of its 25th anniversary with a display in the library. Using an article from a recent issue, the display features a step by step explanation of the technical stages of composition. Also included are a few of the earliest issues which were published under the name of "The Owl."

College Student Loan Program Growing in U. S.

One per cent of the nation's colleges and universities account for fifty per cent of all the loans made to students by institutions of higher education.

Harvard led in the amount loaned in the school year with $825,000. The University of Michigan, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and University of Denver followed in that order.

The largest number of loans, 3,621 was made by Michigan State. The University of Texas and University of Florida were next high.

At California State Polytechnic College loans were made to 42% of the students and at the University of Oregon to 38%.

Highest average loan was $612 at M. I. T. The four year maximum loan varies from $200 at the University of Colorado to $3,300 at M. I. T.

At the University of Chicago, the number of scholarships awarded was equal to 45% of the undergraduate enrollment. Fifty-two per cent of the graduate students at this same school were receiving fellowships.

Part time employment is another major means of student assistance. Ohio State alone paid out more that $3,700,000 for all types of student services.

Forum to Sponsor Music in Academy

The Philadelphia Forum will sponsor nine events this season at the Academy of Music.

The series will open Oct. 30 with the Strings of Melachrino, conducted by George Melachrino. On Nov. 6, duo-pianists Luboshutz and Nemenoff will play in recital.

The Danish National Orchestra will make its local debut on Nov. 20. On the podium will be Thomas Jensen and John Frandsen.

The fourth event, Dec. 11, will be the first appearance here of the Roberto Iglesias Spanish Ballet. Another dance group, the youthful National Ballet of Canada, is scheduled for the Forum Jan. 22.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Charles Munch, plays its annual concert Feb. 19, with Eugene Istomin as piano soloist.

The American Opera Society's concert version of Cherubini's "Medea," with Eileen Farrell in the title role, will be presented March 5.

A week later, on March 12, Van Cliburn gives his piano recital. The final Forum event, March 26, is the first local recital by Zara Dolukhanova, Soviet mezzo-soprano.

Reiner To Direct At All-Star Concert Series

The Philadelphia All-Star concert series marks its 25th anniversary with a concert by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra tomorrow night at the Academy of Music.

On the podium will be the dynamic conductor, Fritz Reiner, directing the orchestra in its first Philadelphia appearance.

The other events, as announced by Emma Feldman, director of the series, are:

October 23: The New York City Ballet. There will be two additional performances October 24 and 25. The 10-year-old company will offer classical favorites and new ballets, including the highly acclaimed "Stars and Stripes."

November 13: A recital by Richard Tucker, leading tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Association.

December 4: Rudolf Serkin will play his only Philadelphia recital of the season.

December 18: The American Opera Society will present a concert version of Handel's opera, "Julius Caesar." The cast will be headed by Cesare Siepi.

January 29: Pianist Artur Rubinstein in recital.

February 5: The Robert Shaw Chorale.

March 19: Eugene Ormandy and The Philadelphia Orchestra will present a concert version of Smetana's "The Bartered Bride." The cast will include Laurel Hurley, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and Rudolf Petrak, New York City Opera Company tenor. Also participating will be the Philadelphia Orchestra Chorus.

April 9: The series will end with a recital by violinist Isaac Stern.

Labor Leader Scorns Corrupt Unions, Says Unions Exist for Worker Welfare

BY GEORGE MEANY
President, AFL-CIO
Special To The VILLANOVAN

During the past year, corruption has been an almost daily newspaper headline. There have been stories of corruption in the labor movement and in governmental office.

We in the labor movement have been shamed, all of us, by the crookedness that has been exposed. We are proud on the other hand, that the investigations have proven that the great majority of the trade union movement has been honest, upright and true to the heritage of our founders.

This however, is as it should be. The nation and workers especially have a right to expect labor leaders to be honest men.

Now, I think, is the time to examine why some trade union leaders have used their positions as a means to acquire wealth and power. Primarily, it seems to me, it is because we have allowed the loose morals of the business world to infiltrate the ranks of labor.

Primary Purpose

THE primary purpose of establishing and conducting a business enterprise under our free economy is the acquisition of money. But the trade union movement is not a business. It is an idealistically conceived undertaking designed and dedicated to the interest and welfare of people—all people.

As such, it must be motivated and activated by ethics and principles of a higher moral quality than those that ordinarily prevail in business.

I believe the labor movement must be true to the basic philosophy for human betterment that guided our great founding fathers, like Samuel Gompers and those associated with him.

The philosophy is very simple; it is that the American worker is entitled to a fair share of the wealth that he helps to produce under our American free economy. And the instrumentality by which he seeks to secure his fair share is the trade union movement.

Purpose of Union

THE purpose of the trade union isn't to build up the prestige of one individual, to put him in public office, or to add to his wealth. The purpose of the union is to advance the welfare of the worker and his family.

When, however, corruption is discovered in trade unions, we must do everything in our power to clean up these situations. You can't serve the workers with corrupt leadership.

I don't care how successful a union is in building up conditions; if its internal structure is rotten, sonner or later the workers are going to suffer by the loss of those conditions or by its failure to advance further.

Our nation is dedicated to freedom and justice to all men under God. A lot of our problems could be solved if we looked to our Creator for inspiration and guidance and brought our religious beliefs more and more into our daily lives. In the world struggle between the slave way and the free way, I am sure God is on our side.

All He asks of us is that we allow Him to help us.

The ceremony took place before a gathering of friends and alumni of the university in the Villanova Room of the library.

O'Connor is the instigator of a movement which has raised money to purchase philosophy books for the library in honor of the two deceased priests.

The British Government is calling for applications for its 1959 Marshall Scholarship Awards. Students are being urged to get their applications in before October 31, when the lists close.

Requirements for these two-year study grants, twelve of which are awarded each year, are liberal. Any American student (including inhabitants of Hawaii and Puerto Rico) of either sex, married or single, may apply—provided he or she has earned a first degree at a recognized university, and is under the age of 26 on October 1.

Attention is given both to character and scholastic ability, in the judging.

Four Committees

This is done in the first instance by one of four regional committees, on each of which four Americans, distinguished in public life or education, sit under the chairmanship of the local British Consul-General.

Applications are sifted—then the names of finalists are forwarded to the British Embassy in Washington, and then to London where a final review is made by a commission of leading British educators and businessmen headed by Lord Coleraine.

Winners are announced the following April.

Each award is worth around $1,400 a year, for two (and occasionally three) years, plus tuition at a United Kingdom university, if possible, of the applicant's choice. This is estimated to be sufficient for student life in Britain. Passage to and from the United Kingdom is paid. Married men get an extra allowance.

Applications Needed

Applications should be made to the British Consul-General in one of the following cities: Chicago (Mid-Western Region), New York (Eastern Region), New Orleans (Southern Region), San Francisco (Pacific Region).

All Marshall Scholars to date have done exceptionally well in their Bristish finals. An alumni association is in process of being formed and this is expected to have 100 percent membership.

The Marshall Scholarship Scheme was begun in 1953. It is intended to express Britain's gratitude for Marshall Aid.

NFCCS Sponsors Christmas Tours

Villanova students interested in traveling to Florida over the Christmas holidays are eligible for the budget-priced tours sponsored by the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

The tour to Fort Lauderdale includes round trip air transportation from New York, accommodations for six nights at an attractive beach hotel, and a sightseeing tour by boat through the New River Waterways and the Everglades Jungle.

In addition to the Florida trip, the NFCCS also sponsors trips to Bermuda, Mexico, Puerto Rico, Haiti and Jamaica.

The Bermuda trip, which is a recent favorite, includes travel, hotel accomodations and a full day excursion to many places of interest.

The price of the Florida Special is $182.50, and the Bermuda tour is $189.50. Both trips last for seven days.

Other tours sponsored by the NFCCS visit points of interest in England, Ireland, Holland, Belgium, Germany, France and Italy.

Anyone interested in further information concerning these tours should contact Tom Moakley, junior delegate of N.F.C.C.S.

Soph Pictures Taken Thurs.

Sophomore class pictures for the Belle Air yearbook will be taken tomorrow from 10.30 a.m. to 1.30 p.m. at the shrine next to St. Mary's Hall.

Belle Air editor Bob Pinto has requested all members of the Class of '61 to coopefate so that the sophomore section of the yearbook will be complete.

Atomic Physics Course on NBC-TV

"Continental Classroom," a two semester college level course in atomic age physics began last week and can be viewed on Channel 3 Monday through Friday from 6:30 to 7 a.m.

Presented by NBC-TV, the classes are conducted by Dr. Harvey E. White, professor of physics at the University of California at Berkley, and consultant to the Atomic Energy Commission.

For the first time in the history of television, a full year course in any field of education has been offered on a nationwide network. Dr. White believes it to be an important and great experiment in this atomic age.

Muff Day – Frosh Fight to Lose Regs

Today's the day when the freshmen get a chance to lose their "regs" and end their rigorous orientation.

Muff Day athletic competition will begin on Mendel Field at 3:30 p.m., with the sophomores opposing the freshmen .

The word "Muff" stands for "Move up forward freshmen." The day has traditionally marked the finish of the freshmen's initiation into the university.

If the freshmen defeat the sophomores in the athletic events scheduled, they will no longer have to wear their "Regs". If the frosh lose to the sophs, they must wear the beanies, et al for a certain period thereafter.

The athletic events scheduled are a tug of war, egg toss, hula hoop, push ball, foul shooting, horseshoes, three legged racing, football pass and punt, standing broad jump, golf drive, 220 yard dash, 100 yard dash, and a touch football game.

Fulbright Requests Must Be Sent In By Tonight

Requests for application forms for 900 Fulbright Scholarships for graduate study abroad must be post-marked by tonight, it has been announced by the Institute of International Education.

cans international travel expenses in most cases and partial or complete tuition and maintenance for study in 39 foreign countries during 1959-60.

The Fulbright awards for study and research in Europe, Latin America, and the Asia-Pacific area cover international travel, tuition, books, and maintenance for one academic year.

General eligibility requirements for the awards are U.S. citizenship, a bachelor's degree or its equivalent before departure, language ability sufficient to carry on the proposed study, and good health.

A good academic record and demonstrated capacity for independent study are also necessary. Prefrence is given to applicants under 35 years of age.

Countries where U.S. students may study under the Fulbright Programs are Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Burma, Chile, the Republic of China, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, France, Germany, Greeece, Iceland, India, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, the Philippines, Turkey, and the United Kingdom.

Persons interested in these awards may write to the Institute of International Education or to any of the Institute's regional offices for "U.S. Government Grants," a brochure explaining the Fulbright Program.

A complete list of institute regional offices is posted in the Villanovan office.

Students now enrolled in colleges or universities should consult with their campus Fulbright advisors for further information and application forms.

Sky Divers Flying High

It used to be that college students were satisfied with swallowing goldfish but lately the trend in 15 colleges in the East and the Southwest has been toward sky diving.

The procedure for sky diving as outlined by The Daily Cardinal, campus newspaper of the University of Wisconsin is this: the diver jumps from a light plane at 7,000 feet and must fall parallel to the ground for ten seconds.

At this point, falling at 120 miles an hour, he performs a figure eight within twelve seconds. This done, he must wait another eight seconds before opening his parachute and then must land within a circular zone marked on the ground.

Points are subtracted for improperly executed maneuvers.

Sky diving has become so popular in the U.S. that last year this country was represented in an international competition, placing sixth among ten entries.

Sky divers at Wisconsin must be 21 years old since they must sign a release of liability, and must undergo a rigorous prejump training.

Peretti Elected NFCCS Treasurer

Tom Peretti, junior Political Science major, was elected regional treasurer of the National Federation of Catholic College Students at the regional meeting held at Gwynedd-Mercy Junior College last week.

He was nominated by Bob Murphy, Villanova Student Council president, and was seconded by Tina Buckland of Gwynedd-Mercy.

Wendell Young, St. Joseph's College senior delegate of the NFCCS ran against Peretti.

The VILLANOVAN extends deepest sympathy to the family of Jim Sloat, formerly of the Class of 1959, who died last week after a long illness.

Rice Inst. Prof. Examines Own Profession in Book on Academic Life

Many years ago Dorothy Sayers commented that there is only one way to make love, but a thousand ways to commit a murder.

Professor George Williams in his new and critical commentary on highter education in America, "Some of my Best Friends are Professors," warns that there is only one way to be a good professor, but there are at least seven ways to be a very bad one.

Concerned with the failures and failings in the American university today, and convinced that these stem from the ineptitude, timidity and inadequacy of too many professors, Dr. William of The Rice Institute, Texas, describes, in solemn censure and concern for America's youngsters, these seven types of the "bad professor."

Various Types

"Worthy of first mention because he may be a very good man while being a very bad professor, is the plain stupid professor.

"The ways to be stupid are multiple. The stupid professor may be merely ignorant . . . or He may not know when he is boring people, or when he is antagonizing them, or when he is amusing them at his own expense, or when he is talking over their heads, or when he is insulting their intelligence.

"Or he may be too stupid to adapt himself to special conditions or to elicit the best from the personalities in his classes.

"Or It may manifest itself as an intellectual lethargy: he does not want to bother to learn anything new, or to revamp his old ideas to make them consistent with current reality.

"Mostly," Professor Williams says, "the stupid professor is a rule-follower, because rule-following simplifies life for him."

The Smug Ones

The second bad professor is the smug professor—the one who is convinced that he is most clever and most knowing and has proven to himself that he is a pretty smart fellow.

He must be a pretty smart fellow after all to have got where he is. Daily association with his immature students further convinces him. He is eager to assist his student; that is, the ones who agree with him and admire him.

Fortunately less common is the third type of bad professor, the arrogant one. He is never arrogant to those above, but always arrogant to his students, as well as to faculty members who are his inferiors.

He is rude and has forgotten what Emerson knew: that the secret of education lies in respecting the pupil.

Nose in Books

"A much more common, and much less obnoxious, type is the fourth professor, the one who just does not care about people. He likes science and scholarship, books and libraries; he likes learning, and he may even enjoy talking about what he knows.

"But he has no real human warmth, friendliness, empathy, or understanding of the personalities and points of view of his students or of his colleagues.

"Just the opposite of this type of professor is the one (usually young) who tries to 'pal around' with his students, be their companion and their equal.

"A product of early solitude and social rejection, he now overcompensates by trying to make his students like him, not respect him—make them value his friendship, not what he can teach them."

He's Complacent

The sixth of Dr. Williams' "bad" professors is the worldly and cultured gentleman type who is loved by the trustees, the president of the university, the heads of departments and the wealthy people of the town for his disarming frankness and urbanity.

His complacency assures all concerned that everything is well with the university. "He scoffs gently at convention, yet cooperates perfectly with every convention that really matters on campus. . . . An excellent man for lulling and suppressing self-analysis and self-criticism."

The final type of professor whom Dr. Williams excoriates "is the one who, working within the new vision of education as the output of an adminstrative 'team' and referring to his immediate superior as 'the chief,' teaches in a supremely business-like way."

"To this professor-turned-executive, the students are so many items to be processed, so many completed jobs to be turned out according to schedule."

Students are Digits

"This professor loses sight of the student as a human being—a separate personality whose uniqueness goes unrecognized in the pursuit of administrative efficiency and teamwork.

"The opposite characteristics," says Dr. Williams, "will provide a clue to at least 7 qualities possessed by the "good professor!"

But an insight into the bad professor is not simply an occasion for guffaws, but rather does it give America a chance to re-evaluate its system of higher education . . . to better sustain this nation's own future place in the world.

And if Dr. Williams is severe on some of the professorial types in his book, he reminds us all, in his title, that "Some of my Best Friends are Professors."

Essays on Profs May Bring Cash

As a method of uncovering undergraduate opinions on the views held by the author of "Some of My Best Friends Are Professors", the publishers are sponsoring a contest open to all upper classmen (freshmen, though welcome to read this book, are ineligible because of their insufficient time experience in college), inviting an appraisal.

There will be a prize of $500 given for the best essay. All manuscripts to be no fewer than 3000 words and no more than 10,000 words. Manuscripts are to be received in the publishers office by February 1, 1959. The prize-winner will be announced on March 15, 1959.

Sophomore Nurses Capped; Fr. McFadden Gives Talk

Fifteen sophomore nurses were capped by Very Rev. Henry Greenlee, O.S.A., Provincial in the university chapel on Sunday afternoon.

The fourth capping class in the history of the new Nursing School heard the Rev. Charles McFadden, O.S.A., of the Philosophy Department, deliver the main address.

The girls marched in procession carrying lighted candles which signified the continuance of the Christian ideal in nursing.

Sister Mary Alma, C.M., Dean of the Nursing School, presented the girls to Father Greenlee, who in turn put the caps—which are shaped like sacred hosts, and are white and blue, the colors of the Blessed Virgin Mary—on their heads.

The nurses recited a pledge composed by Rev. John Kiekotka, O.S.A., Dean of Admissions, based on the Hippocratic Oath taken by doctors. The pledge reflects the acceptance of the will of God by the nurses.

The girls who were capped are:

Mulcahy Readies '60 Ring Delivery

John Mulcahy, chairman of the Ring Committee, has announced that arrangements have been made with George Packer, representative of Dieges and Clust Co., for delivery of the rings for the class of 1960 on November 20, 21 and 25.

Some 490 rings were ordered by the class. This is the largest single purchase ever made by a Villanova class.

Packer said that it will be impossible to take any orders at the time of the delivery. All new orders will be taken a short time later.

Mulchay said that the balance of the payment will be due at the time of the delivery.

In addition to John Mulcahy the committee includes Tom LoCosale, Tom McCoy, Bill Barron, Peter Longworth, Dennis Cardone, and Tom Moakley.

Les Paul Hit in '53

Five years ago the most popular song across the U. S. was the Les Paul-Mary Ford recording of "Vaya Con Dios." Other big disc hits at this time in 1953 were the Ames Brothers singing "You, You, You," "Crying In The Chapel," "Oh," "Dragnet," and "Ebb Tide."

Dramatic soprano Eileen Farrell has signed with Columbia Records and will record "Medea," the Greek classic of Euripides. Miss Farrell has sung this work in concert form to constant acclaim.

Mathematics Dept. Slates New Courses

A new look in the Mathematics Department is evident this year with the inauguration of three new courses, a newly developed student seminar, and a change in the math curriculum of all science majors.

The three new courses offered are selected topics in engineering mathematics—linear algebra, introduction to linear programming and the theory of games.

The science majors this year will plunge head on into analytical geometry instead of the heretofore customary algebra and trigonometry brush up.

The student math seminar will be conducted by the only new member of the department this year, Lucian Roy, who comes to us from California Tech.

The purpose of the seminar is examplary of the Math Department's aim to "stream line" its courses.

Emil Amelotti, Math Department head has said that the seminar will be open to all junior and senior Math majors and that a graduate exam will be administered at its conclusion.

College Poetry Society Prepares For Anthology

The American College Poetry Society recently announced that it is preparing for publication this winter an anthology of outstanding poetry composed by American and Canadian university students.

The society stated that all students wishing to contribute original poetry should send it to: Alan C. Fox, Executive Secretary of The American College Poetry Society, Box 24463, Los Angles 24, California.

Contributions must be the original work of the student who will retain literary rights to the material.

All entrants should submit their name, address, and school, and must have their entries postmarked by midnight, December 1, to be considered. Decisions of society judges are final.

Poetry may deal with any subject. Entries rejected cannot be acknowledged, nor can the society compensate the students for the poetry published.

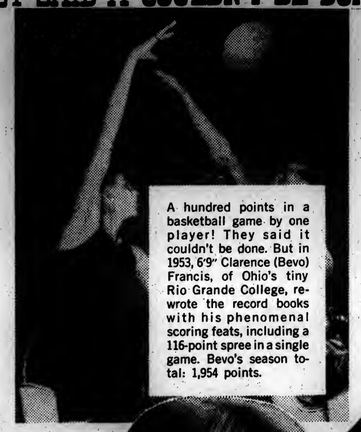
'Sign' Claims Illiterate Generation

Citing "the possibility that we are perilously close to producing a culturally illiterate generation," a Mid-West publishing executive declares in an article in the October issue of The Sign, national Catholic magazine, that parents can help "salvage readers from this generation while there is still time."

Dan Herr, president of the Thomas More Association, Chicago, asserts, "a sickening proportion of the reading that is done is concentrated on rubbish

"A recent survey," Herr notes, "revealed only 17 per cent of Americans are now reading books—all kinds of books—compared to 29 per cent in 1937, or to 20 per cent only six years ago.

"We are shocked," Herr continues, "to discover that large numbers of our children are troubled with the technical aspects of reading."



"Sooner or later," The Sign article says, "the reading problem runs smack up against the 21-inch screen—a relatively new factor over which they (the schools) have no control—television."

Dylan Thomas Drama At Hedgerow Theatre

"Under Milk Wood" will be staged at the Hedgerow Theatre in Moylan, tomorrow.

Future shows will include an evening of readings from "One Day More" by Joseph Conrad, "Medea" by Jean Anouilh and "Purgatory" by William B. Yeats on October 23, 24, 25, and "The Moon in the Yellow River" by Dennis Johnson.

Frosh Meet West Chester

The freshman football team tries for its first victory when it meets the West Chester State Teachers College jayvee team at the Villanova stadium on Friday afternoon.

Coach Ed Michaels' gang tied a strong Army team, 16-16, two weeks ago at West Point. (They didn't beat the Cadets, as a misguided headline-writer said in last week's VILLANOVAN.)

Halfback Ed Bohan and fullback Bill Ryan, who played well against Army although neither scored, drew praise from Michaels for their fine work.

Michaels also said that Orazio Nastase, a tackle who dominated line play at West Point, and guard Dick Ross, both of whom received injuries, would be in good shape for West Chester.

'Villanovan' Picks Football Winners

In their first week of football picks, Art Editor Frank Connolly and Associate Editor Tom Goldschmidt guessed right on 14 of 20 games, for a percentage of .700.

Those who played the VILLANOVAN form chart were repaid in full in Navy's victory over Michigan. As to Notre Dame, Oklahoma and U.S.C., the experts plead "the crazy bounces the football takes."

This week's choices follow, with the home team on the right, and the expected winner printed in capital letters.

Sports Chatter:

Note To Yankee Fans No. 2

By JACK CURTIN

A banquet of crow is in no way suitable to the human appetite, but there come times in the life of all of us who would put our opinions on public view in the newspaper when we must eat and digest our own words. Such is the case with this writer, following last week's over-zealous prediction that the Milwaukee Braves would cop the World Series title.

Obviously, Casey Stengel's minions blasted that much-regretted essay just as hard as Bill Skowron belted the three-run homer that gave the Yanks still another championship. The American League champs came off the floor after what appeared to be a knockout punch and ran the boys from Bushville right off the field.

However, it must be admitted, even by the most faithful of the Yankee following, that these were not the Yankees of old. They put on one of the greatest "under-pressure" performances in the history of baseball, and reclaimed the coveted "best in the game" title, but they were not the awe-inspiring aggregation of years past. Despite the much-heralded home run blasts of the big city boys, they did it with pitching, not with hitting.

And even with the masterful performances of Messrs. Turley, Duren and Larsen, the Yanks couldn't have made their baseball history without the help of the Braves. The National League champs almost rolled over and played dead in the final game, and weren't much better in contest number six. Warren Spahn and Lew Burdette turned in excellent jobs on the mound, but nobody wins ball games without hitting. And the Braves didn't hit.

This isn't meant to take anything away from the Yanks—they played like champions and fully deserve their title. They were indeed the best team in the series. The thing is, though, they should never have got a chance to prove it. When a team holds a 3-1 lead in a best-of-seven series, it is only logical to assume that they will be able to take the clinching victory in one of their next three tries. In effect, the Yankees didn't win the World Series. The Braves lost it.

But all this discussion is purely academic. The Yanks won, and there's no getting away from it. And even though we feel that it would have been better for baseball had things gone the other way, we will admit that, in the long run, maybe we should be happy that the Yanks came out on top.

When you think about it, it would be almost un-American to go against the Yanks. They are a perfect example of the democratic system of free enterprise at work. With an abundance of money, judicious planning and sheer brute force, the Yanks have built a dynasty that has reigned supreme—with a few minor set-backs—for several years. To deny the Yanks their championship would be turning our back on our own country.

Actually, Skowron's homer was the biggest blow struck for capitalism in the last decade.

So, our apologies, fellows, and as much as we hate to admit it, we'll have to. The Yankees are the best team in baseball.

At least until next year.

DU PONT PLANTS AND LABORATORIES IN 26 STATES OFFER VARIED JOB LOCATIONS TO TECHNICAL STUDENTS

BENEFIT PROGRAM MEANS ADDED INCOME

by C. M. Forbes
Du Pont personnel representative

Don't forget the "extras" of an employee benefit program when you compare the job offers and salaries of different companies. At Du Pont, these extras mean added income that doesn't always meet the eye. They include life insurance, group hospitalization and surgical coverage, accident and health insurance, pension plan and paid vacation.

In addition, the Company sponsors a thrift plan. After two years of service, for every dollar you invest in U. S. Savings Bonds the Company sets aside 25 cents for the purchase of common stock in your name. Roughly, 60,000 of our employees are now participating in this plan.

If you have specific questions on Du Pont benefits, just send them to me. I'll be happy to try to answer them. E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (Inc.), Room 12421 Nemours Building, Wilmington 98, Delaware.

EXPANSION PROGRAM OPENS UP MANY NEW CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

The location of your first assignment with Du Pont depends on your qualifications and on the openings in your field, but every effort is made to match the job and the location with your preference. The chances for a successful match are good.

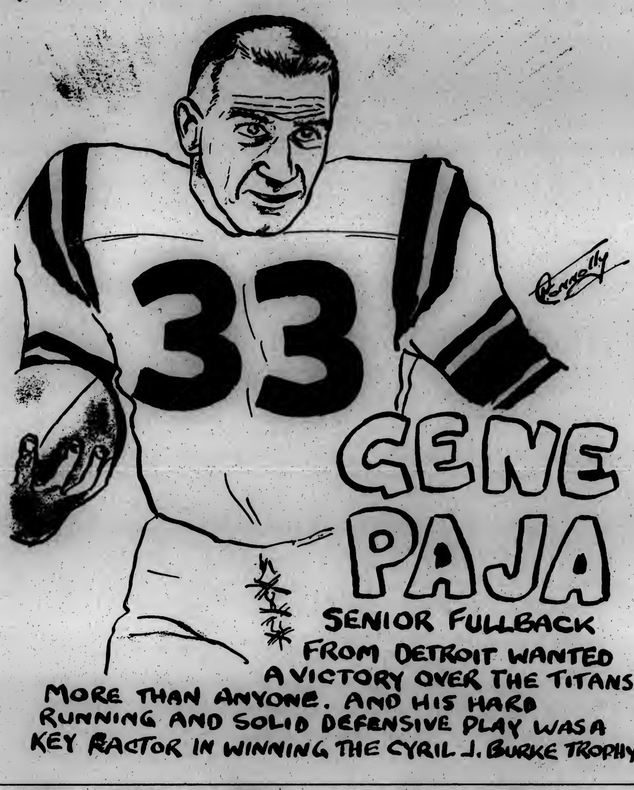
Today there are men and women carving out careers with Du Pont at more than 75 plants and nearly 100 laboratories spread throughout 26 states. Last year the Company spent $220 million for new plants and for increased capacities at existing installations. This year new plants have already been put into operation in Virginia and Michigan. Six more are under construction. Others are planned for the near future.

Most Du Pont units, it is true, are located east of the Mississippi. Company headquarters, for example, along with many labs and plants, are located in and around Wilmington, Delaware, which is a pleasant residential area within easy reach of Washington, Philadelphia and New York. But there are also plants and laboratories in California, Iowa, Kansas and Texas, and plants in Colorado, Missouri and Washington.

Wherever you're assigned, you'll be proud of the Du Pont Company both on and off the job. You'll find the people you work with friendly, stimulating, and active in the life of the community.

MECHANICAL ENGINEERING MOVIE AVAILABLE FOR A.S.M.E. MEETINGS

There's a great demand for mechanical engineers at Du Pont. In fact, the ratio of mechanical to chemical engineers is just under 1:2. Whether your chosen field is research, development, plant engineering, production supervision or sales engineering, you'll find a good future at Du Pont.



If you would like to learn in detail what mechanical engineers do in the chemical industry, arrange to see the Du Pont film, Mechanical Engineering at Du Pont. It is available at no cost for A.S.M.E. chapter meetings, fraternity house and dormitory showings. Write to Room 12421 Nemours Building, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (Inc.), Wilmington 98, Delaware.

SEND FOR INFORMATION BOOKLET

Informational booklets about Du Pont are yours for the asking. Subjects include: mechanical, civil, metallurgical, chemical, electrical and industrial engineers at Du Pont; technical sales, research and development. Just name the subject that interests you and send your name and school address to E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (Inc.), Room 12421 Nemours Building, Wilmington 98, Delaware.

Player of the Week:

'Gridders Getting Big Play When It's Needed' — Craig

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

"We're getting that big play when it's most needed," says Bill Craig of the 3-1 record fashioned by the football team thus far.

"We probably had a better team last year, but something always seemed to happen and we lost game after game in which we outplayed the other club."

Craig, the 225-pound tackle who was forced to the sidelines before the season even started with torn ligaments of the knee, said after the Detroit game that "a brand new feeling is running through the team."

"It wasn't very much solace to be called 'the nations best losing team' last year," said the Akron, Ohio native. "We kept upsetting the dope and staying close to top-ranked teams, but one play would wreck us and we'd lose by a touchdown.

"The Detroit and Boston College games of the past two weeks were ones that we would have lost a year ago," continued Craig. "But we intercepted or knocked down passes just when it counted and it meant two victories.

"That blocked kick by Tom Heron against Detroit was typical. A play like that lifts a team and inspires it to play up to its potential."

The crowd of approximately 8,000 for the Homecoming game was very disappointing, especially in the light of the winning record of the Wildcats and the upset victory over Boston College the week before.

Certainly the students supported the game fully—just about every matriculation-card ticket was used. But the alumni did not turn out as they should for a Homecoming day. I won't venture to guess where the blame lies, but something must be done if the new on-campus policy is to be a success.

Villanova does not have to draw heavily from the local and Philadelphia public in order to fill the stadium. Students, dates and alumni should fill a stadium our size every week.

Marquette, Detroit and Dayton, all Catholic schools whose football teams have been no more successful than ours in recent years, sold thousands of season tickets to alumni before their seasons even started. Villanova, we unofficially heard, sold just 1000.

What is needed is an organization within the Alumni Association to push the ticket sales.

Every student, player and coach has nothing but good words to say for having games at home. There is better spirit, more interest in the team. Now, it's up to the alumni to do their part.

No announcement yet of a football schedule for next year, but we've heard that Rutgers, Miami of Ohio, Xavier and Virginia Tech are additions. Boston College might come here for the first time in years. Navy is on the docket for 1960.

Basketball Managers

Any sophomores or freshmen interested in becoming basketball managers should contact Charley Farnam in the locker room of the field house or Vince Bifferato in 239 Sullivan.

Wake Forest Here Saturday:

Deacons Threaten Wildcats' Streak

You wouldn't think a pack of Deacons would really be much of a worry to Villanova football coach Frank Reagan.

After all, his Wildcats have won three of their first four grid contests, and have a two-game win streak—both upsets—going for them.

Not only that, but Reagan has his best offensive team of his Main Line career, featuring a hard-charging backfield that runs out of the new—and powerful—"I" formation under the direction of the East's total offense leader, quarterback Jim Grazione.

And his "umbrella" pass defense, which looked woefully weak in the team's only loss—to VMI, has blossomed into a highly effective unit, comparable to the nation-leading one of two season's ago.

No Worries?

All in all, it would appear that Reagan would be sitting on top of the heap, without a worry in the world.

But this particular bunch of Deacons happens to be the Wake Forest football team, and they're intent on throwing a stumbling block in Reagan's path toward his second winning season as a collegiate coach.

The Wake Forest club, also winner of three of its first four contests, moves into Villanova Stadium Saturday afternoon to meet the Main Liners in the feature attraction of Villanova's first annual Parents' Day.

Head coach Paul J. Amen, who posted only a 2-15-3 record in his first three seasons at the helm of the Deacon unit, now has the Atlantic Coast Conference leaders at his fingertips.

Have 3-1 Record

The Deacons' three victories have been over Maryland, Virginia Tech and North Carolina State, the latter by a 13-7 score last Saturday. The loss came against Florida State, 27-24, in Florida.

The high-flying Deacons—who were winless in ten games last season—pose a double threat at quarterback, in the persons of senior Charley Carpenter and soph Norm Snead.

Carpenter, who was the second leading passer in the ACC two years ago, and missed last season because of a back injury, is the top field general again this time out, and Snead has been a capable replacement.

Both had a part in last Saturday's victory: Snead running eight yards for the first TD, and Carpenter being on the throwing end of a 69-yard pass play that netted the Deacons the win.

Fullback Is Threat

Another offensive threat for the southerners is junior fullback Neil MacLean, a six-foot, 195-pound rusher who picked up 542 yards last year, to be the second leading ground-gainer in the conference.

And, if the Deacons aren't enough to worry about, Reagan's position isn't as sound as it appears at first glance.

For, while the Main Liners have been playing excellent football and have displayed a team unity that has drawn raves from the coaches, Reagan still has the standard Villanova problem—depth.

Numerically, the Wildcats are in desperate straits, and any more injuries could make their position disasterous.

Last Saturday, for example, the Main Liners had almost an "iron man" backfield, with Grazione, Dave Intrabartolo and John Daniels playing most of the 60 minutes. Wayne Kautter making his first appearance at quarterback, and Frank Ficca, at halfback, only put in brief appearances. And fullback duties were shared only by Billy Paczkoskie and Gene Paja.

Two Sophs Sparkle

Very few linemen were used, also, although two shining lights were discovered in that department.

Sophs Larry Sopko and Joe Luzzi both turned in commendable performances at the guard positions, and both made key plays in the game.

Sopko kicked the extra point following Grazione's touchdown pass, and Luzzi recovered the punt attempt blocked by end Tom Heron.

Thin in ranks or not, the Wildcats want this victory. If they can take it, it'll mark the first time in six years that Villanova has won four of its first five contests.

'Cats Tough in Clutch, Whitewash Detroit, 7-0

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

Villanova has the Cyril Burke trophy back—and a football "team" besides.

The emphasis is on the word "team," because it was a sterling display of teamwork that netted the Main Liners a 7-0 victory over Detriot in the Homecoming battle in Villanova Stadium last Saturday.

Not to mention a brilliant individual performance by quarterback Jim Grazione, who continued to make his strong bid for some sort of post-season honors.

Grazione, the East's total offense leader prior to the game, picked up 131 yards—91 rushing and 40 in the air—to lead the Wildcat attack against the Titans. That gave him a total of 459 yards-gained in four games.

Only Two Completions

The Wildcat field general only completed two of eight tosses for his passing yardage Saturday, but both came in the 74-yard Villanova drive for the winning score late in the first period of play.

A 32-yard toss to roommate Dave Intrabartolo put the Main Liners deep in Titan territory, and then a 15-yard penalty against the visitors moved them to the nine.

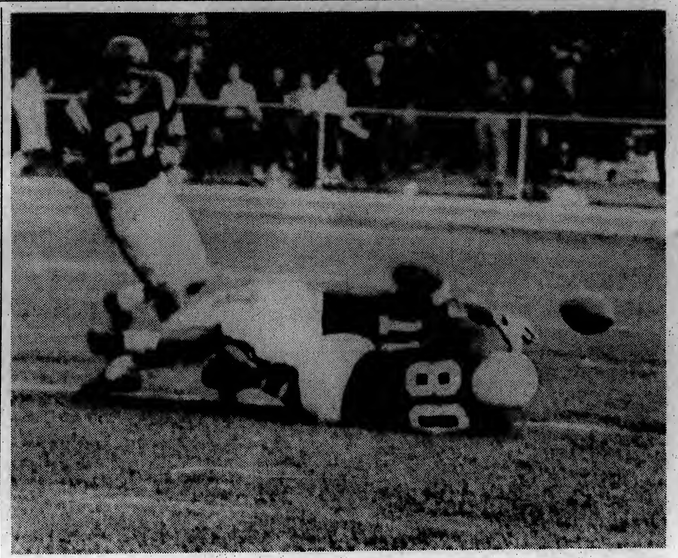
Two plays later, Grazione dropped an eight-yard touchdown pass into the arms of Gene O'Pella in the end zone to put Villanova in the lead for good. Soph Larry Sopko added the extra point.

Earlier in the game, Grazione had completed another pass into the end zone—hitting speedy halfback John Daniels—but it was called back when referee Albie Booth ruled that the South Philadelphian had been past the line of scrimmage when he threw.

Roll-out Yardage

But it was in the running game that Grazione really excelled, as he constantly picked up large chunks of yardage on his patented roll-out play off Villanovas powerful "I" formation.

Nor was he any slouch defensively, breaking up several Titan plays. His most important performance in that phase of the game came with less than a minute to play, when he intercepted a long heave by Detroit quarterback Lou Faoro deep in Villanova territory to break up the Titans' last scoring threat.



Despite the individual brilliance of the former South Catholic High star, it was the overall team play of the Wildcats that drew pleased rave from the crowd of 7,965.

Full-time Players

In the backfield, Intrabartolo, Daniels, Gene Paja and Billy Paczkoskie were constant offensive and defensive threats, and they did it without much rest. Wayne Kautter and Frank Ficca were the only substitues, and then only briefly.

And the line, although pushed hard by the rugged Titan forward wall, held constantly in the clutch. The top performances came from Tom Fletcher, who recovered a fumble; Tom Heron, who blocked a punt; Joe Luzzi, who recovered it, and Sopko.

Best of all, however, was O'Pella, who won the outstanding lineman award for the second week running, just as Grazione did in the backfield.

Jim Grazione and Detroit's Jack Vance appear to be involved in a wrestling bout over a loose football, but actually both fell after Jim knocked down a pass thrown to Vance. Dave Intrabartolo moves in to lend assistance.

St. Joesph's College Team Down Wildcat Harriers

By TOM MURPHY

Villanova's cross - country team went down to defeat at the hands of St. Joseph's College last Friday in a dual meet held at Cobb's Creek, Upper Darby. The final score read 17-44.

Coach Jim Tuppeny's men ran a good race for four miles, but seemed to have set too fast a pace for themselves to finish strong.

The race covered a distance of five and a fraction miles, and the Wildcat pace-setters lost ground in the last grueling mile.

Benny Lynch of St. Joseph's was first to finish, as Hawk runners took seven of the first ten places in the field of twenty-one. Lynch was timed in 25 minutes, 29 seconds.

Villanova place men were Tim McNamar, fifth, 26 minutes, 38 seconds; Bob Godesky, sixth, 26 minutes, 43 seconds and Vic DeMaio, tenth with a time of 27 minutes and 49 seconds.

Tuppeny was very pleased with sophomore McNamar, saying, "He was really good. I didn't think he'd do as well." The cross-country coach says he expects McNamar to be a good man in the two-mile run for the track team.

"Bob Godesky ran a good race, but I expect he will run shorter distances this year," Tuppeny said.

Night Mass To Honor Catholic Youth Week

This Sunday, the feast of Christ the King and the fifth annual National Catholic Youth Communion Sunday, opens the eight annual observance of National Catholic Youth Week.

The National Federation of Catholic College Students and the Religious Affairs Committee will direct the religious activites on the Villanova campus during the week.

An evening Mass for the student body will be the week's major activity.

Bob Merkert, chairman of the committee, said that "it is hoped that Catholic students will make a special effort to receive Holy Communion throughout the week in honor of the Immaculate Heart of Mary, the Mother of Purity and the Queen of all youth."

The theme of National Catholic Youth Week — "Youth, Space, and Sanctity"—epitomizes the responsibility of young people who must realize their ultimate goal, eternal salvation, in this space age.

The list of those who have praised National Catholic Youth Week for its aims includes the late Pope Pius XII, President Eisenhower, the Vatican's Apostolic Delegate to the United States, and the Cardinals, Archbishops and Bishops of this country.

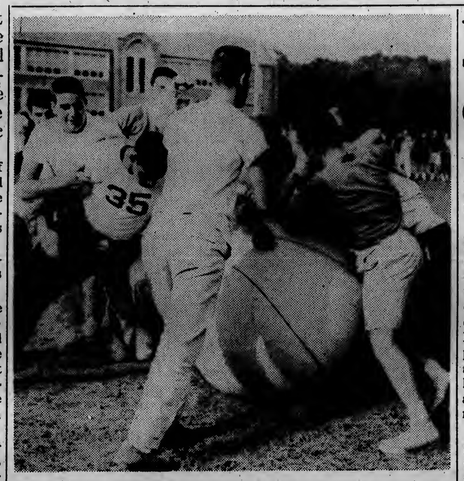
Two aims dominate the National Catholic Youth Organization for 1958: (1) To direct the attention of young people to their apostolic responsibilities in this era of extraordinary scientific advances, and (2) to ensure that young people will maintain a correct concept of the ultimate goal in life: eternal salvation.

Lanin-Featured Cotillion Slated For Friday Night

Arrangements for the Sophomore Cotillion, to be presented on Friday, are nearing completion, Mike Kuckelman and Bob Queen, Cotillion co-chairmen, have announced.

"This dance is a major event in Villanova's social calendar and has long been regarded as a 'must' for sophomore," the co-chairman said, "therefore we are expecting a large turnout."

'Society Step'



Kuckelman and Queen stated that they "feel fortunate in having secured Howard Lanin's famous Society Orchestra." The band consists of nine pieces and a vocalist; it is known for its unique "society step."

The theme of the dance, "A Southern Cotillion," will be expressed by decorating the Field House to represent a southern plantation of the Civil War era. A bubbling fountain, conceived by Bob Bohn and his decorations committee will be placed in the center of the dance floor to highlight the southern effect.

Not Formal

The Villanovans, the campus jazz combo, have been signed to play the intermissions. The required dress will be suits and cocktail dresses.

Tickets can be purchased in the Pie Shoppe from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. or from Cotillion comfreshments will be served.

Spirited competition such as this push-ball battle highlighted the Muff Day festivities between Freshmen and Sophomores. The question of which class won is still under dispute!

Frosh Lose 'Regs' Today; Bob DeLisa Averts Strike

By JOHN J. CURTIN
of The Villanovan Staff

The freshman class, by a ruling of the Student Council, can say good-bye to their "regs" today when the last class ends.

That's something that happens every year, but there never was as much excitement over the de-regging as there was this time.

And before it was all over, sophomore class president Bob DeLisa—who, along with council vice-chairman Tom Hoffman, was in charge of the orientation program for the Class of 1962—almost had a strike on his hands.

Everything started last Wednesday afternoon when the annual MUFF (Move Up Forward, Frosh) Day was held, pitting the sophs against the frosh in various forms of athletic competition. The sophs won, 79-62.

Long Gone, If—

That meant the freshmen had to wear their regs for a period of time designated by the council. If they had won, they'd have been able to get rid of them right on the spot.

Trouble was, everybody—meaning the frosh, for example—didn't agree that the sophs had won.

Difficulties arose when frosh Bill Coffill, who won both the 100 and 220 yard dashes, was disqualified by an Administration ruling that he was a scholarship athlete.

That left the sophs ahead, 69-57, going into the final event—a football game—and meant that the frosh were beaten no matter what the result of the contest.

Separate Tabulations

The frosh, however, did not agree with the disqualification of Coffill, and felt that they could have it reversed, so they saw the score as 67-65 in their

Student Government Week Listed By Student Council

Next week has been proclaimed Student Government Week by the Student Council.

According to vice-chairman Tom Hoffman, in charge of the week, its purpose is to develop a strong and well supported Student Council, and a well-informed and interested student body.

Highlights of the week will be meetings of the Student Senate and of the Student Congress. Of special importance will be the Student Congress Meeting at which Bob Murphy, chairman of the Student Council, will explain the operation of the Council under its new constitution.

"Anyone with an interest in Villanova's Student Government," Murphy said, "whether he be student or faculty member, is welcome. Presidents and moderators of organizations, and those planning to join the Council next year are advised to attend and observe procedures," Murphy added.

"Students who want to assist the Council through one of its special committees, will have the opportunity to talk with committee chairman at the meeting," Murphy stated.

Application forms will be distributed at that time. These committees are open to all undergraduate students.

"We would appreciate any interest shown toward our Presidential Committees," Murphy said, "because of their relative importance in Council affairs."

The following are Presidential Committees: Spirit Committee; NFCCS Commission; Student Affairs Committee; and the new Religious Activities Committee.

VU Engineer To Publish On Nov. 14

Bob Merkert, Editor of the VILLANOVA ENGINEER has announced that publication for this year's first issue is set for November 14.

The feature article for this first edition was written by Joseph Krackeler, senior chemical engineer. The article will deal with the chemical engineering department at Villanova and the chemical engineering profession. In future issues the other departments of the engineering school will be discussed. It is hoped that these articles will aid the freshman in picking his majors.

Merkert further stated that in order for the deadline for this issue to be met, it will require the co-operation of all members of the staff. They are requested to report this week to the VILLANOVAN ENGINEER office for their assignment.

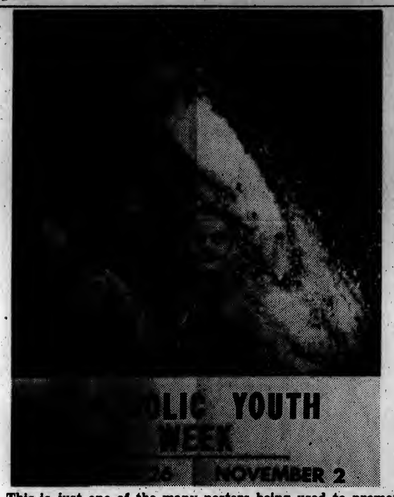
JOE KRACKELER
Writes for Engineer

Any engineering student desiring to submit an article for publication in the second issue, is requested to do so by December 3. Articles submitted after that date will be held over for subsequent issues.

Knights Seek New Members

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the Villanova Knights of Columbus Council will find an application for membership on the inside news pages of the VILLANOVAN. After filling out the admission blank, deposit it as soon as possible in either the Chaplain's Office in Mendel Hall or the Evening Division Office in Vasey Hall.

Moot Court Team Chooses 3 Members



At the final intra-school moot court argument last Wednesday, three men were chosen to represent the Villanova School of Law in intercollegiate competition.

Edward, David Moskowitz and Gerald Stockman won out over four other finalists — William Colsey, III, Henery Lucas, Leon Mankowski and Patrick Ryan. The seven had survived an earlier elimination argument series.

In November, the team will argue in Philadelphia in a series of regional rounds against teams from the other schools in then go on to New York for the National Moot Court Competition in December.

The bench which heard the final argument was headed by the Honorable Gerald Gleeson, Judge of Common Pleas Court No. 7 of Philadelphia. His associates were William Deasey and Robert Garbarino, both of whom are Philadelphia lawyers.

The announcement of the winners was made by Harold Gill Reuschlein, dean of the law school.

This is just one of the many posters being used to promote National Catholic Youth Week, which starts on Sunday. Its theme is the role of Catholic youth in this age of space research.

New Masque Faces Abound In 'Tiger At The Gates'

Belle Masque's November 5 through 9 show, "Tiger at the Gates," will bring to the Villanova stage many new faces this fall, drawn from both the Villanova campus and surrounding women's colleges.

In some cases these neophytes to Belle Masque will carry a heavy load and, in fact, will be starting at the top. To date, rehearsals have shown that all the new talent is ready to become an integral part of the future shows as well.

In the role of Ulysses there is Ray Kantre, a junior chemistry major from Edison, New Jersey. Ray, equipped with a fine speaking voice and sturdy build needed for the part, has in the past done most of his work in the musical line.

A former member of the Villanova Singers, he also did several musicals while in high school. Needless to say, the job of straight dramatic role is something new for him, but, despite his intense interest in music, he states dramatics will take an important place in his future plans.

Was Understudy

Margie Brown, as Andromache, has found a home with Belle Masque also. Margie, a junior art major at neighboring Rosemont College was called up from her understudy position to fill the female lead a few short weeks ago.

The Brooklyn girl, a member of Jest and Gesture at Rosemont, has made just one previous major stage appearance, the lead in the "Heiress" at Rosemont last fall. She also won the "Best Actress" award for the class plays at Rosemont in her freshman year.

Margie worked this summer as a page girl at R.C.A. and met many of the stars of T.V. and radio. Her comment on this was "I only hope some of that talent rubbed off."

Link Hallowell, another Brooklynite, plays Priam. Link, a junior social studies major, is new tto the stage. In high school he turned his efforts towards sports, but has recently decided to show a reversal of form and try the stage.

Business Worker

Link's only other experience with theatrics has been work on the famous Breeze Point Surf Club follies, in his home town where he handled business affairs .

Another Rosemont girl, Barbara Ann Burke, a junior premed from Havertown, will be seen in the role of Cassandra. Barbara also a member of Jest and Gestures, and played the lead role of "Antigone" in Rosemont's spring production last year. The twenty-year-old brunette directed the sophomore class play for Rosemont's class night last spring.

John Dagney plays the Topman. John is a vet, who did work last year at Harcum Junior College in "The Diary of Ann Frank."

From Immaculata, Belle Masque has secured Mary Schaffer and Diane Viti. Mary's previous experience was in a six month drama program at Catholic University. Diane, a sophomore, worked in high school musicals.

Girl Beginner

Other Villanovans who are new to our stage are Peter Allard, junior electrical engineer, who will play Busirus. Jim Lynch, a recruit from Turf and Tinsel, who will fill the role of Abneos; and John McGarry, sophomore C & F student.

Also in the cast is Consuelo Margarita Donahue, Villanova's lone girl engineer who transferred from Trinity College where she was very active in the drama grouy.

Rosemont Features 'Chimes' on Sunday

The Villanovans and the Georgetown Chimes will be the featured attractions at a Jazz Concert and Mixer at Rosemont College this Sunday afternoon.

The Villanovans will supply the music for the affair, listed for the T-House from 2 to 5 in the afternoon, and the Chimes, famous singing group from Georgetown University, will put on a performance about halfway through the concert.

Admission price for the mixer is $1 per person.

R. C. Udicious Is Fellow In Wilson Plan

Ralph C. Udicious, a 1958 Villanova graduate, has entered the Carnegie Institute of Technology to do graduate work in physics under the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship plan.

Udicious is one of 1,000 prospective college teachers in this country and Canada enrolled in graduate school under the plan.

Another 1,000 fellowships will be offered this year. Nominations for Woodrow Wilson Fellowships for next year must be made by a faculty member before October 31.

Applications Available

Villanova students interested can see Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Sciences, or write directly to the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, Box 642, Princeton, N.J.

Recognizing the need for college teachers, the Ford Foundation recently gave the fellowship group $25 million to aid outstanding first-year graduate stndents.

Beginning next year each fellowship will carry a living allowance of $1,500 for single students with increments for dependents, and will pay the full cost of tuition and fees.

Udicious' Background

As an undergraduate, Udicious majored in physics. He was a member of the Spirit Committee, Physics Club, Sanctuary Society, and the National Collegiate Who's Who.

He was an assistant instructor in the Villanova physics lab and worked in the Structural Dynamics Group of the Boeing Airplane Co., in Seattle, Wash.

Harvard Offers Graduate Help

The Harvard University Graduate School of Arts and Sciences is presently accepting applications for the more than 300 scholarships and non-teaching fellowships which it makes available.

Applications must be filled at the University by February 1, 1959.

The Division of Engineering and Applied Physics offers five fellowships worth $2,700—they're called the Gordon McKay Prize Fellowships. There are also other scholarships available at somewhat lower figure.

From nine to fifteen Harvard Foundation Prize Fellowships of $2,700 each will be awarded in the natural sciences, the social sciences and the humanities.

Ten four-year Graduate National Fellowships, which involve teaching, are being offered —with stipends of $2,700 for the first two years and $4,000 for the next two.

Application forms may be obtained by writing the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, 24 Quincy Street, Cambridge 38, Mass.

Nickel Aluminum-Bronze

The development of Ni-Bral high tensile nickel aluminum-bronze is attracting the attention of all the leading shipyards and ship operators in the United States and Europe. This alloy, which has excellent mechanical properties along with high resistance to corrosion and erosion, is being used for ship propellers, rudders, shafts, reduction gears, valves and pump parts.

Expert Speaks Tomorrow At Accounting Society

A local public accountant will address the Accounting Society tomorrow morning at 10.30 in room 209 of the new Commerce and Finance building.

The accountant, William D. Carpenter, a manager with the firm of Arthur Anderson and Co., will also present a film called, "Budgeting, Forecasting and Responsibility in Accounting."

George Chorba, moderator of the society and a member of the Accounting Department, said that Carpenter will answer questions concerning the public accounting field.

At the society's last meeting, Chorba introduced the new officers. They are Gerald Gibbons, president; Anthony Mullin, vice president; Thomas O'Brien, secretary, and Edward Scott, treasurer.

Gibbons revealed that plans had been made for additional speakers, smokers, field trips and other activities more related to the accounting field.

"We want accounting students to be able to distinguish between the various types of accounting work so that they will have the necessary information to determine the branch of accounting they will follow," Gibbons said.

Government Tests Listed By Moritz

Seniors in Liberal Arts and Commerce and Finance have been reminded of two tests givnn by the government to Federal job applicants, in an announcement released by Placement Director John A. Moritz.

The Federal Service Entrance examination will be given November 15, Jaunary 10, February 14 and later dates in March, April and May.

A descriptive booklet and application form 5000 AB can be obtained from the Placement Office. The booklet lists career positions in more than twenty fields.

The National Security Agency's Professional Qualification Test for 1958-59 will be given here on campus on December 6. No other test is scheduled until late in 1959.

Only those who pass this test are eligible for interviews which will be held in Dougherty Hall on February 19 and 20 of 1959.

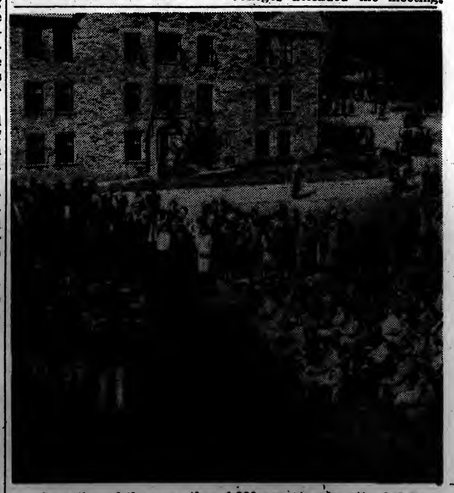
Registration for the test closes on November 29 of this year. The N.S.A. bulletin of information man can be obtained in the Placement Office.

Moritz also said that the Career Conference will be held on December 4 instead of December 7, as was originally announced in the VILLANOVAN.

Woman Teaching Philosophy Here

For the first time in Villanova's history, a woman, Mrs. Idella Gallagher has been included to the University's department of Philosophy.

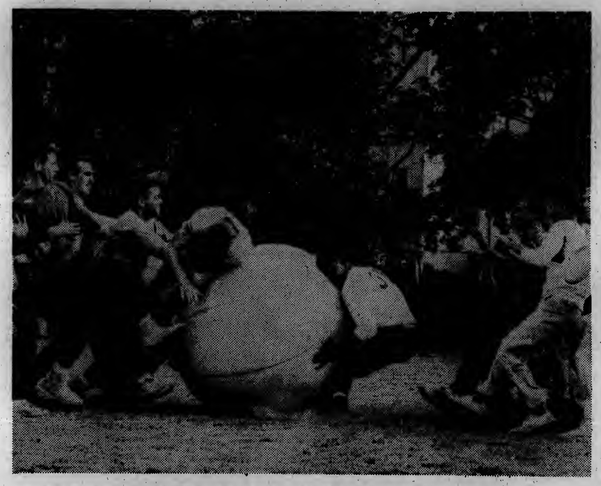
Mrs. Gallagher, the wife of Dr. Donald Gallagher, assistant chairman of the Philosophy department, teaches Logic and Ethics in the College of Nursing.



Before coming to Villanova, Mrs. Gallagher taught philosophy at Marquette University, 1943 through 1955, and at Alverno College, Milwaukee, 1955 through 1958.

She received her Bachelor of Philosophy degree at Marquette in 1942, then studied at New York University, St. Louis University, and Webster College. She also attended the following schools in Europe: Louvain, Sorbonne, and Cambridge.

Fr. Bartley Attends MAACBA Meeting



Villanova University was represented by the Rev. Joseph Bartley, O.S.A. Dean of Commerce and Finance, at the Eighth Annual Meeting of the Middle Atlantic Association of Colleges of Business Administration held last week at the Stacy-Trent Hotel, Trenton, N.J.

Thirty-seven Deans and representatives of area Business Colleges attended the meeting.

A portion of the more than 4,000 parents who attended Parents' Day, sit and listen to the Concert Band, who are being directed by Herbert Fiss.

Sophomores, Freshmen Battle for Muff Day Title

Freshman Richie Haines appears to be catching 40 winks during Muff Day. Actually, he is simply bracing himself to withstand the power of half a dozen sophomores. Haines' frosh mates have been jolted backward.

A group of victorious freshmen are sent sprawling after they win a tug-of-war against the sophomores on Muff Day. The sophs defeated the frosh overall, however, causing the first year men to wear their 'regs' for an additional week.

Dr. McInerney Has Forms For Danforth Fellowships

Students interested in being granted a Danforth Graduate Fellowship should see Dr. John McInerney, assistant to the Vice President for Academic Affairs, as soon as possible in Mendal Hall.

Nominations for these scholarships must be received by November 1.

Appointment is given to approximately 100 men preparing for college teaching who, at the time of applying, have had no graduate study.

Every accredited college in the U.S.A. is invited to nominate annually, through the liason officer, for the appointment as Danforth Fellow, two or not to exceed three men, less than thirty years ago.

Selection Method

Selection is made on the basis of outstanding academic ability, personality congenial to the classroom, and integrity and character, including serious inquiry within the Christian tradition.

The applicant must be preparing to teach in an academic discipline common to the undergraduate college. Men in the natural and biological sciences and in the social sciences are encouraged to ayply.

The Danforth Fellow is free to use his fellowship at any accredited university in the U.S. Concurrent with this appointment, he may carry other national fellowships such as the Rhodes Scholarship, the Woodrow Wilson Fellowship, the Fulbright Award.

The appointment is for one year, with expectation of annual renewal through the years of graduate study, if the graduate record is distinguished and the relationship proves mutually harmonious.

Need Counts

The Danforth Foundation offers financial assistance to its fellows according to individual need, limiting the annual maximum grant to $1,400 plus tuition and fees required of all graduate students, for the single man; and $1,900 plus tuition and fees required of all graduate students, for the married man, with an additional stipend of $350 for each child.

The address of The Danforth Foundation is 835 South Eighth Street, St. Louis 2, Missouri.

McKenna Speaks On Fitzgerald To Literary Club

A report on the autobiographical elements in the works of F. Scott Fitzgerald will be presented to the Literary Club tomorrow afternoon by vice-president Tom McKenna, a senior.

McKenna's paper — "Mrs. Parker Comes At Noon"—will be heard and discussed by the club at 3:30 in the VILLANOVAN office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

President Jack Curtin announced that the afternoon session was part of a new policy of the club to make it easier for day students to attend the meetings, or "at least those meetings at which no outside speakers are present."

He added that any faculty or interested student members are invited to attend the reading of the paper and the seminar discussion that will follow.

"Three Priests," a novel by Joseph Dever, has been chosen as the November selection of the Catholic Digest Book Club.

Lynx Writing Contest Has Cash Prize

Ten dollars and the possibility of publication in a national magazine awaits the winner of the writing contest recently announced by Frank Dynan, editor in chief of the Lynx.

The contest is open to all undergraduate students at Villanova and the scope of eligible writing includes the short story, poem, essay and article.

The prize of ten dollars will be given to the writed of the best literary creation no matter what it be. However, only the best short story or article will be sent to Mary Yost Associates, the New York literary agent with whom arrangements have been made, because they alone are in great demand by national magazines.

Although an entry may not win the cash award, it will still receive serious consideration for publication in the Lynx, Dynan said.

All entries must be received by Wednesday, November 13. If at all possible, they should be typewritten and double spaced. If hand written they must be legible.

"Aside from the cash award," Dynan said, "I believe that this contest provides a rare opportunity to the student who has ever dreamed of selling his work to a national magazine."

Dynan also announced that there would be a general meeting of the Lynx staff today at 3:30 in 101 Classroom Annex. All editors, Managers an and their staffs are expected to attend.

● Movie producer, at the end of a story conference: "Thanks, boys, and if any of you find yourselves in disagreement with the suggestions I have made, will you please signify by saying, 'I resign'?"

George Christenson Earns Scott Paper Scholarship

George L. Christensen, a junior civil engineering student from Bethesda, Md., was awarded the Scott Paper Foundation Scholarship for 1958-59.

The award, based on scholarship, extra-curricular activity, and character, amounts to $1,000 a year for an engineering student's last two years. The recipient is chosen by a committee consisting of faculty and student representatives.

Here at Villanova, George is treasurer of Phi Kappa Pi and the ASCE. He is also a member of the Sanctuary Society, Junior Class Steering Committee, Villanova Engineer, and participates in intra-mural football, basket, and baseball.

Rev. John Klekotka, O.S.A., Dean of Admissions, congratulates George Christenson, junior engineer, on his being awarded the Scott Paper Co. Scholarship for his last two years in school.

We Are Now Intellectuals

"Today's college student is a new and different species of more mature abilities and serious purpose, but he is often hobbled by obsolete college programs."

That's what Loren B. Pope had to say in last Thursday's NEW YORK TIMES, reporting the conclusions of a study commission on the college student conducted by the American Council on Education.

"Joe College is no more," the commission reported, his place has been taken by a much abler and individualistic seeker after independence rather than conformity. The "new" college man is no longer impressed with the BMOC role, he often has outside ties such as a job, wife, etc. which are more important than his campus life. Even interest in athletics has decreased.

The commission even goes so far at to recommend doing away with "artificial" practices such as grades and credit requirements for graduation and the four year span of study.

It seems that the modern student wants more opportunity for information study. He is seeking useful and practical information, and thus many college programs are now obsolete. Or so the commission says.

Well, the commission interviewed students all over the country, and we guess they know what they're talking about, but we haven't seen much evidence of the change.

The way we see it, "Joe College' will always be with us. Even if he is an intellectual on the side.

Villanova's Parking Problem

In a letter to the VILLANOVAN last week, an undergraduate wondered why the Student Council could not take over the operation of the parking lot during the football season.

The money derived from the fees would be divided between the athletic department of the university and the Student Council. At present, the receipts are split between the Athletic Department and concessionaries than run the parking system.

Athletic Director Frank Reagan told the VILLANOVAN he had no objection to the plan proposed by the undergraduate.

"But you must realize that the Athletic Department has its budget just as every other campus group. If the council proposes a fair plan, we will be glad to consider it." Reagan said.

Parking on the lots for the Wake Forest game Saturday was in a state of complete confusion. In an effort to make more money, the parking employees packed cars into driveways and exits.

The employees, for the most part, left after the first quarter, leaving the post-game exodus to the responsibility of local police.

Villanova suffers in the long run as resolutions are vigorously made by the paying public to stay home next Saturday. "Keep the customers who drive cars happy" was a modern proverb learned too late by a few major-league baseball owners.

The move is now up to the student council. It is the opportune time to plan for next year's problems—before they happen.

Is 'Joe College' Really Dead?

Letters to the Editor:

Commander Praises Villanova NROTC Men

To The Editor:

No one doubts the axiom "Action speak louder than words." It is very heartening to receive letters like the following commendation given to our students who spent their training period this summer at the United States Naval Amphibious Base in Little Creek, Virginia. The letter was addressed to the Father President and read as follows:

Very Reverend and
Dear Father:

This brief note is for the purpose of commending your young men from Villanova for their fine example and religious spirit. They have been the leaders not only in their navy subjects during the Summer training, but especially in religious practice. The majority of them assisted at Mass daily, and their example influenced young men from other Colleges to participate in the religous opportunities offered by the Navy to its embryo officers.

In view of this, the power of good example on the part of Villanovans of good-will could do much to clear up the many complaints reaching the Chaplain's Office concerning the cursing, vulgarity and unclean speech used by some of the Student body. It is the duty of the students of the University to try to keep the good name of Villanova unblemished to do their part in providing a good example to others of good clean speech.

Rev. Norbert Whitley, O.S.A.
Chaplain

To the Editor:

There is one place on our campus where the Colors of the United States of America are flying each day. At 8 a.m. and 4:15 p.m., these Colors are respectively raised and lowered, and is seems that the only ones who pay strict respect to this ceremony are the Naval ROTC students.

For one onlooking Mendel Field and its environs in the morning and afternoon, one would think there weren't many Americans on campus due to the fact that students persist in horseplay, unnecessary conversation, or just carrying on nonchalantly while the few respecting students pay what little tribute they can.

That flag is a symbol of America, its upholdings and principles and it came about through the loss of much blood in revolutionary days. Let's pay it the respect it is due. We are American students, yet we get very little chance to show some patriotism. Let's take one minute of the day and pay tribute to Old Glory. You some day may have to give your life for it. Others have!

D. R. Anderson

To The Editor:

Most students at Villanova seem to have complaints about the conditions on campus. Many of these man have excellent ideas on possible improvements for the school.

Nevertheless, they do not take any constructive action to see that the situations are remedied or that their ideas are used.

One of the purposes of the Student Council, as quoted from the preamble of its constitution, is "to better provide for the welfare of the student body and the development of Villanova."

To do this the council has to know what the students want.

If you have any gripes or ideas, jot them down on a piece of paper and drop them in the suggestion box under the Student Council bulletin board in Dougherty Hall.

An answer to "Who Cares"
Who cares, Mr. Kempf ? We of Villanova who are sane.
John P. Kelley

To the Editor:

Mr. John P. Kelley in his article "White Elephant Wanes As The Donkey Grows Fat" (Villanovan, 10/15.P.7) has attacked the present administration's policies and predicted a landslide Democratic vote in November. I feel that Mr. Kelley has done the students a disservice when he states four reasons why the Republican Party is on the defensive nationally and then only considers two of his points.

However, if the ommissions were not your fault, Mr. Kelley, I recommend very strongly that you have a few words with your Editor and straighten that boy out.

Foreign Student Says "No Different World"

By BILL SPEERS

Masakazo Suguira is the first and only Japanese student thus far to grace the Villanova campus. The story of John's final arrival at V. U. (John is his adopted Christian name) is both an interesting and provocative one.

To get the whole story we must return to Japan in the year 1948, when John was ten years old. He was a Buddhist as were his parents and ancestors of the last 300 years. A friend of his introduced him to a Catholic priest and a firm friendship began to grow. He began to receive religious instruction and finally, at the approval of his parents, embraced Catholicism. Later on, John brought his three younger brothers and sister into the Church. In 1949 Mr. and Mrs. Suguira adopted the Faith.

The significance of the conversion of the Suguira family is not evident until one realizes that almost all of Japan is Buddhist. For a Japanese to be converted to Catholicism is as radical at a son of Erin embracing Confucianism.

Chose Villanova

During his high school days, John expressed a desire to further his education in America. So his father, who is president of the Konca Camera Co., set out personally to find for John a "Good Catholic American college" which he could attend. A friend recommended Villanova. Mr. Suguira investigated, liked what he found out, and entered John in our Commerce and Finance division.

John arrived on U. S. soil for the first time in September of last year. For one who has only a year in the states behind him, and no previous practical experience in the English language, John speaks exceptionally clear, distinct, and unaccented English. He believes, though, that the English class for foreign students introduced this year was direly needed by many.

What's So Funny

Both then and now the hardest things for John to comprehend are the English language and American humor, in that order. He experienced the latter during his first week on campus as students persisted at throwing dirty laundry into his room. He recalls the incident with a smile now, but you can imagine his bewilderment at the time.

We asked John for his impression of Americans before he came here and after a year of residence. He told us he knew little of American ways before he arrived here, but that he, along with the rest of Japan, was shocked at the Little Rock case. "I find though," he told us, "That the American people on the whole are both receptive and likeable." He now also shares the American fun-loving nature.

Of the American student, John states that he is much more industrious than his Japanese counterpart. However, he observes with personal displeasure the conformity within our collegiate ranks. "All the students wear the same clothes (Ivy League), and have the same cars," he states. John tells us that the older Japanese tend to think of us as materialists. The younger set—they want to visit the states. From what they see in American movies, our country is the greatest!

Movies

Speaking of movies, John informs us the American pictures are far more popular than those made in Japan. They prefer our love stories; with Grace Kelly and Rock Hudson topping the star list. Japanese television has been Americanized to an extent with "Superman" topping the popularity polls.

John is quite talented, playing proficiently the piano, flute, and ukelale. He likes both jazz and classical music, but leans more toward the former, with Dave Brubeck and Eddie Condon being his favorite artists. He has no time for "rock and roll."

MASAKAZO SUGUIRA

But the "great American by-product" has left its mark in Japan, as "rock and roll" has taken the islands by storm. And as it is in this country it is looked down on by older folks.

Judo Expert

John, like most Japanese, is an avid sports enthusiast. He plays golf, likes motorcycling, and is a 5th class Judo expert, a position attained only through vigorous competition. He is also quite a baseball fan, Japan's number one sport.

We changed the subject and asked John about boy-girl relations in Japan. He told us that they are radically different from ours. Before a boy can date a girl in Japan, he must be formally introduced to her; then the couple must be taken for a "night on the town" by the girl's parents. After this initiation, he may then ask the girl for a date. Those who date regularly are not favored. John likes our dating customs, and thinks American girls are prettier than those at home.

Relations between boys, themselves, are quite different from ours. Before fellows may speak to each other, they must be formally introduced, and they must initially address each other by their last names.

No Kimonos

John may have cleared up many misconceptions when he told us that his people live much the same as we do. They do not walk around in Kimonos, the native dress, nor are a good percentage of the people starving, as many believe. He states that only about 1% of the people can be considered as starving. Most have cars and television just as we do. The only difference being, as John puts it, "only we do not worry about money as Americans do."

We were discussing one of Japan's greatest problems—juvenile delinquency—when we hit upon another delicate subject. He was telling me how most delinquency was caused by war orphans, when I asked him just how his countrymen feel about the last war. He told us that there was no anti-Americ-

In Defense Of The Committeeman

By J. P. KELLEY

The winners of this year's state-federal election will owe a debt of gratitude to the Committeemen and women of their party. These division workers are the elected officials who are closest to their constituents and thus, the major factor in the 'grass-roots' advancement of the electoral process.

Their primary duty is to get voters registered and make sure they vote on Election Day. Subsidiary but important tasks include protecting the public against violations of the Election's Code and arranging for polling places and election officials.

The question is often asked—"What motivates a Committeeman"? It is certainly not for financial reasons since he receives no pay for services rendered. The money he does receive on Election Day is usually not enough to take care of his expenses; hence he often sacrices his own resources to benefit the people he represents.

Primarily the motivations are threefold—the party worker acts to further good government, for prestige, and for his political advancement. Many high officials in public life were and still are party Committeemen.

Social Work

Committee personnel are social workers. They constantly urge community improvements in housing, sanitation, street lighting, and traffic guides. They are often instrumental in gaining the repair and repaving of streets, better transportation, libraries, and parking facilities for their districts.

Sports Outfit Suggested For Collegiate Casuals

By LARRY PALACIO

Today I actually considered resigning my column space to someone possessing lesser talents than I. Ha! You say that is impossible. You say that the VILLANOVAN would collapse without my superbly directed genius. My friends, I am included to agree with you, but I had a most disrupting experience today. I was soliciting opinions from a group of exquisitely dressed females at a nearby campus on the subject of clothing habits of the Villanova male.

Ugh!

The opinions expressed could not be printed here, they being so derisive. I was further shocked when these mocking utterances were even illustrated. There, calmly smoking a cigarette and smiling like a contented feline was a most disgusting sight. Light green, summer weight slacks; rumpled, baggy, navy-blue blazer, shiny nylon, tan sport shirt and something resembling a shoe lace substituting for a tie comprised this individual's outfit.

Change your ways sirs, or you will be the laughing stock of the entire college scene. In desperation I offer a suitable sport outfit for you to present yourselves in. First selection: a sport coat of better grade Harris tweed, no thin stripes, please, and no excessive shoulder padding. Rather, a wide stripe, a check weave or a solid herring bone in soft shades of light brown tan or employ a bolder color scheme using a hunter or lively olive green.

What? No Belt In Back?

Second selection: slacks of gabardine, worsted wool or the heavier dacron blends. Surprise, no belt in back and no cuffs, retaining the tapered tailoring perhaps with even a slimmer leg than last year. Here we can use a dark charcoal grey, a brown and black or a flat olive green. Match the coat and slacks with a tan or red sport shirt, plain colors and foulard or paisley prints will all fit suitably.

Forsake the button down for a straight short collar either open or closed. For the more daring. I suggest a flat red oxford, shirt collar left open with a green foulard ascot enhancing the neck. Finish this outfit off with a pair of soft grained Italian loafers in oxford red or dark brown.

You may utilize a part or all of this scheme but most important, mind your color shades. As a rule of thumb, always look to nature's autumn color displays for advice. The complete outfit may, by careful selection and alert buying, be assembled for the modest sum of fifty dollars.

Two-Penny Comic Opera

By DON KEMPF

The sun was shining the other day. I had two pennies and was wondering what to do. I decided I would walk down to Mrs. Tracy's corner store and buy two jaw-breakers.

When I got to the corner—Mrs. Tracy's corner—I barely recognized it. The wooden face of the building, the small windows that always had jars of different kinds of candies, the awning that rolled down in the morning and up at night—the one we ran and jumped and tried to touch—all were gone. Now there was a window that ran the entire face of the store and in the center a neon light flashed "National Drug Store" on and off in a bright red color.

I went into the store. Florescent lights were shining everywhere and I walked up to one of the men in the white linen uniforms and asked where Mrs. Tracy was.

He told me that she had passed away and that National Chain-Drugs now ran the store. "Have thirty seven stores in the city now," he proudly stated.

Yes, We Have No Jawbreakers

I asked him for two jaw-breakers. He scratched his head and asked me what jaw-breakers were; and when I had told him, he said that the store didn't carry those any more. They didn't carry long pretzels, malt balls, fake wax teeth, Kits, long sheets of paper with candy dots on them, or those wax bottles with orange syrup in them either.

"But we do have these candy bars for a nickel," he said as he led me to a fancy display of candy bars. They were on fancy racks, all wrapped up in shiny paper, sealed tight by a big machine, and probably very nutritious. But they didn't look like they would be much fun, so I thanked the man and went out through one of the large glass doors.

Also Among the Missing

As I walked down the street I though about other absentees. I though about empty lots and how much fun they used to be, and how they were being filled by useless buildings. I though about tree forts—where everyone talked in a whisper in case enemy spies were around; about building scooters out of orange crates and roller skates.

And then I came to a group of young boys. They were wearing eye masks, black hats and capes, and were flashing swords. The word ZORRO was written across the back of their capes. When I asked them what ZORRO was they just looked at me and began to laugh.

As I ran down the street away from them, watching them with my Tom Mix, over-the-shoulder, viewer ring, I saw that they were all laughing and pointing at me.

And one of them was eating one of those nickel candy bars.

U. N. Challenge To Arabs Causes Mid-East Strife

By JIM COREY

Since 1948 the Mid-East has been a constant series of complex problems. In that year the United Nations, with the encouragement of the United States and Great Britian, partitioned parts of territories into the state of Isreal. The Arabs, including Egyptians Syrians, Jordanese, Saudi Arabians, and others resented this, and we now have to face the results of their most bitter moments, the defeat of the Arab Armies by the Israel Army. To the average Arab, this meant, in addition to the loss of territory, the loss of prestige. The honor of the Arab people had been challenged. Since 1949, most of the events occuring in the Mid-East can be linked to this challange.

NEED A NEW LINE?
(See Brothers)

THE ARAB QUESTION
(See Corey)

The Arabs have answered by their partial acceptance of Nassarism, the result of the decay of the Egyptian Dynasty. Is Nassar better than the previous government of Egypt ? Any answer must be qualified.

Being a democratic country, the United States was favorable to the betterment of government and although this is an open question, I personally feel that Nassar's government is better than that of King Farouk.

Farouk or Nassar ?

Opposed to the stagnant, inflexible government of King Farouk, Nassar presents a very dynamic, energetic government which now is rising in the eyes of the governments of the Arab world and most especally in the eyes of the Far Eastern countries.

Thus, from the standpoint of better government Nassar is an improvement. But what of our foreign policy and most important, Egypt's criticism of the United States. Daily we are critized, occasionally in quite strong terms, by Radio Cairo and even Radio Damascus. The papers of Egypt, being under government censorship, never cease to print the charges of American imperialism, and Zionism. Since Radio Cairo, et al are all controlled by the government, this would seem to indicate the opinions and feelings of the Nassar government.

Obviously foreign relations with the weak government of Farouk would be compartively easy. But now we face a revival of Pan-Arabism, a less managable regime. So in this regard the change of government was bad.

Confused Crises

More details should be investigated such as the hundreds of thousands of Arab refugees, Israel's attack on Egypt and the United States' renig on their promise to assist the building of the Aswan Dam. But all of these can be traced to the 1948 decision by the United Nations. The entire strength of Nassarism is based on the fact that the Arab has been challenged.

What can the United States do to relieve the tension in the Mid-East ? First, it is my opinion that if ever faced with the absolute choice of either Egypt or Isreal, Egypt must be the choice. As Nassarism involves most of the Arab countries, and these Arab countries have over 75 percent of the known oil reserve, SAC bases, and control the Suez, what has Isreal to offer? You may say opposition to Communism, but Nassar has outlawed the Communist Party in both Egypt and Syria.

Some say we have a moral obligation to help Isreal, since we were more or less responsible for her creation, but we may more properly say that we have no moral responsibility to continue a bad decision.

Thus, the only plausible reason that we should continue to support Isreal is that she exsists as an entity, to destroy her as a country by allowing rampant Arabianism would be morally wrong. What we must do is use our pressure to correct a bad decision.

A Soultion

Some suggested pressures would be: 1) induce Isreal to support and eventually settle the Arab refugees. 2) encourage a meeting of conciliation and mediation between the heads of the governments of Isreal and Egypt. 3) if possible, to limit our arms supply to Isreal, but more preferabley to the whole Arab block of Nassar. This would relieve the necessity for continuing arms expansion, since both nations would be started on the path of peace.

The challange of Arab nationalism is before us. We can continue our present policy of promoting resistance and perhaps even use military force, or we can also try to understand Arab Nationalism and work with the Arabs to channel their nationalism in constructive lines. We must make a choice: continued unrest in the Mid-East or the possibility of working with the Arabs. The latter seems the more probable course.

How would you like to serve as a Congressional Page? Can you imagine yourself walking around during House and Senate sessions, rubbing elbows with our nations top leaders?

If you can't picture yourself in this position, picture Terry Scanlon, a sophomore C and F student here at Villanova, who has had first hand experience in this capacity.

Up Before The Birds

Terry graduated from the Congressional Page school in Washington D.C. The school is situated on the third floor of the Library of Congress building, and has an average enrollment of eighty House and Senate pages.

Because of the Congressional sessions which demand the pages' presence, the classes are held in the early morning from 6:30 to 10:30 a.m. With this tight schedule, only major preparatory courses can be taught.

Terry served as house Documentarian during the eighty-fourth and part of the eighty-fifth Congresses. As Documentarian, he handled all of the daily legislation of the House, and signaled for recesses and adjournments.

Shorter Than Short

Asked about the hours, Terry says, "The working hours are long and tedious. In the Senate, sessions may and do last till early morning, and the pages must be present at all times. However (Terry breathed a sigh of relief), the House sessions rarely last that long."

Join the Teahouse Troops:

Want To Be A Commando?

By SHELL E. KEATS

Attention Freshmen, are you interested in joining that dedicated band of Villanovans who each year fill the Rosemont-Teahouse to overflowing? Yes, the same ones seen every weekend with happy smiles on their faces, that type of smile which accompanies thoughts of a nice looking date. Then you are interested in becoming a Teahouse Commando, so take heed.

The Teahouse Commando is a special breed. He has to be, for the requirements are discriminating. A Commando must be able to tell the truth with more than the usual amount of color. He must be able to keep the eyes of the freshmen femininity wide open, while extracting at least the average amount of Oh's and Ah's.

A good knowledge of "Bridge" is another prime requirement. A good knowledge consisting of being able to sit there looking intelligent while he is being beaten. No true Commando can claim ignorance of this brain taxing game; although there are times when it could save face.

Year 'Round Snow

Finally, the Commando must be able to cover the plain green of the Rosemont campus with shiny deceptive stuff called "snow". That same intangible something that soothes the homesick heart of freshman Rosemont by providing a hero to replace the mother and father that were left at home.

The guiding philosophy of the Commando is "first come, first to see what Rosemont has to offer". The keen mind of this Villanova specialist uses the existing tactical procedures to great advantage; and when these fail, he brings about new innovations.

Beware of Upperclassmen.

Tactical procedures such as: the use of old acquaintances to make new ones, and the use of new ones to make newer ones; by passing upperclassmen (women in this case) because their knowledge of Commando tactics has been known to cause embarassment to the wary conquerer; and finally, following the philosophy of the famous old southern tactician General Forest by getting there firstest with the mostest in the way of offers to picnics, dances, and other college yummy yummies.

The Commando must be the most socially aggressive of the Villanova students. He has been accused by many of taking a course in Social Engineering, but actually this course is only a minor. His major can be any of the other courses offered by the University. The best Commando is usually the upperclassmen and with good reason, for the intricacies of this type of combat are best learned through experience, but there are openings for frosh.

Men of Many Purposes

Despite their many failings, the Commando reserves a high place in the hearts of the Rosies. He is a teacher, preacher, counsellor, big brother, playmate, and a fourth for bridge to the feminine population of our close affiliation. The future of the Commando is guaranteed (Villanova is the only school within six and a half minutes walking time).

For those who fear competition, put your minds at ease; there's room for another hero. Holes are continuously appearing in the Commando ranks because of those who fall in action to such things as graduation, and the more merciful "collegiate marriage", better known as "pinning".

Chanting Bandstanders Bugs on 'Jacket Racket'

By PETE ALLARD

Few of us who survived 1957 have forgotten that otherwise bright Monday afternoon when "Bandstand" became "American Bandstand." Even now, months after the great event, repercussions of one kind or another occur in those areas where it is televised. American Bandstand is Philadelphia's first significant contribution to network television, and it certainly has provoked interest in the city of Brotherly love.

Bandstand has everything. it's fun to count emcee Dick Clark's yessir's, all-rightee's, or here-we-go's, and one is filled with new confidence in the U.N. after watching the regular participants get their distemper shots from World Health Organizations teams.

Perhaps you will be content counting the teeth in Dick Clark's "American Boy" smile, as he giggles with a dazed looking blonde who has celebrated three coast-to-coast birthdays in as many weeks, or simply trying to tell the girls from the boys.

If you would rather be cynical than complacently content, you can blame the rainy summer on the Bandstand chants. Never watched the show before, you will enjoy the total effect; that of a bankrupt zoo at feeding time.

Indian Want Firewater!

Looking back to the first national airing of the program, it is interesting to recall some of the action which was taken that week; The National Council of Churches declared Philadelphia a missionary territory, and the East India Company hastily established a trading company post at the T.V. station. It is also true that many letters postmarked Georgia, Alabama etc., were written to ask Dick Clark if he's sure that the North did win the Civil war.

Bandstand is principally a cultural force; a bandstand fan is a bug on culture in much the same manner as a moth on a grey flannel suit.

White Man Kick Indian

His vocabulary consists primarily of guttural sounds, and "Yeah!" or "Naw!", although some of the more literate ones are able to pronounce name and school after two or three tries and a sharp kick from Dick Clark.

When asked what they want out of life, most bandstanders will answer either an echo mike, enough Black Angus cattle to start in the jacket racket, or a rich husband or wife. This last answer shows that there is still a slight flicker of hope.

We asked about the future of the Suguira family and himself in particular. He said that he awaits the arrival of his cousin who will take graduate courses at the University of Pennsylvania next year. His brother, a talented artist, would like to study in France.

As for John, himself, he has found happiness at Villanova. The students are very friendly, and he is doing well with his studies. In his words: "I'm happy here, but like you Americans say, 'there's no place like home'."

World Seen Fortunate In UN's Existence

By CLINTON P. CHIN

The world today is very fortunate in the existence of an organization such as the United Nations. This cosmopolitan body primarily endeavors to eliminate and settle in a peaceful manner any crises that may arise between nations.

In retrospect, we can see that the world has never been at peace. The very ambitious political figureheads are always striving to materialize their aspirations at the expense of other nations.

The foregoing statement arouses in the reader's mind the question—Are the efforts of the U.N. futile? Its endeavors are idealistic, but its ventures are by no means unavailing. It is true that the world will never be free of those very ambitious few, but the existence of an international organization — the United Nations — provides a constructive channel through which each member nation has a moral obligation to direct his actions.

Charter Members

Thirteen years ago, on October 24, the United Nations was formed when a majority of its original member countries ratified its charter. During the first year of its existence the United Nations had fifty-one members.

Today, the U.N. has eighty-one members. In 1946 four new members were admitted, two members in 1947, one new member in each of the years 1948, 1949 and 1950, sixteen new members in 1955, four new members in 1956 and two new members in 1957. The majority of these new members are Asian and African countries that have advanced from colonial status to independence in the last 13 years.

Other new members may be admitted as more of the former colonial areas qualify, or if such divided countries as Germany, Korea and Vietnam are united or, finally, if Red China ever reforms sufficiently to win an adequate number of votes to get a seat.

The principle organs of the U.N. are the General Assembly, which seats all member nations of the U.N. A two-thirds majority vote—fifty four of the eighty-one members—is required to pass a resolution.

Assembly Duties

Any questions or matters within the scope of the Charter or relating to the powers and functions of the other organs of the United Nations are dealt with within the General Assembly. It has the power to make recommendations to the members of the U.N. or to the Security Council on these questions.

There is one exception to this power to recommend: it is in connection with a dispute or situation which is being dealt with by the Security Council—unless the General Assembly is asked to do so by the Council, or fails to exercise its primary responsibility to maintain internatonal peace and security.

On the recommendation of the Security Council, the General Assembly admits new members to te United Nations. It determines the U.N.'s budget and te conhtribution of each member toward expenses.

The General Assembly, through a special committee, studies and analyses information on the economic, social and educational conditions in the Non-Self Governing Territories, This information is submitted annually by the member states which administer the territories.

Eleven Members

The Security Council consists consists of eleven members. Five are permanent— Nationalist China, France, Great Britain, United States and the USSR; six are non-permanent members and are elected for two year terms to represent Western Eur-

Eisenhower Proclaims United Nations Day

"Firm support of the United Nations has always been a fundamental element of our foreign policy"—so states President Eisenhower's proclamation of UN Day, 1958.

Democratic administrations, too, have both in word and deed affirmed the principle of working through the United Nations. For maximum effectiveness the UN needs the understanding and backing of all our citizens.

UN Day, celebrated each year on October 24, anniversary of the founding of the United Nations, is designed to promote a better grasp by the American people of the problems, aims and accomplishments of the United Nations.

This year, after pointing to the key role of the United Nations in America's foreign policy, UN Day heralds the day-by-day work of the 19 United Nations Specialized and other international agencies which strive to prevent war by attacking its causes; hunger, disease, ignorance, oppression.

Cornell Students Capture Five Engineering Awards

Five engineering undergraduates at Cornell University received all of the top awards this year in the annual mechanical and structural welded design competition sponsored by The James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation of Cleveland, Ohio.

This is the first time in the eleven year history of the competition that students in one engineering school have made a clean sweep of the three top awards.

The Lincoln Foundation makes 46 awards each year recognizing the engineering ability of college undergraduates in the field of welded design. Awards are made for both mechanical and structural designs which make a significant use of arc welding for improvement and lower costs.

The Foundation also awards scholarship funds to the schools in which students were enrolled when making their designs.

Top award of $1250 went to Richard Jarvis of Baltimore, Md. for his design of a triangular shaped foot bridge. John Jenner and E. R. McLean of LeRoy, N. Y., and Philadelphia, respectively shared the $1000 Second Award for the mechanical design of an automatic welding machine.

Gordon Kraus and Robert Spicher designed a display arboretum which received the $500 Third Award. Honoring these awards, Cornell received $1750 in scholarship funds to be administered by the Mechanical and Civil Engineering Departments.

The 1958-59 Rules booklet for the current competition is now available from The James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation, Cleveland 17, Ohio. Undergraduates in all branches of engineering are eligible to participate.

Varsity Riflers Give Marksmen's Course

Four members of the varsity rifle team last week gave a course in rifle marksmanship to special classes of interested students.

The team members, Daniel Speda, Lou Spevetz, Frank Murtha, and Chris Kloss, who are all members of the National Rifle Association, conducted the courses in the Navy building.

Sergeant John Mulcany, coach of the rifle team and director of the course, said that the course was planned to give students a proficiency in the use of small arms.

Late at night the Committeeman might be aroused and asked to get a copy of a charge for someone jailed for a minor violation. He finds jobs for those out of work, aids the aged, and advises those in need of compensation or relief. In emergencies or when trouble strikes his fellow-man the Committeeman is at hand to assist.

Every two years elections are held for this office. Any qualified person who wishes to run for Committeeman may do so by filing a nominating petition containing the signatures of at least ten members of the party he wishes to represent who reside within his division.

An Honest Job

A very small minority of these party workers are corrupt. However this group is large enough to give the public a false impression that Committeemen are fixers and grafters. It is the citizen's responsibility to know the character and integrity of his Committeeman. The better the Committeeman the better the party and thus—good government.

There are over six thousand party workers in Philadelphia representing both parties. During this campaign you should hear much from them. Reciprocate with your cooperation.

MEDICO Teaches Spirituality

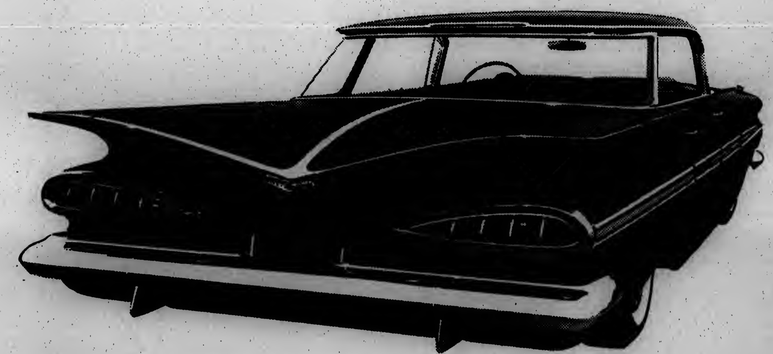
By THOMAS A. DOOLEY, M. D
Noted Catholic Author
Special to The VILLANOVAN

Recently I returned to Asia. Under the sponsorship of our organization, MEDICO, five other teams returned with me. We plan to establish small field hospitals along the Red Chinese borders. The teams consist of men and women of the medical profession who are taking their talents and self-sacrifice to the "least of His." The teams also carry the prayers and financial support of millions of Americans who make up the real "heart" of our mission . . . we are the hands.

THROUGH PRESS, TV, and the lecture platform, America has lately heard much about what we do. But perhaps you would like to know why we do it.

We have often been told by our religious and government leaders that the struggle between the Communist and the Free World is basically a battle to win the minds and hearts of men.

No Force Used



THIS IS TRUE, but it does not mean that we are helping distressed peoples in order to establish American dynabties in Asia, or to create "little Americas." Proud as we are of our free American way of life, our objective is not to force our ideas and organizations on our foreign friends. What, then, are we trying to "sell"?

My answer is simple. We are trying to convince our frieds, half a world away, of the eternal spiritual principles which underlie those forms.

THE MOST BASIC principle of America is that there is a brotherhood of man. There is a oneness of man. And from this there flows the truth that each man is important as an individual. Hence the concept of equality before the law and

Junior Class Dinner-Dance To Be Held In Broadwood

This year's Junior Week will wind up at the Main Ballroom of the Broadwood Hotel in Philadelphia. Ray Rafferty and John Driscoll, Junior Dinner-Dance Chairmen, have announced that the affair will be held on May 2nd.

The site was selected after consideration of 29 possible locations at the initial meeting of the Junior Class Steering Committee held recently.

The Steering Committee felt that the Broadwood provided the best facilities available in the area. It boasts one of the largest ballrooms nearby, adequate to seat easily all who will attend.

Due to its size it will unnecessary to rearrange the tables for the after-dinner dancing.

The Broadwood, located in the heart of the city, is easily accessable from Villanova or any part of the Philadelphia area. Since the hotel maintains its own parking garage, the Juniors will meet no parking problem.

Immediately after the announcement of the location and date of the Dinner Dance, the Chairmen appointed sub-chairmen, who will assist at the dance and dinner arrangements.

Bob McCauly, a C&F major will direct the Ticket Procurement and Sales Committee, while the Standing Entertainment Committee, headed by Vic Manfred and Carlo LoVecchio, will contract the band for the occasion. Nick Samango will chair special Arrangements.

ope, Eastern Europe, the Arab states, the Far East and Latin America—three for one year and three the next.

The veto power within the security council was created as a safeguard to world peace. However, this veto has been abused by the Soviet Union, considering the number of times they have exercised this power.

It can be seen from its memberships and functions, the influence and necessity for the United Nations. The challenge which these tasks present to students and teachers is emphasized in the following message from the Secretary General—Dag Hammarskjold:

Know Community

". . . For a student of today, they constitute the very climate in which he is born. It is necessary for him to know the community in which he is maturing; for as a citizen he will receive stability from it and in turn will be required to serve it, for the common good.

In particular a student should find the United Nations an exhilarating study, for such an organization is founded on the noblest dreams and the highest aspirations of man to which youth can bring purity, vitality and courage.

His teacher will welcome the mission too. For in lending his own enthusiasm to the principles and the purposes of the United Nations, he will but find a new opportunity for giving his student will to peace, faith in justice and pride in tolerance."

Let us all, with sincere individual efforts, contribute to international peace and stability. United we must stand.

Teachers and librarians are invited to submit poetry manuscripts for consideration for possible inclusion in the Annual National Teachers Anthology.

The closing date for the submission of manuscripts is Jan. 1.

Reception Listed

Students and faculty members from foreign countries have been invited to a reception in the Commercial Museum on United Nations Day, October 24.

Extending the invitation were the City of Philadelphia, the Board of Trade and Conventions, the World Council of Philadelphia, and the International House of Philadelphia in conjunction with the City's observance of United Nations Day.

To run from 8 to 10 p.m. the reception will include entertainment, an international exhibit and refreshments from the Benelux countries.

Interested persons can secure additional information and an invitation from the office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs.

Langton was hurled from the car, driven by Philip Dunn, 22, a C and F student from Long Island, after it skidded and crashed into a utility pole.

Dunn was treated and detained at the hospital for leg injuries.

Others in the car who suffered contusions and abrasions, are Salvatore Spiezio, sophomore C and F; George W. Abrashinsky, Philip K. Mebus, and Andrew Lohr, all seniors in C and F.

Platinum Jet Reigniter

Engine flameout, a problem encountered by jet aircraft, may be eliminated by a simple automatic reigniter tube that is smaller than a cigarette and has no electrical connections or moving parts. The tube, which is made of a platinum-rhodium alloy that has high heat retentivity and acts as a catalyst for fuel combustion, is kept at a high temperature in the engine's combustion chamber. Following the flameout, the catalytic action and retained heat of the tube enable it to restart the engine automatically.

Religious Books Now On Racks

Religious pamphlets on a variety of subjects interesting to a Catholic college student are now available on campus.

The topics include questions most asked non-Catholics and what Catholics should know about their religion. Various religions and vocations are also discussed.

The Chaplain's Office is open to suggestions in regards to particular pamphlets and topics desired. The pamphlets come from such Catholic publishers as the Paulists and the Ligerians.

The pamphlets are very reasonable in price, ranging from three cents to 25 cents. There are money slots on all pamphlet racks in which to place the money. The pamphlets may be obtained on the first floor of Dougherty Hall, the first and second floors of Mendel Hall, in the Nurse's lounge and on the first floor of the Commerce and Finance Building.

Technical Positions Open in Government

The U. S. Civil Service Commission has recently announced the availability of several technological positions in various federal agencies in Washington, D. C., and throughout the United States, as well as some overseas areas.

Applications for these positions will be accepted until further notice and must be filed with the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. C. Application forms may be obtained from the Commission's Washington office.

Persons appointed to these positions, which have a salary range from $4,980 to $12,770 a year, will administrate or supervise the performance of work of an applied technological nature.

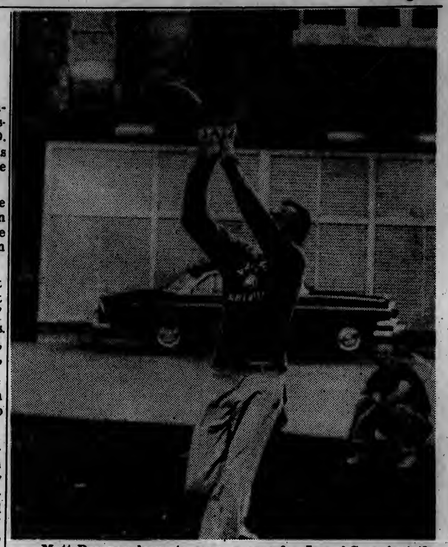
Cinema Prof Tells of Stars



(ACP)—University of Southern California assistant professor of cinema Dr. Richard D. MacCann gave some impressions of Hollywood personalities he has known.

In a speech report in the DAILY TROJAN, Dr. MacCann told about interviewing the stars for his weekly column on Hollywood.

"I found" he said, "that most of the cliches one hears about Hollywood simply don't apply." A few actors live exciting lives, and are erratic in their work, but the majority are fine people, he said.

His easiest interview? "With Rhubard the cat. I simply had to stand there and look."

James Dean and Marilyn Monroe were surprises to him. "Dean was intelligent and extremely concerned about juvenile problems." Miss Monroe impressed him as a "sweet, troubled girl" who does her best to live up to her "role, both publicly and on the set."

Bumble-Puppy League Pushed

(ACP)—In addition to putting out the DAILY CAMPUS, journalists at the University of Connecticut are busy helping organize a Centrifugal Bumble-puppy league. From a small beginning at Uconn's New Haven hall, the Bumble-puppy idea is spreading over eastern schools.

Mark Hawthorne, DAILY CAMPUS managing editor, reported first on the league in his "Shoes, Ships and Sealing Wax" column. He explains, "The idea came from Aldous Huxley's novel BRAVE NEW WORLD."

Hawthorne even used a picture of an Official Centrifugal Bumble-puppy Machine, which is used in the game. Powered by solar energy, it is nine feet tall, shiny and has a base with eight holes in it through which the ball, called a "round," is thrown by the spinning centrifugal disk.

Above all, says Hawthorne, a team must keep its CBP machine shiny. He invites inquiries about organizing teams at other schools.

Neurotics Numerous; Psychologist Suggests Acceptance of Them

Between 20 and 30 per cent of us are neurotic.

That's the estimate given by a psycho-therapist in the November Catholic Digest.

Albert Ellis writes that while almost everyone has some neurotic traits, up to 30 per cent of the population "sooner or later get into difficulty of their own making."

His formula for getting along necessitates a realization that the neurotic's undesirable traits are, after all, his problem.

That meant that they could get rid of their regs if they could top the upper-classmen.

The soph won the contest, 9-7, sparked by the play of transfer student Jack Rafferty, but tempers were raging, and the game had to be called because of fighting which, according to the Intramural Council, who was conducting the activities, "two minutes remaining."

The frosh, however, claimed that there were six minutes left to play, and that they could have won the game if it were allowed to continue.

Events kept building up, and that evening, at the very moment that DeLiza was speaking to the council concerning the extension of the reg-wearing period, the frosh took to burning their regs in front of their dormitories.

Some of them even approached the VILLANOVAN and radio station WVIL to present their side of the story.

Before things got out of hand, however, DeLisa and white hat John Oberlies, who had contacted the Intramural Council to make sure of the disqualification of Coffill, began a three-hour excursion through the frosh dorms, explaining the situation.

And the frosh, described by DeLisa as "one of the most spirited classes ever to enter Villanova," complied. Regs were were back on the next morning.

Fund for Republic Scores Military Service Method

The present system of compulsory military service for all eligible males in the United States is discriminatory, inadequate and unnecessary.

This conclusion is reached in a report by Washington attorney John Graham, recently published by the Fund for the Republic in a pamphlet titled: "The Universal Military Obligation."

The survey analyzes the 60 methods by which a young man may fulfill his military obligation. These include active duty and reserve training or combination of both.

Describing the numerous ways men obtain deferments and exemptions, the pamphlet asserts that "when their total impact is to excuse more than half of all men in the eligible age group from any form of military service, the whole becomes more than the sum of its parts."

Moreover, the report suggests, the onset of nuclear and technological warfare will call for highly-trained, experienced specialists, rather than massive combat forces.

The author concludes that the United States is not exacting a universal military obligation, that we do not need to exact one and that "the proper question for free men is not whether conscription can be administered equitably, but whether it need exist at all.

Free copies of "The Universal Military Obligation" may be obtained by writing to the Fund for the Republic, 60 E. 42nd Street, New York 17, New York.

the right of all men to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

To have a brother in our fellow man automatically implies that we have a common father—as indeed we do—Almighty God. God is the source of our life, our law, our liberty, and our happiness. My years in Asia have proven to me that the Brotherhood of Man exists as certainly as does the Fatherhood of God. It is He Who commanded, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself."

Evidence In Deed

IT IS the compelling urgency of this command that makes the bodily works of mercy necessary if we are to fulfill our beliefs. If we are only to blather and bleat these words, we are shallow. We must give evidence in deed, what we profess as our creed. And though the demands are sometimes great, the rewards from God are far greater.

So as doctors and nurses we will continue to minister to the physical miseries of our less fortunate brothers. As private ambassadors, on a personal mission, the teams of MEDICO will practice our profession, and, utilizing the majestic power of kindness and truth, we shall try to show others the God-fearing, virtuous side of our national heritage. As a doctor I shall personally try to keep as my highest motive for such activity these words of a wise and holy physician of souls: "And if I distribute all my goods to feed the poor, and if I deliver my body to be burned, yet do not have the love of God and man, it profits me nothing."

The candidates must be, or have been recently employed in administrative, teaching, or supervisory positions in nursing and gave indication they are able to qualify in academic standing for later graduate study.

THE DRESS PARADE

In all my years of observing coed fashions—and I have been arrested many times—I have never seen such verve, such dash, such Je ne sais quoi as can be found in this year's styles!

I am particularly enchanted by the new "baby waist" dresses which so many of you girls are favoring this season. How demure you all look in your "baby waists"! How sweet! How innocent! How colorful when your housemother lifts you up and burps you after dinner!

Another trend that leaves me limp with rapture is the oversized handbag. Goodbye to dinky little purses that hold nothing at all! Hurrah for today's sensibly sized bag with plenty of room for your makeup, your pens and pencils, your shelter half, your Slinky toy, your MG, and your Marlboros.

Did I say Marlboros? Certainly I said Marlboros. What girl can consider herself in the van, in the swim, and in the know, if she doesn't smoke Marlboros? What man, for that matter. Do you want a filter that is truly new, genuinely advanced, but at the same time, does not rob you of the full flavor of first-rate tobacco? Then get Marlboro. Also get matches because the pleasure you derive from a Marlboro is necessarily limited if unlit.

To return to coed fashions, let us now discuss footwear. The popular flat shoe was introduced several years ago when it became obvious that girls were growing taller than boys. For a while the flat shoes kept the sexes in a state of uneasy balance, but today they will no longer serve. Now, even in flats, girls are towering over their dates, for the feminine growth rate has continued to rise with disturbing speed. In fact, it is now thought possible that we will see fifteen-foot girls in our lifetime.

But science is working on the problem, and I feel sure American know-how will find an answer. Meanwhile, a temporary measure is available—the reverse wedgie.

The reverse wedgie is simply a wedgie turned around. This tilts a girl backward at a 45 degree angle and cuts as much as three feet off her height. It is, of course, impossible to walk in this position unless you have support, so your date will have to keep his arm around your waist at all times. This will tire him out in fairly short order; therefore you must constantly give him encouragement. Keep looking up at him and batting your lashes and repeating in awed tones, "How strong you are, Shorty!"

Next we turn to hair styling. The hair-do this year is definitely the cloche-coif. One sees very few crew cuts or Irene Castle bobs, and the new Mohican cut seems not to have caught on at all. In fact, I saw only one girl with a Mohican—Rhodelle H. Sigafoos, a sophomore of Bennington. Her classmates laughed and laughed at her, but it was Rhodelle who had the last laugh, for one night a dark, handsome stranger leaped from behind a birch and linked his arm in Rhodelle's and said, "I am Uncas, the last of the Mohicans—but I need not be the last, dear lady, if you will but be my wife." Today they are happily married and run a candied-apple stand near Macon, Ga., and have three little Mohicans named Patti, Maxine, and Laverne.

Al Severance Depending On Inexperienced Sophs

By LANCE COLONNA

Ask Al Severance, whose basketball team started practice last week, what the prospects are, and you get no answer.

The situation is clouded with too many "ifs" to make a prediction. He simply doesn't know yet.

The loss of five lettermen presents Al with a tremendous rebuilding job. Tom Brennan (6-7), Jack Kelly (6-3), and Bill Brennan (6-3) graduated. John Scott (6-8) left school, and Ken Harrison (6-3) will not be available until his grades improve.

Only seniors Joe Ryan, George Emma and Ralph Kowalkowski, and junior George Raveling have had varsity experience.

There are nine sophomores eager to displace those veterans: Jim Huggard, Bob Liberatore, John Driscoll, Tom Samuelwicz, Dick Kaminski, Dave Severance, Don McGinley and Don Winters. All those sophs, except Driscoll, played on last year's undefeated frosh team.

Severance emphasizes that the "jobs are all open." Right now nobody is assured of a place on the squad. The next month or so will determine that.

Al calls his team a "hungry" outfit. They want to get into a post-season tournament. They are faster, smarter—and most important of all—they have a greater drive than last year's team. But spirit can carry a team only so far.

As Severance puts it, "A soph stepping into big time basketball is the same thing as a baseball player going from a class D league to the major leagues. He might have the spirit and determination but experience can not be sold down the river."

Will Fast Break

Severance plans to take advantage of his club's speed by employing the fast break whenever possible. But if Driscoll (6-8), and Raveling (6-6) don't get their share of the rebounds, the fast break will be unsuccessful.

One of the main faults of last year's team appears to be solved. With Huggard and Kenny controlling the ball, Villanova will not blow many ten-point leads. Those boys will battle you every inch of the way and when the pressure is applied they won't throw the ball away.

Perhaps the player who can help the team the most is Joe Ryan. If he comes through and finally reaches his potential, Villanova can go a long, long, way. He should be the team's leading point producer. He scores when he shoots but for some unexplainable reason he doesn't shoot often enough.

'Ifs' Hold Key

It all boils down to several "ifs"—if Driscoll gets his share of rebounds, if Joe Ryan gets over his reluctance to shoot, if George Emma can maintain his hometimes-fabulous set shooting with any degree of consistancy, if speed and spirit can make up for inexperience, then Villanova will have some fun.

Despite all the "ifs" in the picture, one thing is certain—this is going to be the fightingest, speediest, most spirited basketball team that Villanova fans have seen in many a year.

Tract Event of Year:

Quinn Romps In Kiely Mile

By JACK CURTIN

Tiny John Quinn literally ran circles around massive Gus Susnjara to win the third annual Joyce Kiely Memorial Mile last Thursday afternoon before a crowd of almost 200 baffled spectators in Villanova Stadium.

Quinn completed four laps around Villanova's cinder track in 9:53 (including time for the only "pit stop" in the history of the sport).

Susnjara, game but mismatched, completed approximately three and one-quarter laps in about 10:30.

The whole affair, sponsored by Delta Pi Mu, the Liberal Arts fraternity, was a gala extravaganza of color, music and laughter for the assembled crowd.

Bearded Torch Bearer

The Villanovans, campus jazz band, started things off with a tour around campus in their "new and highly individualistic" marching formation, and then John Rumbarger, clad only in a sheet and his beard, carried Villanova's version of the Olympic torch to a make-shift podium in the center of the football field to herald the star of he race.

Sophomore class president Bob DeLisa served as master of ceremonies, introducing Quinn ("running for the Irish-American Club") and Susnjara ("running for the Italian American Club") to the crowd.

Quinn was handled by Jack Daniels and Co., and Susnjara received the capable management of Herb Letteau Inc.

Brief Interlude

Starter Bill Vincent raised his gun, fired, and the race was on. Quinn led at the half-way mark, as both runners stopped for a rest. When they got started again, it was the litle guy all he way.

Susnjara took a short-cut across the football field mid-way through the third lap and managed to get a short rest, but couldn't muster enough to wipe out Quinn's finishing kick.

The winner was presented with a cup signifying his supremacy, and was doubly rewarded with a big kiss from "Joyce." (Actually DPM-er Con O'Donnell in disguise—sort of.)

Tom Labrecque was in charge of the affair for DPM.

Joyce Kiely Does Exist

There actually is a Joyce Kiely, and she's well on her way to becoming a Villanova legend.

The now traditional Kiely Mile was begun by the Class of 1958 on homecoming weekend, 1956.

It all started something like this:

It seems that both Dave Belcher and Jed Dioguardi had dates with Miss Kiely, asking her to go to homecoming, and they decided to resolve their difficulties in a race.

Both selected representatives —Ollie Finan for Belcher and Chubby McCarthy for Dioguardi for the race.

Finan bested McCarthy in a still undetermined time, and Belcher won the date.

Last year, to perpetuate the event, the class ran the race on Homecoming Weekend, with the same participants. That time out, McCarthy, fresh from six weeks training with the PLC's at Quantico, ran Finan into the ground.

Since most of the participants in the festivities had been members of Delta Pi Mu, the fraternity took over the planning and execution of the race this year.

It was originally planned for Homecoming again, but complications forced it to be held a week later.

As for Miss Kiely, while she wasn't here for Homecoming, she's still a part of the Villanova scene. Junior Harry Rowe will escort her to the Cotillion weekend.

a tough third or fourth down and short yardage situation came about.

Joe Nardo, who played fullback behind Gene Paja, provided some needed yardage, including a first down, when the Wildcats were fighting to control the ball and run out the clock in the closing stages.

up. But Bart ran it off and stayed in the game.

Intrabartolo's 105-yard performance put him among the nation's rushing leaders. Then, too, he edded 51 yards on four pass receptions.

Jim Grazione, his running bottled somewhat by Wake Forest's defensive tactics, turned to an aerial game and parleyed short passes into a nine-for-eighteen and 96-yard day. He also played practically the entire game.

Short Passes

The adoption of the short yassing game was the biggest single switch in the Wildcat offense since the introduction of the "T".

The 'Cats worked hard on the swing pass in the flat all week, figuring that Wake Forest would exert great pressure on Grazione. At least four times, Jim surprised by looping the ball out to a backfield man swinging wide.

Mike DeLucia, whom many fans consider the equal of any of the great guards in Villanova history, was his usual tough self last week.

Although Tommy Heron and Gene O'Pella were defensive demons at their terminal spots, it was DeLucia who, time after time, was at the bottom of the pile.

Contain MacLean

Mike, along with Larry Sopko, Furm Nagle and Paul Morra, was responsible for holding Neil MacLean, the Southern Conference's leading rusher, to a net of 26 yards.

Mike and his mates hope they do as well with Davis and Marinkov this Saturday. They also hope that the pass defense does the same three-interceptions-per-game job on Landis and Gagliano that it has done on the five previous opponents.

If the hopes become actualities, the 'Cats will have their best record at this point since 1952.

Beginning with the Richmond game this Saturday, and continuing through the remaining home games, students will be required to show their matriculation cards at the gate in addition to buying tickets in advance.

Frosh Beat West Chester, Play Bullis Prep Friday

By JOE FITZPATRICK

The freshman football team, which won its second straight game by dumping West Chester State Teachers College junior varsity last week by a 26-13 score, will seek to continue its winning ways when it travels to Silver Springs, Md., to meet Bullis Prep on Friday.

The frosh fought back to break a 13-13 tie at halftime at West Chester, leading Coach Ed Michaels to call his team "a second-half club," in as much as it rallied earlier in the season to tie Army, after being shut out, 16-0, in the first half.

Michaels' Wildkittens virtually swept the Teachers off their feet at the start, scoring twice without virtue of a play from scrimmage.

Dave O'Donnell returned the opening kickoff 103 yards. Then, after West Chester failed to gain in three plays, Nick Russo returned a punt 59 yards for the second TD. Nick Langone, quarterback, booted one of two extra point attempts successfully to give the Villanovans a 13-0 edge.

Taking advantage of some weaknesses in the Wildkitten pass defense, West Chester stormed back to score two touchdowns and an extra point to deadlock the score.

But, in the second half the Villanova defense stiffened, and Russo broke the tie by returning his second punt of the day for a TD—this one covering 54 yards.

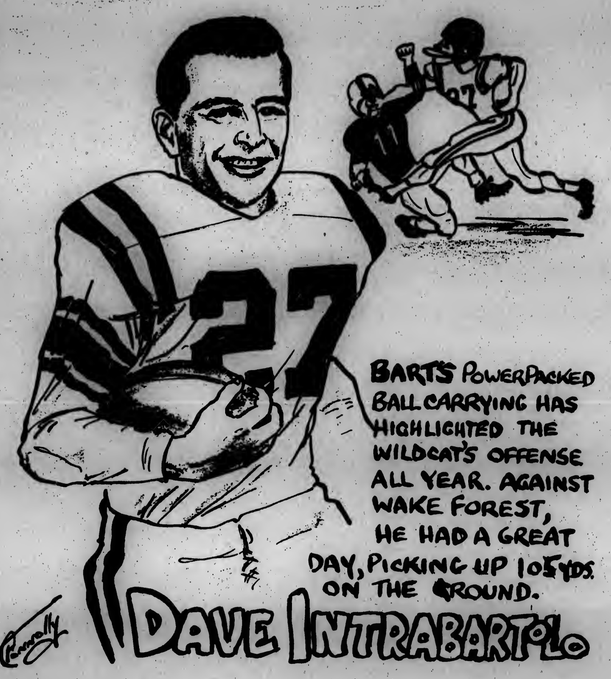
Bob Capone added the fourth touchdown on a three-yard plunge. Ed Bohan scored the second extra point on a run with a recovered fumble. The game was played under rules which allowed only one point no matter how the conversion was made.

Guards Sam Gruneisen and Dick Ross were outstanding on defense for the winners.

Villanovan Picks

Art Editor Frank Connolly and Associate Editor Tom Goldschmidt have filed a protest with Big Ten Commissioner Tug Wilson, asking him to investigate "irregularities" in his conference.

The experts, who pick 20 top games each week for the VILLANOVAN, were rudely shocked at the results of four out of five Big Ten games picked last week.



In a week when twelve choices were good, six bad and two games ended in ties, the experts properly tabbed Rice's upset of S.M.U.

Overall, the pair have selected 26 winners in 40 games, with two ties figured in. That's a percentage of .648.

This week's picks, achieved by means of dart-throwing and coin-flipping, follow. Home teams are listed on the right, and expected, (nay, hoped for) winners are printed in capital letters

Richmond Readies Rejuvenated Team To Surprise 'Cats

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

A bunch of Spiders from the Southland, just recently returned from a seige of docility, has its striking force poised and ready to pounce on an unsuspecting Wildcat clan on Saturday.

All of which means that the University of Richmond, which lost its first four games of the year, finally exploded last week in blasting George Washington, 26-6, and comes to Villanova Stadium primed to pull an upset and bring the local three-game victory skein to a halt.

After playing fired-up ball for three weeks against Boston College, Detroit and Wake Forest, Coach Reagan's minions are due for a letdown. But they'll prove their real worth if they can stay "up" against the Spiders.

Don't be surprised if the Richmond football players back off from grits, fried chicken and mint juleps.

Many of them are Yankees through and through.

Nineteen of the squad of 47 live north of the Mason-Dixon line, and one player who lives south of the mark—quarterback Gerry Landis—comes from Cumberland, Md., where he mostly played against teams from central Pennsylvania.

End Carmen Cavalli and tackle Bob Buffman live in Philadelphia. In all, there are eight Pennsylvanians, five New Jerseyites, four from New York and two from Massachusetts.

Should the Wildcats down the visitors from Virginia, they'll be the proud possessors of a 5-1 record when they take to the airways and rails for a three-game series of games away from the friendly confines of the Main Line.

Quarterbacks Improve

Richmond has what it takes to make that assignment a tough one. For four games it had quarterback troubles, but suddenly that spot has "firmed up."

Senior Gerry Landis and junior Frank Gagliano are sharing the man-under-center role in Coach Ed Merrick's T formation.

Landis likes to run occasionally, is a fine defensive player, and is a top-notch short passer.

Against George Washington, Landis threw a screen pass to halfback Bob Dunnington, and the latter sped 68 yards for a touchdown. That's a favorite maneuver for Landis.

Gagliano, not having Landis' speed, rarely runs. But he's a superlative long passer. He had a 51-yard completion against George Washington.

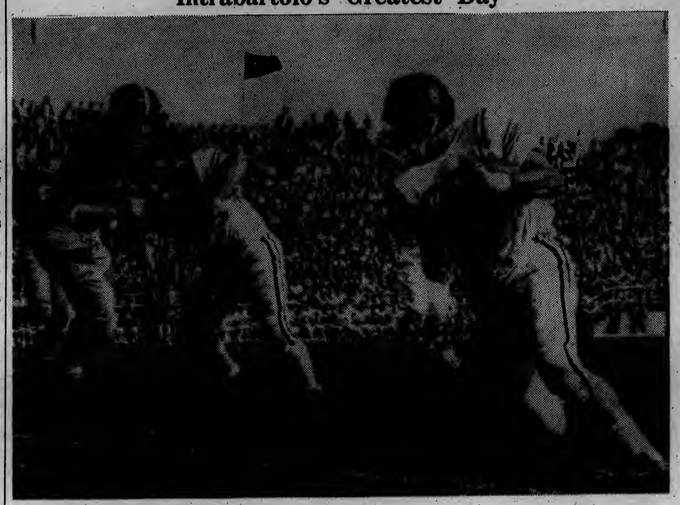
Speed and Power

Running-wise, the Spiders will throw the speed of Mickey Marinkov and the power of Buddy Davis at the 'Cats. Marinkov, fast and shifty at 5-7 and 170 pounds, likes to take pitchouts and run wide. He's also a punt and kickoff return expert.

Davis is being boomed for Southern Conference honors. At 200 pounds, he's a powerful runner and blocker. He's averaged over 36 yards a punt in a three-year career.

Villanova will not be wanting for standouts to match these Spiders. At one time or another in the past three weeks, every one of the Wildcats has played superlative ball.

Dave Intrabartolo shone like the lights of Coney Island, not far from his home town, as he personally led the home forces to their upset of Southern Conference leader Wake Forest.



Heavy Duty

Bart played close to 60 minutes for the third straight game, even though he took a physical beating from the aggressive Deacons. He caught a knee to the head on his touchdown blast of two yards, but left the field for scant minutes.

Later, while making a vital first down on the drive which led to Dick Keyser's decisive field goal, a leg muscle p field goal, a leg muscle cramped

Intrabartolo's Greatest Day

Dave Intrabartolo gallops for seven of th› 105 yards he gained rushing against Wake Forest, as guard Larry Sopko applies a block to the Deacons' John Nidzit.

Wildcat Win Even Stirred Villan From His Lethargy

By ROGER VAN ALLEN

The 'Cats have done it. By upsetting powerful Wake Forest, 9-7 last Saturday, the charges of Frank Reagan grabbed their fourth victory, gained national recognition and caused a commotion on campus that even reached the den of the usually calm Count Villan V, the team mascot.

A Parents' Day crowd of nearly 12,000 sat in on the fun.

A first-period touchdown by Dave Intrabartolo and a third-period field goal by Dick Keyser were too much for the Deacons.

The 'Cats held the visitors on their first drive.

From there, at the Wake Forrest 42, the Wildcats drove the distance in 12 plays. Intrabartolo ate up a good share of the yardage, and he carried the mail the final two yards. Larry Sopko's attempt for the extra point went far astray.

Drive Boys Down

In the third period, the Wildcats drove 63 yards to the Wake Forest seven yard line, only to have the advance stall at that point.

Three passes by Jim Grazione went incomplete, although it appeared that one of them had been caught by Gene O'Pella for a touchdown. However, just as big Gene grabbed the pass deep in the end zone, he had it batted out of his hands by a trio of Deacon defenders.

Keyser, big junior tackle who has been relegated to a second-string assignment by a troublesome hip and the improvement in Furm Nagle's play, came on the scene on fourth down and booted the field goal which eventually proved the margin of victory.

Three minutes later, the Deacons had seven points, as they drove 58 yards on eight plays. Charley Carpenter, senior quarterback who had just replaced Norm Snead, nationally ranked passer, sparked the march with three completed heaves, including the touchdown toss to halfback Jim Dalrymple—a 28-yard play. MacLean added the extra point.

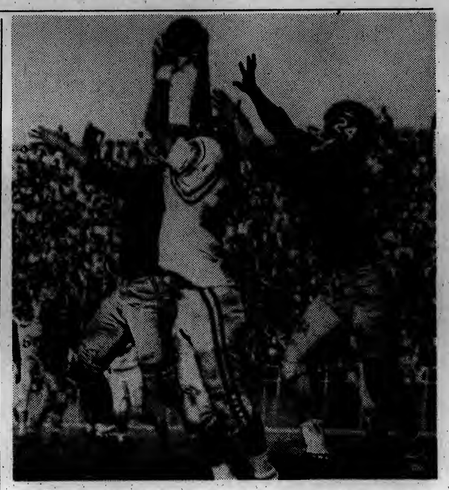
Had Norman Squirmin

Snead had a rough time in the first half. The soph gained just seven yards on the ground, and three of the first four passes he threw were gobbled up by Wildcat defenders.

Intrabartolo's 25 carries broke a Villanova record set by Gene Filipski in 1953 against Fordham.

For his effort, Dave garnered 105 yards on the ground, giving his 351 for five games. He also caught four passes good for 51 yards, and intercepted a pass.

With the Deacon defense primed to stop Grazione's much-publicized roll-outs and runs after fake passes, Jim threw more than he has previously this year, completing nine-of-eighteen for 96 yards.



Punt Aids 'Cats

What was just as important was the way Jim punted, particularly in the fourth quarter, when he boomed a 71-yarder after the Deacons appeared to be moving in for a possible second touchdown.

It is only natural that Intrabartolo and Grazione would receive headlines after their fine play, but it is not stretching a point to say that this was another "team" victory.

The line outcharged the Wake Forest forward brigade, containing the running game whenever

Bart stretches to snare a pass from Jim Grazione, one of four he caught in the game. Buster Ledford (24) and another Deacon play Dave closely—but not closely enough.

Council To Hear Proposal For Unique Alumni Plan

By PAUL A BUCKLEY
Of The Villanovan Staff

The Student Congress will be asked tonight to establish a unique system to bring closer contact between Villanova students and graduates who live in the same area.

A motion will call for the establishment of a Student Liason Representative program under which Villanova students will work with local alumni associations.

The motion was passed by the Student Senate at their regular meeting Monday. They recommended that the Congress adopt the plan tonight.

The proposal was submitted to the Senate by senior I. A. major Joseph McGrath, an executive vice-president of the Council.

Last year, a committee was appointed to look into the feasibility of establishing Area Clubs at Villanova. This committee submitted a report at the end of last semester.

At the first meeting of the Student Administration Committee this semester the report was discussed, and an alternate plan proposed and agreed upon by the University Administration and the Student Council officers.

No Area Clubs

It was agreed that instead of establishing Area Clubs, the same end could be accomplished by setting up a system of student Representatives with each individual Alumni Association.

George Pequignot, Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association, has chosen 27 areas to be covered by this new program. More will be added in the future as more Alumni Clubs are established.

The proposed system will work in the following manner:

For the 27 areas listed, a Student Liason Representative will be appointed by a committee consisting of the four student council officers and the Senior Alumni Representative.

In the cases where the number of students on campus from a particular area is very large, a number of assistant Liason Representatives will also be appointed by the committee.

The duties of the Liason Rep-

Ticket Sales Start Today For West Point Grid Trip

Mike Axt, chairman of the Spirit Committee-sponsored trip to West Point on November 15 to the Villanova-Army football game, sells the first ticket to Chuck Fritz, senior Finance major.

By LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE
Of The Villanovan Staff

More than 2,000 tickets went on sale today for the student football trip to West Point on November 15.

The tickets will remain on sale every day in a booth across from Dougherty Hall until Monday before the game.

"That is, if any tickets are still available," Bruce Irving, chairman of the spirit committee, said yesterday.

"The athletic department has already received 600 ticket applications from local alumni, and scores of Main Line fans of Villanova have made inquiries about the trip," Irving added.

Not Enough Tickets

"We confidently expect that several thousand Villanova students and fans will be at the Point to see the Wildcats battle Army," said Irving.

The spirit committee chairman announced that tickets for the game will cost $4. "We contacted officials at West Point and asked for reduced rates based on the number of tickets sold," Irving said.

"But they refused to change their prices no matter how many attend."

Although most students are expected to travel to the game by car, Irving said that bus transportation from the Villanova campus to West Point was available.

No Definite Price

The round trip tickets are priced at less than $5.

The buses, operated by the Trailways system, will leave the campus parking lot at 7:30 the morning of the game. The buses will return immediately after the game.

Irving insisted that the buses will not be overcrowded as has been charged in recent years. "There will be no more than 41 persons in each bus, with absolutely no standing," he said.

Mike Axt, senior class vice president, is in charge of ticket sales for the trip. Axt said the booths will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 in the afternoon.

Game tickets are also available in the Athletic office in the field house.

'Council Must Think Big' Says Chairman Bob Murphy

By JOHN J. CURTIN
Of The Villanovan Staff

Bob Murphy, president of the Student Council, will explain the operation of the council under its new constitution at the Student Congress meeting tonight.

The meeting will be a highlight of Student Government Week which began on campus last Monday.

According to council vice-chairman Tom Hoffman, who is in charge of the proceedings, "anyone with an interest in Villanova's student government is welcome."

The purpose of the week-long ceremonies, Hoffman told the VILLANOVAN, is to develop a strong and well-supported council, and a well-informed and interested student body.

In conjunction with Student Government Week, the VILLANOVAN conducted an interview with Murphy concerning his attitude and ideas in the field.

The complete text of the interview is as follows:

What is the goal of Student government at Villanova?

To effect closer ties between the Administration and the student body, to present the student viewpoint in regard to various matters to the Administration for consideration and, in turn, to get the Administrational viewpoint and channel it back to the students. These are our major goals; there are others, such as the improvement of clubs and organizations and trying to get every activity on campus to carry out its mission in the educational system of the school.

What should be the relationship between a campus organization and the council?

Every organization should recognize the council as the voice of the students; they should respect and look up to the council since it is the foremost student organization.

Is this relationship in effect at Villanova?

No.

Why not?

Because the council does not have the position it should have on campus, because it has yet to show that it has the maturity to fulfill its potential.

What do you mean by that?

The council has too often concerned itself with being a "petty gripe" organization. It has to think big, get away from the idea that membership is a reward rather than a challenge in order to achieve anything. The members have to realize that they are the spokesmen for 3500 students, and that they have a responsibility to those students and to the Administration. Until they realize both responsibilities, and start thinking of how they can improve the whole atmosphere of the campus, rather than just obtain some petty benefit for the students, they'll always be regarded as being powerless.

Do you think that the council has made progress in this direction in your time at Villanova?

Yes.

In what way?

The members started to show last year, after a pretty thorough re-vamping program, that they are capable of carrying out this mission, I think this has continued so far this year.

Are there any definite programs that have been carried out, or are in the process of being carried out, that you can point to as examples of this progress?

A program that probably not too many people are aware of right now, but has been started and will be carried out all year, is this idea of improving organizations. The Fraternity and Societies Committee has already started an investigation of many campus organizations with the thought of helping to improve them in any way possible—through suggestions for possible

Renaissance Group Meets On Saturday

By FRANK J. DYNAN
Of The Villanovan Staff

Villanova will act as host for the 1958 meeting of the Middle Atlantic States Renaissance Conference on Saturday. Dr. Albert H. Buford, associate professor of English at Villanova, and regional representative to the Renaissance Society of America, announced last week.

Many colleges and universities of the middle eastern seaboard will be represented at the annual meeting in the lounge of the Law School at 1:30 p.m.

The meeting will center about the presentation of two papers and their subsequent discussion. Rev. Edward Surtz, S. J., Chairman of the department of English of Loyola University, will present the first paper entitled "Hythloday's Function in More's Utopia."

Discussion on Paper

Professor Charles P. Burderle of the department of History, will lead the discussion of Fr. Surtz paper.

Fr. Surtz, whose works on the English Renaissance have been widely published, is considered an expert on St. Thomas More and his contemporaries.

New Morning Mass Times Announced

The Chaplain's office has announced that starting next Monday the times of two daily morning Masses will be switched.

Both the 7:30 a.m. and the 8 a.m. Masses will be moved forward 15 minutes. Other daily Masses are at 6:45 a.m., and 12 noon.

Belle Masque Ticket Sales Start Monday In Dougherty

Tickets for the Belle Masque production "Tiger at the Gates," to be presented November 5 through 9, will go on sale next Monday in the Pie Shoppe.

Prices for tickets are $1.50 for the general public and $1 for students. Seats for all performances will be reserved.

"Tiger at the Gates," which was written by Jean Giraudoux in 1935, and translated from the French by Christopher Fry is considered one of the most thoughtful and easily the most amusing of all anti-war plays.

The play, directed by Richard M. Duprey, theatre instructor at Villanova, should provide an action-filled comedy punctuated by moments of rare intellectual insight.

Also A Designer

Duprey also designed the sets for the show. Assisting him in the design and construction of the sets are Paul Floyd, George Becht, Ted Glinka and Bill Kohl.

Assuming the lead role of Hector will be Owen Klein, who is in his fourth season as a member of Belle Masque. Klein is serving as president of the organization this year.

The pivotal role of Helen of Troy will be held by Linda Lynch of Rosemont, who played Katherine in Belle Masque's Taming of the Shrew.

Hector's allies in the fight against war include his wife, Andromache, played by Margi Brown of Rosemont, and Hecuba, the mother of Hector who is played by Mary Shaffer.

No Wallflower She

Cassandra, the sister of Hector will be acted by Barbara Ann Burke. In this instance, Cassandra is not the wan, fortune-telling woman of history, but a clever, wise-cracking commentator on the action.

Alan Willig as Demokos, the villainous poet, adds intrigue and comedy to the play. Last year, Willig held the part of Grumio in "The Taming of the Shrew."

"Tiger at the Gates" is Belle Masque's first production of a play by Giraudoux. He is generally acknowledged as one of this century's greatest playwrights.

Teachers and librarians are invited to submit poetry manuscripts for consideration for possible inclusion in the Annual National Teachers Anthology.

The closing date for the submission of manuscripts is Jan. 1.

Augustine To Be Honored By Lectures

The Rev. Paul Henry S. J., Professor of Theology at the Institute Catholique De Paris, will deliver the initial lecture in a series of lectures to be given annually at Villanova in honor of St. Augustine, the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon O.S.A., announced last week.

The general theme of the series will be "St. Augustine and the Augustinian tradition." The lecture will be held in April of next year and will continue each succeeding year. It will feature eminent American and European Scholars.

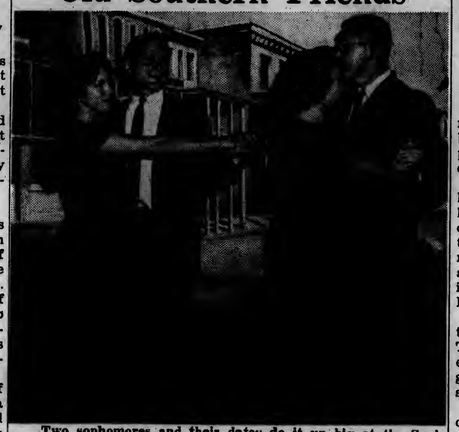
Dr. Donald Gallagher, vice chairman of the philosophy department, said yesterday that the St. Augustine theme is "practically inexhaustable."

The idea for the series stems from the success of the same type format concerning the writings of St. Thomas Aquinas which is held in numerous colleges throughout the country," Gallagher said.

Father Henry, who is currently a visiting professor at Duke University, is well qualified as the first lecturer in the series. He is an outstanding authority in the field of St. Augustine and Neo-Platonic studies.

The committee for the new St. Augustine series consists of the following: Rev. Robert Russell, O.S.A., chairman of the Philosophy Department; Dr. Gallagher; Rev. Thomas Gilligan, O.S.A., Professor of Modern Languages: Charles Bruderle, Associate Professor of History and Assistant to the Dean of the Graduate and Part-time Division; and Dr. Roland Houde, Associate Professor of Philosophy.

W. C. Teachers At SEA Discussion



Students from West Chester State Teachers College and Villanova will attend an exchange meeting of the Student Education Association next Tuesday at 4.00 p.m. in room 209 C and F.

John O'Donnell, vice-president of the SEA southestern district of Pennsylvania and president of the Villanova chapter, said that the meeting would be conducted by the West Chester representatives and would concerning teaching problems.

O'Donnell attended a convention of the SEA at Ursinus College on October 20, when a constitution for the organization was drawn up.

The SEA is currently conducting a membership drive under chairmanship of Joe Sapone. The campaign is designed to attract freshman to the organization.

Fr. McLaughlin Celebrant At NFCCS Regional Mass

The Philadelphia region of the National Federation of Catholic College Students will hold its annual Intercollegiate Communion Breakfast on Sunday, November 9, here at Villanova.

The guest speaker will be Dr. George Alapatt, of the Political Science department.

The Mass will be at 11 a.m. in St. Mary's Chapel, St. Mary's Hall, and will be celebrated by the Rev. George J. McLaughlin, O.S.A., Regional moderator of the NFCCS. The Communion Breakfast will be held at 12 noon in the Commerce and Finance Cafeteria.

Meeting After Breakfast

There will be a Regional Council Meeting in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall following the Breakfast. The various commission programs will be considered at this meeting and an election will be held to fill the vacant post of Cura Administration.

Dr. Alapatt, a native of South India, has a law degree from the University of Madras and a Ph. D. from St. Louis University. He served on the Bar Association of Kerala, a state in India, was elected a State Senator of Kerala, and knows many Indian political leaders.

Dr. Alapatt was on the advisary board of Foreign Students under the auspices of the N.S.A., and he will probably say something about the problems encountered by foreign students in his country.

Tickets Are $2

Tickets are $2 and may be purchased from Chuck Santangelo, senior delegate; Tom Moakley, junior delegate, and Tom Peretti, regional treasurer of the NFCCS, who is in charge of the arrangements.

The tickets will be on sale until next Tuesday, November 4.

Rev. Daniel Falvey, O.S.A., head of the library, accepts a new volume given in observance of United Nations Week by the International Relations Society. Joe Monahan, United Nations Week chairman; Dr. Fritz Nova, moderator, and Bob Rafano, president, represent the society. The book, edited by P. W. Buck and M. B. Travis, is "Control of Foreign Relations in Modern Nations."

G. P. Schmidt To Address Law Forum

The second session of the annual Villanova Law Forum will be held next Wednesday at 8.30 p.m. in the Moot Court Room of Garey Hall.

Godfrey P. Schmidt, nationally known attorney and Catholic layman, will speak. Schmidt, as one of the court-appointed monitors of the Teamsters Union, has recently been at the center of a series of legal actions involving Teamster President James R. Hoffa.

At the inaugural session of the forum early this month Thurgood Marshall, Negro leader in the fight for school intergration in the South, was the speaker.

Marshall has been special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and has vigorously promoted the cause of Negro rights.

In his discussion of the "Struggle for Civil Rights — 1958" Marshall maintained that the problem of integration could be settled only by the "good people" of the South, both White and Negro.

This forum series was planned by William B. Bell, of the law school faculty, and is designed to be of assistance to the law school students although the public is generally invited to attend.

Record Story In Engineer Says Merkert

Bob Merkert, editor of the Villanova Engineer, has announced the acceptance of two articles for the November issue of the magazine.

James Sammis, junior electrical engineer, has submitted his article entitled "Records—How They Are Made".

Although a very common and vastly enlarged item, very few people know exactly how a record is made. In the article Sammis discusses the various processes and techniques that are used in the manufacture of a record.

Larry Cassel, senior electrical engineer, shows how telemetering is used in connection with satellites and guided missiles in his article entitled "Telemetering."

Merkert stated that more members are needed on the staff, especially for typing. At the same time, a request was made for articles for future issues.

"Many students have the ability to write well," said Merkert, "but for some reason do not get around to writing an article."

The articles being published are mainly for the benefit of the students, and therefore, need not be so technical as to be incomprehensible. A well-written, enlightening article is sought by the editor.

A Cornell University professor tells a story aimed at encouraging writers who have trouble getting their material published. Prof. M. Bishop says two works by Peter van Dugrefin, a Swiss-French poet of the 15th century, were published for the first time recently

Augustinian Prior General, Former V.U. Prof, Dead

The Most Rev. Engelbert Eberhard, Prior General of the Augustinian Order and former member of the Villanova faculty, died last week in Wurzberg, Germany, after a long illness. He was 65.

Father Eberhard taught German, Greek, and Latin at Villanova from 1925 to 1929. He received an Honorary Doctorate in 1956 during Villanova's graduation exercises.

Father Eberhard, who was in charge of 5,000 Augustinians succeeded the late Most Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, former president of Villanova and the only American Prior General of the Order.

Born in Rhumspringe, Germany, Father Eberhard was graduated as a classical philologian from the University of Wurzburg, and was ordained to the priesthood in 1918.

Known for his administrative abilities, Father Eberhard served as provincial of the German province of the Order, with headquarters in Wurzburg, from 1929 to 1953, with the exception of two three-year terms. In 1953 he was elected Prior General of the International Order, with headquarters in Rome, and served for a six year term.

He is one of the few non-Italian Generals of the Order. He is survived by a brother, Otto, of Murseberg, East Germany.

Navy To Hold Dance At Penn Sherwood

The annual fall NROTC Dance will be held Friday night at the Penn Sherwood Hotel ballroom, with dancing from 9 to 1.

The theme of the affair will be "Welcome Aboard Freshmen" with the dance highlight the crowning of the Drill Team Color Girl.

Music for the dance will be supplied by the George Sommers Band.

The dance which is open to only NROTC personnel will be semi-formal without flowers.

Science Academy Announces Exam For Grad Awards

The National Academy of Sciences has announced that graduate fellowships are available to those who are working toward the masters' or doctoral degrees in the first, intermediate or terminal year of graduate study.

College seniors who expect to receive a baccalaureate degree during the 1958-1959 academic year are also eligible to apply.

All applicants for graduate awards will be required to take an examination designed to test scientific aptitude and achievement.

This examination, administered by the Educational Testing Service, will be given on January 19, 1959 at designated centers throughout the United States.

Further information and application materials may be obtained from the Fellowship Office, National Academy of Sciences - National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Ave., N. W., Washington 25, D. C.

The deadline for the receipt of applications for regular post doctoral fellowships is December 22, and for graduate fellowships, January 5.

Jos. Mingione Lectures on Stereo-phonic

Joseph Mingione, treasurer of the AIEE-IRE, was student speaker at the group's meeting last Monday.

Mingione brought to the meeting an entire stereo-phonic reproduction system along with stereo-tapes and the new stereo-discs to aid in the discussion.

Ed Coccogna, field trip chairman, announced that plans are underway for visits to the American Telegraph Laboratory in Wayne and to International Business Machine Co. in Philadelphia.

In the inter-section football league, the U's defeated the Jaybee's by a score of 12-0 as Jim McCollough and Dom Cetrone scored. In other action the Longjohns took the Mask's 7-0.

McCullough, vice-chairman of the organization and head of the football league, announced that each junior and senior electrical engineering section had formed a team and would play a six game schedule. The winner of the junior class division will play the senior class winner for the league title.

Bob Merkert, chairman, has recommended that all members pay their national dues by November 10 if the local chapter is to benefit from the rebute plan.

Local membership dues of one dollar per year should also be paid as soon as possible, Merkert said.

"When you can think of yesterday without a regret and of tomorrow without a fear, you are on the road to success."—Highways of Happiness.

Coach Reagan Will Speak To K of C Group

Athletic director and head football coach Frank Reagan will be guest speaker next Monday night at the monthly meeting of the Father Ludwig, O.S.A. Council, campus chapter of the Knights of Columbus.

Reagan will discuss the first seven games of the football season and reveal some of the 'Cats secret weapons planned for the Army game.

Grand Knight Eugene Powers, Dean of the Evening Division, said the meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Vasey Hall auditorium.

Films of the Wildcats upset victory over Boston College earlier this month will be shown.

Powers said that various committee chairman would be expected to give complete reports at this meeting, called primarily to discuss council business.

The Dean also said that the K. of C. is still accepting application for membership from students and faculty. Initiation would be held soon, he said.

The meeting is open only to members of the K. of C.

Lynx Raises Prize to $15

Reappraisal of the writing contest announced last week has caused Frank Dynan, editor in chief of the Lynx, to increase the prize money from ten to fifteen dollars.

"In view of the relatively short time that the contest will run," Dynan said, "we have decided on a bigger prize to increase incentive." The deadline for all entries has been announced as November 13.

"In the statement that the best article or short story will be sent to a New York literary agent, the term article has created some confusion," Dynan added. "Here used, article refers to an essay on a topic of general interest to the great majority of magazine readers. Literary criticisms and essays dealing with other subjects of restricted interest, such as art, do not fit this definition."

As usual the Lynx staff will meet this afternoon at 3:30. All editors must attend.

Students Can Vote

Villanova students who reside in New England or the Middle Atlantic state, and are registered to vote in their home state, can vote by absentee ballot except those from Connecticut, Delaware, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

By state the rules concerning absentee voting are as follows: students from Massachusetts must write their city or town clerk; from New Jersey, the county clerk; from New York, the County Board of Elections; and from Vermont, the town clerk.

Massachusetts and New Jersey require ballots returned by November 4; ballots for New York and Vermont must be returned by October 21.

Students from states not mentioned can find out their states voting regulations by consulting the bulletin board in the Student Publications Office.

Murphy Scores Rally

We had something to say this week about the student pep rally held prior to the Richmond game last week, but student body president Bob Murphy came to us with a letter that states our point as well as we could. Since Murphy's position gives more force to what must be said, we're reprinting it here in the form of an editorial.

"Last Thursday night, we all witnessed one of the worst instances of mis-guided enthusiasm for a rally that this campus has ever seen. The blame cannot be laid squarely on any single person or group of people.

"The Spirit Committee must take the largest share because of poor planning and publicity, of course. And the student body turned out in only fair numbers. As far as I can see, there is no reason on earth why 1000 men cannot turn out for each and every rally. This is only 30 percent of the student body and 65 percent of the resident student body.

"Perhaps the students didn't hear of the rally. If this is true, then the Spirit Committee is at fault. However, I rather think that most of the students—mostly underclassmen, unfortunately—were just too lazy to spend half an hour in support of the team. The student body was then to blame also.

"The Spirit Committee and the students weren't totally to blame, since that most important part of all football rallies, the football team, found it impossible to come at the proper time.

"One of the bright spots in an otherwise dismal evening was the band. This much-maligned group, perhaps the most spirited one on campus, was there, and did its best to lend support.

"I was determined at the very beginning of the year to write every infrequently in the VILLANOVAN, and then not on spirit. It seems now that some sort of censure is needed, however. You really can't find fault with any members of the student body who were present, but it would seem that a few individuals would rather conduct a raid on Rosemont, or obstruct traffic, or act like hoodlums in general, than participate in a tribute to a team that has brought victory to Villanova. For those people, words shouldn't even be wasted.

"All in all, I feel that an appeal is in order. Whenever and wherever the next rally might be, I hope that everyone will find time to cooperate and participate. Upperclassmen still retain the stigma of a national magazine's blast at Villanova spirit in their minds, and they should want to prove it wrong.

"However, they are not the ones at fault. Spirit is dependent upon the freshmen and sophomores. The potential is always there. Now we must develop it."

Loan Plan Explored

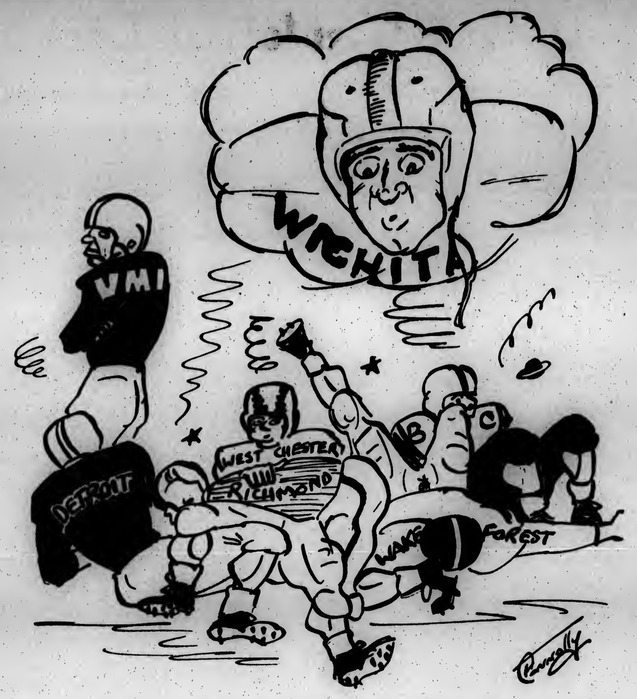
David L. Lawrence, mayor of Pittsburgh and Democratic candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, last week urged a new program for higher education.

Speaking at Temple University in one of a series of campaign speeches, Lawrence said that "Pennsylvania must advance and improve the opportunities it provides for higher education for its young people."

He called for an increase in the assistance to state-supported universities, the development of a program of scholarship loans, and the establishment of a system of junior colleges.

The suggestion presupposes that modern students need loans to get additional education. We think that young men with initative and ability, willing to work in spare time rather than lounge in the Pie Shoppe can really "work their way through college."

We agree the plan deserves a further hearing. But we think the money could be better used in improving academic conditions in elementary and high school education.



Then, students with real college potential would find themselves better prepared to meet what should be the great demands of college study. Only those willing to sacrifice for education deserve, one anyway.

Letters To The Editor

To The Editor:

The time has come again for the annual united community fund-raising drive. These landmarks of togetherness are known variously as United Funds or Community Chests, which latter includes "Red Feather" Agencies. Although I have not always been successful in escaping the war parties in the past, this year I have resolved not don the red bonnet of the true member of the tribe. The council fires will burn without my faggot this year—Manitou has councilled me that the medicine of the group is not good.

Why this recalcitrance ? I suppose that there are others who do not shell out for the Organization, and I suppose that the motives are almost as varied as the number of Resistors. One might be misanthropic, or simply stingy. One might be distrustful of an agency under a red insignia. One might be at odds with the neighborhood arm-twister. One might have already given largely to one's own private charity. One might even be opposed to professional welfare, although this seems a nasty thing to say. I merely list it to fill out my catalog, for who could deny that the professionals really do good? And who would? Although I don't suppose that I have anywhere near exhausted the possibilities, I will close the list with one last suppose: one might object to the very principle of the thing.

Now by this I don't mean that one is uncharitable. The opposite may be true. What is meant is that there may be some who dislike the idea of groupy works of mercy. I might be all in favor of the Friends of the Golden Slipper Camp, for example, but perhaps I prefer to let them know in person. It seems to me that these united drives are an undermining force in a society of free individuals. Is it good to pile all one's social and charitable responsibility into one heap and then shovel? Is scattershot love of our fellow man sound—or even sane? Is the glow of civic pride a substitute for the heart-felt response to a man in need? Somehow I think that the answer is "No".

The principle I object to is this: it is so much better to give collectively: one check for all those wonderful groups. It is, no doubt, more expedient to act this way, and for those who not otherwise give I suppose that it is as good an occasion as any. But who, pray tell, ever said that one ought to be expedient when dealing with absolutes? For if charity is not an absolute then it is hypocrisy. I was brought up to believe that charity was essentially love, and that love must have an object. This year, and for a long time, I hope, I will forego the opportunity to express my love through a committee. To those who are not personally involved in their expressions of love I bequeath my feather. Take it to bed with you,—and may it give you a warm feeling around the heart.

Sloat's Parents Thank Students

Jim Sloat, a member of the class of 1959, recently lost a gallant fight to cancer. This letter is from Jim's parents.

We wish to express our deep gratitude to the men of Villanova for their many kind and thoughtful deeds at the time of the death of our beloved son, Jim Sloat.

Our sincere appreciation for the perpetual membership in the Augustinian Seminary Guild given by Villanova Students, for the Chalice given by Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity in his memory, for the memberships in the Franciscan Mission Association, and for the many Masses and prayers offered.

Our heartfelt thanks to those who came to Washington to pay respect. These memories of Villanova will live in our hearts with other memories of our loved one.

Miss Mischief Night?

By PETE ALLARD

ALLARD

Hallowe'en is coming friends, but it won't be the real thing. It used to be, back in the days of the Eve of All Hollows that goblins, witches, ghouls, poltergeists, and appiliates of Disembodied Spirits, Inc., would come up from the underworld and scare the pantaloons off any mortal foolish enough to be out and around.

Gradually, as this superstition became unfashionable, it was superseded by a type of youthful nuisancing called "mischief." And, not too long ago, a wonderful institution called "Mischief Night" became firmly established as a part of Americana.

The whole spirit of "Mischief Night" represents a way of thinking which has disappeared; noble sports such as poaching, and holidays like the old-style unsafe Fourth of July have all been banned by a network of stifling, ubiquitous laws.

Cops Foiled by Cunning

Dangerous and illegal these things may be, but they contributed to the development of traditional American qualities such as craftiness, cunning, resourcefulness and quickness of the mind.

The timing of "Mischief Night" illustrates this native brand of cleverness: "The cops look for us on the 31st. It's dangerous for us on the 31st, and besides, the old man won't let me out of the house. Why don't we steal Clancy's gate on the 30th!" This was simple, effective, and appropriate logic.

Now, we have that harassed and unimaginative breed of youth called the juvenile delinquent. We also have much of this crisis-oriented nation thinking in terms of juvenile delinquency and applying the term loosely to kids who are neither delinquent nor very juvenile.

Hang In A Gang

Do-gooders, parents who are easily led, and little old ladies who have lots of cats will all support anything that will "keep our boys and girls off the streets," because it will help "combat juvenile delinquency."

Previously intelligent communities are devising all kinds of "Teen Behavior Codes", and any group of more than three boys standing on a corner is a gang. What a stale, insipid way to live!

Back when our grandfathers went out to overturn Brown's outhouse, the thing was done with enthusiasm and gusto. They would wait for a dark night, and they wouldn't give the caper away in white T-shirts and jangling cycle jackets. Neither would they come roaring up to Brown's in a car unsullied by mufflers.

Catty Saloon Busters

And, a reflection of the mood of the day, they weren't too surprised if they tripped over a wire Brown has stretched in front of a convenient mud puddle. There was always that healthy atmosphere of give-and-take, and most important, no one was stupid enough to get caught.

Do-gooders were few and far between. Parents hit first and asked questions later, and little old ladies who had lots of cats would sharpen their axes and go out gleefully every Wednesday night to bust up saloons. Boys were clever enough not to go steady and to dress innocently in things like knickers; activities close to the juvenile delinquency of today, they wisely cloaked in anonymity.

In the days when the Ten Commandments handily covered youthful misdemeanors, kids were smart enough to stay away from corners where they could be seen. They maintained less obvious places like clubhouses, caves, and shacks.

Oh For An Outhouse!

All of this is no more. Many people have become more sophisticated, more sensitive; less secure, and less like that crazy, colorful bunch who built this country.

Canine Caper Overplayed; Sorry Season Seen So Far

By WOLCOTT BROOKS

MAN OR DOG?
(See Brooks)

BETTER STAY HOME
(See Gallagher)

It would seem that the idea of the American male attempting to break away from society's present day stanglehold has been overdone. However, Albert Beich and William H. Wright think in the negative about this, and have written a comedy in three acts, "The Man in the Dog Suit," which opens tomorrow night on Broadway.

The play is the story of a bank teller, played by Hume Cronyn, attempting to escape the rut into which he has fallen, and his wife's resignation to his methods. The wife is played by Mrs. Cronyn, better known as Jessica Tandy.

I Want my Dogsuit

Oliver Walling, after wearing a dog suit to a masquerade ball, sees it as a vehicle of serving himself from his redundant life. His reserved in-laws, who own the bank for which he works, are shocked. They demand he choose between a desk at the bank and his beloved dog suit. He ultimately forsakes the bank, keeps his dog suit, and heads for the woods of Oregon, to survey the growth of the tree—a job which he reluctantly left nine years before.

How he reaches this decision forms the basis for the comedy. It is bright in spots, especially the second act, which has Mr. and Mrs. Walling discussing their marital difficulties from the most popular viewpoint. However, overall the timing and pacing are off and tightening of the script is needed.

The Suit's A Bird Dog

The play suffers from the over playing of the dog suit itself. A practical joke or any other type is a one time item and cannot be reused, but that is what is done. The humor involving the costume is forced, even at the start and becomes more evident as the play progresses. The dog suit, which the authors must have decided would be an asset, is in fact, a distinct liability. It is like an albatross around the "neck of the play."

The supporting characters are plentiful, and type cast. Clinton Stundberg, the perennial undergraduate, plays Walling's brother-in-law as expected and it is a part he has done many times before.

Ernie Sneaks In

Carmen Matthews, who is billed as a co-star, is inebriated throughout the evening and unless this is her natural state, there is no reason for her existence on stage except, to quote from Hemingway: "She gives the impression that she has been through it all before and is just bored by the whole situation." The plausibility of the plot suffers from the improbability of the main character, Oliver Walling.

The public will, most likely, support the venture and make a hit out of it. But we are wondering if advance sales on Broadway are based on the Cronyn-Tandy label.

When the play opens in New York tomorrow it will be Mischief Night and Hume Cronyn will be dressed for the occasion. The rest will be standing around trying to look as if they belong.

Editor's Note: Wolcott Brooks is really Tom McKenna.

By BILL GALLAGHER

We've had "Auntie Mame," "Goldilocks," "Suzie Wong," and "The Girls in 509" here in Philadelphia so far this season. Add to this roster of supposedly classy females, the comedies "Once More, With Feeling," Make a Million," "The Man in the Dog Suit," and "Marriage-Go-Round;" add, also, the dramas "A Swim in the Sea," "Handful of Fire," and "Comes A Day." Eleven shown—ten of them tryouts, one a mediocre tourer—and nothing resembling a truly memorable production among them.

Is it only poor Philadelphia that is suffering from a bad case of "early season blues," or is the condition a general one ? Boston, New Haven, Washington, Atlantic City, etc. have not been much better off.

Boston has seen the one outstanding drama of the year, Eugene O'Neill's "A Touch of the Poet". Atlantic City, under its new assured-profit subscription plan, will get what appears to be a hit drama from the pen of John ("Look Back in Anger") Osborne, titled "Epitaph for George Dillion."

Bad All Over

The scarcity of works of quality is, then, not strictly confined to the city of Brotherly Love. New York can right now boast of the above-mentioned "A Touch of the Poet" as its only early success.

What is the outlook for the coming months ? It is almost certain that as soon as it gets these half-funny, half-bright comedies out of its system, the season will improve. How much, no one is quite sure.

Clouded Crystal Ball

Scheduled to play Philadelphia in November and December are these promising dramas: Pirandello's "Enrico;" John Osborne's "Look Back in Anger;" S. N. Behrman's "The Cold Wind and the Warm;" 'and Budd Schulbergs "The Disenchanted;" And these musicals: "A Perfect Evening," based on Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice" and "Darlin' Man," based on Sean O'Casey's "Juno and the Paycock."

Leader's Pardons Board Pardonable

By J. P. KELLEY

The Republican Party in Pennsylvania is attacking Democratic Governor Leader's Pardons Board in a desperate attempt to win an election. Here is the truth about the Pardons Board in Pennsylvania.

The Pardons Board is composed of the Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General, Secretary of the Commonwealth, and Secretary of Internal Affairs. Those convicted of a crime and whose sentence is for one year or more are eligible to appear before the board.

The board studies the petitioner's background, and that of his sponsor before deciding to take action. They then consider data received from the Judge, Warden, District Attorney and lawyer. After a thorough study they vote and if a majority are in favor of the petitioner they recommend that he be paroled by the Governor.

Tough Pardons Board

The G.O.P. charges that Leader releases too many criminals. It is fact that in the first three years of his administration 555 commutations were granted, but it is also fact that his Republican predecessor Gov. Fine, granted 1,028 commutations in the same period of time. Republican Governor Duff granted 611 commutations in his three years of fewest pardons.

The Leader administration commuted sentences for one prisoner out of forty. Duff's average was one out of twenty-two and Fine's one out of thirty-three. It is easily seen by these statistics that Leader's Pardons Board is much tougher than those of his Republican predecessors.

Republicans claim that those pardoned by Leader revert to their old tactics of crime. Statistics show that 92 percent of these people are leading constructive lives. Statistics also prove that the longer a person serves in prison the harder it will be to reconstruct his life when he gets out. Thus those who serve out their sentences are most likely to commit crime again than parolees. Of murderers released only one percent commit another crime.

Crime Rate Lower

Due to the administrations of Governor Leader, Mayor Lawrence of Pittsburgh, and Mayor Dilworth of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania's crime rate is far below the national average. Philadelphia and Pittsburgh rank 29th and 26th respectively out of 34 cities considered with a population of 250,000 or more. Pennsylvania is far below the national average in all categories of crime covered by the 1957 F.B.I. statistics.

The succeeding Lawrence administration should be even better than Leader's in curbing crime since the Pardons Board will be chaired by a former judge, John Morgan Davis of Philadelphia.

activities, ways of improving their meetings or making them interesting. We want to help the student put what program would be increased activity in the National Federation of Catholic College Students. We're putting a lot of money into that organization and so far, outside of a couple of convention trips for delegates, have gained nothing from it. This year we hope to make good use of what NFCCS can offer us. This is an integral part of our program.

Also, we worked with the senior class to help improve the placement program, and have ambitious plans to help effect closer student-alumni relations. Something else that we belong to and have never gotten much out of in the past is the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia. This year, we're going into it with the idea of doing something for the benefit of all the Philadelphia schools, rather than just plan for the awarding of sportsmanship trophies and things of that nature.

Does this mean that you intend to ignore the student benefit programs such as senior cars?

Not at all. When I referred to those problems as petty, I didn't mean that they were below consideration. I just meant that they shouldn't take up all our time. Already we have set up a senior section on the 50-yard line for all home football games. To try to alleviate the crowded conditions in Dougherty Hall, we went to the Administration and suggested placing of food machines in the Commerce and Finance building along with the coke and coffee dispensers, and they were put in recently. We passed a proposal that made it possible for sophomores to obtain their blazers earlier this year, initiated Parents' Day and have many, many other programs along those lines.

You mentioned the re-vamping program last year. Do you think that the new council constitution has improved the work of the council?

Yes. It has made more people aware of what the council is supposed to do, and has made it possible for individual motions to be given more attention by creating the Student Senate and has given potential "teeth" to the council. By that I mean that this year we're having a new "get tough" policy in their required monthly reports, they will be subject to disciplinary action by the council. If needed, I wouldn't mind seeing the council cut in half. We may find that this is the only way we can get action from our members, and, if so, it would not only be a welcome move, it would be a necessary one.

Do you think that campus organizations will resent this "get tough" policy and/or your policy of trying to guide them?

Undoubtedly, they're going to resent the new policy because, as I said before, the council doesn't have the prestige it needs. However, this might be one way of getting it. As to trying to guide them, I object to the word "guide." It should be "help." And nobody should object to help.

There have been some complaints from students that the council members themselves don't understand their own policies. What do you have to say to this?

If this is true, the blame lies entirely with the individual. He has every opportunity to have any doubts in his mind answered. He can clear them up by reading the constitution, for one thing. Or he can talk to the more-experienced members of the council.

BOB MURPHY
We Want Help

What exactly do you feel is your duty—not as a council officer, but as president of the student body?

As president, you're a spokesman for the whole student body, so you should try to remember that responsibility, particularly when making off-campus contacts. The position calls for you to be the leader of the student body, and you should always act that way.

We've spoken mostly of the council's relationship with the students. How about with the Administration?

You always have to remember that student government is a privilege granted to you by the Administration, and, because of that, you owe it to the Administration to do a fair job, and by fair, I mean not to take the student's side all the time. You also represent the Administration to the students. You owe it to them to do a mature and responsible job, and you should feel that you are capable of doing it.

Since this is Student Government Week at Villanova, do you have anything you would like to say in regard to the council?

I would like to ask the student body to make use of the council whenever possible, to suggest ways of improving it if they feel it needs improvement, to respect what the council is trying to do and, in general, to co-operate with us.

French Student Politics Essential to Universities

By JIM GILLESPIE

FRENCH STUDENT

The purpose of student governmen in French Universities is to organize the students into compact, government subsidized communities.

Through these communities, the student is provided with many of the necessities of life, and some amusement at a modest price.

In certain instances, when the student government tries to regulate activities not pertaining directly to their group, they have been known to resort to mob violence.

Only Used Pickets

Last year, however, when students went on strike from classes for a day to protest the poor university conditions, only peaceful picket lines were employed.

Although these organizations do not deal directly with politics, communist influence often stirs the students into riots. These outbreaks however, can be attributed as much to the extreme energy of the French student, as to the communists agitaters who encamp themselves in the halls of the universities distributing pamplets.

Some of the accomplishments of the student organization at Grenoble University were, blacklisting places where land lords are unfair in their treatment of tenants, conducting annual inquiries into the living conditions of the students, and forming committees to help students find adequate lodging.

Large Social Season

The student government also has their own cafeteria at which meals are served for as low as seventeen cents a meal. The food is plain and very well prepared, and beer or wine is served free with meals.

Last year, organization members participated in a rather heavy social season of dancing, skiing expeditions, and geographical tours to sights of interest in the locality.

There is also a foreign student branch incorporated into the student government organization which gives cultural assistance by helping the foreigner to acquaint himself with the French language and cultural background.

Cocktails Take Culture

Thanksgiving, the Franco American chapter gave an American turkey dinner for the French. We, being the richest chapter, also gave several cocktail parties which were more widely attended than the seminars on American culture which we also sponsored.

All in all, the French student organization is an indispensible part of French university life.

Only Surviving Four Year Member Notes Growth of the V.U. Student Council

By DON KEMPF

KEMPF

It was four years ago that I first became a part of Villanova Student Government. There was no Student Administration Committee, nor Vice-President of Student Affairs then; Dick Peer was Chairman and Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., was moderator. I was there too—having defeated a fellow by the name of Robert A. Murphy and being the youngest of forty members.

Today I am the only one left from the Council of four years ago—and student government at Villanova has changed greatly in those four years. As the campus grew, so did we. We're up to sixty members now, Rev. Dante Giralomi, O.S.A., is our moderator, and there are three vice-presidents instead of one.

To those in it, student government is many things; adventure, excitement, honor, struggle, and most important, a teacher; an instructor in human nature, for its subject matter is composed of people. Most of them we learn to respect, admire, and imitate, and a few we unfortunately grow to dislike.

Ideal and the Practical Meet

We learn to fight for what we think is right and to oppose what we think is wrong. And we learn that often there is all too wide a gap between the ideal and the practical.

We have our laughs and our tears, our ambitions and our heartbreaks, our . . . but let me tell a few in an autobiography of my career in student government:

By the time I received my voting status on the S.C., I had already learned a great deal about its members. I'd had my first fight—over spirit—with a junior named Jack O'Rourke and I'd listened to and observed in awe those who talked nightly in the various student activities offices.

The council was divided into two groups, the radicals and the conservatives with Dick Peer and the conservatives in power. However, I became associated with the former group, led by Vice-Chairman Jack O'Rourke, and including outspoken Virginian Harry Nash and a sandy-haired fellow who wasn't even on the council by the name of Nicholson.

The Bitter With the Sweet

It was at my first official meeting that we adopted the room selection presently in use. Other goals were attained in the remaining weeks; dining hours were extended, separate male and female retreats were established, and the buildup of the Spirit Committee began.

All was not smooth however, for on March 22, following heated discussions concerning "powerless student government," the mysterious resignation of the editor of the VILLANOVAN, and the near resignation of the Council Vice-Chairman, a special meeting was called "To discuss student administration relations."

Over 500 persons attended, but a tactful handling of the meeting by Chairman Peer and Father McLaughlin plus the hope of a brighter future, eased tensions and prevented any serious misunderstandings.

The Rise of the Radicals

In May the fight for control was won by the radicals as Jack O'Rourke was elected to the chairmanship by a single vote.

But in September the battle began anew when O'Rourke resigned to enter the seminary, expressing the "best of luck to all—especially the radicals." Again a single vote decided the outcome with soft-spoken radical Joe Martin being elected chairman, assisted by Pat Nicholson as Vice-Chairman.

An eventful year followed. The student trip was inaugurated and over 1000 students went to Boston; class bulletin boards were erected, the $1000 limit on prom bands was lifted; and Basca weekend was improved .

The office of Student Council Treasurer was created; the Inter-fraternity Ball was initiated; and the used book program was established. Jack Shea and Tom Curran showed themselves to be outstanding leaders throughout the session.

The year ended with the notable absence of inter-group struggle as Pat Nicholson and myself were elected Chairman and Vice-Chairman by unanimous vote.

Nicholson began his administration with a drive and determination which he maintained until graduation day, and which resulted in a long list of achievements. Idealism gave way to practicality, compromise and understanding developed, as student - Administration relations reached a new high.

Action was the theme as matters ranging from the Senior Car Program and Parent's Day to the sending of flowers or the buying of a new stapler received the same efficient handling.

A Challenge to the Future

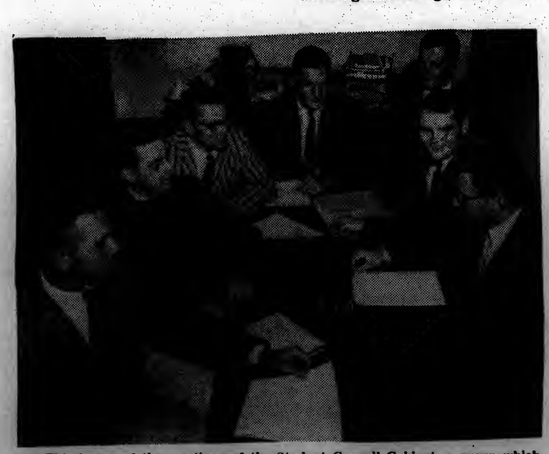
But the greatest accomplishment of the Nicholson saga was in the preparing of a new student government constitution by which he hoped even greater results could be obtained in the future.

As the year ended, so did an era in Villanova student government, for as the VILLANOVAN pointed out, we returned to the "soft" approach in the Chairman Bob Murphy and Vice-Chairman Tom Hoffman.

And so we begin another year, and a very important one, for as Chairman Murphy pointed out:

"This is the year that will make or break student government at Villanova."

The Student Council In Action



The final authority of the council rests in the Student Congress. Here the final decision is given on all motions.

The Academic Affairs Committee, under the chairmanship of senior engineer Gerry Hepburn (right) discusses one of the many student problems brought to it.

Bob Murphy (right) chairman of the council, presides over all senate and congress meetings, while secretary Bob Wagner Takes minutes.

This is one of the meetings of the Student Council Cabinet, a group which directs the activities of the council committees. The council officers and executives vice-presidents make up this body.

The Student-Administration Committee meets with the Rev. Dante L. Giralami, O.S.A., and the Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., for the final decision on a motion. This group and the Student-Faculty Committee are the final links between the council and the Administration.

Presence of Atmosphere Hints Life On Mars

First in a Series

In this attempt to prove that Mars is the home of life, the reader must assume that where are the necessary conditions for life, life will necessarily exist.

No doubt some people find this theory difficult to believe without proof, but let the reader be assured that this theory which he is asked to assume is based on sound scientific thought.

If name dropping will help, Sir Harold Spencer Jones, Britain's Astronomer Royal, is a firm supporter of this theory. The reader must also assume, more readily perhaps, that if life exists on other worlds, it exists as we know it, i.e., dependent on oxygen, carbon dioxide, solar heat, water, and the other conditions which govern life on Earth.

This is due to the fact that physical laws are constant throughout the universe. This is not to say that life on other worlds has evolved in the same manner as on Earth (it very likely has not) but that the basic requirements for life are identical throughout the universe.

Before answering the question, Does life exist on Mars, the question, Can life exist on Mars, must first be answered. In order for a planet to support life, it must have an atmosphere. The presence of polar caps on Mars indirectly give evidence of an atmosphere. During the Maritian summer that polar caps melt, naturally giving up some of their moisture through evaporation.

If there no atmosphere to hold water vapor captive, it would have dissipated into space through the ages, leaving nothing to form the caps which now exist. More direct evidence of an atmosphere is provided by photographs of Mars taken through colored filters.

Photographers using infrared light, which has haze cutting properties clearly showed the surface of Mars. Ultraviolet photographs, on the other hand, did not show the surface due to a hazy atmosphere which scattered the short ultra-violet waves before they could return from the Martian surface.

In addition the ultra-violet photo of Mars is larger than the infra-red one because the infra-red photograph shows the planet itself while the ultra-violet photograph shows the planet surrounded by its atmosphere shell. The differences in radii suggest an atmosphere some fifty miles deep. Added to this evidence the presence of water vapor and dust clouds seen above the Martian surface provide conclusive proof that Mars possesses an atmosphere.

Glen Plaid Speaks:

Some Subtle Suggestions On How to Suit Yourself

At last you're beginning to catch on. I met this freshman who went out and purchased my whole outfit. In fact, he got five sets alike. Claims he's hard on clothes. Takes all kinds doesn't it?

Now that some of you are on the right track, we can proceed to a more difficult problem. I realize some of you never wore a suit, but the time has come for you to make a great step forward.

Watch for Junk

Your first problem is where to shop. My advice is never to deal with anyone who advertises on radio, such as Craft Bros., Robert Hall, etc. In these places you'll find nothing that doesn't look and wear like the $25 you paid for it. If this is your first experience, try a famous name establishment, on the level of Wanamaker's or such.

If you're out as an experienced buyer, seek out places that are small and carry a specialized stock. Anywhere you spot good clothes and junk side by side, beware unless you possess a good eye or you know the salesman.

What's Money

When you finally decide on the right place to buy, make sure the salesmen are well dressed and competent advisors, and then all you have to do is select the suit, ha! Start out with a basic idea of what you want in color, material and tailoring and do not allow yourself to be swayed far from this.

Be individualistic in your buying and don't sacrifice details for price. If you look hard and long enough for the exact item, you will find it, patience being one of your best guides to good grooming.

I hesitate to dictate another outfit but I will suggest some color styles and materials from which you can choose. Not everyone can wear every color; therefore it is wise to match you skin complexion with that of the material.

Most prominent this fall will be dark browns and medium greys and a combination of both in sensational new shades called brownstone. Blues are shelved till later and greens produce boredom when used for suiting purposes.

Finger the Flannels

Develop a finger touch for judging materials. Determine both the weight and pressing qualities of the article before you buy. Worsted flannels along with cheviots and a new article called hopsock, a speckled, woven wool, compromise the front line of fashion this year with hard wear orlon and dacron blends following closely.

Don't hesitate to have imaginative additions tailored into your suit, such as sleeve cuffs, high set armholes for more freedom of movement, horizontally cut peak lapels or inverted pants pleats if you use pleats at all. The vested suit is coming back strongly with a shorter suit coat complementing it.

Lastly if my terms confuse you, consult a reliable tailor.

An Onlooker Ponders A Weighty Problem

By SHELL E. KEATS

I have often worried about the grassless paths which crisscross our campus. Hedges were grown to keep students off the lawns, but the individualists keep short-cutting. Even heavy gauge barbed wire proved futile.

Now, as a last resort, the University is depending on the fence of iron. No doubt even this extreme will prove futile, and, somehow, new methods of keeping our campus green will be developed.

Cementing all the existing footpaths would eliminate intramural football and baseball. Asking all students to go barefoot would result in more barriers being erected, to keep us from tracking dirt on the walks.

Tunnels would be too expensive and give dirty word writers too much area in which to practice. Some radicals have suggested tearing everything down before we look like a center city University, but of course this is ridiculous.

Oh well, I guess I'll go right on worrying.

McGrath NFCCS Chairman, Lists Commission Schedule

The National Federation of Catholic College Students student government commission for the Philadelphia region released its program for the year this week.

Jerry McGrath, Villanova I.A. major and chairman of the commission, announced that the aim of this year's program is two-fold: to be of service to the member school's student governments and to make them aware of the fact that N.F.C.C.S. is only as good as they want it to be.

The fall semester is concerned with the study of the "Role of Student Government". The schools will hold small discussion groups to consider the purpose, structure, program and function of student government.

McGrath hopes that these topics will stimulate the students and student leaders, to thought and to action on their ideas.

The commission is planning a regional workshop on the topic of "The Role of Student Government" at which time the ideas and suggestions brought forth in the individual colleges will be discussed and provide others with "food for thought".

This workshop will be held at Villanova on Sunday, November 23rd.

In the second semester the commission will deal with problems concerning the training of leaders, the development of leadership, N.F.C.C.S., N.S.A., and Student Council freshmen orientation programs.

The workshop for the spring semester is planned for April.

Discussions at that time will be aimed at some of the more specific matters related to student government.

Future Teacher Exams Next Year

The National Teacher Examinations, prepared and administered annually by the Educational Testing Service, will be given on Saturday, February 7.

Villanova students who intend to enter the field of teaching upon graduation must determine, from the school system in which they are seeking employment, whether they are required to take the test.

During the one day testing session, a candidate will take test in professional information, general culture, english, expression, and non-verbal reasoning; and one or two of 11 optional exams designed to demonstrate mastery of subject matter to be taught.

Applications and an information booklet can be obtained by writing the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, N. J. Completed applications must be received at the above address by January 9, 1959.

Prizes Offered In Poetry Contest

The Virginia Quarterly is accepting manuscripts in its annual Emily Balch Awards contest. The contest was inaugurated for the purpose of furthering American interest in poetry.

There are three prizes—the first is $500; the second and third prizes are $250 each.

In addition to the prize, if the winning entry is published in the Quarterly, the editors will pay to the winner their usual publishing fee.

Contestants may submit as many entries as they desire. No articles that have previously been published may be entered. All students and teachers are eligible.

All manuscripts should be mailed to the Virginia Quarterly, 1 West Range, Charlottesville, Virginia.

Editor Calls For Race Conference

"A national conference under the sponsorship of the White House" between White and Negro leaders to work for a solution to segregation-intergration problems is proposed by a leader of the Catholic Interracial movement in an exclusive interview in the November issue of The Sign, national Catholic magazine.

Rev. John LaFarge, S. J., a founder of the Catholic Interracial movement, makes the proposal in response to a question, "What steps are not being taken to deal with the segregation-integration crisis which you would recommend ?"

"One of the great problems of the present moment," he answers, "is that the country is hearing from the extremists. . . . These extremists have succeeded in intimidating many of moderation into silence.

Must Be Heard

"There are many people in the South today, Negro and White, who have splendid ideas about the present situation, but their voices are not being heard. I would favor any method by which their voices can find utterance without danger of intimidation, vilification, or reprisals.

"I would favor a national conference," Father LaFarge declares, "under the sponsorship of the White House, at which leaders of both races would be brought together to speak freely with each other and to work for a solution of our present problems.

"On the local level I would favor a whole series of such conferences, again under the sponsorship of the White House, at which regional leaders would be brought together for free dialogue."

Catholic Teaching

Father LaFarge sums up Catholic teaching on race:

"(1) Regarding the Natural Law, we insist that the human race enjoys a natural unity and that the rights of the individual person are universal, regardless of race distinction.

"(2) The Church teaches that all members of the Mystical Body (the Church) are one in Christ regardless of race. The doctrine of racism on the other hand involves a denial of this unity of the Mystical Body and cannot be reconciled with Catholic teaching."

ANYONE FOR FOOTBALL?

When Pancho Sigafoos, sophomore, pale and sensitive, first saw Willa Ludowic, freshman, lithe as a hazel wand and rosy as the dawn, he hemmed not; neither did he haw. "I adore you," he said without preliminary.

"Thanks, hey," said Willa, flinging her apron over her face modestly. "What position do you play?"

"Position?" said Pancho, looking at her askance. (The askance is a ligament just behind the ear.)

"On the football team," said Willa.

"Football!" sneered Pancho, his young lip curling. "Football is violence, and violence is the death of the mind. I am not a football player. I am a poet!"

"So long, buster," said Willa.

"Wait!" cried Pancho, clutching her damask forearm.

She placed a foot on his pelvis and wrenched herself free. "I only go with football players," she said, and walked, shimmering, into the gathering dusk.

Pancho went to his room and lit a cigarette and pondered his dread dilemma. What kind of cigarette did Pancho light? Why, Philip Morris, of corris!

Philip Morris is always welcome, but never more than when you are sore beset. When a fellow needs a friend, when the heart is dull and the blood runs like sorghum, then, then above all, is the time for the mildness, the serenity, that only Philip Morris can supply.

Pancho Sigafoos, his broken psyche welded, his fevered brow cooled, his synapses restored, after smoking a fine Philip Morris, came to a decision. Though he was a bit small for football (an even four feet) and somewhat overweight (427 pounds), he tried out for the team—and tried out with such grit and gumption that he made it.

Pancho's college opened the season against the Manhattan School of Mines, always a mettlesome foe, but strengthened this year by four exchange students from Gibraltar who had been suckled by she-apes. By the middle of the second quarter the Miners had wrought such havoc upon Pancho's team that there was nobody left on the bench but Pancho. And when the quarterback was sent to the infirmary with his head driven straight down into his esophagus, the coach had no choice but to put Pancho in.

Pancho's teammates were not conspicuously cheered as the little fellow took his place in the huddle.

"Gentleman," said Pancho, "some of you may regard poetry as sissy stuff, but now in our most trying hour, let us hark to these words from Paradise Lost: 'All is not lost; the unconquerable will and study of revenge, immortal hate, and courage never to submit or yield!' "

So stirred was Pancho's team by this fiery exhortation that they threw themselves into the fray with utter abandon. As a consequence, the entire squad was hospitalized before the half. The college was forced to drop football. Willa Ludowic, not having any football players to choose from, took up with Pancho and soon discovered the beauty of his soul. Today they are seen everywhere—dancing, holding hands, nuzzling, smoking.

Despite Need For Scientific Studies, Wisdom Is Much More Important

By THOMAS E. MURRAY
Atomic Energy Committee
SPECIAL TO THE VILLANOVAN

Since the launching of the Russian satellites, much has been said about the shocking lack of scientific education of American youth. In proposing solutions for our current educatonal needs, however, we must not be misled into thinking it is simply a matter of turning out greater quantities of scientists and engineers.

The Soviet system puts science and technology at the basis of its education because its culture is purely materialistic. It falsely sees man as the supreme architect of the world, and so it seeks to prove the superiority of its system by the spectacle of scientific achievements.

But our American tradition of education is inspired by the Christian vision of man: a creature of God, the image of God, the servant of God. This true vision of man requires us to establish order within human society necessary for free and peaceful existence. Our problem, then, is to preserve and strengthen this tradition and adapt it to the needs of our times.

We Need Science

Today we need to strengthen our schools in the basic scientific disciplines—physics, chemin these studies is necessary for istry, biology. Indeed, excellence the survival of our free society, for although science alone will not realize the Divine design for freedom, justice, and peace in man's life on earth, this Divine design will not be achieved under today's conditions without the powerful aid of science.

Yet, whatever our need for science and technology today, our need of wisdom is still greater. Wisdom does not lie at the end of purely scientific investigation. Wisdom is largely the fruit of experience, and we shall not equip our students to live in such a way as to acquire wisdom from experience, unless they are trained in all the modes of human thought.

Students need literature and the arts, history and social science, philosophy in all its branches. Above all, they need the truths of religion, whereby they come to know the Ultimate Reality which is God.

Can't Solve Problems

By my experience in the field of atomic energy, I know that science has created problems which it has been unable to solve. Nuclear physics, for example, has harnessed great power, but it can give us no political or moral guidance as to the right uses of that energy.

How, then, shall our education be strengthened so that both science and wisdom may flourish? Plans and money are necessary, but they only create the opportunities for the student. Will the student grasp these opportunities?

Yes, but only on two conditions: if there is instilled into American youth a love of excellence in intellectual pursuits as something good in itself; and second, if there is inculcated in our youth a willingness to pay the price of excellence, viz. hard work.

Youth tends to reflect the attitudes of its parents. A love for intellectual excellence and a willingness to work are grown in the home. Parents that create such a family atmosphere are preparing their children to meet their future responsibility of putting God's designs into action.

Students Visit Gettysburg On Year Trip

Two dozen history majors toured the battlefields of Gettysburg last week in the senior seminar's annual field trip.

Dr. Harold Hartman, chairman of the History department, organized the trip as an opportunity for the members to observe the scenes of events they are studing in class.

During the trip Hartman gave short lectures on various phases of the campaign, including a brief analysis of the Gettysburg of 1863, the military campaign and the end of the invasion. The history professor though a specialist in constitutional law, has a special interest in the Civil War. His study in the field provides material for the seminars.

Although taking the group through some of the most beautiful land in our country, the trip was not concerned with sightseeing; it considered the conduct of the Gettysburg campaign influenced by the rain and the similarities between the town of 1863 and that of today.

Some of the sites visited were Oak Hill, Oak Ridge, Cemetery Ridge, Meade's Headquarters and Seminary Ridge.

An interesting stop was made in the afternoon near the cemetery where the group saw a cyclorama of Pickett's charge.

This is a big attraction to the tourists as well as being historically informative for the students.

A chartered bus collected the members and a few interested extras at 8 Thursday morning and returned them at 9 in the evening.

NFCCS Announces Summer European Travel Tours

The National Federation of Catholic College Students has announced its program of European Travel for the summer of 1959.

Entering its tenth year of operation with the NFCCS Travel Program, in conjunction with the National Newman Club Federation provies low cost tours to the principal places of interest in Europe.

Four tours are being offered this year. They range from $697 to $1051.

Ample time is allowed throughout the tour for leisure activities and shopping, as well as visiting the chief tourist attractions.

In making the announcement of the Federation advised all interested students and graduates to make their applications as soon as possible because of the great demand for the limited space available.

Inquiries can be made of the NFCCS-NNCF Travel Program, 1 Thomas Circle, Washington 5, D.C., or of the local NFCCS campus travel chairman.

Friday Deadline For Scholarship Forms

State Offers Fellowships In Grad Political Science

The Pennsylvania State University Graduate School is offering scholarships and fellowships toward the M. A. and Ph.D degrees in political science for the year 1959-60. Specialized study in Comparative and American Government, International Relation, and Public Administration will be available.

Graduate assistantships are available for men holding Bachelors and Masters degrees in political science. Assistants must be enrolled in the graduate school, and are allowed to schedule ten credits per semester. Their duties will consist of leading discussion groups, grading papers, and assisting in departmental library research.

Stipends range from $1500-$1800 for two semesters, depending on the applicant's qualifications and experience. Assistants are exempted from all major fees excepting $41 Health and Welfare fees for both semesters. Applications for re-appointment can be filed by all assistants.

Applications can be made at the Department of Political Science, Sparks Bldg., Pennsylvania State University, University Park Pa., and should be returned no later than March 1, 1959.

Information and application forms may be secured from: Chairman American Civilization Department, Graduate School of Arts and Sciences University of Pennsylvania, Phila. 4, Pa. They must be returned before February 18, 1959.

Jazz Band Ball In November

A huge Ivy Jazz Band Ball, featuring several of the outstanding jazz bands in the country, will be held on November 28 at the Roosevelt Hotel in New York City.

Continuous music will be featured from 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. The price of the ticket is $10 per couple.

The world famous bands of Eddie Condon, Wilbur de Paris, Coleman Hawkins, and Stan Rubin will be among the jazz combos. College bands from Yale, Lehigh, Holy Cross and Williams will perform, along with vocal group from Princeton, Smith, and Skidmore.

Interested students can contact Thomas W. Lloyd, campus representative, for information on tickets and hotel reservations.

WVIL Contest Starts Tonite

Station WVIL will kick-off a new contest tonight in which campus listeners may win many orizes just for listening.

The prizes include record albums, cigarette lighters, cigarettes and pen sets.

Rules of the contest are simple. Just listen to WVIL and wait for a phone call from the station. Those called will be asked about something which happened on the station that evening.

Everyone called who was listening should win a prize.

Students don't have to write slogans or submit box-tops, just listen.

Everyone called during any particular week will be eligible for the weekly grand prize which will be announced each Wednesday.

The contest is scheduled to last for a period of three weeks, announced Gary Mara, WVIL's Program Director. He added that an attempt will be made to call every resident student during that time.

Further details on the format of WVIL's Lucky Listener Contest may be learned by dialing 645 on AM radio.

Masses Planned for Catholic Youth Week

In conjunction with the eighth annual observance of National Catholic Youth Week, evening Mass is being celebrated for the entire student body.

The Masses started last night and will continue tonight and tomorrow night at the regular weekly chapel services. A special sermon is also being delivered in observance of Catholic Youth Week.

Parents' Day Huge Success

Bob Wagner, chairman of the Parents' Day Committee, has reported that the first attempt at an annual Villanova Parents' Day last week was a hugh success.

Three thousand visitors attended the affair, and found especially interesting the Villanova Jazz Band Concert, and the address by The V. Rev. James Donnellon, O.S.A. University President, Wagner said.

Last week the Student Council adopted a motion by Wagner to continue Parents' Day next year.

Wagner thanked the university athletic department for "their invaluable cooperation to make the day a success".

liver the paper on the second topic, "Medieval Antecedents of Renaissance Humanism."

This presentation will deal with St. Augustine and his influence on the tradition of the fluence on the tradition of Renaissance Humanism.

Robertson's studies into St. Augustine and into medieval preaching, a large number of which have been published, are recognized as a definitive contribution to knowledge.

Discussion of Robertson's paper will be led by the Rev. Robert P. Russell, O.S.A., chairman of Villanova's department of Philosophy.

Renaissance Concert

Late in the afternoon, following the readings and discussions, tea will be served in the lounge. During the tea the Villanova Singers led by Professor Herbert Fiss, director of music at Villanova, will present a short program of Renaissance madrigals and aires, representative of the best music of the period.

Not only teachers, but anyone interested in any phase of the Renaissance, even if it be restricted to Renaissance music, has been invited to attend.

The Middle Atlantic States Renaissance Conference is the annual meeting of one of 20 regional groups which form the Renaissance Society of America.

The society was organized in 1954 to bring together all the various studies concerned with the Renaissance; philosophy, literature, history, fine arts, music, history of science, in short, any study dealing with the transmission of classical knowledge.

Two publications, designed to forward its aims, "Studies in the Renaissance," an annual, and "Renaissance" "News," a quarterly, are published by the Society. Dr. Buford has formerly served as associate editor of both magazines.

The local faculty committee which is responsible for the details of the meeting, in addition to Buford are Dean Reuschlein of the College of Law, professors Charles Bernardin, Charles Bruderle, Jerome Fischer, and Rev. Robert Russell, OSA.

Rhodes Grants Available, Value Increased to $1,875

The value of Rhodes Scholarships to Oxford University has been increased to 750 pounds sterling annually — roughly $1875—the American Secretary of the Rhodes Scholarships has announced.

The increase, 150 pounds sterling over the previous value, is intended to cover all necessary term-time and vacation expenses.

Each year the U. S. sends 32 students from hundreds of applicants to study at Oxford University for two and sometimes three years. District committees, composed of former Rhodes Scholars, select the winning applicants.

Applicants must be from 18 to 24 years of age and at least a junior attending an approved degree-granting American college or university. Villanova students can make application through Dr. John McInerney, assistant to the Vice President for Academic Affairs. Application must be received by the State Secretary by November 5.

Ward Needs Writers On Business Whirl

The Business Whirl, student publication of the Commerce and Finance School, will hold a meeting tomorrow at 10:30 in room 106 C and F.

Ed Ward, senior Industrial Administration major and editor in chief of the Business Whirl has issued a call for new members, particularly Marketing, Finance and Pre-Law majors.

Anyone who wants to submit articles to the magazine should begin work immediately, Ward said.

Murtha Names Club Chairmen

A revision of the program of the French Club was announced last week by Frank Murtha, president of the organization.

The new program calls for an increase in the club's activities, both socially and intellectually.

The club will feature French operas, and French language and records for the improvement of the members' vocabulary and French speaking ability.

Murtha announced the formation of committees to direct functions and activities of the club.

The chairmen of the committees are:

Sports Committee, Matt McCue; Charity Drive Committee, Tim Shea and Chuck Bollman; Social Committee, Don Phillips and Paul Iffland; Intra-Club Activities, Jerry Barrullo; Inter-Club Activities, Frank Murtha and John Tedeschi and Publicity Committee, Bob Olejniczak.

More Members Needed On Religious Affairs Comm.

The Religious Affairs Committee will meet Thursday at 10:30 in room 105-06 Vasey.

Bob Merkert, chairman of the committee, announced that the group has got under way successfully, but could use more members.

The arrangements for this campus' activity, in addition to the regional activities being held at Villanova for the Catholic Youth Week are being handled by the Committee.

The selection and distribution of pamphlets will also be done through the members in conjunction with the Chaplain's office.

At present, many new pamphlets are being reviewed by the members of the committee in order to give the students a more varied and interesting topics.

Any student in the university who is interested is cordially invited to attend the next meeting.

Biology Department To Conduct Seminar

In connection with its seminar program, the Biology department will hold a zoology seminar at 4:00 today in room 212 of the zoology laboratory at the University of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Gilbert Ling, head of the department of basic research of the Eastern Pennsylvania Psychiatric Institute will speak at the seminar.

These Electrical Engineers Are Solving Problems That Won't Happen Until 1960!

Yes, that's right. Thanks to this amazing A-C Network Calculator, Pennsylvania Electric Association Engineers can actually plan powet networks, complete with generating stations, power lines, homes, and factories, for future development and know in advance what problems will be created and how to solve them.

And, this almost "human" electronic marvel is only one of a number of modern electronic devices that frequent the every day life of engineers engaged in today's fascinating electric power industry.

As an engineer about to begin your career, you simply won't find a better field than the electric power industry . . . particularly with a Pennsylvania electric company. Nowhere else will you find newer advances in equipment or methods—nowhere else will you find a greater opportunity to help build America's future—and nowhere else will you find a wider range of interests, one of which is sure to be the one you're looking for.

If you feel you can qualify to join an organization that's rapidly expanding; that offers a young man opportunities for advancement; that is extremely well known and respected, then talk to your placement counselor. Or, write to Pennsylvania Electric Association, State Street Building, Harrisburg, Pa., telling them where you would like to live and work.

He was hospitalized and surgery was performed.

Freshmen Lose to Bullis, 15 to 14

By JOE FITZPATRICK

The weather in Maryland was sunny and warm last Saturday but the day was anything but bright for the Villanova freshmen football team.

The Wildkittens of coach Ed Michaels dropped a squeaker to a strong Bullis Prep eleven, 15-14.

The Villanova running game, led by Bob Capone and Nick Russo, was strong as was the line play but the Bullis box end defense held in the Villanova receivers making the passing attack ineffective.

Caught Napping

The pass defense of the Villanovans also showed signs of periodic weakness and eventually cost them the game.

With only seven minutes remaining in the game the preppers attempted a long pass and they caught Villanova napping. The Marylanders made their attempt for the two point conversion and won the game.

Bullis drew first blood, scoring in the first period but Villanova came fighting back with a touchdown late in the first quarter when powerful Bob Capone cut through the Bullis line from the three.

The frosh's attempt to go ahead failed when Capone's plunge for the two points was stopped.

Villanova went into the lead in the final quarter when Kenny McNeill capped a 60 yard drive by plunging for a score from the two.

One, One, and One

Bob Russo made the score 14-7 when he drove for the conversion.

The standouts on the line were captain Sam Gruneisen and Tom Kepner.

The game ended the Villanova freshmen season and left them with a one win, one loss, and one tie record.

The win was a 26-13 triumph over West Chester; the tie was a strong 16-16 showing with Army plebes.

The prognosticators picked 12 correct winners in 18 games which came to decisions last week.

Overall, 38 winners have been selected in 56 non-tying games.

Pool-players who followed three of the Villanovan choices were repaid handsomely—Ric our Texas, Boston College over Miami and Southern Methodist over Georgia Tech.

This week's games follow, the home team on the right and the predicted victor in capitals.

Sports Chatter:

New Team Spirit Seen

By JACK CURTIN

When Dick Keyser's placement kick sailed over the crossbar to give Villanova a 7-6 lead over Richmond early in the second period of Saturday's mud-splattered grid contest, quarterback Jim Grazione responded with a gleeful leap into the air.

It wasn't a sight noticed by too many of the soaking-wet crowd of 4000 who watched the Wildcats power to their fourth straight victory and fifth of the season. Yet it might have been one of the most significant moves performed by a Villanova football player in several years.

Grazione, whose performances have made him the most-reknowned of all the Main Liners, is representative of the entire Wildcat team. And his action was symbolic of the minds and hearts of all eleven mud-caked figures representing the University against the Spiders.

The joyful exhibition was that of a man glorying in victory, obviously. Yet it was deeper than that. There was nothing personal in Grazione's cheer. It wasn't his own achievement that the quarterback was thrilled by—it was the achievement of a group of which he was a part.

When Jim Grazione leaped into the air, he was not only himself, he was every single man in a Villanova uniform. He was the physical manifestation of a team's achievement.

And that has been the story of Villanova this season. Already the Wildcats have taken five victories, and they are assured of having a winning season. If they cop at least one more tilt, they'll have won more games than any other Frank Reagan-coached team ever did.

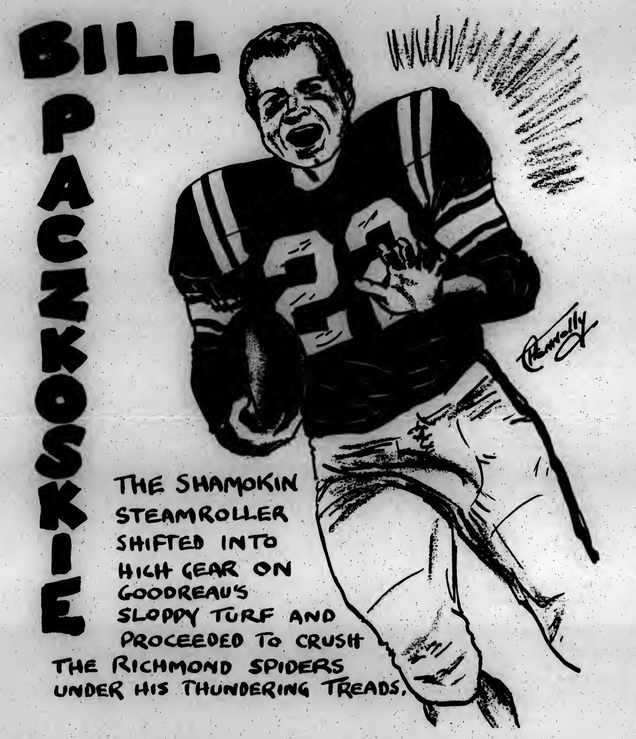
All of these so far were the result of magnificent team effort. effort.

Villanova has been woefully low in regard to manpower. Injuries have plagued the Main Liners since pre-season practice. They have been underdogs or no better than even money three of their last four contests. They've won them all.

And each time the Wildcats have notched another win, it has been the result of a co-ordinated ecort by every man on the field. The linemen, virtually unheralded, have held the opposition again and again—many of them playing with only a few moments rest.

The backfield has been tremendous—whether in the person of Grazione, or Dave Intrabartolo or Billy Paczoskie or John Daniels or Gene Paja.

Before the season started, there was a lot said about this year's Villanova team. Not as good as last year's they said, but they should win more games. Win more games they already have, but in doing it, they've disproven the reasoning of the prophets.



Last year's unit might have contained better players in some positions, and it might have been deeper in men, but the 1958 edition of the Wildcats is the best team the Main Line has seen in quite a while.

With the new philosophy of "playing together to win together," the Wildcats—should they escape last season's "on the road jinx"—seem likely to pick up two more victories in the next two weeks over Wichita and Dayton.

That would bring them in to face powerhouse Army with a 7-1 record and a six game win streak. It would be nice to go into the Army game with that 7-1 log. It would be nicer to come out of it with an 8-1 mark.

This "team" just might be able to do it.

Player of the Week:

Mike DeLucia Is 'Unsung', But He Always Does Job

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

A player who has been of prime importance to the football team's somewhat surprising 5-1 record to date, has not received a "headline" in any newspaper.

He's Mike DeLucia, the 6-1, 192-pound guard who has been a two-year regular after playing considerably as a sophomore.

Mike has been the most consistent lineman, on a game after game basis, that the Wildcats have had all season.

"He's definitely an unsung type," says his line coach, John Sandusky, himself one of the finest linemen that Villanova ever had.

Gets Job Done

"While you don't notice him as much as you would a bigger man or one who plays end, Mike gets the job done," continued Sandusky.

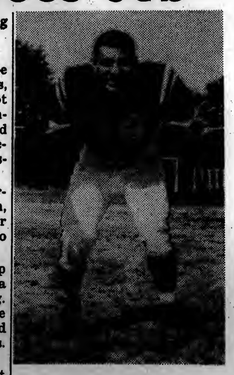
Sandusky thought that the Wake Forest game was the finest DeLucia had played in his career. "He blocked crisply, he hit hard on defense. Mike's effort was a major factor in holding (Neil) MacLean to 26 yards."

Bill Paczkoskie had such a wonderful game against Richmond primarily because DeLucia, the other guards and centers Tom Fletcher and Ed Lemkin exercised their trap blocking to perfection.

Has Good Speed

DeLucia is the perfect type guard for Villanova's purposes, Sandusky pointed out. He's got the necessary speed to lead interference on wide end runs, and to cover the "hook man" on defense when the opposition passes.

Although he has yet to intercept his first pass this season, he was the interception leader of the 'Cats for the previous two years.



Mike shares the captainship of the team with Gene O'Pella and the incapacitated Bill Craig. He is a natural leader, the type who is on the practice field early and hustles at all times.

Transferred from Fordham

The former star athlete at Christian Brothers Academy in Syracuse, N. Y., originally enrolled in Fordham, but left that school when it dropped football.

DeLucia was a center in high school and for the first two years of his college career, but he was switched to a guard at the start of his junior year.

Wherever he plays, Mike DeLucia can be counted on to do a consistently fine job—he doesn't know any other way to play.

MIKE DE LUCIA

Radio station WRCV will broadcast the Villanova Wichata game from Kansas at 9 p.m. Saturday. Jim Bonner will handle the play by play.

Eight Men Chosen For Golf Team

The golf team held qualifying sessions last week, and eight men were chosen to represent the university in a ten-match spring schedule.

Nick Aquilino, who was the low qualifier last year and also posted the team's lowest round—a two-over-par 74 at Cederbrook Country Club—was chosen captain at the end of the past season.

Jim Elliott, who is head track coach, also handles the golf team. Senior Bob Byrwa is the manager.

There are six lettermen on the squad: Aquilino, Ron Zurinskus, and Roger Gaire have two years experience, while Reggie Zurinskus, Marty Connelly and Jim Gay are two-year veterans. Dave Doyle and Jim Cahill are new to the squad.

Weather Interfered

Ron Zurinskus, a senior, was low qualifier with a score of 79. Par at Valley Forge Country Club, where the matches were held, is 71, but rainy, cold weather hampered play somewhat.

This was the second time in three years that Ron has been low qualifier. He had a 151 for two rounds while earning a place on the 1957 team.

Cahill, although competing on the collegiate level for the first time, is no stranger to competitive golf. During his two years in the armed services, Jim played plenty of military golf.

Gaire, a senior chemical engineer, has seen limited action in the past, but he has always put on a performance expected of a college golfer.

Reggie Zurinskus, also a senior, had a year of varsity play at Mount St. Mary's College before transferring to Villanova after his freshman year. Since freshmen are eligible in the Mason-Dixon Conference he took part in that league's tourney and came in second.

Marty Connelly, a junior, should come into his own this year. He has shown flashes of real ability. Last year he defeated two of the outstanding golfers in the area when the Wildcats played Penn.

Jim Gay, another junior, saw limited duty last year, but he is expected to give the team the extra depth needed to win the close matches.

Sophomore Doyle led Mount Hermon Prep for three years before coming to Villanova.

to the Cat's end zone, but a clipping penalty nullified the score.

The Cats had a similar misfortune in the third period when John Daniels broke off tackle for 50 yards to the Richmond 14, where he was caught from behind. Daniels had, however, moved too soon in the backfield, and the back in motion penalty moved the ball back to the 31.

The four-game win streak is the first in Coach Frank Reagan's five years with the Cats, and is the most consecutive victories since the 1952 team started with six straight.

Joe's Jets Eye 20th Intramural Victory

By CARL BARNHURST

Joe's Jets will go after their 20th win in the Intramural Football League, when they face the Whiskey Company on Austin Field this afternoon at 4:30.

The Jets have rolled up 19 victories in 21 contests over the past three seasons for their originator, captain and quarterback, Joe Scancarella, the balding genius from Clifton, N. J.

For the past two seasons, they have marched through their league and the play-offs, only to lose in the semi-finals.

Gained Revenge

Two years ago, the Junglebunnies stopped the Jets on a muddy Austin field, five first downs to three, to go into the finals. The Jets got revenge last season by beating the Junglebunnies twice during the regular season in two viciously fought contests.

But, on reaching the semi-finals, they were once again beaten, this time by the defending champions, the Delurey Devils. The Devils and Jets fought to a standstill on first downs, but the Devils were able to complete one long pass for a score and that turned out to be the difference.

The Devils and the Junglebunnies are the only two teams to have scored on Scank's boys in their twenty one games to date, the Bunnies having scored in each of last year's defeats.

Veteran Squad

As for personnel, Joe's Jets are a veteran ball club. Lining up behind Scancarella are blocking backs "Cowboy" Jack Mulhall and Frank Connolly and slot back Irv White. Mulhall is also used as a passer and Bill Boitlein plays the backfield and defensive end.

Up front, Terry "Farmer" Johnson is playing his third year at center with Bobby Al Draghi and Gene Duffy on either side and Jim Tague and Packy Glennon at the flanks. Dick Lenskold and Rocco Barbieri are ready to step into the line, when needed.

The best team doesn't always win in Intramural play; you need the breaks. Joe's Jets feel they have a solid team and if they get the breaks, they'll be tough to beat.

The team is made up entirely of seniors, so it's their last chance for the title.

Pass Defense To Get Test On Saturday

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

The football team's pass defense, so stalwart in the four games since the VMI fiasco, is due to receive its most severe test of the season on Saturday.

That's the word from Bill Austin, former All-Pro lineman with the New York Giants and presently line coach at the University of Wichita, the team the Wildcats will face this week.

The game will be played at Wichita, thus marking the first time the Wildcats have played away from home since the upset victory over Boston College on October 4.

Frank Reagan, presently embroiled in his fifth season as head coach, has a special reason for wanting to beat the Wheatshockers. A victory would be number six, the most a Reagan-led club ever compiled.

Not In the Clouds

Everyone, Reagan especially, would like nothing better than going to West Point to play Army with a record of 7-1 but Wichita is one of two opponents who, while not having impressive records, could knock the Wildcats from their perch on Cloud Nine. Dayton is the other.

Wichita has not won a game to date, having dropped decisions to undefeated Bowling Green, Oklahoma State, Houston, and most recently, Hardin-Simmons.

But, the Wheatshockers played highly-regarded Cincinnati to a tie, after being four-touchdown underdogs. And the game with Hardin-Simmons was lost by only 13-6. Hardin-Simmons, whose coach, Sammy Baugh, has arranged a national schedule, has the finest team in its history.

All of which means that the Wildcats should not expect to be handed an easy victory in the land of the sunflowers and waving grain.

Will Test Villanova

Austin, here on the Main Line to scout the 'Cats in their mud-spattered victory over Richmond, said after the game: "I hope for your sake that your pass defense is up to snuff. We're going to give it a real workout."

Except against VMI, the umbrella has been more than adequate. Fifteen enemy passes have been plucked from the airways, six of them by Jim Grazione alone.

Dick Young, a 5-8 junior who has been listed among the leaders in total offense all season, does the bulk of the Wichita passing.

And a lot of passing that is. For example, against Houston two weeks ago he threw 35 aeriels.

Where Did He Go?

The Wheatshockers use a prototype offense, referred to by Austin as the "multiple T." There is always a man-under-center, but the other three backs are spread anywhere over the field.

That Wichita likes to throw to these flanking backs is pointed up by the fact that halfback Mike Cochran is second in pass receiving in the Missouri Valley Conference.

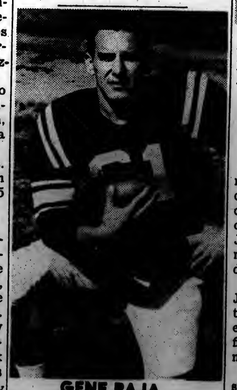
The Wheatshockers are a young club, dominated by a very good crop of sophomores. There's not a senior in the starting backfield.

Two players will be no strangers to the Main Liners. Halfback Ted Dean is a Radnor High graduate, while guard Bob Blackwell lives in Bryn Mawr.

Dean Best Runner

Dean, who played halfback last year when the 'Cats opened the series against Wichata by chalking up a 24-6 victory, has been switched to fullback. Although he missed two games because of a dislocated elbow, he's the top ground-gainer.

One of the sophomores who has been particularly impressive is center Roland Lakes, a giant who stands 6-5 and weighs 240 pounds. A former tackle, the son of a Baptist minister plays middle guard on defense.



Austin said of Lakes: "He'll let your centers know they've been in a ball game."

Tom Fletcher, who played possibly his finest game against Richmond, and Ed Lemkin apparently will get a real test.

The Wildcats are in pretty good physical shape to face the Wheatshockers. Larry Sopko got a jolt to his right shoulder, but he should be back in tow by Saturday.

Billy Paczkoskie heads goalward looking like a mud-smeared bull-dozer, after leveling the left side of the Richmond line. The touchdown play covered 30 yards.

GENE PAJA

Has been sidelined by cracked ribs.

Reggie Powe brings down Mickey Marinkov of Richmond at the line of scrimmage. Jim Osbourne (67), Paul Tomczyk and Dick Keyser move in to give assistance if it is needed.

Paczkoskie Stars In Win Over Spiders

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

The Wildcats splished and splashed their way to their fourth consecutive victory of the season on Saturday, defeating a heafty Richmond ball club, 13 to 6 before a crowd of 4,000—good under the circumstances.

The rain-drenched spectators saw soph Bill Paczkoskie power thirty yards for the 'Cats first score, and then belt a single yard for a fourth period tally following the Spiders' first quarter touchdown.

Paczkoskie, a superb mudder, found the dreary downpour to his liking, as he rumbled through the oversize Spiders for 150 yards in 18 carries, thus giving him an individual offensive total 50 yards in excess of the whole Rebel effort.

The 210-pound full back barrelled 13 yards right up the middle after the 'Cats opened the second period with the ball on their 39. He then added 3 more, and Dave Intrabartolo rambled for 15 yards to the Spiders 30.

Belly Wopper

Here Paczkoskie smashed off right tackle, bowled over several tacklers at the scrimmage line, decked another at the 12 with a powerful straightarm, lunged across the goal line, and slid gracefully on his belly through the uprights, and the 'Cats took the lead for the rest of the game.

An opening quarter interception by Richmond fullback Buddy Davis gave the Spiders their lone score. With seven minutes gone in the period, he grabbed Jim Grazione's third down pass and sped 45 yards down the sideline for the touchdown.

The Spiders' open field blocking on this and all plays was excellent. Mickey Marinkov, a "rebel" from Lebanon, Pa., missed the try for point.

Line Braced

Following this single pass interception TD, the Wildcat defensive line and secondary did another fine job, and held the Richmond attack to 100 yards total. Offensively, they opened large holes through which the Wildcat backs traveled 251 yards total.

The Cats' fourth period score came when they got the ball on their 42 after one of Richmond's nine punts. On second down, Paczkoskie crashed to the Richmond 17. Intrabartolo then ripped off 16 yards and narrowly missed scoring when he was driven out of bounds right at the goal line flag.

Intrabartolo, however, proved himself a rain or shine performer. The nation's 9th ranked rusher, he carried 14 times for 85 yards, to move his season's total to 436 yards in 95 efforts.

The day was unsuited to passing. Graz threw four, completed none, and had one intercepted. Richmond's three quarterbacks threw six and completed none.

Long Punts Help

Graz and Wayne Kautter got off several long points that kept Richmond deep in its territory. Bob Dunnington, however, grabbed one of these points in the third quarter and raced 78 yards

Cross Country Team Loses

By LANCE COLONNA

Well, they showed up for the meet. That is about all that can be said for the Villanova cross-country team which succumbed to a very strong St. John's aggregation in a dual meet held at Villanova last Friday.

The final score was 16-43. St. John's actually breezed to victory, with the first four finishers being Redmen. Peter Close finished first in the time of 28 minutes and 31 seconds.

The race covered a distance slightly over five miles, and with the exception of a half mile over the Villanova track, the course followed the neighboring roads.

The first Villanovan to finish was Bob Godesky, who placed fifth and was times in 29 minutes, 25 seconds. The other Wildcats who completed the grueling race were: Tim McNamar, seventh, 29 minutes, 44 seconds; Lance Hugelmeyer, ninth, 30 minutes, 8 seconds; Eugene Rogers, tenth, 30 minutes, 33 seconds; Vic DeMaio, twelth, 30 minutes, 48 seconds; Henry Neill, fourteenth, 31 minutes, 22 seconds, and Bill Tinney, fifteenth with a time of 32 minutes and 54 seconds.

Villanova's record now stands at no victories and two defeats.

Teamster UnionMonitor To Give Talk

By THOMAS E. RADOMSKI
of the Villanovan Staff

Godfrey P. Schmidt, court appointed member of the Board of Monitors for the International Teamsters Union, will speak tonight at the second session of the Villanova Law Forum.

A noted New York and Washington Attorney, he has campaigned vigorously for a union constitution "with teeth".

Schmidt, 55, a senior partner in the law firm of Schmidt, Egan, and Murray, will speak on "Monitors, Unions and Labor Democracy" at the moot court room in Garey Hall at 8:30 p.m.

He represents many corporations and labor unions and was counsel to the anti-Hoffa committee of the union which last year sought an injunction to prohibit James Hoffa from taking office as Teamster union president.

Fordham Graduate

A graduate of Fordham University in 1925, and Fordham Law School in 1930, he was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States in 1953.

Schmidt's wide background includes being counsel to the New York State insurance department, The New York State banking department, and the New York State labor department between 1930 and 1936.

Appointed by former President Truman, Schmidt served as a member of the atomic energy panel from 1950 to 1953. In January 1958, he was appointed as Monitor for the teamsters union.

Law Professor

Formerly a lecturer at Fordham University school of social service, he is now an associate professor of constitutional law at Fordham University law school.

Appropriately, today marks the start of hearings in Washington on the request of the monitors for more power to deal with alleged corruption in the Teamsters Union.

A noted anti-communist, Schmidt is the founder of Aware, Inc., an organization dedicated to the exposition of Communist activities in the entertainment and communications fields. Earlier this year he was the recipient of the American Legion Americanish Award.

Two Societies Are Expelled By Senate

The Student Senate last week expelled two campus organizations and threatened seven others.

The action was a result of the organizations refusal to submit a full list of activities and members to the Fraternities and Societies Committee.

The expulsion and suspension proceedings were initiated by committee chairman, Joe Mason, senior arts major.

The Senate in a secret ballot voted to oust Delta Pi Mi, Liberal Arts fraternity, headed by senior C and F student Al Dombrowski, and the Physics Club.

A move to expell the American Society of Civil Engineers was defeated by the Senate when a member said that president Matt Mazza, senior engineering student, had made efforts to have a report submitted.

Mason listed these organizations as delinquent in submitting reports:

Turf and Tinsel, Gary Tackas, president; Finance Society, William Murray, president; Villanovan, Larry O'Rourke, editor; Belle Air, Bob Pinto, editor, and also the Marketing Club, and Intercollegiate Conference on Government.

Big Success In New York, "Tiger" Is Anti-War Play

"Tiger at the Gates" is originally a French play written in 1935 by Jean Giradoux. However, translated into English by Christopher Fry, the British verse-dramatist, it became a Broadway hit in 1956.

It was first produced in Paris, as a warning to the world, which was then drifting from "the war to end all wars" to an even greater conflict. It differs from most anti-war plays in that Girdoux used wit rather than philosophy to score the stupidity of man.

Staged at the Plymouth Theatre in New York in 1955-56, "Tiger" received the acclaim of audience and critic alike, and at the close of the season, it was awarded the New York Critics' Circle award as the best foreign play of the year.

Menelaus Seeks Revenge

The plot springs from Paris abduction of Helen, the wife of the Greek king, Menelaus. Helen is not unhappy with her captor but Menelaus takes a dimmer view of the affair and rallies the Greeks behind him with the help of Agamemnon, Ulysses and Ajax.

Hector, son of Priam, king of Troy, devotes himself to a peaceful solution of the problem. In this he is aided by his wife, Andromache, his mother, Hecuba and his sister, Cassandra. Andromache's support of Hector is tragic in itself in that her intuitive sense has convinced her that the war faction will succeed despite her husband's efforts.

In the meantime, Helen has so ingratiated herself with the people of Troy that they will fight a war rather than bring an end to Paris' extra-marital bliss. The poet, Demkos, is mouthpiece for battle

Tiger Arrives

Hector's efforts are to no avail; the war will be fought. The folly of man must have its price. The Tiger, symbolic of the impending strife, arrives at the gates of Troy. "Tiger at the Gates" stops here; Homer's Illiad finishes the story.

The story is symbolic and bitter, tragic and comical. But the thoughtful playgoer will temper his laughs with the knowledge that he, and everyone, is the butt of the playwright's humor.

This week's VILLANOVAN is the first ever published during the week of examinations. The paper will again be reduced in size next week and any organizations desiring publicity must submit handouts before 3 p.m. tomorrow.

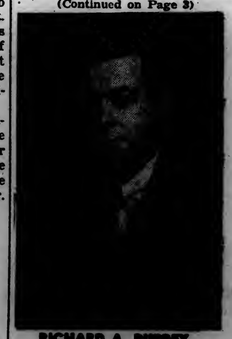
"Tiger at the Gates," the Belle Masque Dramatic Society's first presentation of the 1958-59 season, will open tonight in the Field House at 8:15. The show will run through Sunday night.

Tickets for the show are currently on sale in the Pie Shoppe at $1.50 for regular admission and $1.00 for students. Because of the space taken by the Shakespearean stage, seating will be limited to 604 seats, all of which are reserved. Due to the limited capacity, Owen Klein, president of Belle Masque, has recommended immediate purchase of tickets.

Mixture of Moods



A condemnation of war by Jean Giradoux, translated from the French by Christopher Fry, "Tiger at the Gates" is a mixture of tragedy and hilarity. It is, in essence, a study in contrast between the gross selfishness of some men and the altruism of others.

The scene is Troy, prior to the Trojan War, and the conflict of the play is Hector's attempt to forestall war with Greece over Paris' abduction of Helen, the wife of the Greek king, Menelaus. He is opposed by the majority of the Trojan people, who are determined to have their war.

Tickets for the show are currently on sale in the Pie Shoppe at $1.50 for regular admission and $1.00 for students. Because of the space taken by the Shakespearean stage, seating will be limited to 604 seats, all of which are reserved. Due to the limited capacity, Owen Klein, president of Belle Masque, has recommended immediate purchase of tickets.

Mixture of Moods

A condemnation of war by Jean Giradoux, translated from the French by Christopher Fry, "Tiger at the Gates" is a mixture of tragedy and hilarity. It is, in essence, a study in contrast between the gross selfishness of some men and the altruism of others.

The scene is Troy, prior to the Trojan War, and the conflict of the play is Hector's attempt to forestall war with Greece over Paris' abduction of Helen, the wife of the Greek king, Menelaus. He is opposed by the majority of the Trojan people, who are determined to have their war.

Democrats Retain Control

The people of the U.S. have spoken at the polls.

The outcome was long predicted. Political prognosticators, detecting a growing criticism of Republican national policies, predicted a spread of that criticism to state elections.

In a record turnout yesterday they swept the Democratic Party to a commanding lead in the Senate and House of Representatives.

The Democratic Party made a clean sweep in Philadelphia. David Lawrence was elected Governor of Pennsylvania.

His running mate, George Leader, Democratic candidate for senator was upset in a real surprise by Republican Hugh Scott.

The politicking is over now and the candidates have their chance to live up to campaign promises. Remember, 1960 is coming, and a new President. The next two years may decide the free world's future.

Letters To The Editor

To The Editor:

I protest vehemently against the column, "Leader's Pardon Board Pardonable," which appeared in the October 29 issue of the VILLANOVAN.

In essence it is a poorly disguised attempt to whitewash one of the controversial aspects of the Leader adminstration. Mr. Kelly, with ordinary political reasoning, "quotes" statistics without ever mentioning the source from whence they came. There is an old saying that statistics prove anything you want them to prove.

Hence the statistics "prove" that fifty-three people were attacked on the streets of Philadelphia in the first nineteen days of October; they also "prove" that more than two million citizens were not assaulted. We are not concerned with how many prisoners were released by previous administrations or by Leader himself; what counts is the adverse effects these criminals have had on our society.

But you sir, must bear the brunt of criticism for the publication of this type of column. I cannot deny Mr. Kelly his constitutional right to speak and write as he pleases.

However, for you to pass him off on the student body as a disinterested, informative political observer is journalistic crime with no defense.

Mr. Kelly is a Democratic committeeman from Philadelphia County. He has been actively campaigning for several years for the Democratic party. With this kind background his opinions and attitudes cannot be objective.

Because of the nature of a university, which draws its students universally and teaches them so, the VILLANOVAN has the responsibility to present the issues from an objective point of view.

Mr. Kelley recently deplored the state of apathy which exists today towards politics. Both Mr. Kelley and you cannot expect the student to develop a mature knowledge and interest in politics if you continue your present policy. It is just the type of dribble that creats such apathy.

To pound into the intelligent mind illogical and bombastic statements will only deaden it to political activity. Even now the all too popular association of politics with the fast-talking windbag is proving detrimental to our democratic society.

John Rumbarger
(senior Arts)

To the Editor:

I would like to pay compliment to Mr. John Kelley for his fine informative article on the workings of the Democratic Pardons Board.

This issue has been one of the hardest hit by the Republicans in their dwindling campaign and many people were uninformed of the real story.

Thanks to Mr. Kelley we now have concrete facts and figures which refute the accusations made by the windy Republicans against our efficient Democratic Pardons Board.

To The Editor

Tonight I witnessed a fiasco! Here is the result of giving immature, short-sighted incompetents any sort of authority or responsibility.

I'm speaking in reference to the selling of the tickets for the Army game and the ensuing meeting of the Student Council where certain individuals strived to seek redress for the grievances.

But I don't think everyone knows of what went on at the Student Council meeting.

Questions are raised at the meeting as to who got tickets beforehand and how many, the truth to rumors concerning friends of certain influential people getting unlimited tickets at their leisure, what was the pre-sale income from tickets or even an approximation of same.

All were answered with a cryptic, dynamic "I don't know"! No one knows anything — these people don't need interest, they need organization.

Autumnal Abstractions

By BOB BROTHERS

Fifty per cent of a college education comes from outside the classroom. Here are some little notes I have jotted down just listening to conversation in the Day-Hop Shoppe since the beginning of the semester.

From the Engineers:

Alaska is not only twice the size of Texas but also has an ice cube larger than Rhode Island. The hunk of ice is the Malaspina Glacier near Cordova. . . . The largest copper deposit in the world is under the city of New York (but it's all in telephone wires) . . . What the man in the moon needs most is a wife. Some scientists say the moon's surface is covered with dust a foot deep. . . .

The temperature at the center of the earth is two to five times hotter than the surface of the sun. The temperature of the earth increases about one degree for every 60 feet of depth. Dig down two miles and it is hot enough to boil an egg. Don't buy your fiancee a new stove; give her a pick and shovel. . . . If you are planning to be among the first air passengers to the moon, you'd better start hoarding your pennies now. At six cents a mile, the round trip will cost $28,680, first class.

From Biology Students:

It is impossible to sneeze with your eyes open . . . It takes 40 minutes to boil an ostrich's egg for proper flavor. This explains why Bill Thomas and other hurried Day-Hops from Camden rarely have them for breakfast. . . . A flea is so strong that, if it were as large as you, it could drag two elephants around our football field. . . . The Dancing Cranes of Australia sometimes step on each other's feet. . . .

If a grasshopper got down on his knees to propose to his best girl, he wouldn't be able to hear her "yes" or "no" because his ears are in his knees. . . . Hiccups may be cured by a prolonged kiss. . . . A surgeon will sometimes lay 6,000,000,000,000,000,000 eggs. Sturgeon, I mean. . . . A toad can live at an altitude of 15,000 feet, just in case you were planning to airmail one to a friend. . . . Fur of the yak, a wild ox of Tibet in eastern Asia, is exported to Western countries to make Santa Claus beards. . . .

From I Don't Know:

The Illinois Institute of Technology has a gambling robot. It is an electronic computer which has won 5,218 and lost 4,577 times matching pennies with human beings. It cheats. . . . Inflation has hit Africa. The price of a wife in one tribe has gone up to nine goats and six jars of beer. . . . Peter Minuit, who purchased Manhattan from the Indians for $24 and a cask of booze, later was fired by the Dutch for extravagance. . . .

Here is what happens when you kiss a pretty girl: The pituitary gland begins secreting like crazy, the adrenal glands are stimulated, the blood pressure rises, some white blood cells break down, the pulse quickens, you breathe faster, the circulation increases and your heart action speeds up. If there is no pretty girl handy, you can get the same results by running around the campus.

Rosemont Dramatists Will Present Shaw's 'Pygmalion'

The Jest and Gesture dramatic society of Rosemont College will present George Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion on November 16 and 17 in the college gymnasium at 8 p.m.

The play, from which the Broadway show My Fair Lady was adapted, will feature Kathleen Carne as Eliza, the flower girl.

Clem Birch, who graduated from Villanova last year, will assume the role of Henry Higgins, a wealthy English phonetician.

Birch was featured in two Belle Masque plays last year. He was seen in Shaw's Saint Joan and in Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

Ron Delany, who is a graduate student in Theatre at Villanova, will take on the role of Colonel Pickering.

Jane Dagit, president of the society, will play the part of Mrs. Higgins.

Miss Cecile Sullivan will direct the production. She will be assisted by stage manager, Suzanne Bruni.

Tickets for the production can be obtained at the door, or from any member of the club, the president said.

Frosh Aid Program Started In C&F

The School of Commerce and Finance has inagurated a freshman counseling service to aid freshmen with any problems, it was announced last week by the Rev. Joseph Bartley, O.S.A., Dean of Commerce and Finance.

Interviews will be conducted by a group of faculty members under the direction of Father Bartley, and assistant Dean The Rev. Francis Boyle, O.S.A.

Under the plan all C and F freshmen will be interviewed at least three times a year. By listening to and advising the students the faculty hopes to become familiar with the more prevalent undergraduate problems, Father Bartley said.

"Student co-operation with this counseling service can prove to be an advantage to the individuals who seek advice, and to the class as a whole," the dean said.

Campus SAM Chapter To Conduct Talks

The Villanova Chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management has been appointed by the national chapter to conduct the "Student Conference" on the campus this year.

The conference, an exposition of collegiate participation in the principles of management, is held annually at selected colleges throughout the nation.

Appointment was granted by unanimous approval at a joint-executive meeting last Thursday.

This will mark the first time that the Villanova chapter of S.A.M. has been designated to sponsor the conference for the Philadelphia area.

Avil, Gasper Have Engineer Articles

Announcement of the acceptance of two more articles for publication in The Villanovan Engineer was made today by editor Bob Merkert.

Howard Avil, senior electrical engineer, will explore the field ot microwaves in his article.

Frank Gasper, another electrical engineer, will present an article on Villanova's New Electrical Engineering Curriculum.

With the magazine now on the press, Merkert said he was pleased to see that a large number of underclassmen working on the magazine.

However, he went on to say that more interested men could be used. Graduation will take away almost the entire editorial staff.

AEC Offers Nuclear Science Fellowships

The Atomic Energy Commission is offering a fellowship program for graduate students in the year 1959-60 in Nuclear Science and Engineering .

These fellowships are to be offered first to intermediate and terminal year graduate students. Graduates in chemistry, mathematics, and physics are eligible for this program which offers $1800-$2200 for 12 months plus tuition, fees, and allowances at a selected university having a graduate program in Nuclear Energy.

Applications must be submitted by January 2, 1959, to N.S.E. Fellowship Office, Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies, Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

All senior history forms for the yearbook must be in by November 13, it was announced by Robert Pinto, editor of the Belle Aire.

Pinto also announced that seniors who have not had their pictures taken must go to the Carl Wolf studio if they wish their picture to appear in the senior section.

The Wolf studio is located at 20th and Walnut sts., Philadelphia.

ASCE Plans Field Trip in Maryland

The Villanova chapter of ASCE has announced a field trip in November to view the workings of the Bethlehem Steel Co., Point, Maryland, plant.

This will be the second field trip for the chapter. The first was a journey to Philadelphia's new incinerator in Roxborough.

tics of the Field House, built for athletics not theatrics, an Elizabethan stage, successfully introduced last year, will again be used. It will be three-sided and will extend into the audience. An expected added advantage of this stage will be increased actor-audience rapport.

Hector, the play's hero, will be portrayed by Owen Klein, a senior English major, who is making his fifth appearance in a Belle Masque production. Those who saw "Taming of the Shrew" last spring will remember Klein as Hortensio in that presentation.

Making her Belle Masque debut, Barbara Anne Burke will be Cassandra. Miss Burke, studying pre-med at Rosemont, had the title role in her school's production of "Antigone" last year.

Appearing in his second role for Belle Masque is Alan Willig, who will play Demokos, the Villain. Willig, a junior in education, is acting secretary of Belle Masque.

Best Actress Award

Margaret Brown will portray Andromache in addition to being the assistant stage manager. She received the "best actress" award last year at Rosemont, where she is studying art.

Another "Rosie" is Lynda Lynch. She was chosen to play Helen on the strength of her performance in last year's "Taming of the Shrew." Villanova junior, William Friend will assume the role of her abductor, Paris. "Tiger" will be Friend's third Belle Masque appearance.

Assuming a lead role in his first show is Raymond Kantra, a junior. Kantra will play the Greek hero, Ulysses. Other principals in the cast are Mary Shaffer, an Immaculata sophomore, as Hecuba; Lincoln Hallowell as Priam; and Anthony Provenzano, as Ajax.

Directed by Duprey

The show is under the direction of Richard Duprey, Villanova theatre instructor and Belle Masque moderator. He also designed the sets.

The stage manager will be John Cannon, senior Political Science major. Paul Floyd, George Becht, Ted Glinka and Bill Kohl will be technical assistants.

Houde Presents New Logic Reading Book

Dr. Roland Houde's newly published book, Readings in Logic, is the most recent literary contribution to the field of education by a Villanova faculty member.

The book, which has been incorporated into Villanova's philosophy curriculum, has also been utilized into the same courses at New York College in Queens.

"I saw a need for such a book," Houde explained. "In my contacts with students, I observed a lack of foundation in the history of philosophy which is so important in our courses."

Houde's book contains some works which previously were inaccessible.

Topics such as "Apuleius Treatise on Logic," "Maimonides Treatise on Logic," and an "Introduction to Symbolic Logic" by Henry Leblanc are incorporated in the book.

Houde is now working on another book, a metabibliography on all philosophical bibliographies.

Miss Martina Kirk is named queen of the drill team at the annual NROTC dance last week. Looking on are Captain John W. Higgins, Commandant of Midshipmen at Villanova, and Midshipman Terrence Connell, drill team commander.

Curral Leads Delurey Devils In Intramurals

With the Intramural Football season half over, the most powerful teams are making their bids to reach the play-offs for the League championship. In the 2:30 Austin League the nod goes to the Delurey Devils.

Captained by senior Ed Curral and featuring a potent passing attack, the Devils are in no way connected with last year's champions, but instead are made up of completely different personnel.

To date the Devils have gone undefeated, allowing the opposition only 6 points while scoring 47. The biggest margins of victory were a 13-0 win over the Big Daddies and a 28-0 romp against the Banshees.

Rafferty Stars

Composed completely of players from Delurey Hall, the team is high-lighted by the accurate passing and speedy running of quarterback Jack Rafferty, perhaps the best in the Intramural League.

Halfback Guy Pratt and ends Al Muller and Charlie Russell are three fast receivers with sticky fingers who are capable of catching anything that comes near them.

The Delurey Devils' line, although not the biggest in the Intramural League, is one of the best. Charlie Russell and Al Muller are offensive ends, with Don Canna and Dick Wines coming in on defense.

Ed Currall, who weighs 200, plays offensive left guard with Joe Walley handling the defense. The right guard slot is occupied by 220 pound Max McGuire, who also plays defensive line backer, while Jerry Snopkowski handles the defensive chores at right guard.

Goes Both Ways

Kirk Michener, a 210 pound center, does a fine job on both offense and defense.

Also available for play are Jim Bornes, Pat Burke, and Fred Pickard.

The defense of the Delurey Devils plays as important a part as offense in the quest for the Intramural League title. An example of this fine defense was shown in the game against the Banshees, who were not allowed to complete a pass until 33 minutes had elapsed in the game.

With a combined offense and defense such as this, there is no reason, discounting injuries and bad breaks, why the Delurey Devils should not be prime contenders for the 1958 Intramural League championship.

Beta Gamma Debates St. Joseph's Twice

The Beta Gamma Debating Society will inaugurate its season with a special debate against St. Joseph's College on November 10.

The request was made by Mr. Charles P. Bruderle, of the history department, for the Holy Name Society of Annunciation parish.

The present international topic for debate, resolved: That the further development of nuclear weapons be prohibited by international agreement, will be the subject.

Debating on the negative side for Villanova will be Frank Cunningham and Jim Corey, senior arts majors.

Beta Gamma will attend its first varsity intercollegiate tournament at St. Joseph's on November 15. Cunningham, Corey, Oz Scogna and Dom Costa will represent Villanova at this tournament.

Underdog Dayton Poses Big Threat To Wildcats Hopes

The way things look now, the Villanova Wildcats should be more fearful of Saturday's contest with the Dayton Flyers than they were of Detroit or Wake Forest—or even mighty Army, upcoming in two weeks.

It seems that the Main Liners, who met Detroit on even terms and were underdogs against Wake Forest, play better under those conditions, winning both as part of a four-game victory streak.

But when they went into last Saturday's Wichita game as two touchdown favorites, the 'Cats were crushed, 21-6.

And from the record, Villanova should be fovored again this time out. Dayton has a 2-5 record, with losses to Cincinnati, Bowling Green, Ohio, Xavier and, last Saturday, a 26-0 trouncing at the hands of Holy Cross.

Toppled Richmond

Victories for the Flyers came over Louisville and an earlier Villanova opponent, Richmond. For comparison, the Wildcats topped Richmond 13-6 while Dayton edged the Spiders, 13-12.

For another worry, the game is on the road for the Main Liners, and their record away from friendly Villanova Stadium over the past two years is a paltry 1-7.

And coach Bud Kerr and his Flyers should be up for this one, for it marks their fifth and final home contest. They've split even in the first four, and will be out to close the home season with a victory.

Still another problem for head coach Frank Reagan is the loss of one of his linemen due to an injury during the Wichita contest. Star guard Mike DeLucia suffered a dislocated left elbow in the first half to put him out of action for the remainder of the year.

The injury to DeLucia left only one of Villanova's tri-captains—massive end Gene O'Pella—still in the lineup. Tackle Bill Craig was injured before the season started and has not played all year.

Surprisingly, DeLucia's injury—along with a lesser one to the ankle of rugged soph fullback Billy Paczkoskie, who should be able to play Saturday—can be taken as an omen of victory.

Up to the Wichita game, the Wildcats were plagued by injurics, going into each game with one or two key men unable to play. Yet they managed to compile the four-game victory streak.

Almost Full Squad

At Wichita, the Main Liners were in good shape, with only senior fullback Gene Paja out of the line-up. They lost.

The Dayton contest will be the third in the series, which began in 1955. Dayton took the first contest, 19-7, but the Wildcats came back to claim a 13-0 shutout victory in 1956.

That second game was one of three games in which the Villanova defense held the opposition scoreless while the Main Liners compiled their only winning season in the past six years, finishing with a 5-4 record.

Both previous games were also played at Dayton.

Football Pickers Miss on 7 Games

We hit on 13 of 20 games this past Saturday, which brought our total to 51 winners in 76 decisions. Those 7 losses were the most suffered in any single week and leaves us with a percentage of .671 on the year.

The Big Ten once again gave us trouble, as it has been doing all year. We had only one winner in four picks, with Wisconsin obliging over Michigan State.

Our attempts to forecast the upsets fell short, also.

Well, let's have a look this week. The home teams in the right hand column, the winners in capitals.

Two Rifle Teams Open New Seasons

The NROTC rifle unit will open its 1958-59 schedule against the University of Pennsylvania unit at 9 a.m. Saturday morning on the Villanova range.

At 1 p.m., the varsity rifle team will also start its campaign, meeting Penn State on the same range.

Bill Hearn captains the Navy unit, and team members are: Lou Spevitz, Ed Hogan, Jon Rietzke, Charley Russel, John Gargliano, Dave Walsh and Nat Coursey.

Chris Kloss is the captain of the varsity squad, which is made up of Frank Murtha, Herb Lettaum, Joe Pollozotto, Bob Norton, Spevitz, Hearn, Hogan, Russel, and Coursey.

Furman Naqle

Frank Keefe, Larry Palacio Swim Capts.

Larry Palacio and Frank Keefe were elected co-captains of the swimming team at a special meeting last week.

Palacio, a senior in the Liberal Arts school, is a product of St. Joseph's Prep in Philadelphia, and has been the team's most consistent point scorer over the past two years.

He was the National Catholic High School Butterfly Champion in 1954, and the Philadelphia Cathoic League champ and Individual Medley champ in '52, '53 and '54.

Palacio was also City Butterfly champ in 1953 and '54 and Suburban Country Club titlist in the same event in '52, '53 and '54.

Keefe, whose father is one of Yale University's swimming coaches, is a native of East Haven, Conn., and attended East Haven high school and Mercersburg Academy. He was captain of his swimming team at both schools.

He was the Vermont State Backstroke Champion in 1955, '56 and '57, and All-State High School champ in '54 and '55, as well as an All-District champ in Connecticut in 1953 and 1955.

Some 750 tickets at $2 each went on sale in the field house today for the student football trip.

Complete arrangements must be made by next Wednesday for any students taking the chartered buses to the game. The buses will leave Army and return to the Villanova parking lot immediately after the contest.

Dean and Defense Give Wichita Win

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

"Dean will keep you in trouble," said assistant Coach Dave Di Fillipo as he summerized his report on the Wichita Wheatholders, whom he had just scouted.

He was referring, of course, to Ted Dean, the former Radnor High star, and he was absolutely correct in his statement.

Dean was trouble, and so was the whole Wichita ball club as they ignored the oddsmakers and defeated the Wildcats, 21-6, last Saturday in Wichita.

A partisan crowd of 10,000 saw the Shockers earn their first victory of the season by scoring single touchdowns in the second, third, and fourth quarters, before Joe Nardo saved Villanova from a shutout by banging one yard for the only score with 14 seconds remaining in the game.

Long Drive

Wichita drove 87 yards in 10 plays to score early in the second period. Tom Wright and Ted Dean picked up much of the yardage in the drive, and Dwight Dinsmore ran 28 yards around end for the touchdown.

On the PAT, a sucker shift moved the ball to the one, and Dean barrelled through for the two points.

In the third period, the 'Cats offense started to roll. John Daniel's 16 yard gain was the biggest help in the 47 yard drive that came to an untimely climax when Jim Grazione fumbled at the seven, and Bill Barger recovered his second fumble of the night.

Wichita then marched 93 yards in 13 plays. They gained 6 first downs in the movement and Dean romped untouched the final seven yards around end for the score.

Interception Aids

In the fourth quarter, Tom Wright intercepted a pass intended for Gene O'Pella at the Shocker 20. From here, the home team went 80 yards in 8 plays for the score.

Dean was injured in the march, and had to be helped off the field. He had gained 132 yards in 23 carries before this.

It was a very rough game. In addition to Dean, Co-Captain Mike De Lucia hurt his arm in the second period. The doctors say he has a dislocated elbow.

In the same period Billy Paczkoskie injured an ankle had to be helped off the field.

Roehre Sparks Drive

The Wildcats' final drive featured two Ed Roehre to Gene O'Pella passes, and the running of senior fullback Joe Nardo. A pass interference penalty gave the 'Cats the ball at the one, and Nardo took it over.

The defeat was a blow to the 'Cats, who were seeking their fifth consecutive victory. Besides Dean's offensive threat, they had to contend with the Shockers' defense, which, led by Gerry Davis and Roland Lake, was very tough to crack.

The combination of Dean and defense spelled defeat.

Vol. 34—No. 7 VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. November 12, 1958

'Labor Fascism' Is Coming, Says Schmidt to Law Forum

Godfrey P. Schmidt, court appointed monitor of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, warned the Villanova Law Forum last week that this country is rapidly heading towards labor facism.

Referring to the "growing power of the crooked union bosses," Schmidt alarmed the forum to the threat of increasing gangsterism in certain unions.

Considering the shocking facts uncovered last year by the Senate Investigating Committee, Schmidt shocked his Garey Hall listeners with, "If the same things that happened in the past 20 years continue, this country will develop a form of labor facism."

Uncomfortable Feeling

Schmidt pointed that the Teamsters are now feeling uncomfortable under the watchdog plan approved by the courts earlier this year. Under this plan, three monitors oversee the workings of the huge truckers union, headed by James R. Hoffa.

Only a few hours before Schmidt spoke at the second session of the annual law forum, Schmidt appeared in a Washington, D. C. court in an effort to have the position of the monitor's board more clearly defined.

A clear definition of the powers of the board, Schmidt continued would enable the monitors to proceed with "much needed haste" to the vital questions now affecting the 1.5 million man union.

Constant Irritation

Schmidt said the Teamsters are now realizing the monitors can be a constant source of difficulty.

Threat of Strike

According to Schmidt, Joseph Treretola, secretary treasurer of the union, said at a recent Teamster dinner that:

"If the persecution of the Teamsters doesn't stop, we will give this country a three-day national holiday."

At the same dinner, Hoffa said they would settle their problems in the courts. "But I know that Treretola would not have said that without being properly instructed," Schmidt said.

"This is supposed to be a country of civil liberties, but thousands of American workers, especially Teamsters, live in mortal fear of standing up in a union meeting and expressing their views," Schmidt said.

> Godfrey Schmidt told his Law School Forum listeners last week that "labelism" is a growing weapon in this country.
> Anybody you agree with, you call a liberal; anyone you don't agree with, you call a reactionary," Schmidt said.
> "The people who use the terms so carelessly don't even realize the meanings of the words," the monitor said.

Cases of Violence

He cited several cases where rank-and-file members were beaten shortly after they filed charges against union leaders.

Members cannot step one inch out of line without reprisals, but, "the friends of the leaders can get away with any kind of skullduggery," the monitor said.

In discussing the causes for the privileged position of unions, he pointed to the double standard of right and wrong in the U. S.

Thanksgiving Dance Slated Next Friday

On Friday, November 21, the night prior to the Villanova-Quantico game, a Thanksgiving Dance will be held in the Field House to form the last football weekend of the season.

Leo Zollo and his orchestra will provide music for the dancing, which will run from 9 'til 1.

Dance chairman Tom Moakley, a junior engineer and executive vice president of the Student Affairs Committee, has announced that the decorations will be kept secret until the night of the dance.

However, he added that in order to establish a relationship with the game with the Marines on the following day, the theme will be a military one.

Sale of tickets for the dance began in the Pie Shoppe on Tuesday and will start in the dormitories sometimes later this week. The tickets are priced at $2.50 per couple.

Junior Arts major John Costano will be in charge of refreshments which will be served at the dance.

"We anticipate a big crowd due to the fact that it is the last social event of the fall semester with the exception of the Orphan's Weekend in December," Moakley said. "We also expected to benefit because it is the weekend before the Thanksgiving recess," he added.

This dance is the one which is held annually for the benefit of N. F. C. C. S., the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

Wildcats' Largest Rooting Section To See Army Game

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

The largest student-alumni football entourage in the history of Villanova will make the trip to West Point this weekend to see the Army game.

Nearly 10,000 students, dates and alumni representing area clubs from Maine to California will begin to descend upon New York City and its environs on Friday.

The New York Times has announced that every seat in the 26,400-capacity Michie Stadium is taken, but many alumni have voiced plans to go to West Point in hopes of latching on to a stray ducat or two.

Checks Returned

Bob Whelan, business manager of the athletic department, was forced to return hundreds of checks and orders after the second batch of tickets ran out.

The group going to West Point rivals in size those which traveled to Boston for football games in 1956 and 1957. The number of students will be approximately the same, but far more alumni are going.

It is expected that most of the Villanova visitors will watch the Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., President of the University, review the cadents in a dress parade at the parade grounds at 11.45 a.m.

> There will be a football rally for the Army game Thursday at 8 P.M. in the Field House.

Group Marches

The Spirit Committee, which is running the weekend, envisions the students' marching in a body from the parade grounds to Michie Stadium.

Busses will leave from the School on Saturday morning and will return immediately after the game. For those who are driving, however, the best route is to drive north on the New Jersey Turnpike to the last exit, then take Rt. 46 to the Pallisades Interstate Pkwy. Follow this road to its end at Bear Mountain.

The marching band, under the baton of student director Jim Hull, has been practicing new formations for two weeks. The band has been increased to 55 members.

First Revised ENGINEER Out Next Week

The first issue of the Villanova ENGINNEER, containing fifty-six pages, will be distributed to all engineering students next week.

The layonut of the magazine has been changed by editor Bob Merkert and layout editor John Pilcicki.

The feature article, "An Introduction to Chemical Engineering", was written by senior chemical engineer, Joseph Grackeler.

"The Story of Paper", the main article this issue, was written by Merkert. It traces the production of paper from the forest to the finished product.

Humor Piece

Jerry Fitzsimmons, senior electrical engineer, contributed a humor article, "So You're a Sports Fan", and then teamed up with senior mechanical engineer, Bruce Irving, to write "Stolen Stuff", a composite of the best jokes borrowed from leading college magazines.

Other regular columns include "Horizons", by senior chemical engineers Jim Clark and Jim Maher; "Meet The Profs", by Joe Krackeler, and "Campus Activities".

Articles on two of the engineering societies, The Institute of Chemical Engineers and Chi Epsilon Mu, the engineering school's honorary fraternity, also appear.

Added Doners

Other contributions are: "Telemetering", by Lawrence Cassel; "Wave guides", by Howard Avil; "Records—how they are made", by James Sammis, and "The New Electrical Engineering Curriculum", by Frank Gasper.

Art work was done by juniors Ed Paulsen and Jon Rietzke. Photography was done by seniors Joe Perrizello and Sam Pietrafitta.

Opera Society Hears Taped Brahms Tonite

The Opera-Classica Music Society will present Brahms "Symphony No. 1 in C Minor," tomorrow evening at 7:30.

For the first time, stereo tape will be utilized by Opera-Classica. Recently a new tape was added to the sound system in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Dr. Robert S. O'Shea, moderator of the society, said that anyone who enjoys good music should attend the society's weekly meetings.

Refreshments will be served immediately after each program, he said.

> The Student Council has announced that applications for senior car privileges for the second quarter must be made 11.30 a.m. and 1.30 p.m. today, tomorrow and Friday.

Loan Plan Countenances 'Rubber Stamp' Degrees

Our editorial opposing the plans for state and federal loans to college students drew the ire of a multitude of VILLANOVAN readers. Two of the letters we received have been printed to give a fair sampling of the readers' reaction.

We believe that our views on the matter were somewhat sketchy in their initial presentation, space restrictions limiting a fuller explanation. For what it is worth, we repeat our stand and emphasize our reasons.

The plan whereby students who can qualify to enroll at any college in a given state or in the entire nation (according to the agency which would dispense the funds), has been attacked by some opponents as "creeping socialism" and "the first step in a plan for Federal intervention in college education." The VILLANOVAN does NOT oppose loans for this reason.

We are opposed to the effect the loans will have on the standards of the American colleges, already admittedly sub-par except in rare cases.

The loan plan is just another idea in line with the thought that every person is entitled to a college education. Colleges are too crowded now with persons whose only object is to obtain a degree.

Going to college has now become the thing to do. A college education ensures that a man dresses the right way, knows the right people and is capable of carrying on a conversation on a variety of subjects, in none of which he has any depth of knowledge.

America does not need more college students; it needs better ones. The loan plan will encourage the marginal student to take advantage of governmental funds to waste four years.

Our country has a crying need for scholars—real scholars. The Catholic Church's needs are no less acute. But the atmosphere of the "rubber-stamp" diploma and ever-growing enrollments will not produce these scholars.

If the loan plans were altered so that they were to be awarded to persons who show real aptitude for higher education, but who cannot afford further study, then the VILLANOVAN would back them to the fullest extent of our power.

A plan for government SCHOLARSHIP loans makes sense; one for loan to the "degree-grabbers" does not.

Balance, Mr. Noonan?

In one of the various columns that serve for editorials in the weekly La Salle COLLEGIAN last Wednesday, we came across a reference to our editorial of a few weeks back which pointed out that, while there may be a new intellectual atmosphere in American colleges, the traditional "Joe College" is always with us.

The University of Pennsylvania also contributed some criticism from columnist John Noonan, who told the VILLANOVAN that "Villanova has been getting along for the past five or ten years with the most pseudo-collegiate atmosphere that harks back to Merriwell's days at Yale."

Aside from the fact that the quoted sentence doesn't make sense (when one uses the superlative degree such as "most," the English language demands it be modified in some way), we think it is nice for the tiny Philadelphia college to point out the weaknesses in two of the City's universities.

Mr. Noonan goes on to say that "a good number of students at La Salle have achieved the balance so necessary for sensible participation in Campus life."

Tsk, tsk. And yet we seem to remember reading—only a few weeks ago—about all the trouble La Salle was having organizing plans for their senior yearbook. The COLLEGIAN even made a charge of apathy in the "Balanced" senior class.

Some balance, huh?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR:

Students Want Government Money

To the Editor

In reference to the editorial "Loan Plan Explored".

1) I completely disagree with you.

2) Your whole attitude "of working their way through college" implies a disregard for scholarships or any other kind of aid.

3) Couldn't some of the money wasted in getting athletes to attend college be used to improve "academic conditions in elementary and high school education" or to better the facilities on the college level ?

4) I would like to see anyone work their way through college (without aid from their parents or by inheriting a fortune) and maintain a high academic standard, be active socially, athletically, in extra-academic and extra-curricular activities and remain sane.

5) Most students coming to college directly from high school rely on scholarships and/or aid from their parents along with money earned during the summer months and or part-time jobs during the academic year. State aid through loans would enable students, whose parents are unable to help them, to attend college. There certainly are not enough scholarships for all the students who need and deserve them.

6) The cost of education for many students does not include only tuition but also room and board, books, other required equipment, clothes, the cost of maintaining these clothes in decent condition, and some form of entertainment among other things. This all adds up to considerably more than the bill for tuition. Most students need some out-side aid.

To the Editor:

It seems that rumors around campus concerning ticket sales for the Army trip are varied with a number of opinions. We should like to take this opportunity to inform the student body, particularly Mr. Dillon, just how the sales were handled. This misguided individual evidently has a warped imagination that frequently erupts and leaves him without good judgement.

The members of the Spirit Committee were given first preference at the meeting preceeding ticket sales. This is not a new precedent and has been in effect as long as the Spirit Committee has existed.

At the time of the Student Council Meeting, due to the confusion brought about by the unexpected volume of sales, records concerning the actual number of tickets sold, location of seats, money received etc. were not available. For this reason, and this reason only, no definite answers could be given to some of the questions asked by members of the Council.

The Council was told that pre-sales went to members of the Spirit Committee only, secondly that no influential men on campus received tickets early; thirdly that a limit was placed on the number of tickets each Spirit Committee member could buy. (You will remember that there was no limit to the number that any individual could buy.)

The "I don't know" answers that Mr. Dillon seems so worried about were given four times. Each time it was for the same question, "How many tickets were sold to Spirit Committee men?" This question was asked four times by different members of the Council. As was mentioned before, the number was not known at the time of the Student Council meeting and consequently could not be reported.

If as Mr. Dillon says, "The Spirit Committee needs organization", he has the opportunity to help us organize every Tuesday evening at 6:30 in Vtsey Hall Auditorium.

To the Editor

In a recent editorial you stated that students with initiative could work their way through college without resorting to federal scholarships.

I am such a man of initaitive. At the present time I am working my way through Temple University. It would be impossible for me and others like me to stay in school with the money we make from part-time jobs.

I am in school on a schlorship. But besides money so needed for tuition and books there are other needed incidentials.

These include food, clothother things too numerous to ing, a roof over my head and mention.

The point, is that the student who can provide all of these things on a part-time salary is a rare one indeed.

It might do you well to come down to Temple to see if the scholarship students (including those on the G.I. bill) are sitting in Mitten Hall drinking coffee instead of studying.

I can guarantee you a big disappointment. But while you are there, take a peek into Sullivan Memorial Library because that is where you will find them.

For the second week the VILLANOVAN has limited its size to four pages.

This is blamed again on the pressure of mid semester exams, but also on the lack of cooperation from the talented members of the student body.

We still need editors, writers, reporters, mailers and others willing to lend their particular talents to the newspaper.

Applications will be accepted again tonight in the VILLANOVAN office, second floor Dougherty Hall.

Zoning Law Controversy Garey Hall Topic Tonight

By CARL BARNHURST

The Villanova University School of Law will present a town hall meeting on "The One-Acre Zoning Controversy" tonight at 8:30 in Garey Hall.

The meeting will be sponsored by the communities research institute project of the Villanova Law School.

The controversy centers around the case of the Biblar Construction Company, the Board of Adjustment of Easttown Township.

The case concerns the Easttown Township zoning ordinance requiring the minimum lot area in a residential "A" district to be one acre.

In June 1957, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court held the Easttown Township zoning ordinance to be unconstitutional. On May 27, 1958 the same court reversed its previous decision and held the ordinance constitutional.

There is a great amount of public interest in the question, and a good possibility of further litigation in the matter, according to Harold Gill Reuchlein, law dean.

The town hall meeting will be held for the benefit of township officials, builders, home owners, civic organizations and all interested persons.

The program will feature talks by attorneys D. Barry Gibbons, Theodore O. Rogers, Walter W. Rabin, and John G. Stephenson, III.

The meeting will be conducted by chairman William B. Ball, director of the communities research institute project at Villanova.

The Student Council has asked any Villanova students interested in acting as liason representative with local alumni clubs to attend a meeting Tuesday at 6.30 p.m. in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

O'Donnell On Panel At SEA Meeting

John O'Donnell, president of the Student Education Association, and Dr. George Cressman, moderator, attended a meeting of the Pennsylvania SEA in Harrisburg last week.

The topic for discussion was "The Future Teachers of America."

O'Donnell served on a panel which considered the sub-topics, "Why did we choose teaching," and "How is our education different from that of our parents?"

The panel was moderated by Miss Lucy Valero, executive secretary of the state SEA.

Seniors may register for company interviews, which will take place in the spring, anytime between 9 a.m. and noon or 1 and 5 p.m. in the placement office in Mendell Hall. Resumes and instructions will be given at the time of registration.

Raymond Czwakiel, senior physics major, lectured on the cathode ray oscilloscope, at a recent meeting of the Villanova section of the American Institute of Physics. The section will hold a business meeting tomorrow in the Physics lab in Mendel Hall.

Navy Holds Open House

Next Tuesday, the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps Unit will hold its annual Fall Open House and Review.

The event, will begin at 2:30 p.m. with open house of Commodore John Barry Hall, featuring demonstrations of naval weapons, anti-submarine warfare, training aids and other equipment.

At 3:00 p.m., Austin Field, the Midshipman Battalion, led by Midshipman Lieutenant Commander James C. Hull Jr., will pass in review for Brigadier General H. D. Hansen, USMC., Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., Villanova University President, and other distinguished guests. During the parade, the Battalion Band will troop the line of middies and the crack Drill Team will perform.

Open House will resume at 3:30 p.m.

Belle Masque's 'Tiger' Seen As Effective Despite Opening Night Technical Flaws

by BILL GALLAGHER
OF THE VILLANOVAN STAFF

Last Wednesday, opening night for Belle Masque's presentation of "Tiger at the Gates," saw a highly appreciative audience turn out to witness a production which, although it had several minor flaws, was given a truly effective, not-far-from-professional treatment.

This reviewer who saw the show on opening night, expected to find certain technical imperfections. They were there.

The lighting was off in its timing at the end of the first act, for example, when two actresses had to wait thirty seconds for the lights to dim before they could leave the stage.

Final Mix-Up

There was the case of an obstinate gate upstage center that would neither open or close without being troublesome.

The final scene was to be a valentine-type vignette with Troillus and Helen embracing outside the gates, but because the gates were only half co-operative, there was only half a picture.

The make-up staff did an admirable job on all except Hecuba who was supposed to be fifty and because she was portrayed by a young blonde, looked no more than twenty-five.

The Wednesday evening show might be compared with the test preview performances given by the legitimate theatre.

Gratitude Expressed

A sincere debt of gratitude is owed the Rev. William Farrell, O.S.A. and Mr. Richard Duprey who, along with the play selecwere responsible for the selection committee of Belle Masque, were responsible for the selection of Jean Giradoux's ironic anti-war drama as translated by Christopher Fry.

The selection showed imagination in that it broke away from the type of play usually associated with amateur and college groups. It is a welcome change of pace from Shakespeare and the five to ten year old comedies and melodramas that always seem to find their way to the campus stage.

The cast was very well drilled. They moved gracefully or with the drunken Ajax, staggeringly, as their part demanded. In such a verse play, one might justifiably expect some cast members to have trouble with the dialogue.

There was none what-so-ever on Wednesday evening.

Every character captured the correct interpretation. An outstanding performance of the cast was turned in by Alan Willig as the poet and Senate leader who continually pushes for war.

His head twitching, his arm held high in self-defense, he carved a highly skillful portrait of a cowardly war lover.

Klein Competent

Owen Klein, making his fifth appearance in Belle Masque productions, turned in his usual, competent performance as Hector. Margaret Brown, as his wife, was fine in a one dimension role. Mary Shaffer was a standout Hecuba. Bill Friend, as Paris, and Lynda Lynch as Helen made an attractive not-so-smart pair of lovers.

Barbara Ann Burke played Cassandra with the right amount of detachment. The Greeks, Ulysses and Ajax, were well portrayed by Ray Kantra and especially Tony Provenzano. Link Hallowell made a dignified Priam.

The rest of the excellent cast included Peter Allard as the lawyer, Busiris; Tom Flynn as a mathematician; Diane Viti as Polyxene; Martin Reddington as Troillus; John Dagney in two minor parts; John McGarry as Olpides; Jim Lynch as Abneos; Mike Keating in two minor parts; Connie Donohue as a laundress and John Barlas as a guard.

Once again, as with last years production of "The Taming of the Schrew, an Elizabethan stage was used. It featured a three-side extension into the audience and was used to great advantage. Duprey's direction was crisp and smooth. The action flowed at a fine pace. Assistant director was Richard Cavanaugh, a graduate student here in the theater department, John Cannon was stage manager.

This reviewer has seen most of the shows to play in Philadelphia this season. With the exception of Tennessee William's "Garden District", this production impressed the most, which goes to prove that "The play's the thing".

There is no substitute for an imaginatively staged and nicely performed drama of ideas.

SCIENCE MADE SIMPLE: No. 1

Though this column is intended to be a source of innocent merriment for all sexes and not to concern itself with weighty matters, I have asked my sponsors, the makers of Marlboro, whether I might not, from time to time, use this space for a short lesson in science. "Makers," I said to them, "might I not, from time to time, use this space for a short lesson in science?"

They agreed with many a kindly smile, the makers of Marlboro, for they are the most agreeable of men. Their benevolence is due in no small measure to the cigarettes they smoke, for Marlboro is a cigarette to soothe the most savage of breasts. I refer not only to the flavor which, as everyone knows, is a delight to the palate, but also to the Marlboro container. Here is no fiendishly contrived device to fray the fingernails and rasp the nerves; here, instead, is a flip-top box that opens like a charm, and inside you find a handy red tape to lift out the cigarettes with ease and dispatch. Add to all this the best filter ever made, and you can see that you get a lot to like.

Let us begin our series of science lessons with chemistry. It is fitting that chemistry should be the first, for it is the oldest of sciences, having been discovered by Benjamin Franklin in 468 B.C. when an apple fell on his head while he was shooting the breeze with Pythagoras one day outside the Acropolis. (The reason they were outside the Acropolis and not inside was that Pythagoras had been thrown out for drawing right triangles all over the walls.)

They had several meetings outside the Acropolis, but finally Franklin said, "Look, Pythagoras, this is nothing against you, see, but I'm no youngster anymore and if I keep laying around on this wet grass with you, I'm liable to get the breakbone fever. I'm going inside." Pythagoras, friendless now, moped around Athens for awhile, then drifted off to Monaco where he married a girl named Harriet Sigafoos and went into the chuck-a-luck business. (He would certainly be forgotten today had not Shakespeare written "You Know Me, Al.")

But I digress. We were beginning a discussion of chemistry, and the best way to begin is with fundamentals. Chemicals are divided into elements. There are four: air, earth, fire, and water. Any number of delightful combinations can be made from these elements, such as firewater, dacron, and chef's salad.

Chemicals can be further divided into the classes of explosive and non-explosive. A wise chemist always touches a match to his chemicals before he begins an experiment.

A variety of vessels of different sizes and shapes are used in a chemistry lab. There are tubes, vials, beakers, flasks, pipettes, and retorts. A retort is also a snappy comeback, such as "Oh, yeah?" and "So's your Uncle Oscar."

I have now told you the most important aspects of chemistry, but there are many more—far too many to cover in the space remaining here. However, I am sure there is a fine chemistry lab on your very own campus. Why don't you go up some afternoon and poke around? Make a fun day out of it. Bring ukeleles. Wear humorous hats. Toast frankfurters on the Bunsen burners. Be gay. Be merry. Be loose . . . For chemistry is your friend!

Successful Season Possibly 'Great' If Army Succumbs

The Dayton victory last Saturday assured Villanova of its second winning football season in the past three years.

That made the 1958 season a successful one. This Saturday afternoon, it could become a great one.

Of course, it would take a victory to do it, and victory is one thing very few people are predicting for the Main Liners this time out.

For Frank Reagan and his charges have to face one of the finest teams in the country—the Cadets of West Point—Saturday afternoon at Michie Stadium.

Seek Third Win

The contest will mark the 17th in the Villanova-Army series. The Cadets have won 14—including an 83-0 romp in a wartime game in 1944—and the Wildcats have taken two, including a 27-7 win in 1951, the last time the two teams met.

The other Villanova victory came in 1915 when kicking specialist Charles McGuckin, Sr., notched a fourth-period field goal for the winning points.

Army's last victory came in 1948, by a 28-0 score.

The Wildcats have been under dogs in every contest with the powerful Army units, but this year they are given very slight chance of winning.

Army Undefeated

Army is undefeated so far this season, with only a 14-14 tie with mighty Pitt marring their record. Included in their six victories are wins over Notre Dame (14-2) and a thriller over Rice last Saturday (14-7) in the last 40 seconds.

In that Rice battle, the Cadets tallied on only two plays after taking control of the ball on their own 20 when Rice missed a field goal.

Quarterback Joe Caldwell tossed a 16-yard pass to the 36, and then unleashed a 64-yard toss to halfback Pete Dawkins in the end zone to win the game.

That's an example of the devestating power of the Cadets, who have been stopped from scoring the first time they got their hands on the ball only in the Pitt and Rice games.

Quick Scoring Team

According to coach Earl Blaik, this is the first year that the West Pointers are playing "wide-open football," and their passing and running game, centered around Caldwell, Dawkins and 1957 All-American Bob Anderson, has made them one of the nation's quickest-scoring teams in the past ten years.

And, of course, the Wildcats will have to contend with the Cadets famous and much-copied "Lonesome End," Bill Carpenter.

As for Villanova, they are not considered a match for the Cadets by the nation's gridiron prognosticators, despite their 6-2 record, since it has been garnered against competition inferior to that faced by Army and because the Wildcats have taken most of their victories by close scores.

Wildcats Called Confusing

Army scout Barney Gill has termed the Main Liners "confusing," on the basis of the performances he has witnessed. Gill saw the 'Cats in the rain and mud against Richmond and Dayton and saw them lose to Wichita.

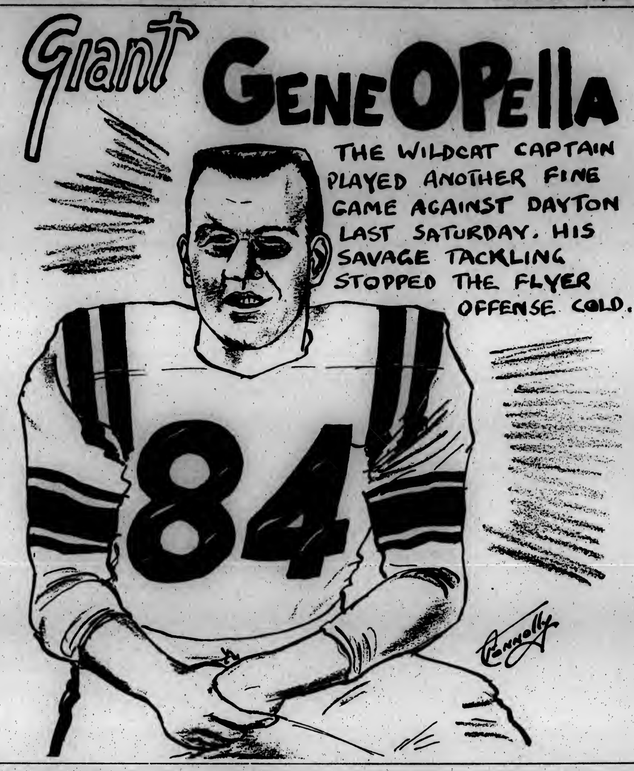
Any chance for a Villanova victory is dependent upon a number of factors, primarily the performances of several key players.

If Jim Grazione can play as he has played against Boston College, Detroit and Wake Forest; if Dave Intrabartolo, the first Villanova back to pick up over 500 yards since the era of All-America Gene Filipski and one of the nation's best rushers, can match his showing against Wake Forest, and if Billy Paczkoskie can recover from his injury and perform as he did against Richmond, the Wildcats could field a backfield to compare with that of the Cadets.

Top Defense Games

Of course, victory would be largely responsible to the play of the thin Wildcat line. Encouraging signs were the performances of end and captain Gene O'Pella and center Tom Fletcher against Dayton. Both of them turned in the best defensive games of their careers in the 9-6 conquest.

Obviously, there are a lot of "ifs." And, for all practical purposes, a Villanova victory is not probable.



However, it's not impossible either. And should it happen, it would mark the biggest Wildcat grid win since 1951—the last time it happened.

The VILLANOVAN prognosticators last week had only three wrong picks out of 20 as they continued their football predicitions.

This is the sixth week of predicition. So far the VILLANOVAN experts have chosen 64 winners with only 28 losers for a .695 average.

This week's choices:

Brown at HARVARD
Boston U. at BOSTON C.
DARTMOUTH at Cornell
Holy Cross at PENN STATE
PRINCETON at Yale
AUBURN at Georgia
MISSISSIPPI at Tennessee
L.S.U. at Miss. State
Alabama at GA. TECH
TULANE at Vanderbilt
Wisconsin at ILLINOIS
Ohio State at IOWA
PITT at Nebraska
No. Carolina at NOTRE DAME
Purdue at NORTHWESTERN
Missouri at OKLAHOMA
TEXAS at T.C.U.
S.M.U. at Arkansas
Texas A and M at RICE
Wyoming at AIR FORCE

Wildcats Post Sixth Victory

The Wildcats took their sixth victory of the season last week as they staged a fourth quarter rally to top the University of Dayton, 9-6, on the loser's muddy turf.

Junior halfback Reggie Powe rolled around right end, the only solid spot on the rain soaked field, to score the winning touchdown with only minutes remaining.

That climaxed an 80 yard drive after an intentional Flyer safety had given the Wildcats their final points.

A little less than 2,000 fully saturated fans watched in awe as both teams, caked with mud, slipped and slopped their way through the traditional contest.

Fifteen Fumbles

Passing was impossible and handoffs were near suicide as some 15 fumbles were recorded.

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

On the ninth play of the ball game, Dave Intrabartolo had trouble handling Malt Smolik's punt, and Joe Tache, a 220 lb. tackle, recovered on the Cats' 36. Two plays later, Smolik passed to halfback, Bob Cyphers in the right flat, and the converted end raced down the sideline to complete the 33 yard TD play.

Jerry Raiff missed the conversion, but the 6-0 lead looked good as five fumbles plagued the Cats' first half scoring efforts.

The defensive pressure exerted by the Cats helped get them going in the fourth quarter. Early in the session, Brendon O' Leary was nailed at his own 22 on the return of Jim Grazione's punt.

Automatic Safety

O'Leary gained a yard, lost five, and on the third down, a bad pass from center was recovered by Smolik on the one yard line. Smolik then dropped back as if to punt, but instead ran out of the end zone for the automatic safety, giving the Cats two points.

Dayton kicked off from its twenty, and Dave Intrabartolo returned the punt 26 yards to the 47. Here the offense started to roll with Leon Horin contributing 22 yards in 4 carries, and Graz, Powe and Intrabartolo moving well too.

This combination banged out three first downs, and with a fourth and two situation on the Flyers' five, Powe took it around for the score, and Dick Keyser's kick made it 9-6.

MUDCAPS:

Dave Intrabartolo gained 39 yards in 12 trips and thus became the first Wildcat back to go over 500 yards since Gene Filipski gained more than 800 in 1952. . . . Intrabartolo, who went into the game eighth in the country in rushing, now has 517. . . . The day was even less suited to Jim Grazione, ranked number 14 in total offense. He picked up only 10 yards to bring his total to 723. . . . Billy Paczkoskie, ace mudder, didn't make the Dayton trip, but will available for the Army trip. . . . Frank Ficca missed the game because of an infected foot, but he too will be around next week. . . . The Flyers gained but 28 yards, but this was an improvement over their 9 yards per game average against Holy Cross and Xavier. . . . Gene O'Pella and Tom Fletcher played oustanding defensive games. . . . The Cats are now 6-2 on the year—the Flyers, 2-6.

Glennon Wins Hexathon

Bill Glennon, junior arts student from Virginia, took the annual intramural department hexathon championship last week.

Glennon took two first places in the six individual contests on the way to the crown.

He won the football toss for distance with a mighty heave of 50 yards and placed first in the push up test with 20.

Benson Wins Two

Other winners were freshman Pat Kennedy, 330 yard run in 33 seconds; freshman Bob Benson, 92 situps in two minutes of sit ups; Pat Malloy, 52 yard football punt for distance, and Benson, 300 yard swim.

Glennon racked up 468 points in the contest to top Benson with 449 and Kennedy with 423.

In other intramural department action last week, sophomore arts student Joe Clark deposited 46 foul shots out of 50 attempts to win the foul shooting contest.

Freshman Joe Pentony was second with 44 shots and junior Joe Burno was third with 35.

Hackett Wins

In the cross country final, Jerry Hackett, freshman Commerce and Finance student, toured the campus in ten minutes 55 seconds.

The usual varsity time for this distance is just above nine minutes. Intramural Director Ed Geisz termed Hackett's time "a wonderful achievement."

Another frosh, Bill Heinherdt, scored second in 11.57:5 while Pat Kennedy was third, just two seconds later.

Riflers Defeat Penn State, Navy

The Villanova varsity rifle team defeated Penn State, 1,389 to 1,378 last week in a shoot in John Barry Hall.

High scorer for the Wildcats was Chris Kloss, who rolled up 282 points. Other Villanova scorers were Lou Spevetz, 281; Frank Murtha, 379; Bill Hearn, 278, and Ed Hogan, 269.

Penn State had dropped a match to Lehigh and topped Dickinson before meeting Villanova.

A second rifle team victory last week was racked up by the NROTC outfit.

They topped Navy, 1,362 to 1,295 in the first match of the season for each team.

Varsity rifler Spevetz was high for the Navy with 285. Joe Russel was second with 274.

Other scorers were John Gargliano, 274; Ed Hogan, 273, and Sam Nolan, 256.

32 Seniors Gain National Collegiate Who's Who Recognition For 1959

Thirty-Two Villanova students have been named to the annual National Collegiate Who's Who.

The honored Villanovans, who represented each of the four undergraduate schools, will be pictured in the directory of outstanding college students published each year.

The increasing importance of the engineering student was reflected in the Who's Who selection. Some 12 engineers were picked.

Only eight Arts and Sciences students were named to Who's Who, the smallest number in several years.

There were eleven added to the list from the large Commerce and Finance division, with one nursing representative.

Those named are:

Michael P. Axt, John J. Cannon, John J. Charde, James W. Corey, Joseph A. Driscoll III, Francis J. Dynan, John A. Fischetti, Thomas C. Goldschmidt, Raymond G. Hepburn, William W. Hixon, James C. Hull, Jr., Benjamin Hynes.

J. Edward Knepley, Joseph J. Krackeler, Robert E. Krallinger, James A. Marley, Jr., Matthew F. Mazza, James J. McHale, Robert J. Merkert, Robert J. Murphy, William E. Murphy, Lawrence M. O'Rourke, Jr.

Peter O'Brien, Francisco J. Pacheco, Robert L. Pinto, Robert C. Rafano, Joseph Schneider, Oscar T. Scogna. Alan M. Stoughton, Edward A. Utsch, Robert J. Wagner, Barbara Joanne Warner.

Although most of the selections were long predicted by student observors, there were a few surprises on the list.

Nomination Committees

The honored students were nominated by a committee of students and faculty members.

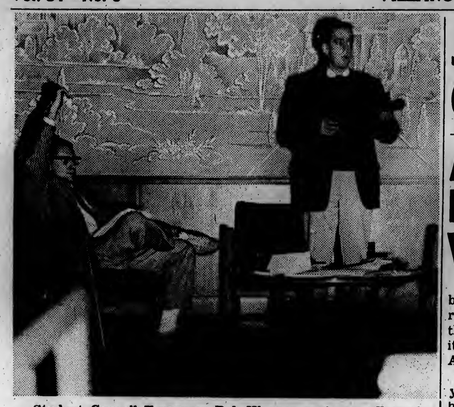
The student committee consisted of Robert Murphy, student body president, class president Oscar Scogna and former presidents Victor Ludmerer and Kenneth MacGillivray, Lawrence O'Rourke, editor of the weekly VILLANOVAN and Robert Pinto, BELLE AIR editor.

Murphy and Scogna collaborated with an administration board for the final group.

Representing the administration were the Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., vice president for academic affairs, the Rev. Dante L. Girolami, O.S.A., dean of student affairs, the Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., dean of men, the Rev. Norbert Whitley, O.S.A., university chaplain, and the Rev. John Klekotka, O.S.A. director of admissions.

Various Qualifications

Selections were made on the basis of academic standing, participation in extracurricular activities and disciplinary and chapel records.



"These 32 students represent the best of the 746 men and women in the class of 1959 at Villanova," a member of the final selection committee said.

Student Council Treasurer Bob Wagner casts an affirmative vote for the Collegiate Council of greater Philadelphia, as Council President Bob Murphy counts hands.

Student Council Adopts Constitution of C.C.G.P.

The Student Council, last Wednesday, unanimously adopted the constitution of the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia. The Council consists of LaSalle, Pennsylvania, Temple, St. Joseph's and Villanova.

The aim of this organization, as stated in the second article of the constitution, is to effect a closer union among the students and to promote relations between the college and university students and the general public.

Also passed was a motion by Tom Hoffman, Student Council vice-president, that Villanova indorse the C. C. G. P. to initiate and co-ordinate a state-wide program and movement to abolish the 3 per cent sales tax on books and supplies sold in campus stores.

Some Opposition

Don Kempf and Jim Corey lodged strenuous objections to the motion, but were defeated.

The movement, which began at LaSalle College, must obtain the support of all C.C.G.P. members before the organization can endorse it as a unit. Tom Hoffman noted, though, that the University of Pennsylvania may be reluctant to join the movement, as it is state supported and may deem it undesirable to become involved.

A motion made by Joe Mason that the question of a need for a comprehensive language examination to be given to freshmen who must take a language for a degree, be presented to Father Boyle through the Student Faculty Committee was passed with no objections.

A rather interesting situation arose when a motion to compel the treasurer to submit a regular report to the council hit a snag when it could not be decided among the members whether or not a treasury still existed. This situation, Murphy said, will be resolved at the next meeting.

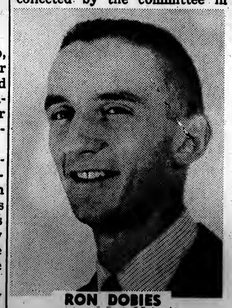
Juniors Set '59 Orphan's Outing, Charity Ball Weekend of Dec. 5



Fredericks' Band Signed For Dance; 'Big Day' Planned For St. John's Tots

By William B. Christy of the Villanovan Staff

This year's Orphans' Weekend, an annual event of the junior class will take place Dec. 5, 6, and 8, under the chairmanship of junior engineer, Ron Dobies.

Tickets for the Charity Ball, which starts the weekend, will go on sale this week at one dollar per couple. The Ball will be followed by the outing on Saturday and a party at the home on Monday.

The weekend is held for the benefit of the boys of St. John's Home in Philadelphia. Proceeds from the dance will be used for the party Monday, as will money collected by the committee in all religion classes during the next few weeks.

Bob Fredericks Signed

Music for Friday's dance will be provided from 9 to 1 in the Field House by the Sentimentalists, a local band led by Bob Fredericks. Chairman for music Bill Dusseau, junior chemical engineer, signed the group, a new one to the Villanova social scene, this week.

The traditional winter theme of the Charity Ball will be carried out under the direction of Junior C & F students, Harry Leetner and Tom Calabrese. Don

All-American Rating Given VU Engineer

The Villanova Engineer has been awarded on All-American rating for the year 1957-58 by the Associated Collegiate Press, it was recently announced by A.C.P. officials.

In attaining the award, last year's ENGINEER, which celebrated its 25th anniversary, compiled a score of 1405 points out of a possible 1500.

Bob Merkert, editor of this year's ENGINEER, in learning of the honor commended last year's staff, headed by John Filliman, and stated that he is confident that the 1958-59 edition "will be one of the finest publications in the country."

Moderator Pleased

The Rev. John J. Vrana, O.S.A., moderator of the engineering publication, was also extremely pleased with the accomplishments of last year's staff.

Merkert explained that a number of the points critized by the A.C.P. were worked out during the summer and have already been improved upon.

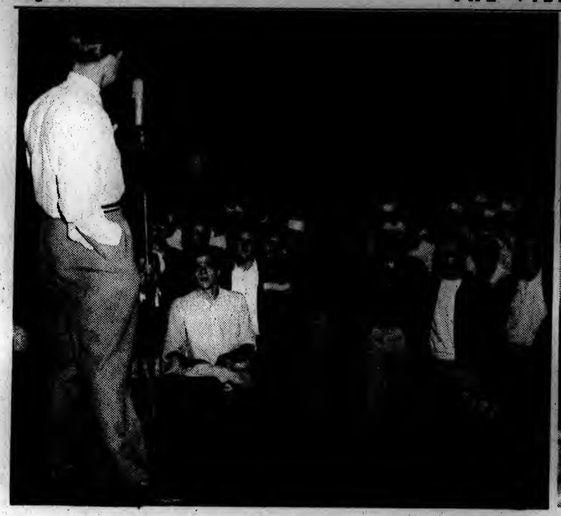
He stated that articles for publication in the January issue must be submitted before Dec. 5 to the ENGINEER office or to any staff member.

Next Morning

Diagrams, graphs and photographs should be handed in earlier.

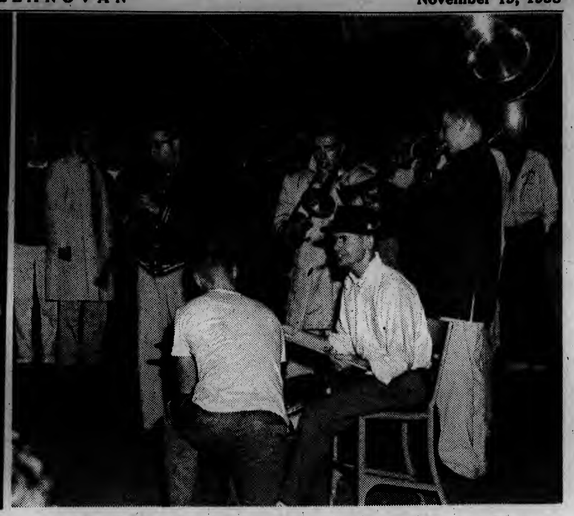
A meeting of all staff members will be held Monday, Nov. 24, at 11:30 a.m. in room 304 Mendel Hall.

Yearbook pictures will be taken following this meeting and members were asked to wear jacket and tie. Khakis should not be worn, Merkert said.



Yearbook's History Form Deadline Fri.

Belle Air editor, Bob Pinto, has announced that all senior history forms must be submitted by Friday if the seniors concerned want their extra-curricular activities recorded in the yearbook.



Forms may be picked up today or tomorrow at the Yearbook office which will remain open for the return of the forms until Friday afternoon. Unless these records are submitted by that time, they will not reach the printer in time to appear in the book.

Pinto also announced that any organization recognized by the Student Council and which has not yet arranged for yearbook pictures, should do so immediately. Seniors who have not been photographed should make arrangements to have pictures taken with William Shea of the Belle Air staff.

"There are no juniors on the Yearbook staff," Pinto pointed out. "We would appreciate experienced juniors offering their help. They will be given work commensurate with their talents and they will gain experience which will be useful for the 1960 yearbook."

Coach Frank Reagan tells the large crowd at the Army pep rally that his club would not disappoint them. And it certainly didn't.

After the pep rally, part of the Villanova band entertains the ralliers with some hot Dixieland in the Sullivan-Sheehan quadrangle.

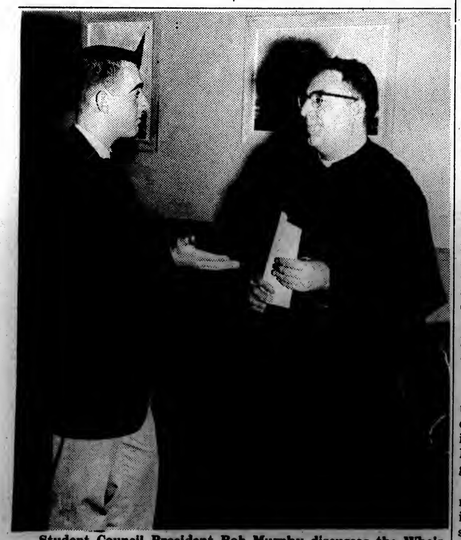
Council Plans Directory To Include Student Data

By PAUL A. BUCKLEY
Of The Villanovan Staff

A Student Directory, which will include the names, home addresses, degrees and year of graduation of every student presently enrolled in the university, will be published by the Student Activities Committee of the Student Council, it was announced recently by Bob Murphy, President of the Student Body, and Bill Christman, Chairman of the Student Activities Committee.

Difficulties in obtaining approval for the publication, including fear of outside use for advertising purposes and uncertainties as to the method of financing the project, were finally resolved and work is now underway.

The price of the directory, though dependent on the number purchased, is expected to be approximately $.75.



Because the directory is being published by the Student Council, an accurate estimate of the number to be printed must be obtained in order that the price may be adjusted to meet the costs.

In keeping with this, students will be required to place a deposit of 50c for which a receipt will be given. After all deposits have been received, final printing will take place. To obtain their copy, students will return the deposit receipt and complete the payment.

Contact Christman

It is hoped that distribution will take place before Christmas, to provide well wishers with a list of correct addresses.

All students wishing to assist in the advertising, publication or distribution of the Directory are requested to contact Bill Christman in room 335 Sullivan Hall.

Student Council President Bob Murphy discusses the Who's Who selections with The Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities.

WVIL Merges News, Sports Departments

Bill Washington, station manager for WVIL has announced the consolidation of the News and Sports departments of the station.

These combined offices are now under the direction of John Oberlies, sophomore C&F student.

The schedule of programs has been revised this year under the new department. Last year, two 15 minute programs, one sports and the other news were featured each night. Under the new format, a program of 35 five minute news and sports shows has been initiated.

New News Show

A 15 minute detailed news presentation has also been added to the revised schedule.

Another program also making its first appearance this year is Nightlife, sponsored by Lucky Strike. Pete Nolan, sophomore Social Studies major, and Bob DeLisa, sophomore Education major are featured on the program.

The program brings the latest news, headlines, sports scores, campus news, top tunes and a complete menu for the following day.

Trained Staff

The WVIL staff now includes 35 auditioned and trained members, including seven members from last year's staff. Butch McNally, sophomore pre-law student, has been appointed News and Sports Co-ordinator to facilitate program scheduling.

Complete coverage of all campus news is one of the chief aims of WVIL's news shows.

Track Tapes

WVIL has announced that a tape recording of the 1958 IC4A outdoor track and field championships held at Villanova last May is available to all interested groups on campus.

Play by play broadcasts of nine Wildcat basketball games, including two road games are scheduled for the coming season. John Oberlies will also do the play by play broadcasting of the games.

Russian Club OK Secured; USSR Native to Moderate

Administrative approval has been granted to the newly organized Russian Language Society at Villanova, it was announced by the Reverend Joseph Boyle, O. S. A., vice-president for Academic Affairs.

Robert A. Brothers, a junior Arts major has been elected president of the Russian Society, while Sean McArdle and Michael Kwiatowski were named vice-president and secretary, respectively.

Dr. Victor Kruptisch, a professor of Russian, has been appointed moderator of the new society. A native of central Russia, Krupitsch taught at Michigan University before joining the Villanova faculty this year.

To Appreciate Russia

Krupitsch announced that the purpose of the club is to "increase the appreciation of Russian culture and language among Villanova students."

Sections of the society will be concerned with music and folksongs, art, and literature. Chess will be included in the program for those interested.

Through this organization, students taking Russian language or history courses will be able to supplement their studies by conversation and discussion with fellow students and professors.

Many Are Called

At present, the club is comprised of 30 members, most of whom are studying elementary or advanced Russian. Dr. Kruptisch announced, however, that the club is open to all interested students. Meetings are held once a week.

Chairman of ICG Stresses Need of More Members

The Villanova chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government last week elected four officers for the coming year.

Frank Cunningham, senior Political Science major, was elected Chairman, Ron Magray, junior pre-law, vice chairman; Charles Kerber, senior Accounting major, secretary-treasurer; and Bob Interdonati, senior I.A., student council representative.

Cunningham announced that meetings will be held every two weeks at 10:30 a.m. on Thursdays in room 106, C&F.

Dr. Fred J. Khoury of the History department will be the moderator of the society again this year.

Bills Drawn Up

The purpose of the conference, which is a state wide organization headed by Miss Genivieve Blatt, the Pennsylvania Secretary of Internal Affairs, is to acquaint the undergraduate with the structure and function of modern American government.

Each year a project is undertaken, such as a model Senate or state legislature, and bills are drawn up by each college to be presented at the mock governmental body's annual meeting in the spring at Harrisburg, the state capital.

Twenty-Fifth Anniversary

Speakers on local and state politics are invited periodically to address the club, thereby rounding out the students' practical knowledge.

ASME To Travel To Chester Plant

Tomorrow, the Villanova chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will sponsor a field trip to the Ford Assembly Plant in Chester, Pa.

The purpose of the trip is to acquaint the students with the engineering which is involved in the complete assembling of a Ford automobile.

Earlier this week, Mr. John L. Allen delivered a talk on Nuclear Power to the group.

Allen, an alumnus of Villanova and engineer in charge of Mechanical Research at Philadelphia Electrics Research and Development Department, discussed design differences between several of the main types of nuclear reactors.

Allen concluded his talk with a short discussion of the role of the mechanical engineer in the design of a nuclear power plant.

Spanish Club To Present Annual 'Noche Espanolo'

On Friday, December 5, the Spanish Club will celebrate its annual "Noche Espanola" in the Vasey Hall auditorium with a literary-musical program.

The program, which was initiated some 25 years ago by the late Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., will consist of two parts.

In the first segment, a one act comedy which was written especially for the Spanish Night by the Rev. Policarpo Oroz, O.S.A., will be featured.

The Poison Marriage

The comedy, which is entitled "El Matrimonio Llamado Veneno," or literally "The Marriage Called Poison," will feature Diana Rivera and Beatriz and Graciela Quelquejeu all of Rosemont College, with Omar Leon and Severa Lanza of Villanova.

The musical segment of the show will include two piano solos featuring Narciso Gandora and Ken MacGillivray.

MacGillivray To Play

Gandora will play "Danza Quinto" by Granados and MacGillivray will give his rendition of Ravel's "Abborada del gracisa."

Songs will be sung by Catherine Reliquario and Judy Rodriguez of Cabrini College and by the Spanish Club Chorus.

Mr. Vito DiVincenzo, moderator of the Club, and the officers, Ben Hynes, Dennis Cardone, Donald Ropain, Kevin Flynn and Clayton Thomas will supervise the Night's activities.

Second Annual Amateur Show In The Making

Plans are now being formulated by the Intramural Department for the 2nd annual Amateur Night to be held sometime before the Christmas holidays.

The show, presented last year for the first time since the war, and put on exclusively by undergraduate students, will consist of skits of all varieties.

To Award Prizes

As in pre-war days, participants in the show will be given credits towards the intramural competition. In addition, a group of judges comprised of lay professors, priests, and alumni will pick the best acts and award prizes.

Reverend Michael O'Donnell, O.S.A., of the English department, and Ed Geisz, director of Intramurals, will direct the show.

Better Than Ever

Father O'Donnell pointed out that Villanova has an abundance of talent, enough to make this year's show equal to those staged before the war.

Students interested in entering the show should contact either of the show's directors.

knowledge and adding to the practical experience gained by forming the actual bills.

Activities for the year include the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the organization, to be held at Harrisburg next spring, and a social for the southeastern region of the Conference, of which Villanova is a member.

Military Theme Chosen For Thanksgiving Dance

The Thanksgiving Dance, sponsored by the National Federation of Catholic College Students, will be held in the field House this Friday night and will highlight the last weekend of the 1958 football season.

Dancing will be from 9 to 1, to the music of Leo Zollo.

Chairman Tom Moakley announced that tickets will be sold in the Pie Shoppe until Friday afternoon, but they will also be on sale at the door for those who decide late that they would like to attend.

Decorations Decided

Tickets, which will cost $2.50 per couple, have been sold during the past week in the dormitories, primarily by members of the Student Council.

The decorations for the dance will be constructed according to a military theme, keeping with the theme of the football game.

Exact plans for the decorations will not be revealed before the night of the dance. Moakley did say, however, that the centerpiece will depict one of the great moments in the history of the Marine Corps.

Last Social Event

Moakley also said that the military theme would be appropriate because the N.R.O.T.C. unit has their communion breakfast on Saturday morning, and will march en masse at the game.

Since this is the last social event of the fall semester with the exception of Orphan's weekend, and also the last event before the Thanksgiving recess, a large number of students are expected to attend.

Pius XII Helped Save Roman Jews in War

The story of how Pope Pius XII helped save the Jews of Rome from the Germans during World War II is told by a former Irish minister to the Holy See in a national Catholic publication.

Dr. T. J. Kiernan, now the Irish ambassador at Ottawa, Canada, writes of this incident and others in the December Catholic Digest.

The Irish delegate at the Vatican during the war years recalls that a fortnight after Rome fell to the Germans, the chief rabbi of the city, Zolli, was told by German authorities that the entire Jewish population of the city would be driven away if he did not hand over 100 pounds of gold and a million lire in cash.

Rabbi Zolli was unable to secure the gold in the 24 hours allocated, so he appealed to the Pope for help, Dr. Kiernan reports. The gold was provided for him, "partly by having gold ornaments melted down."

Rabbi Zolli later embraced the Catholic faith, the diplomat recalls.

Dr. Kiernan also recalls that the Pope left the Vatican shortly after the bombing of the San Lorenzo section of Rome in 1943. With him he brought a bundle of lire notes for the Capuchins to use in helping bombed-out families.

"I saw him give some of the notes to an old woman who pressed forward and spoke beseechingly to him, and some to a man who had crawled out of his ruined house covered with the brown dust of the debris."

● During his first months in the U. S., opera star Enrico Caruso ate Italian foods exclusively. Then one Thanksgiving day he was prevailed upon to celebrate with a real American dinner, turkey and all the trimmings.*

Caruso tasted the turkey and raised his eyebrows approvingly. Then he tasted the stuffing, and became ecstatic. "Bravo! Bravo bravissimo!" he exclaimed. "This is superb!" And he proceeded to eat every morsel of his dinner.

The chef, after a little coaxing, revealed that he had stuffed the turkey with spaghetti.

THE GIFT HORSE

I know how busy you are—studying, going to class, catching night crawlers—but let me interrupt your multifarious activities—studying, going to class, helping old grads find their dentures after Homecoming—to remind you that busy as you are—studying, going to class, searching for meat in the dormitory stew—time and tide wait for no man, and the Yuletide will soon be upon us. Busy or not, we must turn our thoughts to Christmas shopping. Let us, therefore, pause for a moment in our busy schedules—studying, going to class, rolling drunks—to examine a number of interesting gift suggestions.

We will start with the hardest gift problem of all: What do you give to the person who has everything? Well sir, there follows a list of a half dozen gifts which I will flatly guarantee the person who has everything does not have:

1. A dentist's chair.
2. A low hurdle.
3. A street map of Perth.
4. Fifty pounds of chicken fat.
5. A carton of filter-tip Marlboros.
6. A carton of non-filter Philip Morris.

"What?" you exclaim, your young eyebrows rising in wild incredulity. "The person who has everything does not have cartons of filter Marlboros and non-filter Philip Morris?" you shriek, your young lips curling mockingly. "What arrant nonsense!" you rasp, making a coarse gesture.

And I reply with an emphatic no! The person who has everything does not have filter Marlboros and non-filter Philip Morris—not for long anyhow—because if he has Marlboros and Philip Morris and if he is a person who likes a mild, mellow, fresh, flavorful cigarette—and who does not? eh? who does not?—why, then he doesn't have Marlboros and Philip Morris; he smokes them. He might possibly have a large collection of Marlboro and Philip Morris butts, but whole Marlboros and Philip Morris? No. An emphatic no!

Now we take up another thorny gift problem: What do you buy your girl if you are broke? Quite a challenge, you will agree, but there is an answer—an ingenious, exciting answer! Surprise your girl with a beautiful bronze head of herself!

Oh, I know you're not a sculptor, but that doesn't matter. All you have to do is endear yourself to your girl's roommate, so she will be willing to do you a favor. Then some night when your girl is fast asleep, have the roommate butter your girl's face—quietly, so as not to wake her—and then quietly pour plaster of Paris on top of the butter and then quietly wait till it hardens and quietly lift it off—the butter will keep it from sticking—and then bring you the mold, and you will pour bronze in it and make a beautiful bust to surprise your girl with!

Remember, it is important—very important—to endear yourself to the roommate, because if anything should go wrong, you don't want to be without a girl for the holiday season.

© 1958 Max Shulman

Your gift problem is no problem if you will give Marlboros to your filter smoking friends and Philip Morris to your non-filter smoking friends. Both come in soft pack or flip-top box; both are made by the sponsor of this column.

The Real Honor

Thirty-two Villanova students were honored this week by being named to the 1959 edition of the National Collegiate Who's Who.

They were chosen by the Administration for their qualities of leadership, scholarship and integrity; as well as for their compliance with certain regulations of the university.

The VILLANOVAN extends its congratulations to the honored students, for they have received the highest distinction that Villanova can give them. These are the persons who have led the Class of 1959 for four years—they are responsible for making the class what it is today.

There will, of course, be complaints about the Who's Who nominees, just as there are every year. Some students always seem to feel that the list is not an accurate tabulation of the university's student leaders, that some deserving students were unjustly slighted.

These students may be right or wrong, but we feel that criticism of such a list of distinguished students, while it will always be with us, doesn't really matter. For there is an even greater honor for the college student than the actual winning of a place in Who's Who—that is realization that he deserves it.

And, if each and every one of Villanova's honored seniors can say to himself that he truly deserves the glory given him, criticism, should it exist, will not matter. In the realization of the worthiness of their award, they will have something more important that a listing in a book or a picture in the paper.

For, unless we are worthy of an honor, it means nothing. And, if we do deserve distinction —and realize it—whether we receive it or not is not important.

Philadelphia's Cardinal

Most Rev. John Francis O'Hara Archbishop of Philadelphia who will receive the red hat of the Cardinalate on December 17, is recognized as a great educator and administrator.

Since his installation in January 1952, Cardinal O'Hara has greatly expanded the number of parish schools and facilities, constructed 12 new archdiosesan high schools, and established schools and homes for retarded children.

A native of Philadelphia, Cardinal O'Hara served on the faculty of the University of Notre Dame before becoming president there for a five year term in 1934. He is the first member of his order, the Congregation of the Holy Cross, to be elevated to cardinal.

While head of the Philadelphia Archdiocese, Cardinal O'Hara saw the Catholic population grow to nearly 1.4 million. He has campaigned vigorously for an expanded Catholic press to meet the great needs of the laity.

This is a man who will walk humbly and with dignity in his new rank. We extend our joyous congratulations to John Cardinal O'Hara.

COMMANDOS ON THE MARCH DOWN ITHAN AVENUE

Convention Notes:

Provincial Chicago, Light Sprites Amuse V. U. Editors

When the VILLANOVAN's Editor-in-Chief Larry O'Rourke, Managing Editor Jack Curtin and Associate Editor Tom Goldschmidt left for the Associate Collegiate Press convention a week ago today, they had no idea what was in store for them.

The 34th annual conference of the ACP was held in the Conrad Hilton Hotel in Chicago, a city termed by one of the Main Line visitors as "nothing but an overgrown small town, but still one of the greatest cities I've ever seen."

The three-day convention of sime 1,000 student editors, representing newspapers and yearbooks from the major colleges and universities of 38 states, gave the Villanovans not only a chance to learn a little more about their chosen extra-curricular profession, but also a chance to gain a better insight into people.

Here then are several anecdotes about the people who educated, interested and often amused the VILLANOVAN representatives.

* * * * *

Perhaps the most important point made during all the convention conferences came from Al Capp, the cartoonist who created the world-famous Li'l Abner comic strip, in his address at the Saturday luncheon.

Capp told the delegates, while speaking of the development of his career, how he lived as a child on Stevens street in Boston, and how "we never made any distinction among the people on the street, regardless of their race, religion or color.

"Then I started on my way to success and moved into a better neighborhood. There, people with more money and more intelligence than I taught me that there was a distinction. According to them, some people were better than others.

"I've spent nearly 25 years of cartooning trying to get back to Stevens street."

The Villanova editors saw an excellent presentation of "My Fair Lady" in the Shubert Theater Wednesday evening, but although they thoroughly enjoyed the show, they ended up being more amused by a lady in the row behind them.

The woman, a stout, short lady with a rasping voice, made continual comments during the show, and even carried a small screwdriver in her purse, with which she tried to pry loose the metal box containing binoculars for the audience rather than pay the required quarter.

Her classic comment, however, came as she was leaving the theater. Turning to one of her companions, she stated, "That was real good, but I would have liked it much better if they did it in American instead of English."

* * * * *

Two former Villanovans were among the many persons that the touring Main Liners came in contact with.

One was Joe Rottino, from Long Island, who matriculated at Villanova with the Class of 1958, spent two and a half years here, and then transferred to New York University. He was representing NYU at the convention, as he is now editor of the yearbook there.

Another was Tom Rogers, who graduated with the Class of 1956, and is now in the army. Rogers and three of his friends, all recently returned from Korea, flew back from Chicago with the editors, on their way to a 50-day leave. He was an end on the football team during his stay on the Main Line.

* * * * *

Speaking of football, the Villanovans had a good time talking over Saturday's grid contest with seven West Point cadets who attended the convention, and were surprised to find that the cadets actually did think that Villanova might have a chance of victory.

Editors Gone, But . . .

This 20-page issue of the VILLANOVAN, largest in the history of the university's student newspaper, is published today despite the fact that the top three members of the editorial staff were not on campus most of last week.

While the paper's so-called "big three" attended the Associate Collegiate Press convention in Chicago, the bulk of the work on the VILLANOVAN was handled by a special editorial board consisting of Frank Dynan, Bill Christy, Paul Buckley, Joe FitzPatrick and Ray Quaglia.

Usually, Dynan and Buckley hold the position of News Editors on the staff, while Christy and Quaglia run the Feature pages. FitzPatrick has recently returned from a leave of absence to his Sports Editor position.

Editor-in-Chief Larry O'Rourke has issued a statement of commendation and thanks to the board and the whole VILLANOVAN staff for their efforts.

Primary Aim of Belle Masque 'To Thrill' and 'To Entertain'

By RAY QUAGLIA

Mr. Richard Duprey, director of the Villanova Drama department, has been the largest single factor responsible for the many successful productions of the Belle Masque Drama Society.

He has skillfully brought to the Villanova stage such plays as "Skin of our Teeth," "St. Joan" and "Billy Budd". "Tiger at the Gates," the most recent offering of the society as directed by Mr. Duprey is considered among the finest plays ever witnessed at Villanova.

Drama Essential

Since Drama is an integral part of the cultural life of any university, Belle Masque, which is Drama here at Villanova, takes an exceedingly important position among campus organizations.

The primary aim of the society, according to Mr. Duprey, is to thrill and to entertain an audience, to give them erperiences which they would never feel themselves."

Thus, Belle Masque, as any other drama group, relies heavily on the audience as a criteria of whether or not it produces good theatre.

Often an audience is considered to lack the maturity which is necessary for the appreciation of a particular play. Mr. Duprey, however, feels that "genuinely great theatre will appeal to any audience. Shakespeare not only appeals to the intellectual, but to the man in the pits. This is generally true of all great dramatists.

Acts on Actors

There is ,however, a certain adverse psychological effect which an inattentive or sluggish audience has on the actors they can sense the audiences unreceptiveness." This is not true of student audiences," says Mr. Duprey, "Contrary to what many may say, they are intelligent and lively. An unbeatable combination for the actor."

When asked if he was satisfied by Belle Masque's most recent production, "Tiger at the Gates," Mr. Duprey said that "a director is never satisfied with any sort of creative work."

MR. DUPREY

He added, however, that he was "immensely pleased with the spirit of teamwork evidenced by the cast." He expressed his belief that "they have developed into a close knit unit with a style of their own."

Since we as viewers are interested in the type of drama we are offered, as well as the professionality of its execution, Mr. Duprey was asked how plays are chosen for enactment by the company.

"The plays must," be said, "have proven themselves as good theatre. Tiger at the Gates, for instance, despite the recommendations of the National Catholic Theatre Conference, and the fine reviews which it received in New York, will never be numbered among my favorite scripts. But I do recognize it as a fine piece of writing."

"The plays" he continued, "are chosen in relation to their value as theatre, not in relation to the likes and dislikes of any individual." We will try to choose the most exciting and most attractive productions that can be found, not limiting ourselves to any one period or culture."

More Drama

As for Belle Masque's future plans, Mr. Duprey said that "the traditional two productions a year would be put on for the undergraduate students." He also said, "that as the graduate division grows and begins to produce plays of its own, and as the faculty of the theatre division increases, Belle Masque may expand proportionately."

No definite choice has yet been made for the next production, but the number of prospects have been reduced to three plays. Among these, The Inspector General, a Russian farce, by Nikolai Gogol, and the Matchmaker, by Thornton Wilder, are the two most under consideration.

When asked if he felt that there is an increase of theatre interest on the present Villanova campus, Mr Duprey answered in the affirmative. He said that "the Villanova student body is reflecting the trend of society to renewed interest in th theatre."

The Best Fof Most

He gives as a reason for this increase the fact that "the theatre is returning to a more colorfull view of life, to plays with greater life enhancing values. Theatre is moving away from the drab, sordid naturalistic and realistic presentations of the early twentieth century."

Mr. Duprey added that "Tiger at the Gates" received a number of favorable comments from students and from people in the community. He expressed a personal regret in saying, "We can't please everyone with everything we do," and the aim of Belle Masque by concluding, "but we will keep trying to entertain and to edify as many people as possible."

Villanova Student Relates An Experience In Politics

By J. P. KELLEY

I was privileged to work with the Democratic Committee of Philadelphia during the past campaign.

The Eastern Pennsylvania Citizenship Clearing House sponsors a student internship program whereby college students are given the opportunity, with pay, to work and observe in politics and government. These internships are available with both parties and with top government executives. In order to obtain such a position the student must gain the approval of his Dean, the Clearing House, and the political party with which he wishes to work.

J. P. Meets Candidates

On August 18th I reported to the City Committee and met my co-intern, Bill Comoner, a senior at Haverford College. We were both introduced to Mr. Carroll Shelton, Publicity Director at City Committee, who was to be our immediate supervisor. For the first few days we toured city offices such as the District Attorney's City Council and Board of City Commissioners.

The administrative heads of each of these explained their duties and abilities. We met the candidates, learned the issues, and realized the problems a politician faces. Soon I became a campaign manager for two State Assembly candidates, and Bill organized college students to political action.

Tedious Work Rewarded

Much of the work we did such as filing and correspondence was tedious. It had its reward however in that we were able to attend press conferences, Hundred-Dollar dinners and deal directly with high public officials.

We were given the opportunity to record a one minute political speech, which was aired over the radio, and to appear in a non-talking capacity on television. We did research for candidates, listened to their problems, and were sometimes asked to give our opinions. We soon understood the problems and helped grope for their solution.

Time A Big Factor

City Committee employees were subject to constant pressure during the campaign. They ate and slept politics, for if one person neglected their responsibilities, the whole organization would be hurt. We were subject to this pressure and that of school with the result that no time was free and all time was budgeted.

I often found myself working late at night compiling statistics or mailing tickets to the 100 dollar dinner. We VILLANOVA BAND now at full strength as they return from the West Point trip. Wearing new uniforms, they hope to start a new craze in band costuming.

THE SOPH COTTILION was the biggest night of the year for this social-minded Rosemont freshman. Her hairstyle, modeled after the most recent creations of the Dougherty Hall barber shop, created quite a stir at the dance.

V.U. RIFLE TEAM which recently showed its twenty-four hour readiness when it was called upon to avert strife in the Freshman-Sophomore MUFF DAY dispute. Noted for his accuracy, Abdul Schismitar (third from left) smiles as he zeros in on target.

NEW FEATURE EDITOR OF THE VILLANOVAN who is the first female member of the publication, swears that she can do the work of two men. "Snoopy," who can also type, intends to be a great asset to the newspaper, and has already shown her ability by rising from the ranks to take over the coveted position.

Who's Who Highest Honor Possible For A V.U. Student

SPEERS

This week of November 17th has a certain lustre to it as somethirty members of Villanova's senior class are named to the National Collegiate Who's Who for 1958-59.

These new members are not only the elite of the V. U. campus, but are among the finest college students in the nation.

Villanova's procedure in selecting the final candidates is rather typical of the member schools.

The first step is the gathering of a student committee. This committee consists of the presidents of the senior class and student council, the editors of the VILLANOVAN and the BELLE AIR and the seniors who were president of the three preceding classes.

All Schools Represented

Ten names are then submitted to the committee by the dean of Villanova's four schools; Engineering, Commerce and Finance, Arts and Nursing. The moderators of each of the students activities enter two names each for consideration.

By BILL SPEERS

The student committee's selections are then passed on for approval by a student faculty committee. This final committee includes the dean of student activities, the Rev. Dante L. Girolami, O.S.A., the Dean of Men, Rev. George J. McLaughlin, O.S.A. The Director of Admissions Fr. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., and the school chaplain Rev. Norbert W. Whitley, O.S.A.

Chosen with Care

The two student representatives are the President of the Senior Class, Oz Scogna, and the Student Council President Bob Murphy. It is this committee that makes the final selections.

All candidates are chosen with great care. They all must attain at least a 2.4 average and be a student in good standing at all times.

Chapel attendance and disciplinary records are carefully checked. All extra-carricula activities are also taken into consideration.

In short the three outstanding characteristics sought from the candidates, as stated by the Who's Who editorial Board, are, Leadership, Scholarship and service to one's own school.

It is a greater honor than most people realize to be included in such a distinguished group. As Fr. Girolami himself said, "it is the highest honor Villanova University can bestow on her students."

Acredit to All

"We have chosen these students because we are positive they will always be a credit to the university," Fr. Girolami added.

Also noted was that their selection to the publication is a credit to the students themselves. For later on in business and industry it will prove to be an invaluable recommendation.

And so to the Villanovans selected our heartiest congratulations, and the wish that your future may be as distinguished as the present.

Villanova's K of C Chapter Praises Former Teacher

The recently-inaugurated Knights of Columbus Council here on the Villanova campus has been named after an outstanding Augustinian priest, teacher, and scientist.

The chapter bears the name, the Father Ludwig Council of the K. of C.

A native of Philadelphia, Father Francis J. Ludwig was born August 8, 1904, and entered Villanova Prep now Malvern Prep in 1920. Four years later on June 25, 1924, he was received into the Augustinian Order as a novice. A graduate of Villanova, he received his Bachelor of Arts degree with the Class of 1928.

Father Ludwig was ordained in Washington, D. C., June 9, 1931, and assigned one year later to the faculty of Villanova's Biology Department. For post-graduate work he went to the Marine Biological Laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass.

Ph. D. at Penn

He studied further at the University of Pennsylvania, and received his Master of Science degree in 1939. The same institution awarded him a Ph.D. in 1944 upon completion of his doctorate thesis.

For about ten of his years at Villanova, Father Ludwig was residence hall prefect in Alumni and Fedigan Halls.

It was here at Villanova that Father became known for his outstanding qualities.

Although a humble and shy man, he was a diligent teacher, a good friend, and a counselor to all those who knew him.

He will be remembered most by alumni and students for his patient and considerate work with college men, both in the Biology Department and in other fields of study.

Biology Specialist

With all the time he spent with students; Fater Ludwig still found time to achieve personal success in the field of biology.

While on the Villanova faculty, Father achieved an outstanding reputation for his work on microscopic organisms, and received wide recognition for his ability to draw and observe microscopic life.

People from all walks in life who had the opportunity of studying under Father Ludwig or knowing him, shall long remember his modest attitude and most valuable contributions to the field of science.

However, his story at Villanova was short lived, for he died on February 16, 1951 at the age of 46. Villanova lost a great priest and teacher.

The Villanova Knights of Columbus felt it only fitting and proper to name their council after this man.

French Students More Independent, But Less Energetic Than Americans

FRENCH STUDENT

It is rather difficult to estimate the morality of the French student. He does, however, have much more self control than the average American. There are no school regulations concerning drinking, and the student can do pretty much as he pleases. What ever control there is, must come from within the student himself.

I found the students to be quite honest. I often left my books and clothing around the student building and I never had a thing taken. This is more an expression of an idea of mutual fair treatment and support amongst the students, than a moral force. The French students were glad to help the foreign students get settled at the university.

Students Conscientious

Although they might concede that some things are morally wrong, their attitude was generally, "so what". It is this "so what" attitude that makes busy intersections of traffic quite exciting places.

As students, I found them to be much more conscientious than we are. Their studies are entirely their own responsibility and so they have to be serious about them. It was only their desire for knowledge which brought them to class, not school regulations.

The professors insisted on high standards and the students responded by being most meticulous in their studies.

Relaxing Rock 'N' Roll

We Americans always

By JIM GILLESPIE
Last of A Series

claimed to be the life of the parties. I think this was true. The French were so formal and reserved that all they ever seemed to do was stand around rather awkwardly wondering what to do.

We would come roaring through with our rock 'n roll records and then they would begin to relax and to have a good time. The French also learned to stock in an extra supply of beverages when they invited Americans.

If the French students do not wash as often as we do, at least they are neat. No one walks around with shirt tails out or ties at half mast. They may be dirty but all their buttons are buttoned. Most Europeans do not have a great deal of clothing and so they are quite careful with what they do have. I was told that frequent washing wears out the clothes faster.

Cherchez la Femme

If a French girl has the money to dress well, she is always dressed in good taste. The French are noted for their good taste, and they used to roar with laughter at the American girls in their thick socks and saddle shoes.

The students do not display the vitality and energy of the Americans. Their plans of study are never too strenuous and no one seemed to work at outside jobs while at school. Social occasions are events carefully planned and do not happen twice in one week.

Students On Their Own

The French seem to respect their parents more than we do, and are not as independent in their ambitions. We Americans are under pressure from our parents and teachers all the way through school, to study, and to behave ourselves at all times. We never are able to free ourselves from this pressure until we graduate. At this time we have not had any experience at being on our own and do not appreciate any assistance which our parents offer, which is meant to help us plan the rest of our lives.

The French student has four years in which he is his own master; four years to compete in the world on his own. When he is ready to start into a career, he is more likely to realize the stiff competition with which he is faced, and appreciate any assistance that he can get.

Politics

were so engrossed in our work however, that we never thought of anything else but the problem of the moment.

J. P. Knew all the Time

One of my most interesting experiences occurred in Baltimore County, Md. while I was working for the political analyst of the party, E. John Bucci. We took a "Gallup Poll", compiled statistics, and then decided who would win the election. Mr. Bucci was "on the nose" in practically all of his prediction.

Mars' Atmospheric Condition Contains Requisites For Life

By FRANK DYNAN

It is not enough to prove the presence of an atmosphere on the planet Mars. The atmosphere must be analyzed to determine whether it contains the necessary life-supporting elements. Jupiter is known to be surrounded by an extensive atmosphere, but it consists largely of ammonia and methane gasses poisonous to life.

Logic suggests the presence of water vapor in the Martian atmosphere, for if there are polar caps which melt in the summer, there must be water vapor which has evaporated from the caps. The amount of water vapor is so small that it can scarcely be detected. However, it has been detected at Lowell Observatory by comparing the spectra of the moon and of Mars.

Rocks Remove Oxygen

Water vapor alone will not support life; free oxygen and carbon dioxide must also be present. There is very little free oxygen on Mars—perhaps one-thousanth the amount of Earth—but the reddish color of Mars is evidence that it does exist.

The planet's reddish hue is due to the oxidation of Martian rocks. However, this oxidation has almost completely removed the oxygen from the atmosphere. The strength of the absorption bands of the Martian atmosphere demonstrated that there is quite a large amount of carbon dioxide present; twice the amount in Earth's atmosphere.

Too Cold for Earth life

So far science and logic have proved that Mars has an atmosphere which contains elements needed for life. But what of the temperature? Is it too cold for life on Mars? The temperature on Mars does not reach those extremes of heat and cold which would exclude life, but they almost certainly preclude any form of life existing on Earth. There is no reason, however, why some forms of life could not have adopted themselves to conditions on Mars.

Because of Mars' distance from the sun, its temperatures are much colder than Earth's. It may reach 50° in the Martian tropics and may drop to 125° at the poles. The lack of a dense insulating atmosphere allows the temperature to drop rapidly from its noon high. Extreme cold is therefore the rule.

An analysis of the evidence for life on Mars has shown that life could quite possibly exist, but what of evidence that it does exist?

Does Life Exist On Mars?

tors on their flight home was world-famous sports broadcaster Mel Allen, returning from his telecast of the Northwestern-Purdue battle in Evanston.

Terming Villanova's 26-0 loss "respectable" and head coach Frank Reagan a "wonderful fellow," Allen gave a piece of advice to Villanova and other schools of the same size.

"If you're going to compete with teams of their (Army's) size, you've got to give out the same number of scholarships. When they're giving out between 30 and 40, and you're only giving about 15, you have a tremendous disadvantage."

A young lady from the south stood up for her rights during one of the conferences, a discussion of the art of reporting by Karin Walsh, city editor of the Chicago SUN-TIMES.

Walsh said that he didn't feel that there was too much of a place for women in the newspaper game. The collegiate editor stood up and asked him if he would hire a young lady of initiative and ability if she came to his office. His reply was no.

With that, she turned and walked primly down the center aisle and out of the meeting.

Another southerner, this one a lad from Georgia Tech, provided one of the comedy highlights of the convention.

During a discussion on censorship, he told of how his paper had attacked the campus doctor for various infractions of his duties, and asked whether or not they could be sued for libel.

While his relation of the story was almost hilariously funny, the best was yet to come. When someone asked him if he had tried to get the doctor's side of the story to protect himself, he thought a while, then answered, "No, and you know something, someday Ah may wish Ah did just that."

Another thing accomplished by the Villanovans was that they exploded a mid-western myth. Supposedly "cold, cold" Chicago had temperatures soaring as high as the 70's, and most of the time not even an overcoat was needed.

Chicagoans refused to believe it, however, and the thermostat was kept running high in almost every building. "They'll never need steam baths here," remarked one perspiring easterner.

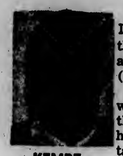
Perhaps the most interesting event of the whole trip for the Main Liners came Thursday night, when famous old State Street initiated a new lighting system, designed to retain for it the title of "brightest street in the world."



Some 250,000 Chicagoans crowded the street to witness the event, and marched over 10 blocks down the center of the street to see the new three-pronged lights. An added attraction were the eight-feet high figurines, designated "light sprites," which were on top of every light yole.

All in all, it looked like a recreation of something out of the "Roarin' 20's" and well it might have been, since the last time State street got new lights was in 1926, and they too made it the brightest in the world.

"Nice," commented one Villanovan as he buttoned his three-button sports jacket, "but utterly, utterly provincial."

Shiny Engine Tarnishes As A Boy Becomes A Man

By DON KEMPF

KEMPF

"When I was a child, I spoke as a child, I felt as a child, I thought as a child. Now that I have become a man, I have put away the things of a child."—St. Paul (1 Cor. 6, 1)

Once upon a time I was very young. I was sitting on a branch of the big tree in the empty lot across the street from my house, munching on a few carrots I'd taken from Mr. O'Neill's victory garden.

Gosh, I wanted to be a fireman. I'd have given anything to be a fireman. To screach 'round the corner, hands latched to the rear of the ladder, black coat rustling in the breeze; to zoom down Western Avenue at sixty miles an hour all day with the siren whistling and the shiny silver bell on the front of the engine clanging away; oh, how I wanted to be a fireman.

I used to walk past the fire house on my way home from school, stopping sometimes in wide-eyed fascination to look through the open doors.

All Red and Shiny

Everything was bright and shiny inside; the chromed parts of the engine, the nozzles on the hoses, and the brass pole the firemen used in order to get down to the engines in a hurry.

I could see the wide red suspenders on the backs of the firemen as they sat playing checkers in the corner.

But my eyes always ended their journey by focusing on the same object—the bright red helmets. That's what I wanted most, one of those shiny red helmets.

And so I turned and skipped home, a smile on my face and whistling all the way, for I knew . . . someday I'd have one.

But as I grew, I began to change. Older and wiser people told me of the other things, of things more important than a mere shiny red fire helmet.

I learned that what I really wanted was a college education so that someday I might be old and wise. A house in the country with a two car garage, a summer home by the shore, a yearly subscription to Life and Time magazines, a life insurance policy and a job with plenty of security; these, I learned, were what I really wanted.

Whistle Goes With Age

I usually take the bus home from school these days, but for no reason at all, the other day I decided to walk home. I don't know why, but when I came to the old fire house, I stopped for a minute to peak inside.

The firemen were still in the corner playing checkers and the brass pole and silver bell were as shiny as ever and . . . yes . . . and the bright red helmets were in their places on the wall.

Memories of my childhood dreams to have one of those helmets came to mind. As I thought about the things I now sought, I realized how silly it had all been. And I turned and walked down the street.

But I wasn't whistling anymore.

Constitution of C.C.G.P. Adopted By Council

a committee member.

A motion by Don Kempf to create a social activities file which would house detailed information on the organization and execution of the various social affairs to be used by future organizations was tabled until the next meeting.

Also to be considered at the next meeting are the following: A motion by Jim Lynch to have a new $17.90 insurance policy replace the old two and three dollar policies which protect students only while in school or coming to school.

The new policy would give year round protection, throughout the world. Another proposal to be considered later was introduced by John P. Kelley. Kelley wished to have actual voting machines installed in future student elections.

Clubs Reinstated

The following clubs and organizations which were suspended by the Student Senate were reinstated:

Turf and Tinsel, the Finance Society, the Belle Aire, the Marketing Club and the Intercollegiate Congerence on Government.

The VILLANOVAN remained suspended until the next student senate meeting at which time the publication will be given an opportunity to defend itself.

In a brief talk, Bob Murphy, council chairman, announced that if anyone thinks he is not being put to the best use, he should make this known to the chairman. "We want people to work at the jobs they like," Murphy said.

The last motion passed was by Murphy. He requested that rows 8-24 of section NQ in the stadium be reserved for seniors until the Tuesday night preceding the home football games.

On this note, Sheldon Pollack made the motion that the meeting be adjourned.

Villanova Chosen For $1500 Texaco Grant

Villanova has been selected as one of the privately-financed United States colleges and universities to receive unrestricted grants-in-aid under The Texas Company's aid-to-education program.

The grant, which has been awarded for the academic year, 1958-59, is without stipulation as to its use and amounts to $1,500.

In addition to providing for direct financial assistance to privately-financed schools, Texaco's aid-to-education program includes 175 scholarships for young men at 67 educational institutions.

Accounting Society Meets Tomorrow

The Accounting Society will hold a meeting tomorrow at 10:30, in room 209 C&F.

Mr. John Moritz, director of the placement bureau will be the society's guest speaker. He will talk on employment conditions facing the 1959 graduate in general, and of the opportunities available to the college graduate.

Last Thursday, the annual Accounting forum of the Philadelphia chapter, Pennsylvania Institute of C. P. A.'s was held at St. Joseph's College. The forum was attended by Accounting students of all colleges in the immediate area.

Dale McClain, senior Accounting major, representsed Villanova on a student panel.

At the last meeting of the society, George Chorba, society moderator, discussed the aims and practicality of field trips.

Debaters "Warm Up;" Novice Debut Soon

James Corey and Frank Cunningham represented the Beta Gamma Debating Society in a debate against St. Joseph's College last week before the Holy Name Society of the Annunciation Church in Havertown.

No decision was reached in the debate, a "warm up" requested by Professor Charles P. Bruderle of the History department.

Future Beta Gamma activities include the first novice tournament at the University of Delaware on November 28. Joe Liggera, Gene D'Aquila, Jim Rhodes and Mary Quinn will speak for the Society, while varsity debater Leo Burke will act as judge.

Juniors Set Tot Outing, Ball For Dec. 5 Weekend

McCoy, a junior English major, will supervise as chairman of the Ball.

Saturday's outing, under direct supervision of general chairman Dobies, will begin at about 9:30 a.m. at the orphanage at 49th and Wyalusing Sts. in West Philadelphia. As 250 persons have already signed up to take out an orphan; the boys will be doled out on a first come, first serve basis.

A limited number of buses will be available for resident students who cannot obtain other transportation. They will leave the campus at 9 and carry their passengers to all the events of the day. It is expected that most of the students will provide their own transportation.

Day with Santa

From the orphanage the group will proceed to Lit Brothers Department store in Philadelphia at 8th and Market Sts. There the orphans will tour toyland and visit with Santa. After lunch at a nearby restaurant (to be arranged), they will be the guests of the 69th St. Theatre for an afternoon matinee.

Maps and itineraries will be distributed before the weekend. Chairman Dobies emphasizes that although the outing is sponsored by the juniors, it is not limited to that group. "In past years, all the classes have participated in this enjoyable event and it is hoped that this year will be no exception."

Grab A Date

A further tradition not mentioned by Dobies is that of dates; the outing group usually includes a Villanovan, his date and their "Johnny," as the St. John boys are called.

The party Monday is closed to chairmen and those who have worked on the weekend, due to its expense. It will be chairmanned by Joe Durocher, who will provide gifts for the boys and a dinner for the group.

M.E. Frat Recognized; Christman President

The Tau Pi chapter of Pi Tau Sigma, the national honorary fraternity for mechanical engineers, has been officially recognized on campus, it was announced by J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering.

At the first meeting of the Fraternity, Bill Christman was named president. Thomas Breslin will serve as vice-president, with Joe Hargadon, corresponding secretary; Joe Rice, recording secretary, and Mel Ventura, treasurer.

The electronics business is comprised of some 500 big and little manufacturers, which are supplied by 3,000 to 4,000 parts and component makers.

College Loans New Recent Study Shows

According to a study recently published by the College Life Insurance Company of America, the establishment of private and governmental funds to guarantee long-term, low-cost, unsecured bank loans to college students is a new and revolutionary development.

The study states that the Massachusetts Higher Education Assistance Corporation has guaranteed more than $1,463,000 in loans to 3,365 students since 1957. The maximum loan to a student in any one year is $500.

Former Student Eulogizes Prior

Infrequently one comes across a public word of appreciation expressed by a former pupil for a job well done by a former professor.

The expression below was given by James Shea, class of 1932, a writer for The Catholic Telegrapher-Register.

Shea's eulogy is as follows:

A German Augustinian with the improbable name of Father Englebert Eberhard died a few weeks ago at Wurzburg. He was the Prior General of that distinguished order, but I remember him as the freshman Latin teacher who initiated me into higher education.

For only a single semester he took us through our paces in the Odes of Horace—not an easy course you may be sure. And, although I remember very little of the Odes, I shall never forget the exquisite pleasure of the journey into that strange new country.

To Father Eberhard, Latin poetry was a joy, and each word a special gift from God to be inspected, savered, precisely understood, and tucked away, like Wordworth's image of daffodils.

Exclamation points dotted Father Eberhard's conversation, in class and out of it. Seldom did he make the slightest remark without adding to it the warmth of his warm personality.

He was around 40 then, rotund, if not actually fat, and blessed with a countenance that reflected a heart full of happiness. For the most part, he thoroughly enjoyed his work, though at times the inpenetrability of our heads dismayed him.

"Integer vitae, selerisque purus"... He spoke those Horatian lines with the airy grace that Horace himself must have felt when he write them. It was time to stop wrestling with literal translations and to put on the mood of the poet. That seemed to be Father Eberhard's reaction to the lines at any rate.

Along with his rapturous excursion into the Odes, Father Eberhard led us by the hand into the deep and pleasant waters of philology.

No word escaped his attention as he plotted its history, its associations, its various meanings. His love of words was unforgettable; he delighted in their precise use, examining them as a jewler might examine precious stones.

He taught us German, also, but without nearly so much mutual pleasure. We had taken two years of German in high school, but most of us didn't know an "ausbeimitnach" from a "seivenu," and he suffered.

My own affected German accent, however, must have assuaged his anguish somewhat, for he used to call on me rather often to read in German, and I would catch him silently laughing.

He was called back to Germany to become Provincial of the Order of St. Augustine, and five years ago he was named Prior General of the order.

Since it was from him that I learned the phase "aere perennius," I trust it will not be considered a cliche when I suggest that, whatever monument his confreres may erect to his memory, his work as a teacher of young men will itself be a monument more enduring than bronze.

The Very Rev. Engelbert Eberhard, O.S.A. late Provincial of the Order of St. Augustine, poses with former Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas after both received honorary degrees at graduation here in 1956.

TEST YOUR CAREER-RATING I.Q.

Name the Pennsylvania company each of these young engineers joined...

(See answer below)

Fireball Frank wanted Opportunity; found it with a company that will double its output in the next ten years. With plenty of new blood coming into the company behind him, his engineering training puts him in a good position for advancement into managerial capacities.

Level-headed Lew wanted Security in his job so he joined a company that produces a service so essential that folks can never go without it, good times or bad . . . and where people with new ideas are always needed!

Eager Ernie wanted Challenge on the job; found it with a company that "lives" up to 60 years in the future and presents a real challenge to engineers engaged in today's most fascinating industry.

Steady Sam wanted Good Family Life in pleasant neighborhood with good schools, and warm, congenial friends . . . and a job with a professional status. What is his company?

ANSWER: All four engineers joined Pennsylvania electric utility companies. If you are looking for the same career values they wanted, it might be a smart idea for you to talk with the electric company interviewers when they visit the campus, or write to: PENNSYLVANIA ELECTRIC ASSOCIATION, State Street Building, Harrisburg, Pa.

Law School Asst. Dean Takes Part in Debate

Thomas J. O'Toole, assistant dean of the Villanova Law School, was a member of a panel discussion at All Saints Church Parish House, Wynnewood last week.

The topic of discussion was "Updating of Pennsylvania's Antique Constitution." The panel presented his ideas for changes in the State Constitution.

Other members of the panel were Mitchell J. Hunt, Research Associate of the Bureau of Municipal Research and the Pennsylvania Economy League, and Louis B. Schwarz, Professor of Law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School.

Civil Tests Soon

Villanova juniors and seniors, as well as graduates, are eligible to take the Civil Service Department's professional career tests on December 13.

John A. Moritz, Villanova director, says that opportunities exist in a wide variety of fields.

Most persons entering state employment through the professional tests serve a one year apprenticeship at $4,400, and then advance to a salary of $4,770 with five yearly increases to $5,860.

Some students are not required to take the trainee period but may start work immediately. Promotion opportunities are excellent and top positions pay anywhere from $10,200 to $17,800.

IRS To Show Film U.S. In Middle East

The International Relations Society will meet tonight at 7.45 room 207, Mendel Hall.

The primary business of the meeting will be the showing of a film concerning the political, economic and military policies of the United States in the Middle East.

I. R. S. president Robert Rafano, announced that senior C and F student and society member Francisco Pacheco recently attended the Middle Atlantic Regional Conference of the Association of International Relations Clubs, held in New York.

United States Investments in World Politics considered in relation to Latin America's Foreign Policy was the topic discussed at the conference.

Rafano was the guest speaker at a meeting of the Rosemont International Relations Society last week. He discussed the organization and function of the National Association of International Relations Societies.

Broker Gives Address

Mr. Dana Sullivan, a stock broker with Reynolds and Co., gave the first in a series of addresses in the lecture series of the Finance Society last week.

Sullivan outlined the basic requirements for entrance in the brokerage business, and gave a description of current stock market standings.

He listed the various types of stock and explained the positions of the stockbroker in that regard.

Bill Murray, society president, said that any finance students who wish to join the organization must apply in room 144, Sullivan Hall.

Annual Military Mass Held In Chapel on Saturday

The Villanova NROTC battalion will hold its 2nd annual Military Mass and Communion Breakfast this Saturday.

The Mass will be held in the University Chapel and will be followed by breakfast in the cafeteria in the C and F Building.

Following the breakfast the midshipmen will march into the Villanova-Quantico football game at the stadium.

The Rev. Norbert Whitley O.S.A. university chaplain, and Sargeant John Molcany, USMC, are the coordinators of the day.

Solemn High Mass will be celebrated at 10 A.M. by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon O.S.A., the Rev. Michael O'Donnellon O.S.A., will be deacon and The Rev. John Daley, O.S.A., will be Sub-Deacon.

The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Ralph Handran O.S.A., former member of the faculty and now a naval chaplain stationed at Bethesda, Maryland.

The Mass will be preceded by the blessing of the Papal, United States, Navy, and NROTC colors outside the chapel by Fr. Donnellon.

Following Mass, the Midshipmen will march to the cafeteria in the C and F building for breakfast at 11:00 a.m. The Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O.S.A., director of the Villanova Development Foundation, will preside as master of ceremonies while the main speaker will be Captain Donnelly, USN, (retired) of the university faculty.

Schneider Prexy Of Navy Society

The senior Midshipmen of the Villanova NROTC Unit met the first time this semester as the Quarterdeck Society on November 10, 1958 in Barry Hall Library and elected the officers for the 1958-59 school year.

Lt. R. J. Zemaitis, USN, the moderator of the society announced the election of the following as officers: President—Joseph Schneider, Vice-Pres.—John P. Moran, Secretary—Donald R. Anderson, and Treasurer—Donald G. Kempf. All officers with the exception of Anderson are regular Navy students; Kempf is a Marine Option.

At this meeting, the society planned a tentative program of the year which would coincide with the purpose of the society.

The Quarterdeck Society is an organization consisting solely of senior midshipmen in the NROTC Unit. The members are soon to be commissioned in either the Navy or Marine Corps and thus the primary mission of the Society is to better acquaint the members with the service they are about to enter. Both professional lectures and informal discussions are used for this purpose.

Nickel in Ancient Bronzes

Nickel, which was first isolated as an element only in 1751, has been found to be present in significant amounts in certain bronze tools and implements made almost 6,000 years ago.

Do You Think for Yourself? *(SEE WHAT THIS TEST TELLS YOU ABOUT YOURSELF! )

Would you turn down an unusual opportunity if it would alter a preconceived plan for the future? YES ☐ NO ☐

Do you feel your education would suffer if books and notes were allowed at examinations? YES ☐ NO ☐

Do you think that a public official should do what the voters want him to do, even though he personally may feel it is wrong? YES ☐ NO ☐

Can you honestly say you enjoy a game or sport as much whether you win or lose? YES ☐ NO ☐

Do you instinctively feel a qualm when you walk under a ladder? YES ☐ NO ☐

When introduced to important people, do you act a role which is quite different from the real you? YES ☐ NO ☐

If someone wanted to hypnotize you, would you refuse to let him try? YES ☐ NO ☐

Would you feel that you should leave a formal affair if you found you were wearing clothes that were different from everybody else's? YES ☐ NO ☐

Off-Broadway Goes Pretty Far Off– To Philadelphia

The celebrated "Off Broadway" theater concept is coming to Philadelphia. A season of classic and modern professional productions will commence by the first of the year in the former Commodore Theater, 43rd & Walnut Streets—renamed the "Forty-Third Street Theater."

In the interest of bringing to Philadelphia professional theater at moderate prices, the producers have set up a popular price policy ranging from $1.00 to $3.60 (plus tax) and have provided that a large proportion of the 750 seats be in the least expensive price range.

Definitely scheduled for production is the New York Shakespeare Festival production of "Two Gentlemen of Verona," which will be directed by Stuart Vaughn. Negotiations are being made for "The Kidders" by Donald Ogden Stewart—which has just finished a successful years run in London—and for "Purple Dust" by Sean O' Casey. Also under negotiation are "The Potting Shed". "Volpone", and "U. S. A.".

New Stage

In preparation for 18 months, the theater will comprise a unique arrangement of ¾ proscenium stage. Installation of two revolving stages, plus extensive renovations to be made in early January.

The original seating capacity of 1300 is being cut to 750 to achieve the note of intimacy desired. The theater is built upon a hill, allowing each seat excellent view of the stage.

Patrons Program Planned

Plans have been formulated for a Patrons program which will allow "Forty-Third Street Theater" membership holders reductions on tickets for their guests in addition to two house seats for each production.

Pre-opening Patron's Nights are planned so that members can meet the cast and the staff. Membership will also include a monthly lecture series by outstanding theater personalities. A special Student Rate policy will be in effect.

5 New Members Appointed To VU Law School Board

The appointment of five new members to the Board of Consultors of Villanova Law School has been announced by the Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, President of Villanova University.

The appointment was made with the co-operation of Law Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein, and the Honorable Theodore L. Reimel, Chairman of the Board of Consultors of the Law School.

The Board of Consultors is a group of distinguished judges and lawyers who serve in an advisory capacity to the President and Dean.

The new members are intended to give the Board a strong representation from areas outside of Pennsylvania. The five new members are:

William Duffy, Jr.: partner of the firm of Herrmann & Duffy, Wilmington, Delaware, currently Vice-President of the Delaware State Bar Association.

Warren S. Ege: partner of the firm of Jones, Day, Cockley and Reavis of Washington, D. C., and the former secretary to Mr. Justice Brandeis, Supreme Court of the United States.

Thomas O. G. Fitzgibbon: A trustee of Columbia University, and a partner in the firm of Davis, Wardwell, Sunderland and Kiendl of New York City.

James L. Griffin: partner in the firm of Griffin and Gallagher, Chicago and President of the Villanova Alumni Club of Chicago.

Hugh P. McFadden: A trustee of Trinity College, Washington, D. C. and a senior partner in the firm of McFadden, Riskin, McCarthy and Holland.

Morra Stays Put When Given Chance

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

When Dick Keyser was hurt in the opening game of the year with West Chester, a senior tackle—Paul "Reds" Morra from New Jersey, filled in, and has been "filling in" ever since with fifty to fifty-five minutes playing time in each ballgame.

"The biggest surpries on the team," says Coach Reagan of the twenty three year old, 6-3, 205 pounder, "Red found himself on the first unit and came to life."

PAUL MORRA

Line coach John Sandusky said, "We're very pleased with 'Reds' Morra. He has played good steady football since finding himself in the starting lineup. His outlook seems to have changed and he has proven himself as a first stringer".

Practice Hard, Play Hard

"He's a real product of the adage — practice hard, play hard," continued Sandusky, who, as line coach, keeps a close eye on the rugged senior. As is indicated by Sandusky's words, Reds is the type of man who always puts out.

He began his football career as a freshman and on the Morristown High team, and was switched to guard for his junior and senior years. As a sophomore and a junior, he was selected to the All-County team, and as a senior was chosen All-State. In addition to his obvious football ability, he was also a talented basketball player, and participated in various field events for the track team.

"I choose Villanova because it was handy and offered the Catholic education I wanted," said Morra. As a freshman he was converted to tackle, and has remained there throughout his four years, but it wasn't until the West Chester game that he really got a chance to play a lot of ball.

He has made good on that chance.

Security Agency Test This Month

Qualifying tests for the National Security Agency will be given at Villanova on December 6, at 9.

This test will be the only one given this year. All students who are interested in interviews for the agency must take the test.

All applicants must meet with with the following requirements: must be a natural born United States citizen, with all members of the immediate family citizens. He must be the holder of or at least about to receive a bachelor's degree in June of 1958.

Students wishing to take the test must apply to the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N. J.

Interested students may acquire a bulletin to information from the Placement Office. The deadline for applications is November 29.

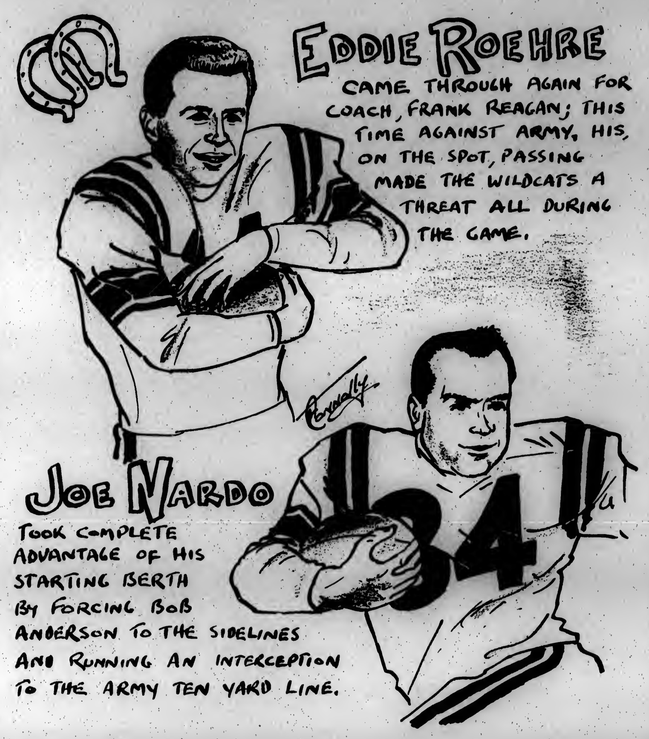
Rifle Team Beats State

The Villanova University Varsity and NROTC Rifle Teams defeated the Penn State University Varsity and NROTC Rifle Teams in the first matches of the season, on Saturday, 8 November 1958 at the firing range in John Barry Hall.

Sgt. John Molcany, USMC., the teams' coach said that in the varsity contest, Villanova topped Penn State by a score of 1389 points to 1378 pts.

Highest varsity scorer for Villanova was Chris Kloss with 282 pts. Other high scorers were Lou Spevitz—281, Frank Martha—279, Bill Hearn—278, and Ed Hogan—269 points.

"The NROTC Rifle team of Villanova defeated Penn State Navy with a total score of 1362 points over 1295 points. Highest Villanova Navy scorer was Lou Spevitz with 285 points.



Other high scorers for Villanova were Jan Garigliani and Charlie Russell, both 274 points, Ed Hogan—273, and Mike Nolan—256 points.

Dawkins

Dawkins scored his third touchdown in the third quarter. He caught a pass good for 48 yards before being nailed from behind by John Daniels on the six. Then he belted up the middle for his 12th touchdown on the year.

The final touchdown came at 12:18 of the last quarter. Gil Roesler punched across from three yards out to cap a 60-yard drive against a battle-weary Villanova team.

Villanova Cited For Grid Policy

In an editorial in the Hartford Connecticut CATHOLIC TRANSCRIPT, Don Foskett, TRANSCRIPT sports' editor has praised Villanova for its successful change in athletic policy.

Foskett noted that Villanova does not have the gaint crowds of the Bud Dudley-Food Store Era but the crowds of 10,000 that witness this year's games are not sitting sober-faced through 52-0 maulings that marked former seasons.

The 1958 victories over such formidable opposition as Boston College, Detroit, and Wake Forest are proof of Villanova's wisdom in changing its policy.

This foresight on the part of the Villanova administration might well have saved Villanova from going the way of other big eastern colleges.

"Authorities at Villanova," writes Foskett, "must be credited with commendable courage and wisdom in taking the course they did. They not only preserved their football program but rescued it from the dubious service of the limburger and banana interests."

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

The 1959 intramural basketball season will open on Tuesday December 2. Official entry forms may be obtained at the intramural office, room 112 Alumni Hall.

The entries must be returned to the intramural office by November 25. No late entries will be accepted.

Cage Outlook Brightens As Ken Harrison Returns

By JOE FITZPATRICK

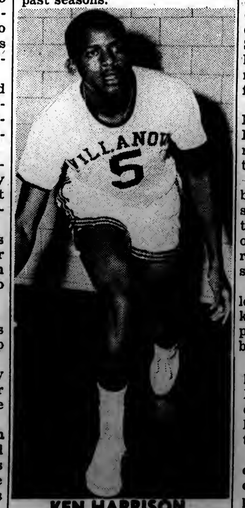
Come December 1st the athletic spotlight will shift from local gridirons to the gymnasiums of area colleges.

As usual most of the attention will be focused on Pennsylvania's Palestra, the stronghold of the Big Five.

In opening night action the Villanova basketteers of Coach Al Severance will play host to the LeMoyne Univ. squad. Villanova fans will get a chance to see two future V. U. opponents when Temple takes on Gettysberg.

Hopes for opening night and season-long success were bolstered last week when the administration announced the eligibility of Kenny Harrison.

Marks had kept the 6-2 veteran of two previous varsity campaigns inactive for the first few weeks of pre-season practice.



Harrison is hopeful that his varsity experience and former exposure to varsity competition and pressure will be of aid to the young Villanova five.

Soph Shaping Up

The graduates of last years freshmen club are shaping up rapidly.

Jim Huggard and Jim Kenny are adding something that other Villanova Basketball teams have lackedspeed.

Soph John Driscoll has shown more stamina than he exhibited in past performances and this coupled with his 6-8 frame should provide many rebounds for the Cat Cagers.

KEN HARRISON

The efforts of Driscoll plus those of the "new" George Raveling should gain control of the boards for Villanova.

Raveling has made remarkable improvement both on rebounding and shooting. George has also shown a new poise which he did not reveal in his past seasons.

With Huggard and Kenny in the backcourt Joe Ryan has been moved to the side slot. This position should provide added incentive to Joe's shooting. Much of the Wildcat success will depend on the redhead's scoring.

Spirit High

Harrison remarked that the spirit of the entire ball club is extremely high. Sophs Bob Liberatore, Dick Kaminski, Tom Samuelevitz and Don McGinley have been putting pressure on reported "starters" and this forces incentive and spirit.

Harrison also praised fellow New Yorker, George Emma. Kenny thinks that George will reach the pinnacle of his career this year.

Emma who possesses a fine basketball know-how and an outside shot to match, has broken the backs of many Villanova opponents in the past and Harrison expects him to do the same this year.

Speed and ability should lead the 1958-59 Villanova basketball team to great heights possibly a N.I.T. or an N.C.A.A. bid.

The intramural department has announced that Amateur Night will be held on Wednesday, December 10th at 7.00. Festivities will take place in the Field House.

The entry blanks distributed yesterday should be filled out and returned as soon as possible.

Emanons Aims To Win

Some of the best competition in the intramural football program can be found in the 4:30 Austin League. In this league is the hotly contested rivalry among three very good teams: the Emanons, the DPM team and Joe Scancarella's Joe's Jets.

The Emanons moved out in front of Joe's Jets and the DPM club with a win over the Jets last week. They had previously defeated DPM 19-9.

The Emanons, coached by Roger Scott, have a star-studded backfield which includes three former all-state high school athletes.

Leo Syglinski directs the squad from his quarterback position. The halfbacks are Dick Mele and John Totaro. The backfield is rounded out by the fine blocking of Ozzie O'Neill.

The Emanons have two ends that do a lot of scoring, the ends are Bernie McCoy and Bill Barron.

The offense is not the entire story of the Emanons successful surge into first place in the 4:30 Austin League.

The defense has allowed Emanons opponents only one touchdown and four first downs all year. In the last two years Emanon adversaries have scored only two touchdowns and a total of seven first downs.

The members of the Emanon defensive platton are Captain Mike Palughi, Brian Wyatt, Dan Warner, Richie Gerstner, and Stan Ciesielski.

The Emanons feel that this is their year. In past seasons they have been stopped at the semi-finals but this year they vow to go all the way.

Canadians Name Ex-VU Star Luzzi 'Lineman of the Year'

Don Luzzi, former Villanova tackle and recipient of All-East honors in 1956 and '57, was recently named "Lineman Of The Year" in the Western Conference of the Canadian Professional Football League.

Luzzi, described by the Canadian sportswriters as one of the greatest linemen ever to play in the Dominion, is doing a bang-up job for the Calgary Stampeders.

Praised by Scribes

The Calgary Herald's Eric Bishop says "To Calgary gridiron followers, Luzzi is the greatest thing to hit the Conference since John Henry Johnson.

In all his games, Luzzi has been brilliant. He has been the key, the big man with the big play at the right time."

Even Don's rivals praise him. Hal Pawson of the Edmonton Journal says that Don is the best lineman since Dale Meinhert played for the Eskimos. The Edmonton Eskimos are Calgary's arch rivals.

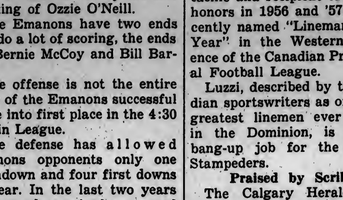
DON LUZZI

Luzzi's success in professional football is no surprise to those who have saw him in action at Villanova.

A six foot, 242 pounder, Luzzi played so well with Villanova's "best losing team in the east" that he was picked to play in the Senior Bowl game last New Years' Day.

Don returned to the Villanova campus last Thursday to add his voice to those of the members of the Villanova student body in wishing the football team success at West Point.

The intramural department has announced that Amateur Night will be held on Wednesday, December 10th at 7.00. Festivities will take place in the Field House.



The entry blanks distributed yesterday should be filled out and returned as soon as possible.

Grid Team 'Great' in Defeat by Army

Marines Test Weary, Hurt Cat Eleven

(An open letter to Frank Reagan from Managing Editor JACK CURTIN).

Dear Coach:

Last Saturday, you, your staff, and, most of all, the Villanovan football team put on one of the finest gridiron evhibitions in the history of the university.

For the Wildcats, even in losing, 26-0, to West Point, won themselves what we would call, except for the fact that it is a trite, meaningless phrase, a "moral victory."

The outstanding showing of the Main Liners against a team that is one of the nation's best earned for them nation-wide recog-ition as an excellent football unit, and gained them the accolades of the nation's press.

Such adjectives as "stubborn," "determined" and "surprisingly equal to Army" were used to describe the Villanovans. Army coach Earl Blaik called your line the toughest and hardest-hitting one his Cadets have faced all season in a schedule packed with top-notch opponents.

Stopped Runners

Villanova earned all this by stopping the vaunted West Point running attack (holding it to only 106 yards, smallest gain of the year), and forcing the Cadets to throw more passes (29) than they ever did before. The Wildcats allowed the Cadets only one first down in the first quarter, forcing them to punt three times, and although losing, 13-0, at the half, had outgained their nationally ranked foe.

Yes, even while suffering defeat and their first shut-out of the year, Villanova greatly impressed a watching nation.

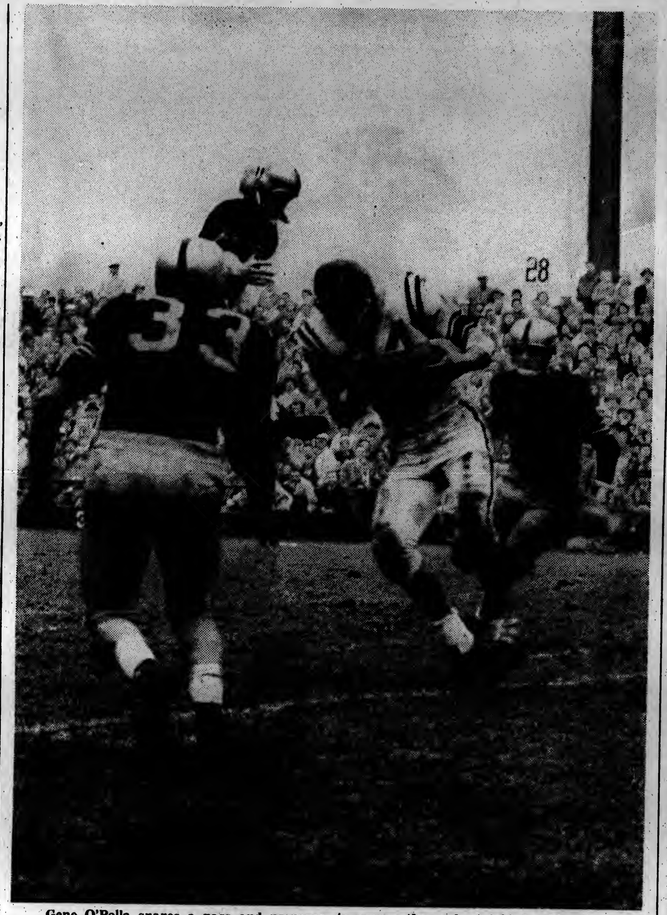
They did that in defeat. This week, with a victory, they could finally establish themselves in their proper perspective.

The opponent in Saturday's season-closer is Quantico Marines, who themselves attained some national recognition last week with a 13-12 conquest of previously unbeaten Rutgers.

Austin Didn't Play

Since Rutgers was 18th in the nation prior to the defeat, the victory gave the Marines, who now own an impressive 7-2-1 mark, some measure ofdistinction, even though their foe played without star halfback Bill Austin.

Topping the Gyrenes, besides giving the Main Liners a highly-successful 7-3 record for the year, will be definite proof that they are one of the best teams in the East.



To do it, they'll have to stop some former great collegiate players—such names as Sam Valentine, a guard who was formerly grid captain at Penn State and who beat Rutgers with his conversion kick, and Harry Jefferson, former star halfback with the University of Illinois, grace the Marine line-up.

Homecoming Day

There'll be some familiar faces there too: former Villanovans Ron Cherubini and Tim Etter now don uniforms for the Quantico bunch.

Of course, you're going into the game in poor physical shape, with several injuries and bruises from the rough Army encounter hindering several key players. Most depressing injury is the ankle of Billy Paczkowskie, who probably won't see action against the Marines.

But winning this one will be just the balm those aching Wildcats need.

Gene O'Pella snares a pass and prepares to escape the ambust laid for him by Army's Harry Walters (33), Joe Caldwell and Al Vande rbush (64).

Pete Dawkins Proves He's All-American

By RODGER VAN ALLEN

The football team played its best game of the year last Saturday, but it was not enough to contain Pete Dawkins, that most dynamic of all cadets, who scored three times in leading undefeated Army to a 26-0 victory.

The more than 6000 Villanova students and alumni who were part of a 27,250-person capacity crowd at Michie Stadium in West Point were treated to a determined defensive effort by the Wildcats.

In the opening period the Black Knights, national offensive leaders, got only one first down, and it wasn't until late in the fourth period that they mounted a sustained drive.

With the Wildcats' line showing surprising toughness, Army Coach Earl Blaik had his men go to the air more than any other time this year. They threw 29 times and completed 13 to account for most of their 322 yards gained.

Injured Players

The Cats did not go into the game in the best o fshape. Quarterback Jim Grazione could play only about half the game due to a previously injured thigh muscle, and Billy Paczkowskie had trouble with his weakened ankle, being forced to the sidelines after only a few minutes of playing time.

In both cases ,however, other men came through with clutch performances. Eddie Roehre called an excellent game and passed well from the quarterspot, while Joe Nardo was a key man on both offense and defense.

Dawkins' first score came in the second period when he hauled in Grazione's punt on his own twenty, faked a reverse, slipped down the sidelines aided by some excellent blocks, cut back slightly and went the rest of the way for the score with a burst of speed which made John Daniel's goal-line drive unsuccessful.

Touchdown Pass

Harry Walters successfully kicked the extra point.

Less than three minutes later, Dawkins snagged Joe Caldwell's pass and raced across the goal again, the play covering 46 yards. It was the only time in the game that the Cats' pass defense was caught completely unprepared, but the opportunitic Cadets made the most of the lapse.

The Wildcats' best chance to score came in the second quarter when Gene O'Pella deflected Joe Caldwell's pass into the alert arms of Joe Nardo, who took it from Army's 28 to the 10.

Four consecutive pass plays failed here, however, with the Main Liners' Tom Heron failing to hold a first-down bullet pass over the middle.

Play Nullified

The Cats got a bad break in the second period when a 41-yard pass play from Roehre to Heron that had moved the ball to the Cadets' 10 was called back because of a clipping penalty. Another drive, this one led by Grazione, died out on the

Runners Lose But Gain Experience

By TOM MURPHY

The cross country team competed in the IC4A championships yesterday after completing its regular season last week. The team lost all three meets in which it participated, bowing to LaSalle 16-43 last Tuesday.

Villanova placed eight times in a field of sixteen against LaSalle, but it seemed all their runners placed "in the middle," while LaSalle covered the first and last places.

LaSalle's Jefferson finished first with a time of 24 minutes, 10 seconds, only three seconds off LaSalle's course record. Bob Godesky was the first to finish for Villanova, coming in fifth with a time of 26 minutes and 7 seconds

Other Wildcats were Tim McNamar, 27 minutes, 3 seconds; Vic DiMalo, 27 minutes, 4 seconds; Gene Rogers, 27 minutes, 11 seconds; Joe Neill, 27 minutes, 16 seconds; Lance Hugelmeyer, 27 minutes, 59 seconds; and Joe Tinney with 28 minutes and 27 seconds.

They finished eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth and fourteenth, respectively.

Actually Jack Faucett came in fifth place and was the first Wildcat to finish but he was ineligible because he is a veteran and a transfer student. His time was 25 minutes and 56 seconds. He will become eligible in January, in time to participate in Villanova's indoor track meets.

Although coach Jim Tuppeny's men lost all their meets, the season was not unsuccessful. It brought out potential in hitherto unknowns and prepared the runners for the upcoming track season.

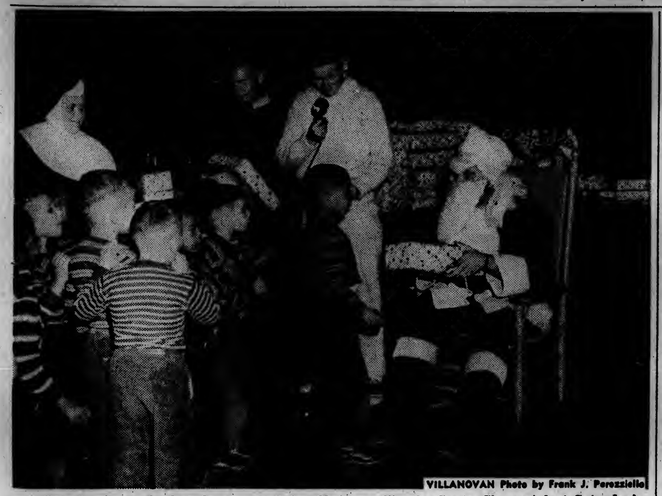
Villanova is nationally-known as a great track power and track manager Phil Ryan looks upon the cross-country season philosophically. "Our men ran cross-country this season mainly for experience and to get themselves in shape", he said. He also added, "Godesky is a miler; Faucett, McNamar and Rogers are two milers.

Intramural Bowling Opens

The intramural bowling league opened last week with the teams bowling for scratch averages.

Anyone interested should contact Paja in room 118 Sullivan Hall or Chuck Spinner at the bowling alley any evening.

Students are reminded that bowling is an intramural sport and trophies will be awarded to the winners. All bowling takes place at the Mainline Alleys which are located on Lancaster Pike directly across from the Rosemont Post Office.



Bowling matches will be held on Tuesdays at 2 p.m., Wednesdays at 3 p.m. and Thursdays at 3:30.

Congress Okays Progress Report

The Student Congress, last Wednesday established an annual report, to familiarize students with Council achievement throughout the year.

Sophomore class president Bob DeLisa, who initiated the proposal, said that "many students don't realize what the Council accomplishes." He suggested that such information be supplied by an interestingly written pamphlet.

Although the proposal had gained sufficient support, it was not until after forty-five minutes of heated debate that it was finally voted upon.

In the meantime, no less than three amendments were offered concerning who would be the author of it, each accompanied by loud discussion.

Editors Rejected

It was agreed that such a report should be completely objective.

Don Kempf, senior Arts major, insisted that the only way to achieve objectivity would be to call upon some outside agency, completely detached from council affairs, to write it.

And since the VILLANOVAN was no longer represented on the Council, he recommended a staff to include the editor-in-chief and four other editors of the VILLANOVAN.

At this point, Chairman Bob Murphy, relinquished the chair to give his opinion that the "uncooperative attitude" shown by the VILLANOVAN disqualifies its staff from writing a satisfactory report.

Kempf persisted almost single-handedly to advance his suggestion, and to discredit the amendment previously proposed by John Kelley that the report be written by Murphy in collaboration with moderator, the Rev. Dante L. Girolami, O.S.A.

These two could not help but be prejudiced in preparing such a report, Kempf said.

The Congress soundly killed Kempf's amendment, and Kelley withdrew his. Kelley was also forced to withdraw his compromise amendment which pro-

'MarketPlace' Masque Show For Christmas

Belle Masque's theatre workshop, a division of Belle Masque, will present "Christmas in the Market Place" by Henri Gheon, tonight in the Vasey Hall Auditorium.

Gheon's famous nativity play was adapted into English by Eric Crozier and is divided into three parts.

The first part concerns the Advent and the Annunciation; the second part, the Visitation and the Nativity, and the third part, the Presentation.

The play centers about a small band of gypies, who, seated around a camp fire on Christmas Eve, enact the Christmas story.

"Christmas in the Market Place" is an unusually demanding play. There are only five actors in the story, but each actor is called upon to play between four and five characters.

The play will be under the direction of Richard Cavanaugh, a graduate student in theatre and assistant to Mr. Richard M. Duprey, director of Belle Masque.

William Gallagher, senior Arts student, will be stage manager with George Becht, senior Mechanical Engineering student, as head of the stage crew.

Sale of the Lynx, the magazine of creative writing on the Villanova campus, will begin tomorrow and continue until the end of the week.

The Lynx can be purchased in the Pie Shoppe and from salesmen in the dormitories and classroom buildings. The price of the magazine is 25c.

Editor-in-chief Frank Dynan stated that he feels that this issue will rate among the best ever published. "We have carefully considered every submission and we feel that we have included only the best of these," Dynan said.

The most unusual feature of the Fall Lynx will be the pictorial essay, tried only rarely in the past. It will be a photographic and prose look at Philadelphia's coffee houses by Tom Pfieffer and Ray Quaglia.

Old Contributors

The fiction section will feature stories by James Merikangas, Bob Pinto and Frank Murtha, all of whom have written for the Lynx before. New fiction writers will be Quaglia, Tony Macklin and Dynan. Story themes range from the impresionistic realization of what might have been of "The Night, the Snow and Shining Armor," to the gullibility of the educated college student of "Metaphysics for the Many."

Bill Gallagher's article on the role of the musical in the modern theatre, Bernard Avellino's personal view of the process of becoming a rational animal and Tom McKenna's analysis of F. Scott Fitzgerald's relationship to the age in which he lived, will comprise the essays.

Editor Does Poetry

Poetry will include two short poems by Poetry Editor James Tague, "The Sea" and "The Seagull." Several of Tague's poem's have been published nationally. Other poems will be "Japan" by Robert Lima; "Winter" by

R 'n R, Comedy In Amateur Show Tonight

By PAUL A. BUCKLEY
Of The Villanovan Staff

The annual Amateur Night will be held this evening in the Vasey Hall Auditorium at 7 p.m.

Amateur Night, which was a regular affair in the pre-war days, was reinstated on the Villanova campus last year by the Intramural Department.

Last year, more than 15 entrees participated in a show that lasted for two hours. As happened last year, awards will be presented to the best acts.

The Intramural Department has already chosen the judges for the evening. All judges are members of the faculty. Their identities will be withheld until show time.

Judging System

All acts are judged on four points; stage presence, ability, presentation and audience reaction. Five points are awarded for excellence in each category with the grading running to one point for fair. Everybody scores in Amateur Night.

So far, four acts have been accepted for the show, but the Intramural Department expects about 10 more entrees before curtain time.

One of the headliners will be freshman Kevin Shea, billed as Kevin the Konjuror, performing his "wonderful" magic. Shea is a member of the International Brotherhood of Prestidigitators.

Also featured will be a Barbership quartet, the Quadrangles, featuring Pete Bonafanti, John Carmosku, Charlie Reilly and Charlie Carroll.

Seminary Guild Starts Drive for Members, Funds

The Augustinian Seminary Guild will intensify its drive for membership starting tomorrow and extending through next Wednesday.

Bob Merkert and his co-workers on the Religious Affairs Committee of the Student Council will visit every Religion class once during that time.

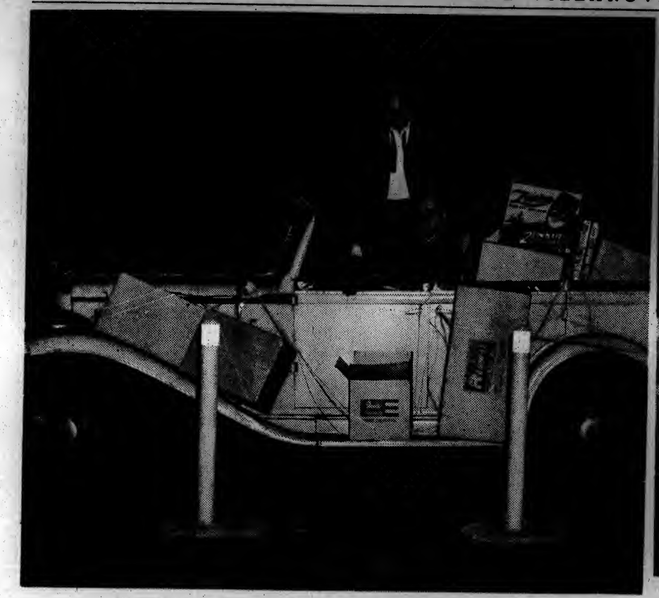
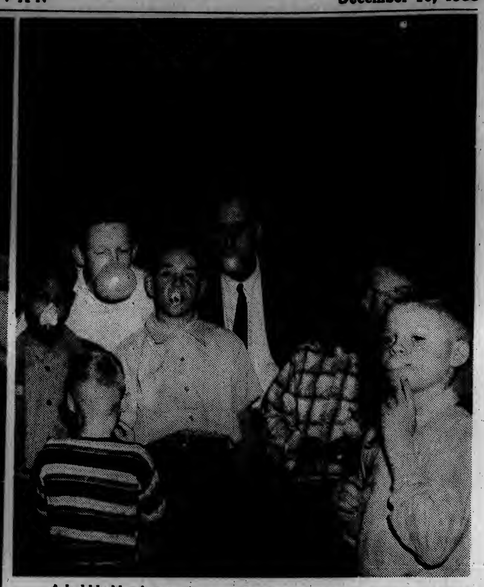
As a supplementary means of encouraging membership, the Guild has set up a table containing information on the work of the Guild on the first floor of Dougherty Hall.



The Guild is the fund-raising unit of the Augustinian Order. Its members help defray the immense cost of educating young men for the priesthood.

Mary, Our Mother of Good Counsel, is the Patroness of this work, as well as all those who interest themselves in the furtherence of the holy priesthood.



Persons who wish to support the Augustinian seminaires may enroll either themselves or deceased relatives or friends in the Guild.

Ordinarily, a one-year membership is one dollar, but that has been reduced to fifty cents for students. A five-year membership is five dollars, a perpetual is ten, and a family membership is fifty.

Members share in prayers and good works by the Augustinian priests throughout the world.

Juniors Don McCoy (seated) and Joe Durocher leave the campus in a vintage 1928 loaded with gifts for the orphans party Monday at St. John's.

A bubble blowing contest was big fun for the kids from St. John's at last Saturday's Orphan Outing, but it was only a small part of the day's activities. In all, the Orphans visited Toyland and Santa Claus at Lit Brothers, had lunch, and saw a movie.

Debaters Fourth, Corey Ranks High

Villanova's debating team finished fourth in the St. Joseph's College tournament in November.

Representing Villanova against 30 other colleges were Beta Gamma president Jim Corey, Dominic Costa, Frank Cunningham and Oz Scogna.

Corey ranked 12th among 144 debators in the tourney. He and Costa comprised one of four undefeated teams.

Ron Anderson, Mark Quinn, Joe Ligerra, and Gene Daquilla represented Villanova at the University of Delaware tournament late in the month. The team gained third place there.

Corey attributes much of the success of the debating team this year to the research committee of freshman nurses, Mary Francis Kleha, Catherine Rucker, Judy DeStefano and Judy Jones.

Jack Serafin, senior Arts major, is now heading a constitution committee in the society.

Opera Classica Society will present its annual Christmas program next Monday at 7:30 in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. The program will include Corelli's "Christmas Concerto" and Bach's "Mass in B Minor." Refreshments will be served.

Local Judges Sit At Garey Moot Court

The final argument in the current Moot Court series will take place tomorrow evening at 8.30 in the court room at Garey Hall.

The bench that will hear the case will consist of Peter F. Hagen, President Judge of Common Pleas No. 1, Philadelphia; Morris Gerber, Court of Common Pleas, Norristown; and Harold K. Wood, United States Attorney, eastern district of Pennsylvania.

The competition will be between the four finalists picked from the elimination round last night. The finalists represent the best advocates from the eight law clubs in the competition.

The case this year has been taken from actual litigation and is not merely a product of academic imagination. It involves an acute problem of federal-state relations.

The moot is run by the students themselves, under the auspices of the Inter-Club Council, and Edward J. O'Connell, a senior, acting as clerk of courts.

The winners of tomorrow's competition will go on to inter-school competition.

V.U. Poets Make Nat'l Anthology

Poetry written by James E. Tague and Robert Lima, both Villanova students, has been accepted for publication in the Annual Anthology of College Poetry, the National Poetry Association has announced.

The selections to be included in the anthology are Tague's "Sonnet to L. A. M.," and Lima's "As I, Alone Await the Coming Tide."

Tague, who is poetry editor of the Lynx, is a junior Pre-Law student while Lima is studying in the graduate school of Theatre Arts.

Civil Service Comm. Offers Gov't. Jobs In Capitol

The U. S. Civil Service Commission is offering an examination for positions in Federal Research Laboratories in the Washington D. C. area. All students who have a bachelor's degree in either engineering, physical science, or mathematics are eligible.

The purpose of the Research Scientist Examination is to provide career opportunities for college trained people with potential in research who are interested in careers leading to high-level research and development positions in the Federal Government.

These tests will be conducted on February 7 and March 21, 1959. Application deadlines are January 19 and March 3.

Qualifications for taking the exam are that you be presently enrolled in an appropriate course of study and expect to complete all the requirements for a bachelor's degree on or before September 1, 1959. Application cards may be obtained in the placement office, one of the civil service regional offices, or from the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington D. C.

The test consist of mathematical formulation which will demontrate ability to develop the mathematical formula needed to solve a quantitative problem. It also consists of a section in either chemistry, physics, or mathematics. The time of the test in four hours.

Candidates selected from this examination will work with some of the country's outstanding scientists employed on research and development projects in these laboratories. Working with top-flight scientists, the recent graduate is able to study new and improved techniques in his work, and participate in on-the-job training.

Opportunities exist in eleven research labs in the Washington D. C. area with widely diversified programs. These laboratories offer the finest facilities and modern test equipment. In all the laboratories, high speed computers assist the engineers and the scientists in the solution of complex problems.

More information may be obtained by writing to the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D. C.

PKP Plans Orphans' Party Saturday

Phi Kappa Pi fraternity will sponsor a orphan's party this Saturday at the CYO Hall, 1819 Arch St.

Co-chairmen Mike Marra and Ed Condon announced that they have arranged with Catholic Charities to entertain orphans from foster homes. The children will be picked up at the Catholic Charities office, 1706 Summer St. and taken to the CYO hall. The party begins at 1 p.m.

Arrangements have been made for movies and refreshments, and presents will be distributed. All expenses will be assumed by the fraternity, Marra said.

Members desiring transportation should meet between 11:30 and 12 noon in front of the chapel on Saturday, according to Condon.

MacDermott and Lima have also had their poetry published nationally.

A notable characteristic of this issue is expected to be the large number of illustrations, under the direction of art editor Frank Connolly. Connolly, together with staff members Jerry Givnish and Peter Allard, has produced an illustration for all but a few of the selections.

Reuther Envisions Labor Fostering Future Freedom

by WALTER P. REUTHER,
President,
United Auto Workers

The People of America are blessed with a fuller measure of human freedom than any people in the world, but we need to realize that freedom in the world in which we live is not a luxury to be enjoyed, but rather a weapon to fight with and a tool to built with.

History has made America the custodian of world freedom, and because we are the strongest of the free world, we must of necessity be prepared to assume an increasing measure of world responsibility in the defense of freedom and the other basic human and democratic values that we cherish.

The torch of human freedom raised high some 180 years ago by the signers of the Declaration of Independence continues to light the way as men struggle against tyranny and oppression in the search to be free.

Common Dedication

We in the labor movement have unlimited faith in the capacity of free men, united in common dedication to meet today's complex and challenging problems and to built a better tomorrow.

The prospects of human progress have never been greater nor more promising. We need only to have the good sense to gear the fruits of our developing science and technology to the needs of the human family.

This is the first time in human history that the economic tools provided by science and technology enable mankind to satisfy its basic economic and material needs and thus afford an opportunity to devote greater time and resources to facilitating man's growth as a social, cultural, and spiritual being.

Free labor has proven a most reliable and effective fighter in the cause of both peace and freedom, for free labor understands and acts in the knowledge that the struggle for peace and freedom is inseparably tied together with the struggle for social justice.

American Opportunity

There is much unfinished work in the vineyards of American democracy. We need to clear our slum and provide an opportunity for every American family to live in a decent home in a healthy neighborhood.

We need to have the courage and the good sense to bring our educational system up to date so that every American child made in the image of God can enjoy the kind of educational opportunity that will facilitate maximum intellectual, cultural and spiritual growth.

We need fewer pious platitudes and more positive leadership from both executive and legislative branches of the government to implement the recent decisions of the Supreme Court and to provide every American, regardless of race, creed, or color, equal opportunity and equal justice in every aspect of our national life.

Staff Argues At Meeting On WVIL Schedule

WVIL, launched a new program schedule Monday.

Certain parts of the schedule were under heavy debate when originally suggested. A problem arose whether the Jazz Show or Encore should be presented in the late evening.

It was then proposed that Encore be eliminated from the schedule, but the program was saved by a voice vote.

It was also decided that the Jazz Show would precede Encore.

Bob Rafano, the station's public relations director, told the VILLANOVAN that the schedule change is an attempt to better suit the tastes of the students.

"We have tried to schedule the best programs at the best hours. For instance, in the evening hours we shall present the music that is most conducive to study."

Rafano also noted that the new schedule provides the station with an additional hour and a quarter a week air time.

Bryn Mawr Prof Talks Here Tonight

The Philosophy Department will hold the second in its series of seminars tonight in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Dr. Donald A. Gallagher, Vice Chairman of the Philosophy Department, announced that the speaker will be Professor Milton C. Nahm, Chairman of the Philosophy Department at Bryn Mawr College.

Professor Nahm's topic will be "Aesthetic Criticism". The lecture will be illustrated with colored slides.

Professor Nahm is noted for his many publications in the field of Ancient Philosophy as well as those in aesthetics.

Discussion Halted

When it appeared that debate might go on endlessly, Gerry Hepburn moved to limit discussion, but comprise was not reached, and a deadlock resulted. Tom Hoffman's motion to refer the dispute to committee was gratefully passed.

Murphy said it will be the job of the committee to decide who will write the report, what form it will take, and when during the year it will be issued. It was generally felt that the work will be in pamphlet form and will be issued as the school year closes, in April or May.

A motion made by Joe Mason that the Council do something about the drastic phone shortage in Sheehan Hall was passed.

Mason said that only eight phones presently serve 450 residents of the hall. Steps will be taken to investigate the chances of securing another eight.

A unanimous vote approved Sheldon Pollock's motion that an agency be set up to enable the application for senior car privileges to be made at the end of Junior year so that notification can be given during the summer vacation.

Hynes Presents Bouquets To Stars of Spanish Night

The Spanish Club celebrated its annual "Noche Espanola" last Friday in the Vasey Hall auditorium before several hundred students.

Benjamin Hynes, president of the club, thanked all who participated in the show and presented flowers to each female member of the cast.

The night featured both a musical and a literary program. The musical program included popular Spanish songs sung by members of the Spanish Club, a tenor solo of "Granada" sung by the Rev. Policarpo Oroz, O.S.A., and "El Relicario" sung by Judith Rodriguez, mezzo-soprano from Cabrini College.

Two piano solos were featured at the celebration. Narciso Gandara played "La Malaguena" by Lecuona and Kenneth MacGillivary, president of Villanova Singers, presented Ballad in G Minor by Chopin.

A one act tragic-comedy, "A Matrimonial Secret Called Poison," was presented by a cast of seven students, representing Spain and Latin America.

Three members of the cast were Villanova students and four were from Rosemont.

A number of distinguished guests were present in the audience. Among them were the Spanish Consul in Philadelphia, Dr. Jose Ramon Sobredo, and several other cossuls representing Latin American countries.

Navy Students Visit Pittsburgh, Study Atom Plant

Forty-five Naval engineering students flew to Pittsburgh last Thursday to visit the nation's first commercial atomic reactor in Shippingport, Pennsylvania.

Under the direction of Corps Commander Captain John W. Higgins, Jr., the group left Willow Grove Airport at 10:00 in a Navy Skymaster for the Shipingport plant just northwest of Pittsburgh.

The reactor, which is similar to the power plant on the submarine Nautilus, afforded the Villanova Midshipmen an opportunity to see atomic energy in action. The group recently completed their study of atomic propulsion systems, part of the Naval engineering course.

The Shippenport reactor is a pressured water type and was completed late in 1957. It was built by the Westinghouse Corporation and financed by the Atomic Energy Commission and the Duquesne Power and Light Company.

O'Toole to Discuss Law School Requirm'ts

A meeting of the Pre-Law Society will be held at 10.30 tomorrow morning in room 209 Commerce and Finance building.

The entrance requirements for law school will be discussed by Thomas J. O'Toole, assistant Dean of Villanova Law School.

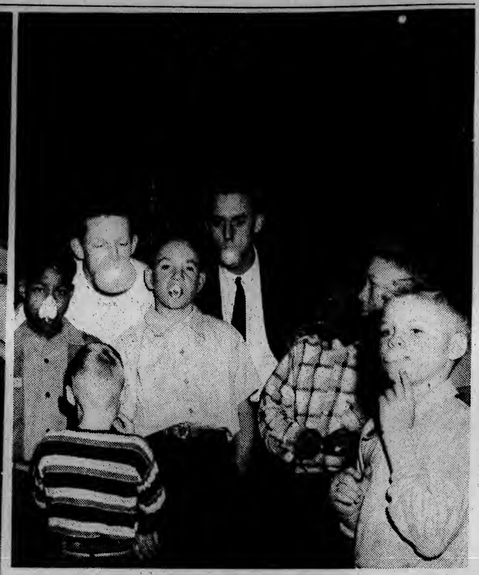
Philosophers Form Discussion Group

The Department of Philosophy has announced the formation of a club which will provide several forums for the discussion of philosophical problems.

The purpose of the organization is to discuss and consider more thoroughly questions and viewpoints that may be treated only briefly in class.

Engineering Dean Examines Power

J. Stanley Morehouse, dean of engineering, and William J. Murphy, instructor of mechanical engineering, recently joined more than 40 other deans and professors as guests of the Philadelphia Power and Light Company and the Westinghouse Electric Corporation.



The professors, representing 29 eastern colleges and universities met in Pittburgh where they were given a firsthand look at progress in developing atomic energy.

A bubble blowing contest was big fun for the kids from St. John's at last Saturday's Orphan Outing, but it was only a small part of the day's activities. In all, the Orphans visited Toyland and Santa Claus at Lit Brothers, had lunch, and saw a movie.

Debaters Fourth, Corey Ranks High

Villanova's debating team finished fourth in the St. Joseph's College tournament in November.

Representing Villanova against 30 other colleges were Beta Gamma president Jim Corey, Dominic Costa, Frank Cunningham and Oz Scogna.

Corey ranked 12th among 144 debators in the tourney. He and Costa comprised one of four undefeated teams.

Ron Anderson, Mark Quinn, Joe Ligerra, and Gene Daquilla represented Villanova at the University of Delaware tournament late in the month. The team gained third place there.

Corey attributes much of the success of the debating team this year to the research committee of freshman nurses, Mary Francis Kleha, Catherine Rucker, Judy DeStefano and Judy Jones.

Jack Serafin, senior Arts major, is now heading a constitution committee in the society.

Recent Red Defeats

Two recent European elections have registered resounding defeats for the voices of Communism.

Monday's election in Berlin saw a resounding turnout vote a vigorous 'no' to backers of Premier Khruschev's proposal to drive the Western nations out of the City.

Mayor Willy Brandt, Socialist leader, was easily reelected as the Communists failed to win a seat in the Berlin City Council.

Also remarkable was the size of the vote. Of 2.2 million eligible to vote, more than 1.6 cast ballots. Something there for Americans to learn.

In last week's French Parliament elections, Communists received a sound defeat. Their parliamentary leader, Jacques Duclos, was upset and the Red vote in the French Assembly was reduced.

Premier Charles deGaulle and his right wing backers are apparently reaping the results of strong determined leadership.

DeGaulle, since he took over control of government in what was a politically ludicrous country, has fashioned a direct foreign policy and has rarely wavered from it.

International leaders might well try the political philosophy of the French leader: decide where you ought to stand and then stand there.

A Plea For Sanity

The traditional plea for safety on the highways is traditionally disregarded.

After all, John Public reasons. I've never been in an automobile accident. I am a safe driver.

Yet each year, we see the grim prediction of the National Safety Council made valid by carelessness, which in fact is homicide on the highways.

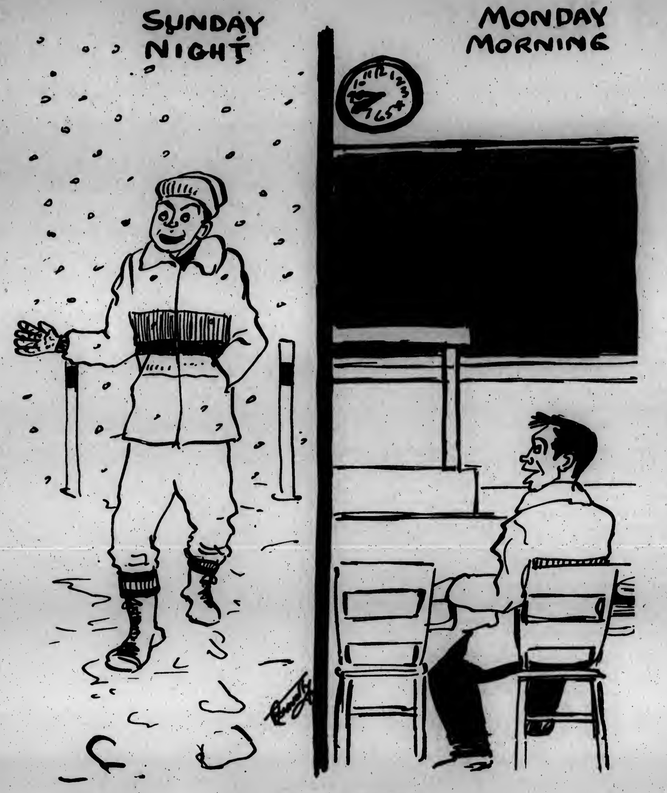
Highway fatalities reach their highest mark during the holiday season, largely, the Safety Council says, because of that extra speed to get home faster.

An annual four hundred persons with the heavy foot on the accelerator never get home at all.

Villanova students like thousands all over the nation will set out for home next week. A word of caution to the college student shouldn't be necessary, but it is: Drive safely, we want you back.

Augustinian Dance

A well planned "Mistletoe Dance" for the benefit of the Augustinian Seminary Guild has been scheduled for later this month.



Elsewhere in this issue we have devoted a page to the dance and the real and essential reason behind it: to raise money for the educatiton of young men for the priesthood. There is nothing else that so deserves the support of Villanova students.

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Although at times I have disagreed with the content of certain articles in the Villanovan, I have never seen such trash as your currently completed series on "French Students." It seems that all one has to do to gain expression on the Villanovan's pages is go somewhere, anywhere!

What you don't seem to realize is, that the people who go should also be taken into consideration. They should be observed, have a certain insight which can't be gained from any history book or picture catalogue.

The author, in my opinion, is merely a superficial passerby, who didn't really see into France or the French people, but merely photographed images and was allowed to unleash them on the Villanova reading public.

Only a surface observer could have come up with such imagery as the uncleanliness of the French students. This, in my estimation, was in very poor taste.

My criticism lies not only with the author, but with the editors who allowed his views to gain print. Either you (addressing the editors) are desperate for material, or you are lacking in good taste.

If the first point is true, I suggest that you leave the pages empty rather than print such trash, and if the latter is the case, I believe you should resign your positions.

Solution: Pizza and Beer

By LARRY O'ROURKE

"This country and its martini conscious citizens are going downhill in one very rapid pace," said the Loudest at a small gathering I attended recently.

"The mark of normality on the New York City-suburbia commuter trains is no longer determined by what magazine you conspicuously carry, but the number of pain deadeners, both physical and spiritual, you imbibe during the homeward journey.

"Doesn't it somewhat alarm you to see some college students, who are supposedly the future guardians of our freedom, find the greatest of pleasure in discussing how much alchohol and sex they can take?"

The Practical interrupted here. "Alarmists have been saying the same things you have been saying for thousands of years. Anyway, what difference does it make? You can't change human nature."

"And besides that," here spoke the Mechanic, "what good does spouting off about the world's problems do? People are going to sin just the same."

"You guys make me sick," said the previously silent Worker. "College students think they can solve every problem."

The Loudest here regained the floor. "Don't you think each particular person has a role in life?"

"The role of life for everybody is to mind his own business and let the rest of the world be damned as long as he can save himself," said the Mechanic.

"I say, let the next guy go to Hell if he wants to, while I sweat it out for myself."

"But is that what we as sensible human beings are supposed to do," interrupted the Loudest. "Don't we have a moral responsibility to help the morally underprivileged?"

"Like I said before," shouted the Mechanic, looking up from his sports magazine, "we only gotta look out for ourselves."

"That's pragmatism, it's: I look out for me and who cares about the other guy," screamed the Loudest. "Man as a member of the human race must act in regard to certain ends; unless he is cognizant of the common good, his own particular good is pointless. Read your philosophy book."

"Philosophy," shuddered the Practical, "just a lot of words that prove nothing. There's no place for a philosopher in this world. Everybody's got to look out for himself."

"Pizza and beer, let's go get some," said the Mechanic, laying aside his sports magazine.

"What is the purpose of your own particular life? Why are you alive," asked the Loudest as the four filed out the front door. "What is the 'why' of your existence?"

I sat with poised pencil waiting for an answer. None came, just a loud laugh. I slowly closed my notebook and joined the crowd.

A New History o f Jazz

By ANDREW F. NAPOLI

I suppose that those reading the title of this article will, at once, envisage florid, drooling accounts of that abominable form of music—Dixieland. This I mention for those attendants of Villanova's so-called "Jazz Concerts" who delight in considering Dixieland as the zenith of musical perfection.

Prepare, you Louis Armstrong lovers,—for the illusion will be shattered as thoroughly as Wilbur de Paris shattered my eardrum. My only references to Dixieland will be in passing as the forerunner for the new sound —Modern and Progressive jazz. In this respect, only, do I bow humbly to New Orleans.

Much has been written and said about the beginnings of jazz. It started in New Orleans at the turn of the century, gained momentum through Chicago and Kansas City in the 1920's and 1930's and we are now at its present, and perhaps, final product.

New You Has Jazz

Few people, however, know what modern jazz really is. Many think that a few select musicians playing "a volonte," or at will, for the sole purpose of discord constitutes jazz. Jazz may be defined as that form of musical improvisation based on self-expression.

Swing, Dixieland, and Bop are forms of jazz, but only as the nuclei upon which the end product has grown. Being self-expression from improvisation, jazz excludes Classical music, as well as Rock and Roll. Note the omission of music from Rock and Roll since any such addition would certainly be a misnomer. Classical music must be excluded because the score must be adhered to in order to keep the composer's theme unmolested. Rock and Roll will not even be considered because of its distorted relationship to any art.

Having said what jazz is and what it is not, I will proceed to the haven of the nonconformists, the extremists and the free-thinkers. I make reference to Modern and Progressive jazz.

Pity the Poor Progressives

Of the two, Progressive has been the most attacked. Many historians of music attribute this form of music's origin to Bach, the inventor and greatest user of counterpoint. Counterpoint is the art of arranging one or more parts in harmony with the melody. This is the essence of Progressive music. Why, then, is it so vigorously attacked when Bach is held in such high esteem,

The most feasible answer to one main theme or melody, is that where Bach adhered Progressive starts with one melody and invents many melodies in the process. Whatever the answer, Progressive may be considered as being at the extreme point on the musical scale.

Modern jazz is not unlike Progressive in many respects. But, Modern jazz is based on the theme of a composition with variations and interposes intermixed throughout the structure. Where Progressive loses the melody by its transformation, Modern is very much concerned with the overall theme since the musicians try to surround the composition with outbursts of their own feelings on what it should entail.

Jazz has three relationships to the original score. Progressive loses the original and goes off on tangents (witness Brubeck.) Modern encompasses the other two relationships. A jazz player may surround the melody with lavish chord structures or he may forget the treble clef and play something in its place but always keeping the bass clef alive as the dominant factor. Where Progressive is potentially unlimited, Modern is slightly re-

Rice's 'Hamlet' Shows Many Cues, Little Passion

By BILL GALLAGHER

GALLAGHER

When Elmer Rice was in Philadelphia with his latest play "Cue for Passion", he repeatedly denied that this, his work for the past year, had been written as a modern-day version of "Hamlet". He insisted that it was a separate entity, conceived by him not as an imitation of that great tragedy but rather as a completely new work; one that he hoped would be very well received critically and as a consequence, financially. "Cue for Passion" is "Hamlet" sans bloodshed, death and paradoxically, vitality. It is unexciting, undramatic and for all of its literate dialogue quite boring and disappointing.

It would take a while to list the similarities to "Hamlet". A son is away from home when his father dies amidst rather dubious circumstances. The son returns, finds his mother not only out of mourning but also recently married to a long-time friend of the family.

There is an Ophelia-type girl who is pure and understanding; a Horatio-type friend to the bothered youth; a doctor that bears every resemblance to Polonious. There are ghost scenes and scenes wherein mother and son have it out hot and heavy. Also, the doctor is wounded through a curtained area. For all that Rice has borrowed, he has managed to fashion merely a two and a half hour talkathon.

Freudian Overtones

The deadly clinical atmosphere is furthered when, toward the end of the first act, we are given hints that this sulking boy is in love with his mother. Here poor Freud is again dug up and dusted off for another day in the sun; indeed, he is more up than down these days. The feeling is now prevalent that instead of watching a play, we are sitting in on a very personal case history.

We know this boy is a moody brat from his first entrance. He has lines such as these: "I slept fine until the mocking birds started to mock me" or "I'm skipping dinner". He is full of self-pity and is uncooperative from the moment he enters the airy, spacious summer house after having written ahead that he would "be at your house" to his mother.

Here, then, is a character in a situation not dissimilar to Hamlet's who doesn't possess any nobility or arouse any pity. One can't feel pity for this anti-social adolescent who vents his resentment on everyone around him and on various topics: two car garages, singing in choirs, "making roads for coolies to get in to see "C" Hollywood pictures".

"Be Free"

We know from a faithful maid what has made him this way; But now what shall be done with him? In an overly neat and simplified ending, the mother sends sonny off with these words: "Be free. Be strong. Live, and never come back here."

As delivered by that supreme actress, Diana Wynyard, the words seem to take on some importance. She has several fine moments when showing anger with her son's accusations but, on the whole, is wasted in this role. It is quite some time since Broadway has seen Anne Revere. In this play she is reduced to making numerous entrances and to carrying off tray after tray. She manages to make this appear consequential. John Kerr, as the very troubled son, does well. He is on virtually from the middle of the first scene to the end of the last. His voice wears on one's nerves whenever he raises it, but in a taxing and difficult role, he sometimes conveys a feeling of deep inner struggle. Lloyd Gough, Russell Gaige, Robert Lansing and Joanna Brown complete a cast that stands far above its material.

Director and Author

George Jenkins has designed the lovely living room-garden setting which has a look of classic beauty. Elmer Rice the director fares better than Elmer Rice the playwright. The action moves smoothly, if at times too slowly.

When Shakespeare borrowed for thematic material he brought many original touches to the work, and these, coupled with his poetry, made it possible for everyone to overlook his shortcoming. Mr. Rice has not brought much imagination to this new "Hamlet". The result is an obvious and repetitious piece of writing which has psychological overtones and no dramatic impact. It is borrowed and pretentious work.

Cloudy Crystal Ball Consulted, Political Potentials Predicted

By J. P. KELLY

The recent state - federal elections had an incalculable effect on the American political scene. Republicans realized that they will suffer defeat in '60 unless they exercise strong leadership. The Democrats, on the other hand, are fearful of complacency. New York voters made Rockefeller the glamor boy of the G.O.P. Jack Kennedy remains the Democratic charmer, but is challenged by Governor-elect Pat Brown of California.

I count both Rockefeller and Kennedy out as Presidential nominees; Rockefeller because of his name which symbolizes millions and Kennedy because of religion. The American people will not elect a millionaire of the Rockefeller calibre to the Presidency principally because they do not consider him one of their own.

His inheritance causes him to be regarded as a daddy-made man which is certainly not a Presidential asset. However, Nelson's personal charm and his control of the New York delegation at the convention will be enough to gain for him the nod for Vice-President.

A Catholic Veep?

Political chiefs are not ready to gamble on a Catholic Presidential candidate because of newspaper controversy as to whether such a person could win. This factor vitiates the chances of Kennedy and Brown. I predict, however, that the Democrats will run a Catholic for Vice-President, namely Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts. If the Republicans should at the last moment decide to do the same thing, it will probably be Secretary of Labor James Mitchell.

Adlai Stevenson and Estes Kefauver are also to be counted out as Democratic candidates. With regard to Stevenson the cry will be—Remember Bill Bryan—the politicians not wanting to take a chance on a two time loser. I do not doubt, however, that should the Democrats win, Adlai will be offered the coveted post of Secretary of State. Kefauver's crime busting is almost forgotten and he will be busy enough campaigning for the Senate without trying for the Presidency.

Senator Joe Clark of Pennsylvania is a possible compromise candidate and has started to make his bid. Bob Meyner of New Jersey is working hard for the nomination. He has advantages in that he is politically compatible and an excellent Governor.

Symington Looks Best

My bet at this time is on Sen. Stuart Symington of Missouri. He will probably come to the convention with the support of Harry S. Truman which alone might be enough to gain for him the nomination. Missouri was a border state during the Civil War and still is, with regard to the current Democratic policy crisis on integration and civil rights. Selecting a nominee from this state might help to weld the party together and thus prevent a Southern walkout.

Symington was formerly the Secretary of the Air Force and seems to be the best educated Senator regarding problems of national defense, which will be an important campaign issue.

A Nod for Nixon

Vice-President Nixon remains the strong man in the G.O.P. He endeared himself to the people by his conduct during the Venezuelan episode. His ability is recognized universally and he is considered the most qualified Republican simply because of his tenure as Vice-President. The one count against him is the Knowland-Knight mess in California; the fact that his home state is Democratic might have severe repercussions at the convention. Nixon's biggest advantage—the probable support of President Eisenhower.

It is my prediction that November 1960 will see Symington and Kennedy winning over Nixon and Rockefeller in a landslide. If the Republican Party wants to prevent it, they must reorganize themselves drastically. They must start by breaking tradition and choose a liberal Senate Minority Leader.

Guild Aids Augustinian Seminarians

In the labors of the Augustinian Fathers, the Founder, Saint Augustine himself, is the type and the ideal. Of his work in the African Church it can be said that the outstanding characteristic is its universality.

He did not confine himself to one kind of service, but he adapted his life to the work which was needed by the Church at the time.

Thus to combat the heresies of the day he wrote books, debated with the arch-heretics and preached learned discourses. To instruct the catechumens and neophytes, he taught catechism and developed a system of his own to bring the truths of the Faith down to the level of the uneducated.

Model Homiles

To help his own flock he preached simple little homilies which are models of their kind. For the sciences of philosophy and theology he wrote treatises which have been and will continue to be, the foundations of Christian scholarship.

Yet all the while he was living the life of a religious with his monks and priests, and was devoting a great part of his time to the task of leading his brethren toward the higher spiritual life.

It goes without saying that all the Saint's labors were subordinate to the one central ideal of his life—growth in holiness, deepening of his knowledge and love of God.

Do All Works

Similarly the Augustinians have given themselves to the promotion of all the works of the Church. They were not, as other Orders were, founded for some particular labor such as the redemption of captives, the care of the sick, the conversion of some race.

In the history of the Order, we find the Brethren teaching in the universities, preaching missions and crusades, conducting parishes and schools, evangelizing the pagans of foreign lands.

There were Augustinian professors at Oxford and Paris in the Middle Ages. Augustinian missioners accompanied the Spanish mariners to Mexico, the Philippine Islands and Japan in the sixteenth century. There are Augustinian monastaries in Ireland which have been doing parochial work in the same place since the thirteenth century.

Many Saints

Most important of all, the Augustinian spirit has succeeded in the principal purpose of its existence—the formation of Saints. Names like St. Thomas of Villanova, Saint Rita of Cascia, St. Nicholas of Tolentine, St. John Facundo, St. Clare of Montefalco and a host of Blessed men and women give eloquent testimony of this fact.

To all these the Augustinian of today looks for inspiration and assistance, conscious of the fact that the same Rule which made them Saints can lead him to the same holy ideal.

Above all, it is to the Blessed Mother of God, venerated for centuries by the Order under the titles of Mother of Good Counsel, Mother of Consolation, Mary of the Divine Maternity, that the Augustinian turns for counsel and solace. It is through her that the Augustinian leads the faithful in parish-States from Ireland in 1794. They established themselves first in Philadelphia, where Old St. Augustine's Church was completed in 1801.

From there the Fathers engaged in missionary work along the eastern seaboard, and it was as the result of this labor that parishes o fthe Order were founded in Pennsylvania, New York and Massachusetts.

In 1842 Villanova College was founded; this was the first of a series of educational establishments which now include two universities, a college, four seminaries and twelve high schools.

Band Based Here

In addition to the parochial and educational work of the Fathers, there are our Missions. For over fifty years there has been an Augustinian Mission Band with headquarters at Villanova. Just three years ago a mission was opened by the two American Provinces at Nagasaki in Japan.

It was not the first time that the habit of the Order was seen in this great city of Nippon. In the sixteenth century Spanish Fathers found their way there from the Philippines, and in the terrible persecution which closed that Mission for three hundred years many Augustinians gave their lives for the Faith.

The labors of the American Augustinians are therefore quite diversified, and it is according to his talents and aptitudes that the young priest is assigned to work in which he can best serve God.

Four Seminaries

For the preparation necessary for this apostolate the Province of St. Thomas maintains four seminaries. The Juniorate is at Clove Road and Howard Avenue, Staten Island, New York.

All applications for entrance into the Order should be sent to the Very Reverend Rector of this preparatory school.

The Novitiate of Our Mother of Good Counsel is at New Hamburg, New York. After the year of novitiate the young professed cleric enters the collegiate, St. Mary's Hall, Villanova, Pennsylvania. Finally, his course of studies ends with Theology at Augustinian College, Washington, D. C.

Father Kiernan Has Served In High Schools, Colleges

Reverend Benjamin J. Kiernan, O.S.A. the new Director of the Augustinian Seminary Guild, was born in Long Branch, N. J. He received parochial school training in the Star of the Sea School and graduated from Red Bank Catholic High School in 1932.

Entering the Augustinian Order in September, 1935, he graduated from Villanova University in the Class of 1940. His theological course was taken at Catholic University, Washington, D. C., and he was ordained at the Trinity College Chapel May 29, 1943.

REV. BENJAMIN KIERNAN, O.S.A.
Guild Director

Father received a Master of Arts Degree from Catholic University June, 1944.

He has served as school chaplain at St. Augustine High School, San Diego, California, and Villanova Prep School, Ojai, California.

He has served as Dean of Discipline at Archbishop John Carroll High School, Washington, D. C., and Monsignor Bonner High School, Drexel Hill, Pa. He also founded the Father and Son Association at Monsignor Bonner.

Father has served on the Faculty of the Catholic University of America, Mount Saint Mary's College, Los Angeles, California, and Villanova University.

On August 15, 1958 Mount Saint Mary's College, Los Angeles, conferred upon Father the honor of Doctor of Laws.

When Father was appointed Director of the Augustinian Seminary Guild in September of this year, he also assumed the positions of Provincial Director of Vocations and Local Director of the Pious Union of Our Mother of Good Counsel.

Dance Slated At Villanova December 28

The Augustinian Seminary Guild presents the "Mistletoe Dance," a scholastic dance in a collegiate setting, in the Villanova field house, Sunday December 28, at 8 p.m.

Dancing will be to the Mike Pedicin band. Also featured will be Decca recording artists the "Four Aces," as well as WRCV's disc jockeys Grady and Hurst and Jack Rattigan and his Rascals, along with many other stars who will be in the area at the time of the dance!

There will be many prizes awarded, among them autographed records. The admission will be $3 per couple.

"The Mistletoe Dance" is for the benefit of the Augustinian Seminary Guild, the organization of the Augustinian Order which raises funds to help defray the expenses of the education of students to the priesthood.

Psychologically speaking, jazz expresses the musicians' personality, his psyche, his person. Ethically speaking, it is the means to an end. The means is improvisation.

Intrabartolo, Morra Given Grid Awards

The most successful Wildcat football team in recent years was honored at the football banquet last Monday at the Penn-Sherwood Hotel. This was the 37th such affair sponsored by the Villanova Club of Philadelphia to honor the squad for a job well done.

The team in general was congratulated on their impressive record. Among the speakers was the Very Rev. James Donnelon, O.S.A., Villanova's President, who quoted Lt. Gen. Garrison H. Davidson, West Point Superintendent, as saying after the Army game, that "Villanova was the best team Army had played up to that time."

Several stars of this Wildcat team were singled out for their outstanding play. The Cyril J. Burke Award went to tackle Paul Morra for being the most consistent performer. The National Alumni Award for the most valuable player, went to halfback Dave Intrabartolo. Guard Mike DeLucia representing the co-captains Gene O'Pella, Bill Craig and himself, received the Martin J. McLaughlin Award.

As in the past, the Villanova Loyalty Award for the most devoted alumnus was presented at the dinner. This year the honor was given to Dr. James P. Quindlan '28.

Dr. Quindlan is an instructor in obstetrics and gynecology at the Philadelphia Medical Center. The doctor has contributed much in the way of time and money to the University, and has been influential in attracting many athletes to Villanova.

WRCV Sportscaster Jim Bonner, no stranger to those who listened to Villanova games, was master of ceremonies. A special award was presented by head coach Frank Reagan, to Earl Eby, Philadelphia BULLETIN sportswriter, for "25 years of loyal reporting of Villanova sports."

Joe Ryan In New Shooting Role

By JIM MURRAY

"The coach says there are two big 'ifs' as far as the Villanova basketball is concerned. If we get the boards and if I shoot the team will be assured of success." these are the words of Joe Ryan, captain of the '58 'Cats.

There was clear proof for the statement in the team's 83-67 decision over LeMoyne. Villanova dominated the boards and Joe poured in 26 points, hitting on 12 of 15 shots from the floor.

This is the story of Joe Ryan, who led the Philadelphia Catholic League in scoring in his sophomore and junior years at St. Joseph's Prep and was runner up in his senior year to a South Catholic player named Jim Grazione (maybe you have heard of him).

Joe says, "The big difference between high school and college ball is that in high school one or two stars could make a team a winner but in college all five men on the team have to be stars. You learn to think and to pick up the fine points, such as anticipating a player's movements and getting into position before he makes it. College competion is the greatest."

No Let-downs

Joe, as the captain of this year's team, has certain responsibilities "I have to be sort of a disciplinarian, although the club doesn't need one. I have to inspire the guys and pass on my experience. This is the main thing, to guard against let downs and to keep the proper attitude present. It is a great honor to be captain and I am thankful for it."

The big mystery around Joe Ryan is the reason behind his failure to shoot. Joe gets pretty tired of everybody throwing this at him but he explained and analyzed the problem. "I have been bringing the ball down for the past two years and when I get down there if I would take a shot I would look like a one man team."

Joe isn't the ball player who wants to be a one man team so he doesn't pump, gun or throw the ball up every time he gets his hands on it. Rather he passes off, sometimes even when he should take the shot. This is, or was, Joe's problem, a problem that he has solved.

Joe Hits Ten in a Row

Let's reconstruct the LeMoyne game. The first half was close and Joe passed off two or three shots that he should have taken. Coach Al Severance then decided to give Joe a "rest".

"The coach told me I had made mistakes and I hate to sit on the bench so when I got back in I was determined not to make any." said Joe. He proved his point ten straight times as he shot and played so well that he made the game a rout. "I didn't even realize it. I remember looking up at the scoreboard and we were up by seven the next time I looked up we were up by twenty-two."

Here is the difference—Joe went back into the game and everyone was doing his own job. George Raveling and John Driscoll were controlling the boards, Kenny and Huggard were moving and passing the ball. Joe now had his job to do.

"Jim Kenny kept hollering to me, 'Get over here and take the ball, take the ball.' Jimmy Huggard was breaking his back to help me out. In fact one time, after one of Jim's great passes, I looked around and he was laughing. Some guys would get sore if they didn't do all the scoring themselves."

It's His Job

Joe Ryan didn't have the time to think about being a one man team because the ball was being moved up court too fast and when he had a shot he took it. "The coach has me convinced I have to shoot; it's my job."

As for Joe's own predictions, he'll take each game as it comes along—the big ones will all be rough games on the road and in his own words, "There are no weak teams or easy games in the city series, it's like the Army-Navy football game. You can throw the records away."

Pete Dawkins, Ted Dean Lead All-Opponent Team

Two backs and a lineman were chosen unanimously to the 1958 Villanova All-Opponent football team. The three unanimous selectees were Army's captain, Pete Dawkins; Wichita's fullback, Ted Dean, and Detroit's middle guard, Dick Kennedy.

Dawkins, Army's all-everything, was also selected as the most outstanding player faced by the squad. The vote on this question was one-sided as Dawkins received all but one of the votes cast. The other vote selected Roland Lakes, the huge center from Wichita. This vote was cast by the Wildcats center, Tom Fletcher, who faced Lakes all night.

The other selectees for the squad consisted of ends Bruce Shenk, West Chester; and Don Usry, Army's not-so-lonesome end. The tackle positions were manned by Jim McFalls of V. M. I. and Emil Karas of Dayton. Bob Novogratz of Army's unbeaten spuad, was chosen as Kennedy's running mate at the guard slot, while Lakes compiled more votes than any of the other center candidates to notch that position easily.

The All-Opponent backfield aside from Dawkins and Dean, had Joe Caldwell of Army at the quarterback spot, and in the vote for Dawkin's running mate, a deadlock occurred making a five man backfield. The deadlocked two consisted of Pete Johnson of V. M. I. and Harry Jefferson, Quantico's stellar halfback out of Illinois.

Army, as a team, had more individuals placed on the team. The first team consisted of four Army men, while both Wichita and V. M. I. placed two men on the team. West Chester, Detroit, Dayton and Quantico all placed one member on the team.

Players who received honorable mention were Ends—Don Tosi, Boston College; Bill Carpenter, Army, and Dennis Flynn, Detroit; tackles—Steve Bennett, Boston College; Grady Alderman and John Dingens, both of Detroit; guards—Tony Stemic, Quantico; centers—Bob Oswandel, Army, and Chet Poirier, Boston College; backs—Bill Nebraska and Sam Horner, both of V. M. I.; Bill Brown, Jim Colclough, and Alan Miller, all of Boston College; Jack Wendland, West Chester; Bruce Maher, Detroit, and Don Laaksonen, Quantico.

Jizz A.C. Wins Intramurals

By DENNIS CARDONE

Playing without star quarterback Richie Haines, the East Wingers were narrowly defeated by Jizz A. C. in the 1958 Intermural Football Championship game on last Monday.

Jim Tarsey swept around left end behind solid blocking after taking a hand-off from quarterback Don Brass to pick up a first down which provided the winning margin for Jizz A. C. in the tense battle on Austin Field in sub freezing temperature.

This play gave the new champ a 4-3 lead in first downs and proved to be the winning margin.

Tarsey's run came with less than five minutes to play, with the score tied at 7-7, both teams having tallied on pass plays.

The East Wingers held after Tarsey picked up the first down. Sub quarterback Mike Lombardo attempted to tie the game with a desperation pass but Jizz A. C.'s Duke Goodwin intercepted and Jizz A. C. ran out the clock.

Haines' Absence Hurts

The runners up were hampered by the absence of Haines, who had been their top performer all year. Haines ,who along with his brother Bob, has signed a $50,000 baseball contract with the Philadelphia Phillies, had not returned from the Thanksgiving vacation because of illness.

But Mike Lombardo, normally a halfback in the Eastwingers lineup, filled in capably, completing a pass to roomate Hank Ferendo for the first touchdown in the game. The Summit, N. J., ace, who was once a member of the varsity squad, tossed to Jack Wassmer for the extra point.

The champs, however, were not to be denied in this, their fourth try for the Villanova title. They scored late in the second half on a crucial last down play.

Quarterback Brass rolled out to the right and threw a diagonal pass to massive Matt Brennan who went into the endzone and made the score 7-6. Brass rolled out again and hit Tarsey in the endzone to tie the score.

Cahill Standout on Line

Much of the credit for the victory is due the hard-charging Jizz A. C. line, which pressed the East Wingers' backfield. Jack Cahill, in particular, led the charge on Lombardo when the Wingers were attempting to gain the tying first down.

The contest was the culmination of two months of rugged intramural action and ever tougher championship play. Strong contenders such as Joe's Jets and the Emanons were beaten in the quarterfinals; a clear indication that this was, in the words of an intramural official, "one of the finest years in our history."

The East Wingers moved the championship round when they pushed across a score late in the second half to beat a rough DPM team in the semi-finals.

The new champions drew a bye in that round.

Eagles Draft Graz In Third Round

Quarterback Jim Grazione was drafted by his hometown Philadelphia Eagles in the third round of the Pro Football draft at Philadelphia's Warwick Hotel.

The Eagles selected Graz only a few days after his great performance in the Gem City game at Erie, Pa.

'Cats Meet Siena At Penn Tonight Seek Third Win

By TOM TROY

The Villanova Wildcats, whose basketball has flickered as much as the Palestra's lighting system, eek their third win of the season tonight when they meet Siena College in the second game of a double-header at Penn's Palestra.

Siena has dropped its first two games this year, surprising rebuilding Canisius before losing, 56-54, then bowing to Army and Darryl Kouns, 77-57. Most recently, Siena pulled out a close decision over Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

In its first two breathers, Villanova hemmed and hawed throughout most of the game, playing only about ten minutes of good ball in each game, but this was enough to wallop LeMoyne, 83-67 and trounce Philadelphia Textile, 76-48.

In the delayed-by darkness opener at the Palestra, fantastic shooting by the "new" Joe Ryan and strong rebounding by 6-8 John Driscoll and 6-6 George Raveling were the big highlights.

Close At Halftime

Numerous ball-handling mistakes by Villanova and strong outside shooting by Le Moynee's Bob Hollenback and Denny Morrissey kept the Dolphins in contention throughout most of the first half. Villanova, mainly through soph Jim Kenny's shooting and Raveling's scoring and rebounding, was able to open up an 11-point spread at one time, but with Dick Mendza leading a late surge, Le Moyne cut the lead to 37-30 at halftime.

Le Moyne, well coached by Tom Niland, moved the ball well against Villanova's 1-2-2 zone defense, and, taking only sure shots, hit at better than 50 percent. The Wildcats, a little unsure of themselves at first, were allowing Le Moyne to get off easy shots from the pivot.

In the second half the Wildcats began to click. Or rather, Joe Ryan and Jim Huggard began to click. With 13 minutes remaining in and the score 53-46, Ryan exploded. He sank a set, a jump from the circle, and a driving layup off a great pass from Huggard. After a field goal by Dick Lynch, Le Moyne's high scorer with 20 points, Ryan hit on four more shots. His tenth consecutive shot, another layup, made the score 75-51.

Fast Break Works

In this flurry, the fast break, which everyone expects Villanova to exploit this year, worked to perfection. Huggard or his running mate Jim Kenny passed to Ryan for nearly every one of his scores, and the Wildcats looked like real class in this period.

Playing their first game in the Field House, the Wildcats were as erratic as they could be and still win. Throwing the ball around with wild abandon, they did their best to hand the game to Textile.

Only the fact that the Weavers (knit one, purl two) had nobody over 6-4 enabled the 'Cats to take a 38-24 halftime lead. Driscoll, displaying unexpected strength and great desire, and Raveling controlled both boards, but the Wildcats' shooting and ball-handling were atrocious.

A great drive in the middle of the second half enabled Villanova to overwhelm hoplessly out-classed Textile. From a 47-34 lead with 14 minutes to play, the Wildcats pulled away to 68-41 with five minutes left.

Shoots as Expected

Ryan, shooting as everyone who saw him at St. Joseph's Prep knew he could, paced the attack. Two spectacular drives by Huggard also featured this spurt.

Ryan (7 for 13 from the field) and Huggard led the Mainliners with 16 points apiece, but it was the fine poised performance of Driscoll that was the outstanding feature of this game.

Kenny Harrison, just recently re-instated, also played some good ball in this game, contributing ten points and rebounding well.

The chief fault of the Wildcats in these first two games was terrible foul shooting. Hitting only 18 of 38 in the Textile game, their percentage was but 49%. Jack Ramsey and Dudey Moore would love this.

Brief Flashes

But although Villanova did not play consistently good ball, there were flashes of brilliance in these first two games—enough to predict that this season should be a happy one.

Ryan indicated that he is ready to achieve stardom. Huggard, perhaps the most highly publicized sophomore in Villanova's history, contributed only nine points in the first game, but his ten assists against LeMoyne were real eye-openers.

Coach Al Severence joyfully proclaimed, "We'll no longer have to worry about blowing 12 or 17 point leads."

Raveling, 100% improved over last year, rebounded and scored in double figures both games, and the polish he acquired over the summer was in evidence.

Driscoll Surprises

Driscoll is the biggest surprise of the young season. His playing summer ball with Huggard has apparently done wonders for "Tweedy," for his rebounding and aggressive defensive play were highlights of the games, and his potential for scoring is good.

Jim Kenny, former North Catholic star and winner of the Markward Award for 1956 as the outstanding high school player in Philadelphia, appears to be destined for stardom at V. U. also.

He perfectly complements the more spectactular, irrepressible Huggard with his steady play, and his defensive moves are leech-like (not to be taken in the approbrious context).

To sum up: the Wildcats were shoddy but promising, erratic but spectactular. They have a long way to go, but have the horses.

Temple Beats Frosh, 59-57, In Opener

By DENNIS CARDONE

The freshman basketball team opened its season last Thursday night, losing to the Temple frosh in a dramatic finish, 59-57.

The experts rated this Temple team one of the best in recent years. They lived up to their pre-season notices in the first half when the Villanova zone defense proved ineffective.

With leaping Warren Clifton throwing in jump shots and his teammate Joe Gordon spearing rebounds, the Owlets had as much as a ten-point lead at one stage of the first half.

White Paces Rally

Near the end of the half the scrappy Villanova five came back. Led by the all-round play of Hubie White, the game's high scorer with 23 points, the Villanovans narrowed the margin to 38-32 at the sound of the halftime buzzer.

In the second half, coach Al Severance had the squad switch to a man-for-man defense, which proved to be more effective than the zone.

The score was close during the second half with the lead changing hands several times. Hubie White, ramming opponents' shots, spearing rebounds, was the standout performer for the freshmen.

A capacity crowd also appreciated the hustle of former LaSalle High performer Jim McMonagle and the floor play of Dan Higgins, former West Catholic back court ace. Their play was not quite enough.

Drysdale Wins It

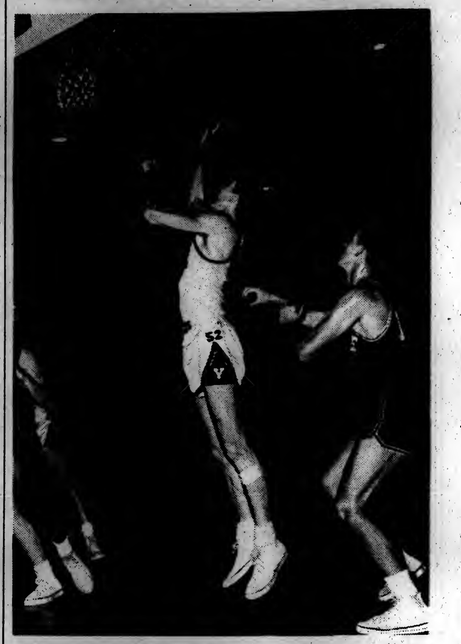
Going into the last two minutes the score was tied at 55-56. Villanova tried to hold the ball for a final shot but Bruce Drysdale, former Lincoln High star, stole the ball and broke away for an easy lay-up.

Villanova then brought the ball downcourt and fed it to White. He was fouled in his attempt for the tying basket, but Hubie could only convert one of the two shots, making the score 58-57.

Temple brought the ball up court and in the waning seconds Drysdale was fouled. He made the foulshot, his 20 point, and the game ended.

Rifle Team Wins

The Villanova varsity rifle team topped LaSalle last week, 1379 to 1360. It was Villanova's second match. Earlier this year the Wildcats defeated Penn State.



Captain Chris Kloss and junior Joe Polizzotto broke up what, up to the last two relays, had been a close contest by firing 279 and 277 respectively. Others who scored for Villanova were Lou Spevetz, 276; Charlie Russell, 274; and Frank Murtha, 273.

Luzzi in All-Pro Game

Don Luzzi, former All-American tackle at Villanova, has been selected to play in the Canadian All-Pro Game to be held in a few weeks.

Luzzi merited the position by virtue of his play with Calgary Stampeders, where he was named Canadian "lineman of the year."

Rebounders on Spree

Two Villanovans best known for their alert rebounding get into the scoring act. (above) John Driscoll hits for two as a LeMoyne defender looks helplessly on. (below) George Raveling literally stuffs one into the net.

Swimmers Upset Fordham

The Villanova swim team opened the '58 season by upsetting Fordham 53-32 at New York. The traveling 'Cat mermen took five first places, two of which came in the relays.

Villanova won the medley relay in which junior Frank Keefe turned in a very fine backstroke leg—swimming that distance in 1.03.5.

The freestyle relay was captured by Villanova when Fordham was disqualified for missing turns.

Villanova's individual winners were Jim Gregory, Frank Keefe, and Steve Carton.

Gregory won the 200 butterfly, co-captain Keefe won the backstroke in 2.26. Carton and junior Walt Uhlrick placed one-two in the diving event.

Fordham had two double winners, Cirigliano and Gallagher. Cirigliano won the 50 and 100 yard freestyle races.

Gallagher, United States 1600 meter record holder, won the 220 and the 440.

VILLANOVA TEMPLE TONIGHT (See Page 4)

VOL. 34—No. 10 VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. December 17, 1958

A Christmas Message

Nearly two thousand years ago, on the first Christmas morning, the shepherds heard the angels joyfully proclaim: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth Peace to men of good will."

Despite the turmoil and distress existing in so many places in the world, the people of every land yearn for lasting peace. To bring about that peace, surely there can be no greater contribution than a faithful observance by all of us of the principles and teachings laid down for us by the Prince of Peace.

The most sincere message I can offer to all Villanova men and women is the hope that the peace proclaimed by the angels on that first Christmas morning will descend upon them on this happiest of all days. Such will be my prayer for all Villanovans in the three masses I celebrate on Christmas day.

The angels announced the birth of Our Lord with great rejoicing because they knew what it signified. They -- and the Shepherds and the Magi -- recognized the infant as the Christ Child -- God promised centuries before. They meant intensely the words they uttered: "Glory to God in the highest." May all Villanovans echo that prayer and find God's kindest graces in reward.

A thoroughly holy and joyful Christmas to each one of you, to your parents and to all the dear ones of your family circle.

Chairman Named For Junior Prom, Band Not Picked Yet

Sheldon Pollock, junior class president, last week named several more chairmen to aid in planning the junior prom on May 1.

Speculation continued however on the band for the program. Recent reports on campus have listed several prominent musical organizations.

Pollock has denied however that a band has been signed. The rumors started when students recalled the mix-up of last year when the planners waited until too late to get a name band.

"That condition will not exist this year," Pollock said.

The class president had previously named several chairmen including Dan Spada, marketing major, and Larry Maucher, electrical engineer, prom co-chairmen; John Holas, chemical engineer, decorations chairman; Connell O'Donnell, psychology major, vice chairman.

Others named are Dave Hayes, Arts major, Lou Spevetz, pre-la- najor, Tom Perretti, political science major, Ed Olsen, marketing major, publicity and queen committees.

The entertainment committee is headed by Vic Manfridi, pre-law major, and Carlos LoVecchio, arts major. Dick Walsh, accounting major, will direct the refreshments committee, and George Fay, arts major along with Angelo DeMarco, pre-law major, will head the patrons committee. The art committee will be headed by Ed Paulsen, marketing major.

Russian Club Picks New Moderator

Dr. Victor Krupitsch, professor of Russian, has been appointed as moderator of the new Russian Language Club.

Robert A. Brothers, junior arts major, has been elected president, while Seen McArdle and Michael Kwiatowski, were named as the society's vice-president and secretary respectively.

Chin Named President of Penna. IRS

CLINTON CHIN

Clinton P. Chin, junior accounting major has been named president of the Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Clubs.

Chin announced last week that the International Relations Society will hold their Annual Convention tentatively on December 17-18, at the University of Pennsylvania.

Juniors Needed On Staffs Of Campus Publications

By PAUL A. BUCKLEY
Of The Villanovan Staff

Junior Class president Sheldon Pollock has launched a drive to interest juniors in student publications.

In an address to the class at a meeting two weeks ago, Pollock charged that junior participation in "staff work of the VILLANOVAN and BELLE-AIR has been practically non-existent.

"We cannot expect the high calibre of these publications to continue," Pollock said, "unless underclassmen train for next year's editorial positions.

"The situation is so severe," Pollock continued, "that there is a possibility that there will be no yearbook at all next year."

Publications Praised

Pollock praised the VILLANOVAN for its "continuing high quality" and said he anticipates another fine yearbook in May.

"If we as the class of 1960 are to have the same type publications we must begin to work immediately," the junior class president said.

Pollock warned juniors of assuming that others will take the burden. "Do not take the attitude others will do the work. We must do it or it will not get done."

Larry O'Rourke, editor of the VILLANOVAN, praised Pollock's efforts as "an action long needed in the junior class." O'Rourke said than any juniors interested in the student newspaper could apply to the office, second floor Dougherty Hall.

Application Form

A student editor is usually in the publications office and application blanks are available.

VILLANOVAN managing editor Jack Curtin and associate editor Tom Goldschmidt will also accept staff applications.

BELLE AIR editor Bob Pinto said the yearbook will receive underclass applications at the office, second floor Dougherty Hall. Other interviewing students are associate editor Bill Christy, feature editor Owen Klien and magazine editor Al Stoughton.

New Awards Are Planned at Graduation

The University has announced it will honor outstanding students at graduation time.

Indications of academic achievement will be listed on the diplomas of graduating seniors.

This was announced last week by the Rev. Joseph I. Boyle, O.S.A., vice president for academic affairs.

Honored seniors will now graduate summa cum laude, magna cum laude, and cum laude, Father Boyle explained.

The vice president hopes the change will act as encouragement to the undergraduates to participate more fully in academic affairs.

Graduation ceremonies in recent years have been devoid of any award giving other than to the honorary degree recipients and the actual handing out of diplomas.

In the past several years, the student body has been represented by only one speaker, designated as graduation speaker, at the ceremony.

Graduation exercises are usually held on the first Monday of June.

ICG Hears Dr. Nova

The Villanova chapter of the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Conference on Government had as its first speaker of the year Dr. Fritz Nova in the meeting of two weeks ago.

YEAR'S END

The VILLANOVAN will not appear again until next year. The next issue will be published on January 14, 1959.

Until then, the editors and staff wish their readers a happy and holy Christmas and a safe New Year.

N.Y. Alumni 2nd Annual Dance On December 26

George J. Pequignot, executive secretary of the Alumni Association, announced that the New York Club's second annual Christmas Dance will be held on Friday, December 26 at the Hotel Roosevelt.

The dance, which is being given for the benefit of the New York alumni scholarship fund, will be $6.00 per couple and will last from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Tables may be reserved by ordering tickets ahead of time. All reserved tables will be held until 10 p.m.

There will be a drawing for a $50 Savings Bond, picked from those who purchase their tickets prior to December 26.

Yuletide Memories

By LARRY O'ROURKE

There was a year when I didn't wait with wide-eyed wonder for Christmas. I was nine at the time and quite grown up. No more "kid stuff" for me.

That was the Autumn I discovered the great truth and after doing so, acquired the cynicism that so well suits the young and ill informed.

With pride and contempt I announced to the world that in effect Virginia had been given a bum steer. The jolly man in the shiny red suit spent the rest of the year a quiet retired old man.

Since my ninth year and discovery I have learned a great many facts and seen something of the less festive side of life. Christmas hymns and gifts don't get the same reaction anymore.

That's why every year at this time I get thinking—don't you too? how wonderful it would be to be an innocent believer again.

* * * * *

Let's dream of last minute exams . . . trips to nearby stores for take home gifts . . . blue light on the chapel . . . red lights on gay Dougherty Hall . . . negotiations for travel . . . the canvas bag and the ID button of a post office helper . . . home addresses for greeting card purposes . . . something for her.

First arrival home . . . trimming the tree with tiny remembrances of earlier days . . . younger brothers and sisters gazing with fascination and delight . . . Midnight Mass with the family.

Unwrapping gaily decorated packages . . . roast turkey after 20 minutes a pound . . . an afternoon of laziness . . . a grateful and humble thanks.

* * * * *

Merry Christmas to the Administration who guide us into our destinities by the light of Him of the real Christmas—to the Faculty who share with us our desires and disappointments—to the Senior who may never see a Villanova Christmas time again — to the underclassmen who are so lucky because they will.

Merry Christmas to our Families and Friends whom we appreciate more at this time when we celebrate the birth of our common Redeemer.

Merry Christmas and the blessings of the Infant on those who are struggling to make this world indeed a place of peace and good will.

Sincerely,
Merry Christmas

Novice Debaters Have First Match

Beta Gamma Debating Society entered its first novice tournament on December 6 at Temple University's annual tourney for first year debaters.

The affirmative team of freshmen Gene D'Aquilla and Joe Liggera, was Villanova's best entry, winning three of their four contests. The negative team of Ron Anderson and Mark Quinn won two and lost two.

The other local representatives were Frank McCormick and Larry Kelly, negative, and John Isselman and John DeStephan, affirmative.

Cernos Article In Whirl

The Business Whirl will follow the example of other publications on campus and give a $10 award for an outstanding article.

That was announced last week by Ed Ward and John Barone, editors of the Business Whirl and both Industrial Administration students.

They also announced the acceptance of an article by senior Industrial Administration student Frank Cernos, a 30-year-old Air Force veteran. Cernos prepared a story on profit sharing.

A staff meeting will be held at 10.30 a.m. tomorrow at room 107 C and F building. Deadline for final copy is January 12, Ward and Barone said.

Scholarships Offered

The International Education Exchange Service of the State Department has announced that it will add approximately 75 new scholarships for study in Latin America to those already offered during 1959-1960.

The added scholarships provide for study in a variety of fields and are open to all United States citizens under 35, who will have obtained a Bachelor's degree before departure.

Christmas Still Shines Without Any 'Thunder'

By DON KEMPF

KEMPF

"God bless us, every one." Tiny Tim, (A Christmas Carol, by Charles Dickens)

Tommy Keegan was a second grader at St. Tim's. Class had just ended and the Christmas vacation was beginning. And as he trudged home through the snow, Tommy hummed the tune "Silent Night," which he had learned from Sister Teresa that morning at school.

The snow was good packing and Tommy sort of wished that his mom hadn't made him promise not to try to break any more of the windows in P. S. 147.

Tommy wanted a sled for Christmas. That's all he wanted—just a sled, a sled made of shiny wood with bright red runners; like the one he'd seen in the department store window. It had "Speed King" written on it.

No Suit for Wyatt

Tommy's older brother Bill was in college. And Tom's mother had told him that Bill wanted a new suit for Christmas.

"Boy," said Tommy aloud as he trudged along, "who'd ever want a suit for Christmas?" Bill didn't even want a cowboy suit, or even a space cadet outfit. Just a plain old suit suit—the kind you have to wear when you've got relatives visiting or something. "Boy," he said.

After he dropped his books off at home, Tommy went to meet Mike Dugan and then head for the old quarry. (Mike Dugan already had a sled—he got it last Christmas—and "Dead Man's Hill" would be covered with snow.)

"Can I pull the sled?" asked Tom as they started out.

"Sure."

"What do you want for Christmas, Mike?"

"A white horse."

"Boy!"

"I was gonna ask for a black horse, until I saw this real great white one on T. V. last week. Wouldn't it be fun to ride to school in the morning?"

"Boy! . . . . . What would you call him?"

"Thunder."

"Boy!"

Christmas Comes and Goes

And so Christmas came. Mr. D'Antonio gave away candy to those who came into his corner grocery store. Charley, the fire chief, gave rides in the old fire truck. Lights were everywhere, and trees and pictures of Santa and scenes from the first Christmas in Bethlehem. Everyone was happy and smiling—even Sister Bridget, the principal of St. Tim's.

Tommy Keegan got his sled from Santa . . . and he was very happy.

Mike Dugan didn't get his white horse. But he did get a new bike—a two wheeler. Mike was happy too—so happy that he forgot all about the white horse. It wasn't everyone who had a Schwinn "Panther".

But the vacation ended. Grown-ups went back to work. Kids went back to school. Things seemed to change again from the happiness of the holidays. And Sister Bridget, of course, wasn't smiling any more.

"Boy," said Tommy to Mike one afternoon a few weeks later on the way home from school, "wouldn't it be nice to have Christmas all year long?"

Recent Scientific Facts Hint At Life On Mars

By Frank Dynan

Prolonged study of the surface of Mars discloses changes which are of a seasonal nature. The seasonal growth of vegetation seems to be the only sound manifestation of these changes. As the ice cap melts, the freed moisture spreads toward the equator either as streams or rain. With the spread of moisture, the dark areas of the planet—the areas thought to be vegetated—turn green.

The approach of winter changes these areas to grey or brown. If the earth were observed from outer space throughout a change of seasons, the observer could expect to see much the same thing. Because the existance of free oxygen almost surely demands the presence of vegetation where the other conditions for life are present, and because of the color phenomenon just mentioned, it is safe to conclude that vegetable life exists on Mars.

Life on Mars must be quite different from life here on Earth. To determine the nature of Martian vegetation, scientists studied its light reflections. Most Earth vegetation shows in the spectroscopic absorption of its reflected light the presence of water vapor and chlorophyll. Lichen and moss do not. The reflected light from the vegetation of Mars closely resembles the reflected light of moss and lichen, those unusual plants which are resistant to drought and great temperature change.

Naturally with the discovery of vegetation on Mars, the question arises what of higher forms of life? The answer to that is only speculative but the chances of higher forms on Mars are very slim. The scarcity of oxygen practically excludes it. Animals require a large amount of oxygen to supply body energy and Mars does not have it.

Christy's Christmas List

By BILL CHRISTY

Christmas spirits of both types are much in evidence about the campus by now, and the time has approached for the writing of the inevitable Christmas list. Many of us make up more than one list, one for the presents we will give and one for those we would like to be able to give. Here is one of the second type made up by a well-wishing Villanovan:

To the Seniors: A forty-hour week at $150 to start and a permanent deferment from the draft board.
To the Juniors: Class rings with stones that don't rattle and an encyclopedia listing ALL the members of their steering committee.
To the Sophomores: Blazers that really fit.
To the Freshman: Someone to impress over the holidays.
To the Faculty: Students that stay awake in class.
To the Students: Teachers that won't put you to sleep.
To the Pennsylvania Railroad Police: Nineteen dollars towards the building of an overpass to the Post Office.
To the Post Office: Many, many hustling employees.
To the Attendance Office: A copy of the rescheduling of Christmas holidays—to start December 12.
To the Villanovan: Seventeen juniors for the staff.
To J. B. Kelly: Senator Joe Clark.
To the C & F Cafeteria: An unlimited supply of dimes.
To the Bearded Midget: A king-size cigarette and a razor—and maybe a dime for a cup of coffee.
To the English Office: A door that works.
To the History Department: A box of crayons, all colors.
To the Accounting Department: 1,760 square yards of yellow paper with green lines.
To the Maintenance Men: Six miles of fencing and 300 steel poles.
To the Pie Shoppe: The remnants of 50,000 broken plastic spoons.
To the Campus Cops: Guns, and the owners of all those lost raincoats.
To the Nurses: A larger enrollment.
To the Navy Men: Snowshoes for Mendel Field marches.
To the Law School Students: Limousine service to the Pie Shoppe.
To the Night School Students: Flashlights.
To Easement: Men (instead of boys).
To Kelly's: A rest over Christmas.
To Everyone: A pad of blank, signed, doctor's excuses and A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

Unbeaten 'Cats Face Owls Tonite

Villanova (4-0) Choice to Win In City Tilt

by JIM MURRAY

Tonight the undefeated Wildcats of Al Severance take on their first Big Five rivals of the young season when they engage the Temple Owls in the second game of a double header at the Palestra.

In the first game La Salle will meet North Carolina State.

Temple has shown little of the splendor of the Guy Rogers dominated NCAA contenders of last year. The only bright spot of the Owl's season to date has been the play of ace backcourt star Bill "Pickles" Kennedy.

In recent games, Temple Foes have solved the riddle of Kennedy by playing a 2-2 zone with a floater on Kennedy at all times.

Superb vs. Kentucky

Against second-ranked Kentucky, Pickles was superb and Temple made a great showing. Their only other respectable game was their opener in which they beat Gettysburg 60-53.

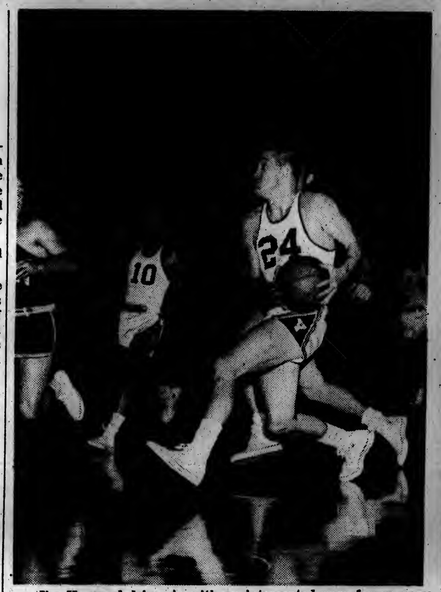
Gettysburg is the only common rival that Villanova and Temple have had. The Litwack five experienced some difficulty in topping Gettysburg but the charges of Severance had none.

Led by the record shattering rebounding performance of George Raveling (27) and the sharp shooting of Joe Ryan ((18 pts.) and Jim Kenny (13 pts.), Villanova surged from an early 8-8 tie to a 17-8 lead which the Wildcats increased throughout the game.

Raveling broke the rebound record of 26 set by Tom Brennan against Richmond in the 1958 campaign. With Raveling dominating the boards, Ryan and Kenny were able to hit from outside. The accuracy exhibited by the duo virtually broke the Bullets attack.

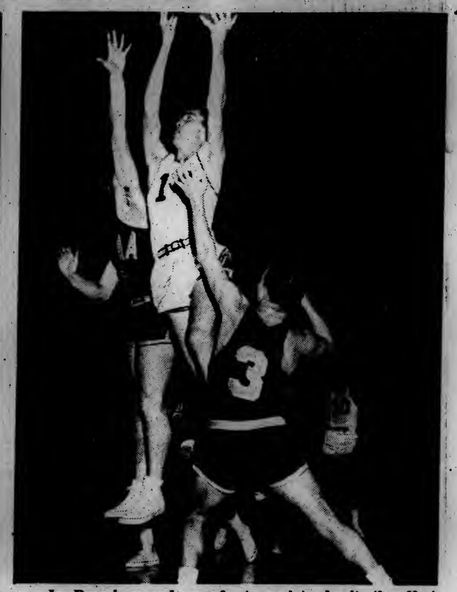
Gettysburg coach Bob Hulton was so impressed with the 'Cats overall play that he made the statement that the Villanova team could give any team in the country a run for their money and that the Wildcats would finish high nationally.

Blind Date



In last Wednesday's contest, date night at the Palestra, Villanova had a date with Siena—a blind date. Such a mismatch has rarely occurred before.

Siena was described in the program as a "fast moving, crisp passing, slick ball-handling team that depended on working the ball around the keyhole for good shots."



Well, they passed the ball around the key and Jim Huggard stole the ball and they passed around the key and Huggard intercepted and they continued to pass around the key and, finally, they passed—right out of the picture.

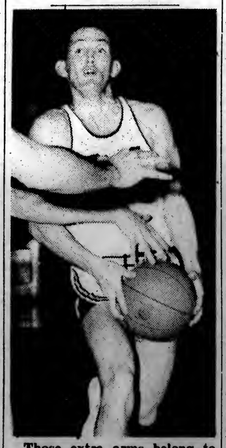
Villanova jumped into a 6-0 lead with a jump shot by John Driscoll and Huggard's two easy lay-ups with the stolen passes, and, for all practical purposes, the game was over.

Siena not only didn't take the good shot they didn't shoot. Siena took only eight shots in the first 13 minutes of play. By this time the St. Joseph's fans ceased yelling "We want an upset" and walked out.

Jim Huggard drives in with an intercepted pass for an easy lay-up and two points in the Sienna game. Huggard had 22 points, his best offensive showing thus far.

Joe Ryan is up and away for two points, despite the efforts of two Sienna defenders during the Main Liners' romp before a sparse Palestra crowd. Ryan is averaging 19 points per game.

The Siena stalling tactics did enable them to stay nominally in the game at halftime. Villanova "only" had a 32-18 lead.



So Long Everybody

A 12 point spurt by Villanova lead by Huggard and Ryan resulted when Siena decided to play orthodox ball. The score now increased to 44-20. More fans left.

Senior Jack Weaver, Siena's only capable player, contributed 22 points, mostly on long set shots and enabled Siena to maintain some semblance of respectability.

But Villanova continued to run away despite his effort and with 5 minutes to play the scoreboard read 64-37. The press left.

The final score was 73-47. Severance shook hands, shook his head and then HE left.

Those extra arms belong to Gettysburg defenders, but Jim Huggard managed to snake through them for a basket as the Wildcats won their fourth in a row.

Frosh Five Evens Record, Tops Gettysburg 77-70

by DENIS CARDONE

Displaying all-round improvement over their opening game, the freshmen squad downed the Gettysburg frosh last Friday night, 77-70. This victory evened their record at 1-1 and pointed the way to a successful season.

Playing more like a unit than had been witnessed in their opener, the frosh took an early lead and were never headed. Using an offense that hasn't been seen here since the days of Paul Arizin, with Hubie White being fed in the pivot, the Villanovans pushed to 7, 10, and 12 point leads at various stages of the first half.

Gettysburg came back strong near the end of the half, however, with the deadly jump-shooting of Ron Warmer leading the way. At halftime the scoreboard reading was 35-31, Villanova on top.

Early in the second half, the action was very close. Gettysburg guard Bob Parker hit for 15 of his 20 points in the period. Despite his fine shooting Villanova started to pull away. White and the much improved Joe Walsh controlled the boards and the 'Cat freshmen opened up to a ten point lead again.

This margin was maintained until around the three minute mark when the sharp shooting of Gettysburg's Parker and Warmer narrowed the count to 73-68. Coach Severance then had his team put on a mild freeze which contained Gettysburg until the final buzzer.

High scorer for the home forces was Hubie White with 21 points, two more than Joe Walsh. Another double figure contributor was Bill Penny, former Father Judge high scorer, with 13 points. Scoring honors for the night went to Gettysburg's Ron Warmer, who threw in 27 points.

Reagan Elected IC4A President

Villanova's athletic director and head football coach, Frank Reagan was elected president of the Intercollegiate Athletic Association at the annual meeting of the IC4A, held last week.

The IC4A outdoor track meet was held at Villanova's Goodreau Stadium last year. This early summer event broke the all time IC4A outdoor track attendance record.

The 1959 outdoor meet will be held at Randall's Island, New York. The meet will return to Villanova in 1960.

Swimmers Lose, Push Teachers To Relay Marks

The varsity swimming team was defeated by West Chester Saturday but in the defeat the Villanova swimmers served warning to their future opponents.

West Chester, reputed to be the most powerful team in the East outside of Yale, and that includes Army and Navy, downed the 'Cats 66-21.

Most of the events were closely contested as witnessed by the medley and freestyle relays in which the Villanova swimmers pushed West Chester to new pool records.

In the medley relay captain Frank Keefe, Larry Palacio, Jim Gregory and Bob Casson were beaten by a narrow margin and in the freestyle relay Bob Pinto, Casson, and Frank Dunn were nosed out by the Teachers in their second record setting win.

Villanova's only first place came in the 200 yd. backstroke, when Frank Keefe turned on the steam in the final 75 yds. and swam away from all competition.

Other Villanova point scores were Larry Palacio, who took third in both the orthodox and the butterfly; Jim Gregory, second in the butterfly and Bob Pinto and Bob Donahue, who paced second and third respectively in the 50 yd. freestyle.

Steve Carton took second in the dive.

In a preliminary meet the Villanova freshmen were defeated by the West Chester yearlings.

The deadline of the VILLANOVAN for any organization or person seeking publicity is the Wednesday prior to edition. Thus the deadline for the next issue, January 14, is January 7.

Glenn Miller Orchestra Chosen For Senior Prom

The world famous Glenn Miller Orchestra, under the direction of Ray McKinley, has been signed by the Class of 1959 for its Senior Promenade, to be held April 10 in the university Field House.

Class president Oz Scogna announced to the Steering Committee last week that Prom chairman Greg Dean has completed all arrangements for the Miller orchestra.

The signing of the band, which will be explained to the entire class in full by Scogna at a meeting early in the second semester, ended a great deal of speculation as to the idenity of the orchestra the class was seeking.

A 'Unanimous Choice'

It was known that Dean and his committee were considering,

RAY McKINLEY
Prom Leader

in addition to McKinley, such top name units as both Dorsey bands, the Elgart orchestra and Les Brown. The chairman, a day-hop history major, told the Steering Committee that the outfit was a "unanimous choice".

The senior announcement left only the idenity of the band for the Junior Promenade still shrouded in mystery. Rumor has it that the Class of 1960 has already signed a contract with another big name orchestra, but there has been no official announcement as yet.

Dean, who worked under Scogna when the class president was chairman of the junior Dinner Dance last spring, was appointed to plan the Prom late last year. Originally, Scogna told the VILLANOVAN that a co-chairman would be named, but that idea seems to have been re-considered.

Comparatively New

The Miller orchestra, of course, achieved world-wide fame in the early 1940's; but the re-organized unit, utilizing authentic Miller arrangements and featuring the traditional Miller music, is comparatively new.

McKinley, who had been associated with Miller and his music as far back as the early '30's, took over the direction of the Army Air Force Band after the famous band leader died in an airplane crash in 1944.

When the movie, "The Glenn Miller Story," and an album by

Lynx Contest Award Given

"Jim and Me," by Senior Arts Major Frank Dynan, has been judged the winner of the writing contest held by the Lynx, the campus creative writing magazine, Dr. John S. Phillipson and Mr. James Mitchell, moderators of the Lynx, have announced.

Dynan's story was chosen the best from all the short stories, poems and essays contributed to the magazine by a board of judges selected from the university's English department.

A cash award of $15 was made to Dynan for his story. Is addition, his story, along with several of the runners up, will be sent to Mary Yost Associates, a New York literary agent, to be considered for publication in a national magazine.

Three Undergraduate Depts. Announce New Courses

Three undergraduate departments have announced the formation of new courses and programs for the spring semester.

In the history department two new courses will consider the vital southern and southeastern areas of Asia. The courses are called "People and Politics" and will be taught by Dr. George Alpatt.

Recent French history will be explained by Fulbright scholar Raymond Cummings in the course Modern France. The history seminar conducted by chairman Dr. Harold Hartman will discuss the administration of the controversial Taft-Hartly Act.

The department of history will also sponsor a series of special seminars on the analysis of foreign policy and historical background.

DeGaulle Lecture

Dr. Fred Khouri and Cummings will given further talks in the program which opened last month with Dr. Leo Gershoy's discussion of French Premier Charles DeGaulle. Gershoy is a faculty member at New York University.

The Rev. Louis A. Rongione, dead of the graduate and part time division, announced the introduction of a new graduate school which will lead to a master's degree in political science.

"This course will be of special interest to teachers who require such a degree," Fr. Rongione said.

The department of mathematics has incorporated seven new credits courses into its schedule along with a non-credit seminar.

Emil Amellotti, math chairman said the new courses are Statistical Quality Control II, Higher Analysis, Industrial Statistics, Statistics, Quality Control seminar, Selected Techniques in Applied Statistics, and Sampling Principles and Method II.

Electronic Appreciation

The non-credit seminar is Introduction to Large Scale Digital Computers, designed to give the student an appreciation of electronic computers.

"No prior knowledge or course is required to join the seminar," Amellotti said. The seminar will be held on Thursday from 7 to 9 P.M. and the fee will be $40.

The math professor said that applications for the summer institute for high school science and mathematics teachers must be filed by February 16.

Establishment of the summer institute was made possible by a recent grant of $96,700 to Villanova by the National Science Foundation.

Summer Program

The Rev. J. Bernard Hubbert, O.S.A., of the physics department, has been named program director.

The evening division has listed 19 new courses for the spring semester.

Chairman Dr. Eugene Powers said included among the courses are Physical Metallurgy, Principles and Problems of Secondary Education, Advertising, Medical Ethics, and Marriage and the Family.

Fr. Sherman To Speak At Jr.-Sr. Retreat

The Rev. James Sherman O.S.A. will be speaker at the annual retreat starting January 25.

The retreat will open Sunday night at 7.30 and will end with a closing Mass at 9 A.M. Wednesday.

All seniors and juniors who have not previously fulfilled retreat requirements must attend, said the Rev. Norbert W. Whitley O.S.A., University Chaplain.

The cards will be available next Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. in room 223, Mendel Hall.

Outside Retreats

Father Whitley announced earlier this year that students could fulfill retreat requirements at several other retreat houses. Included was St. Joseph's-in-the-Hills, Malvern, Pa.

Sophomores and Freshmen will have their annual retreat during Holy Week.

Until three years ago all students had their retreat at the same time, during Holy Week. In 1956 it was decided that the seniors and juniors would continue during Holy Week, while sophomores and freshmen retreat would be during the midterm break.

Division Necessary

The Rev. Joseph I. Kemme O.S.A., then Chaplain and now University Vice President in charge of Student Affairs, said the retreat division was originally necessary because of the expanded enrollment.

the Air Force band caught the public fancy a few years back, the Miller estate and booking agent Willard Alexander decided to hire McKinley, have him reorganize the band and give him their backing.

The new Miller band—"under the direction of/and featuring Ray McKinley" — was an immediate success, and has become one of the most popular dance bands in the country today.

Hambro, Peters Featured

Besides featuring the talented McKinley on the drums, the orchestra that will play for the seniors' last prom also highlights saxaphonist Lenny Hambro and vocalist Lorry Peters.

Hambro, who has worked with some of the most important bands in the music industry, such as Billy Butterfield and Gene Krupa, has his own quintet, which is a feature attraction with the McKinley orchestra.

Vocalist Peters was signed by McKinley shortly after he reorganized the Miller band, after he heard her sing in an advertising jingle on the radio.

Correction

In the last issue of the VILLANOVAN it was reported that the International Relations Society would hold their annual convention tentatively on December 17-18. The correct date is March 17-18, at the University of Pennsylvania.

Alumni Open Six New Grad. Clubs

George J. Pequignot, executive secretary of the Alumni Association, announced recently the opening of six new graduate clubs.

New clubs in Long Island and Lower Bucks County, Pa., have held first meetings, while clubs in Trenton, New Brunswick, Atlantic City, and Baltimore will soon be actively under way.

"The purpose of the clubs", says Pequignot, "is to bring closer ties between the Villanova alumni and the present students."

Among other activities the clubs hope to have alumni-student gatherings three or four times a year. "In this way we

Interviews Underway

Senior interviews with the nation's leading companies, began Monday. Students must sign in on the time schedule and take note of hour and the date at the Placement office, director John Moritz said.

New Phil. Club Elects Givnish

Gerard J. Givnish, senior philosophy major, was elected first president of the newly formed Philosophy Club at the group's premier meeting in December.

Other officers are Peter Leemhuis, vice president, Don Kempf, secretary, Angelo Paganno treasurer. All officers are seniors in the Arts and Sciences school.

Club moderator Dr. Gerald S. Dalcourt o fthe philosophy department told the officers several discussions will be held on great books in political philosophy.

The books chosen are Politics, Aristotle; Social Contract, Rosseau; The Public Philosophy, Lippman, and Men and the State, Maritian.

Givnish said all interested students were invited to attend the club meetings or apply at the philosophy office, basement, Vasey Hall.

Education Dept. Discloses Science Teacher Lack

Villanova is doing its share to meet the current demand for qualified science teachers, the VILLANOVAN learned in an exclusive survey last week.

Despite a tremendous all-out effort, however, there are no prospective science teachers in this year's graduating class.

That was revealed by Dr. George Cressman, Chairman of the Education department.

Forced Interest Impossible

"Although we give this problem much personal attention, we cannot force students to become science teachers or to be interested in scientific subjects."

"When a student comes to Villanova," Cressman said, "he has already decided what subjects he will pursue."

Science is a difficult subject at Villanova, the Education Chairman said. "A student willing to work hard in science courses is unfortunately usually unwilling to teach. Industry offers higher salaries."

Solution Attempted

Villanova however, has made a commendable effort in an attempt to help solve the nation's far reaching problems in the lack of science teachers. A regular curriculum is set up for science teachers in the Education department. (One prospective science teacher did graduate last year.)

The Graduate Division, under the direction of Rev. Louis A. Rongione O.S.A., has accepted the science challenge.

Under the direction and coordination of the Rev. J. Bernard Hubbert O.S.A., there are three active programs designed to improve present high school teaching.

Particiyants Paid

The National Science Foundation recently granted Villanova $96,000 to establish a summer institute. The Foundation will pay participating high school science and mathematics teachers $75 per week plus $15 per week for each dependent up to four during the period of study.

And as a further inducement, a round trip to Villanova not to exceed $80 will also be paid each participant.

Villanova will not charge tuition or fees, but students will be required to pay their own board.

Six Credits Obtainable

Candidates for admission to the program must be high school teachers, senior or junior, with a minimum of three years teaching experience. Six graduate credits may be obtained by successful completion of the course.

The summer institute begins June 29 and runs to August 7.

Courses to be offered include biology, chemistry, geology, physics, and mathematics.

Two Programs Offered

The University offers two other programs:

A series of courses for the present high school teacher leading to the degree Master in General Science.

An In-Service Institute plan giving specialized courses in biology. Under this plan, a qualified person gets paid while attending the courses.

Father Hubbert thinks highly of Villanova's plans. "By conducting these specialized courses in an informal manner, we aid those wishing to attain master's degrees."

More Master's Degrees

He indicated one solution to the lack of undergraduate students in the science teaching field. "Making the master's degree more accessible will make the science fields more desirable."

The VILLANOVAN's veriew of the school's science education department was promoted by a recent report of the Pennsylvania School Board.

In the report, the State expressed fear at the declining number of science teachers.

Annual Retreat

Earlier last year the Student Council requested that the University rearrange the Retreat dates so that seniors and juniors would be able to have longer vacations at Easter time.

Second Year

The Administration accepted this plan. This is the second year of its operation.

In another announcement last weeks, the chaplain's office said there would be no evening chapel exercises for any undergraduates next week, the week of final examinations.

A Delta Pi Epsilon "big brother" supervises seven pledges in their "Corporal Works of Mercy", the fraternity's new system of pledging.

Board Strength Vital to V. U. Cause

by Jim Murray

The Villanova Wildcats have a tremendous one-two punch under the boards this season. The one-two punch, George Raveling and John Driscoll, led the nation in rebounding (63.3% according to the first NCAA statistics).

Raveling is a junior who attended St. Michael's Prep in Scranton, Pa. At St. Michael's he was an outstanding athlete, making the All-Catholic, All-American basketball team.

Driscoll is a local standout from West Catholic High where he was a Philadelphia All-Catholic selected. He is the biggest man on the Wildcat squad at 6-8.

The fact that a player has been a standout in high school circles does not assue success in the college ranks. Driscoll and Raveling have past the test and are the Villanova mainstays under the boards.

Their was much speculation as to the effectiveness of the Driscoll - Raveling combination at the season's opening. Both boys were "green". Raveling had been used sparingly during last season and came along toward the end. Driscoll was forced to sit out last season because of inelligibility.

Success Not Lucky Break

Their success this far has not been a "lucky break" or something that just happened, rather it is the result of hard work.

George spent last summer as a playground director, this gave him ample time to practice his shooting. He also used a weighted vest to improve his spring. This device has already paid big dividends as George has established a new rebounding record at Villanova.

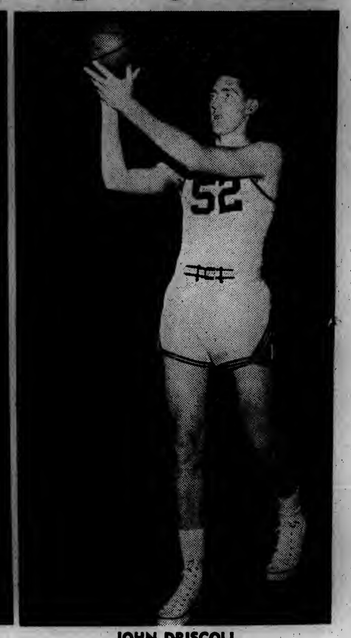
Tweetie Driscoll spend an active summer "under the boards" in the Narbeth Summer League. His companions on the St. Alice's team was Villanova backcourt ace, Jim Huggard.

As Tweetie put it, "I never had to jump much in high school because I was usually the biggest man on the court but in college the guys are bigger and it is a real battle under the boards."

Huggard Helpful

"Hug kept after me all summer 'get up Tweetie get up,' that's all I heard." As a result if you look at any Villanova boxscore you'll find lots of rebounds and double figure scoring also.

An analysis of the Villanova record would show that team experienced difficulty only in the loss to St. Joseph's.



In that game Tweetie got into foul trouble early and had to sit out a great deal of the disasterious first half.

After eleven games poise and strenght can be found under the boards in the person of John Driscoll and George Raveling. Both have proven themselves and have more than livedup to the pre-season billing that the 'Cats could be rough underneath this season.

The 'Cats have been rough underneath with their big men, Driscoll, and Raveling, showing great defensive abilities and coming through with the "big night" offensively.

sence of the hurt Howard Hurt was further hurt (WOW! Light seeking light doth light, etc.) by the absence of a good small man. Coach Hal Bradley was able to use a veritable platoon system as far as big men were concerned, but the backcourt players were too slow to keep up with the fast breaking of Ryan, Kenny, and Huggard.

Tim Morgan, one of Duke's backcourtmen, did possess a potent set shot, however, hitting on nine for sixteen for eighteen points.

After Duke had battled back from a 14 point deficit to tie the score at 58, captain Joe Ryan came off the bench to score six straight points and lead the 'Cats to a 74-67 victory. (Have you noticed we have a CAPTAIN Ryan, two field GENERALS, Kenny and Huggard, and two MAJOR rebounders, Raveling and Driscoll?)

George Emma was also a star in this game, turning in his finest performance of the season in scoring 14 points. All in the tense second half.

Playing a truly great game, Villanova welcomed in the new year by trouncing the foreign ambassadors of the University of Pennsylvania, 93-63. Dominating the boards, fast-breaking as if they invented that tactic, and shooting with alarming accuracy, Villanova was leading by as much as 27 points in the first half.

The Quakers could never recover from that blitz. Despite the efforts of George Schmidt and reserve Joe Cook, Penn never stood a chance.

In their seventh straight win the 'Cats reached their peak. Each starter was in double figures and the reserves played fine, calm ball too. Unfortunately, the team picked the wrong night to howl. They should have waited six days.

Swimmers Win Easily; Lafayette Succumbs

by Gene Hewitt

The Wildcat swimmers set their season log at two wins and three loses with a victory over Lafeyette in the Villanova pool last Saturday.

Co-captain Frank Keefe, Bob Pinto, Steve Carton, Joe Harvey and Jim Gregory led the way in the Villanova victory.

In the medley relay co-captain Keefe opened the event with a ten yard lead and that lead was enlarged upon to the point where the Villanovans won the event by 75 yards. After this overwhelming win the outcome of the meet was a foregone conclusion.

Individual winners for Villanova were Bob Pinto, first in the 50 yard freestyle; Steve Carton, in the dive; and co captain Keefe, who has lost only one race this year.

In the perceding meet, with Rutgers, the Villanovans lost 50-36 but Joe Harvey showed much improvement overlast year as he won the 440 freestyle in the last ten yards. Also in the 440 freestyle, Bruce McCreedy finished one yard behind Harvey, in a race that was nip and tuck all the way.

Senior Jim Gregory turned in another of the fine performances that have marked his efforts this year in winning the 200 orthodox by a wide margin.

Others taking important places for Villanova were Harvey, second in the 220; Bob Donahue, second in the 50 freestyle; Palacio and Dow, second and third respectively in the 200 butterfly. Bob Pinto placed second and Bob Donahue placed third in the 100 yard freestyle.

Rifle Team Wins Record Now 3-1

The Villanova varsity rifle team topped Western Maryland last week 1389 to 1350, for their third win in four outings. The Wildcats were led by Frank Murtha with a 281 score followed by Charlie Russell with a 280. Others who scored for Villanova were Captain Chris Kloss, 279; Soph. Nat Coursey, 277; and Herb Lettau, 272. Western Maryland entered the match sporting a 3 and 3 record.

The Navy rifle team recovered a little of Villanova's lost prestige by beating St. Josephs in a triangular meet. The match was won by P.M.C. with 1363, followed by Villanova, 1338; St. Joe's trailed the pack with an unimpressive 1292. Lou Spevetze's 273 was high for the Navy squad. The other scorers were Russell, 271; Hogan, 267; Mozer, 266 and Rietzke, 261.

Frosh Beat Hawklets

by Dennis Cardone

Villanova's freshmen continued to gain momentum as they chalked up three impressive wins last week. Led by the high scoring Hubie White, the Wildkittens bowled over St. Joe's Muhlenberg and Penn.

Their win streak is now at 5 with only a two-point opening game loss to Temple to mar their record. The frosh will get their chance to avenge this loss the last game of the season.

Showing no affects of a two week lay-off, the frosh thoroughly trounced Dan Kenny's St. Joseph's squad, 102-64. The game, Monday night at the Fieldhouse marked the first time the Cagesters have hit the century mark this year, and we hope, not the last. The game was no contest from the start.

The record-breaking shooting of Hubie White opened the dikes to a first half flood of points; holding the squad from City Line to 26 points, Villanova racked up 52 run-away points. Hubie White gave indication of what he had in mind for his record-breaking evening as he threw in 23 of his 48 this half.

Another hot hand was Dan Higgins, the floor general, who bucketed 11 first half points.

A flurry of points by White at the start of the second half threw out all hopes of a contest. The Hawklets, except for Dan Bugey and his 23 points, were never in the game.

Along with McMonagle, Bill Penny, Joe Walsh showed improvement particularly in that all-important phase of the game, putting the ball in the basket. Their hot hands, with help from Ron Meyers and Dick Le Fevre, enlarged what was already a commanding lead until the final score read 102-64.

'Cats Open '59 Track Season In Beantown

Villanova's IC4A indoor and NCAA outdoor track champions will travel to Boston tomorrow to participate in the annual Knights of Columbus Meet.

On January 24 the Wildcats of Jim (Jumbo) Elliot will be in the Nation's Capitol for the yearly indoor meet sponsored by the Washington Star.

At Boston Villanova will enter possibly four events. There will be three single entries and a mile relay team.

Last year's IC4A and NCAA short distance champion, Eddie Collymore, is entered in the 60 yard event at Boston. Colly will also be part of the mile relay team.

The other two single entries are Charlie Stead in the high jump and Bob Godesky in the mile.

The IC4A broad jump champion, John Buckley, is not making the Boston trip because the broad jump pit at Boston is made of dirt. Coach Elliot prefers to have Buckley compete in sawdust pits exclusively.

Mermen Top Penn

The Villanova swimming team evened their record at three wins and three loses Wednesday night when they edged the University of Pennsylvania, 46-40, in a thrilling meet.

The Wildcats won in the final event, the medley relay, when Bruce McCreedy beat the Quaker anchor man by three inches.

Hawks End Victory Skein Top Wildcat Five, 82-70

by Joe FitzPatrick

All the local basketball fans who attributed Villanova's unblemished record to the Villanova schedule were all smiles after St. Joseph's Hawks had handed the Wildcats a humiliating loss at the Palestra last Friday night.

The Villanova five started out like they were going to run away with the game. After about three minutes of play the Wildcats were leading 10-5 but then the roof came down or the lump came up—depending on how you look at it.

In the next eight minutes of the game the Hawks, paced by the great all-around play of senior Joe Spratt, outscored the bewildered 'Cats 30-3.

Villanova Gets Lost

A combination of tremendous shooting and rebounding by St. Joseph's plus the fact that Villanova looked like they didn't know where they were gave the Hawks a 43-24 halftime lead.

With only 12 minutes remaining in the game the 'Cats came back. Their last-ditch effort was carried on mainly by Tweetie Driscoll, who had to "take it easy" because of early foul trouble and George Emma, who replaced Joe Ryan.

Driscoll began to hit on his jump shot from the key and he collected most of his 17 points (Villanova's high for the night) in the second half.

Emma Shines on Dark Night

Emma replaced Joe Ryan, who was having all kinds of trouble, throwing passes away, kicking the ball and zero for eight from the floor.

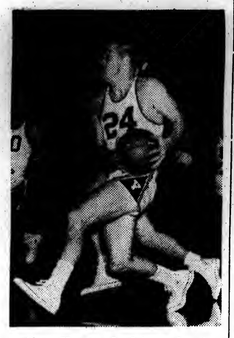
George went right to work. He stole the ball twice, after he had joined Jim Huggard and Jim Kenny in a press, and drove for two quick field goals.

Emma also hit on two other shots and one free throw to give him a total of nine points for the night.

George Raveling was second to Driscoll in the scoring department. Big George had five field goals and six free throws for a total of 16 points.

"Rave" was the Villanova rebounder leader with 19.

Huggard and Kenny Came Around



Jim Huggard and Jim Kenny also came through in the second half. Both seemed to loosen up and really get with it.

Hug hit for six field goals and two fouls for a night's accumulation of 14 points. Kenny scored eight points but did an oustanding defensive job on Bob McNeill.

McNeill, touted as an All-American, scored only nine points while being guarded by ex-North Catholic teammate Kenny.

What McNeill couldn't do two other Hawks did. Joe Spratt and Jack Egan, wrecked the evening for the Wildcats.

Spratt was the night's high scorer with 25 points and Egan, who replaced Bob Clarke when the latter got into foul trouble, was close behind Spratt with 22 points and as if this wasn't enough, Egan also grabbed 16 rebounds.

Jim Huggard drives in for two of his 14 points against the Hawks last Friday night at the Palestra.

White Scores 48 Sets New Mark

Records are made to be broken, and Hubie White set out to prove this last Monday night against St. Joseph's utilizing the same spring that Jumbo Elliot wants for his high jumping, Hubie racked up 48 points to establish a new freshman scoring record. The previous record was held by George Reider who bucketed 45 in another St. Joseph's game during the 56-57 season.

In garnering these 48 points, Hubie showed a very hot shooting hand. He threw in 21 field goals in 38 shots, well over the desired percentage. At the end of the game nearing the record, he was particularly hot, netting his last eight shots. Mr White has shown the game to be no fluke for in the succeeding two games he managed 31, and 34 points to boost his average to 30.3 for the season.

'Cats Face Loyola Away; Down Seton Hall, Brandeis

Tom Troy

The Wildcats seek their eleventh victory tomorrow night when they meet Loyola at Baltimore. Villanova won their tenth last night when they defeated the Judges of Brandeis University at the Fieldhouse.

Last Saturday night a very tired and tight, albeit deadgame, Villanova team was extended by a very strange Seton Hall University five.

Seton Hall didn't belong on the same court with Villanova, but Honey Russell's unorthodox Pirates gave the Wildcats a real scare before losing 64-59.

Due more to fatigue and a psychological letdown than anything else, Villanova played a most unimpressive game. Only the great performance of a very sore Jim Kenny, and some clutch baskets by John Driscoll saved the night.

After jumping into an early lead, the Wildcats, paced by Kenny, Jim Huggard and sub George Emma, increased their margin to 35-23. At the half the score was 36-29.

Employing a most unusual offense, (Ken Walker, less than six feet tall, played the pivot instead of 6-10 Tom Cross who was out ice skating or something.) Seton Hall took advantage of a scoring drought by Villanova to move out in front 55-52 with six minutes left.

Here Kenny broke loose. He took the ball right out of the hands of a startled Pirate and drove the length of the court to score. Two quick jump shots by Jim, his fourth and fifth goals in a row, enabled the Wildcats to regain the lead with 2:28 remaining.

After two foul conversions by Huggard, Villanova went into a freeze, and despite missing four one-and-one situations, overcame the press tactics of Seton Hall. John Driscoll's big rebound goal with only 19 seconds remaining clutched the ballgame.

This game might well turn out to be the pivotal game of the season for Villanova. Beaten in a resounding fashion by St. Joseph's the night before, physically hurting from playing three games in four nights Villanova played uninspired ball—but they won!

They proved their mettle by refusing to give up when Seton Hall went ahead with only minutes to play. A sight wonderful to see was Huggard and Kenny dribbling through the entire Seton Hall team in their freeze act.

Driscoll, getting better every game, rebounded and scored when it counted, and George Emma resolidified his reputation as a clutch ball player as he scored nine points, all when Villanova desperately needed them.

Two days before the game with St. Joseph's the Wildcats annihilated Muhlenburg 99-85. George Raveling came through with a standout performance in this game. The 6-6 junior scored 23 points and grabbed 19 rebounds to lead Villanova to their highest score this year and also to the top of NCAA rebound list.

In the games played over the Christmas holidays, Villanova really began to impress the Philadelphia basketball experts. Gene Milner, Gene Kelly, and Jim Leaming all were singing the praises of Villanova's speed, rugged rebounding and sharp-shooting. Of course, the opposition wasn't much, but the victories were convincing.

In the first city series game of the 1958-59 season, Villanova combined complete domination of both boards and some sharp shooting by Jim Kenny and Joe Ryan to crush Temple, 91-69.

The terrific board job of George Raveling and John Driscoll and a defense which stopped the really great "Pickles" Kennedy cold in the first half enabled Villanova to choose its own score in the game.

In a pre-Christmas game, Villanova was tested for the first time in the season when Duke, normally a power in the tough Atlantic Coast Conference, forced the Wildcats to play their best ball of the season.

The Beginning And End

At the beginning of the game with St. Joseph's Villanova experienced all kinds of difficulty like this—here George Raveling has trouble getting a shot off because of the big hand of St. Joseph's Bob Clarke.

Near the end of the game the game the Wildcats fared slightly better as exhibited by George Emma driving in for a layup to make the game a little closer.

Victor H. Blanc, Philadelphia district attorney, and John Rogers Carroll, Philadelphia criminal lawyer, will debate wiretapping at the Villanova Law Forum, next Wednesday.

Samuel Dash, Philadelphia attorney and former district attorney of the city, will be moderator.

This was announced last week by Harold Gill Reuschlein, dean of the law school.

Dash is the author of a treatise on wiretapping, compiled under the auspices of the Fund for the Republic. It will be released in May.

Blanc will defend wiretapping as an aid to law enforcement. Carroll had denounced the tapping of telephone lines as a violation of constitutional rights.

Widespread Interest

The wiretapping controversey is one of present widespread interest and is under current intensive study of the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional rights.

The Law Forum session is expected to produce lively debate. Blanc has declared that the work of police officers is curtailed when the court refuses to permit wiretapping.

Blanc has repeatedly stated that the arrest and conviction of criminals involved in vice cases can only be conveniently accomplished through the aid of wire tapping.

The District Attorney said on March 7, 1958 that the Federal Communications Act must be amended to make wire tapping legal on the local level.

Law Violation

At the same time, in a meeting before the 24th regional Safety and Fire Conference of the Pennsylvania Police Chiefs Association, state Attorney General Thomas D. McBride, charged that despite the law, "some wire tapping is going on right now."

"We're not fools," McBride charged. "The law is being violated and it shouldn't be."

McBride challenged Blanc's claim as to the necessity of wiretapping. He said that police department figures showed an 18 percent decrease in crime since wiretapping became illegal.

Blanc spoke at the National Association of County and Prosecuting Attorneys last July 29

Mass For Fr. Lozano

The Spanish Club will hold annual Memorial Mass in honor of the late Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., today at 10:30 a.m. in the St. Mary Hall chapel. The Mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Policarpo Oroz, O.S.A. Mr. Vito DiVincenzo, Spanish Club moderator, has asked all club members and former friends of Father Lozano to attend.

Campus Club To Initiate Psych Studies

By DONALD ANDERSON
Of The Villanovan Staff

The Villanova Society of Psychological Investigation, the newest campus group, has approved and accepted a society constitution.

This was announced Monday by Dr. Frank McGurk, faculty moderator, and chairman of the Psychology Department.

The society's first meeting will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a.m. in room 107 Commerce and Finance.

The nominations for president, and vice president, will be held.

The society was formed during the first semester of this school year.

Three Groups

"The society is composed of three groups, each dedicated to its particular field of endeavor," McGurk explained.

The fields are experimental, industrial and motivational.

The respective faculty advisors are McGurk, Mr. Charles Bonniwell, and Mr. Howard DeWitt, all of the Psychology Department.

David Lawrence Speaker June 1

By PAUL A. BUCKLEY
of the Villanovan Staff

David L. Lawrence, Governor of Pennsylvania, will receive the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws during the June graduation exercises.

Governor Lawrence will also deliver the Commencement address to the 700 students who comprise the University's 1959 class.

Lawrence, prior to his election, was the mayor of Pittsburgh. During his tenure of office, which began in 1946, Lawrence was instrumental in coordinating the improvement program which has symbolized Pittsburgh in the past decade.

Re-elected to his second term by a record breaking margin, Lawrence continued to provide political leadership in Pittsburgh. In 1953, he was elected to an unprecedented third term.

Record Majority

Lawrence again broke precedent and was elected to his fourth term by yet another record breaking majority in 1957.

Lawrence has spent most of his life in politics, serving in a number of positions prior to his election as mayor. At the age of 31, he was county Democratic chairman and later, chairman of the Democratic State Committee of Pennsylvania.

A Veteran of World War 1, the Governor is a past president of the United States Conference of Mayors.

Award Winner

In 1955, Lawrence was the recipient of the Distinguished Service Award of the United States Conference of Mayors, the first mayor to be so honored.

Lawrence has a son, Jerry, who attends LaSalle College. Two other sons were killed in an automobile accident several years ago.

The announcement of the Commencement speaker was made last week by The Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President.

Other degree winners are expected to be named soon.

Former Governors

Two other Governors of Pennsylvania also received honorary degrees. They are James H. Duff and Edward S. Martin, both of whom served terms in the U. S. Senate.

Duff and Martin were Republican Governors. Lawrence is the first Democratic governor of the state in over 25 years and the first Catholic elected to the high position.

Nine Frosh To Run For S.C. Offices

By FRANK J. DYNAN
of the Villanovan Staff

Freshman Class elections have been set for Thursday, February 19, Elections Committee chairman John P. Kelley has announced. The polls will be in Alumni Hall gym.

The Freshmen will elect two representatives to the Student Council, a resident and a day-hop. These students will serve until the end of their Sophomore year.

Nine men will run for the two offices: three day-hops and six residents. Representing all three male undergraduate schools of the University, they were nominated at a class meeting last January 15.

Dave Driver, C and F; Dave Gilbert, Arts; and John Lynn, Arts, are the off-campus students seeking the day-hop Council post. Resident nominees are: Gerry McNulty, Engineering; Bruce Beckhold, C and F; and Mike Fallon, C and F.

Also Jim McMonagle, Engineering; William Sabo, Engineering; and Terry O'Brian, C and F.

Presently these men are awaiting the Administration's approval of their candidacy. For this they must have at least a 2.0 average, and must be in good standing with the Dean of Student Activities, the Chaplain, and the Dean of Men.

John J. Kelly, Campus Guard, Dies

John J. Kelly, Villanova security guard, suffered a heart attack on January 26 and died at the Bryn Mawr Hospital.

Mr. Kelly was seized by the attack while patrolling the campus during the early evening, near Austin Hall.

The 65-year-old guard was familiar to students as the one who checked the matric cards for the evening meal.

The deceased, who served at Villanova the past two years, is survived by his wife and two sons.

Brotherhood Week Statement by

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER

NATIONAL BROTHERHOOD WEEK
February 15-22, 1959

Our abundant plains and mountains would yield little if it were not for the applied skill and energy of Americans working together, as fellow citizens bound up in common destiny. The achievement of brotherhood is the crowning objective of our society.

On this circling planet, with nations poised for mutual advancement or destruction, we must enlarge our spirit of brotherhood to include all men who live under the banners of liberty and law.

Belle Masque To Present Gogol's - 'Inspector General'

The Belle Masque dramatic society will present Nikoli Gogol's farce "The Inspector General", as its second production of the season.

The play will be held in the University Field House from Wednesday, February 25, through Sunday, March 1.

Departing from the traditions of the organization's past two productions, the play will be staged in arena style with the audience surrounding the action.

"The Inspector General" concerns the plight of the mayor, and his cohorts, of a politically corrupt 19th-century Russian village which is suddenly threatened with the visit of an Inspector General who has been sent from St. Petersburg to survey the conditions of the town. In their haste and anxiety, the mayor and company mistake a young passerby for the official. The situations that result are comical, tornado-paced, and completely unexpected.

The role of the Mayor will be played by John Barlas, a junior Pre-Law major, who will be appearing for the first time in a leading role at V.U. Barlas made his debut in a supporting role in "Tiger at the Gates."

Raymond Gantra, who scored as Ulysses last semester, has drawn the important role of the imposter who goes along with the plot for his own personal profit. Kantra, a third-year chemistry major, will be ably seconded by Anthony Provenzano, who will play his servant, Ossip. Provenzano will be remembered for his vivid portrayal of Ajax in "Tiger".

The other town officials involved in the tumult will be Alan Willig, Lincoln Hallowell, John Cannon, and Peter Allard. It will be the third Belle Masque assignment for Willig, who previously appeared in "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Tiger at the Gates". Cannon, who appeared as Gremio in "Shrew", will play the role of the easily bribed judge, while Hallowell will portray the superintendent of schools and Allard, the Town Physician.

The roles of the twin messengers, Bobchinsky and Dobchinsky, will be played by Owen Klein and Thomas Flynn, respectively.

The female leads in the cast will be handled by Mary Shaffer, as the mayor's wife, and Rosemary Donnelly, as his daughter.

Also appearing in his initial Belle Masque production is senior Arts major, Douglas McClatchey, who will appear as the town's Director of Welfare.

Others included in the cast are James McMahon, John McGarry, William Freind, Jack Dillon, Jack Milton, Diane Viti, Carole Scanlon, Maura Hanafin, James Lynch, and Martha Davis.

Mr. Richard A. Duprey, head of Villanova's new Graduate program in Drama, will for the third straight year serve as the show's director.

The remainder of the show's personnel consists of Michael Keating, stage manager, with Ted Glinka, Hap Georges, Paul Ford, and George Becht as crew chief heads.

Villanova To Share In Scientific Week

The Franklin Institute will cooperate with Villanova and 30 other chapters of professional engineering and technical societies in the local celebration of National Engineers' Week.

The Week, February 22 to 28, is designed to help inform the general public of the contributions of engineering to civilization.

The program will begin with an opening proclamation by Mayor Richardson Dilworth in Philadelphia's City Hall on Monday, Febrauary 23.

Wiretap Debate

and again urged legal wiretapping.

Blanc Request

The program Blanc presented would:

1. Demand that the association present pre wiretap testimony to a senate committee considering the matter.

2. Call on the Pennsylvania Bar Association to make public a report on wiretapping compiled by former Philadelphia DA Samuel Dash.

The Goldfine case a year ago revived the issue of wiretaps.

A House subcommittee was thrown into a turmoil when one of its agents and a newsman eavesdropped on private talks among members of Goldfine's stac in a hotel room.

Blanc and Carroll, long a anti-tap spokesman, will probably discuss these and other recent cases.

Considering all the aspects, these questions must be answered by the panelists:

Does wiretapping, in its aid to police work, essentially undermine the Constitutional rights of the individual? If so, is it worth it?

Psychology Club

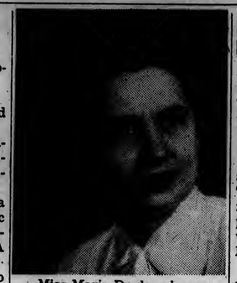
The society, composed of (31) charter members, arose through the perpetuation of the senior psychology students after many semesters of planning and deliberation.

Three Purposes

The purposes of the society are: (1) to provide the student of Villanova with the opportunity to pursue his interests in Psychology that transcend classroom limitations.

To provide proper supervision for the pursuit of those interests.



To provide a framework within which those interests can be served actively, intelligently, and purposefully.

The society plans to purchase equipment which will aid it in the conducting of scientific research in the fields of psychology.

Anyone having a keen interest in becoming a member of the society is asked to attend this important meeting.

Plans Dinner Dance

The Accounting Society will hold its bi-weekly meeting tomorrow at 10:30, in room 209, Commerce and Finance, according to president Gerry Gibbons. Ed Gavin will discuss plans for the annual dinner dance scheduled for May 16.

Miss Marie Doyle, who was graduated from the nursing division of Villanova last month, was killed two weeks ago by carbon monoxide gas which leaked into her North Philadelphia home. Three other members of Miss Doyle's family were also suffocated.

Dance, Vocal Tryouts For T'n'T Show

Tryouts for dancing chorus and glee club roles in the annual Turf and Tinsel Club production will be held next week at the Field House.

More than 60 Villanova students are needed to fill these roles in this year's show, "Piper-Heidsieck '98."

Eight varsity football players have already been signed to appear in a specialty number in the show.

A spokesman for the club last week called on freshmen to try out for the production. "The majority of Turf and Tinsel members have always been upperclassmen," he said, "but this year we hope to have larger frosh representation."

The spokesman also announced that the first business meeting of the society was held last night in the Field House.

The Turf and Tinsel club began in 1933. It was then that Harry Stuhldhreyer, one of the famed "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame football fame and head coach here, and Martin L. Gill, a member of the Villanova faculty, formulated the idea of an all male musical comedy.

This new movement was met with enthusiasm and a contest was held to find a suitable name for the club.

They finally decided on calling it Turf (denoting the athletes in the show) and Tinsel (denoting the proper flavor for a club connected with the stage.)

More than 150 persons including guests of honor attended the annual Dinner Dance given by the Nurses Sorority last week.

Dynan Sets Deadline For Lynx Publication

Deadline for the Spring issue of the Lynx has been set by editor-in-chief Frank Dynan as March 24. Nothing will be accepted for consideration after that date.

The magazine is expected to appear sometime in late April. This is the latest possible moment for the new Lynx to be published because final exams will begin after the middle of May.

As usual, any short story, poem, essay or any other form of writing whether humorous or serious will be considered for publication. It must be remembered however, that themes in conflict with Catholic teaching are unacceptable.

Frosh Elections

Kelley advised the Freshmen to use the utmost discretion in casting their ballots since their choices must represent their interests not only for the remainder of this year, but also all of next year.

"Whoever is elected must possess integrity, personality and ability," Kelley said, "in order to deal with the upperclassmen on the Council and to best represent their class."

To help the Freshmen know the candidates better, Larry O'Rourke, editor-in-chief of the Villanovan, has announced that the February 18 issue of the paper will be an election issue. It will contain pictures and short biographies of the nominees.

O'Rourke added, however, that candidates must bring both the biographies and pictures to the Villanovan office, 2nd floor, Dougherty Hall, by February 18. Biographies must be limited to 30 words and pictures must be posed, wallet size shots.

Kelley pointed out that the biographies should include the nominee's home town, high school and any experience which would prepare them to be Student Council Representatives.

Election Rules For Frosh Race

The complete list of election rules, adopted in January, 1958 are included below for the benefit of the candidates in the Freshman elections next week:

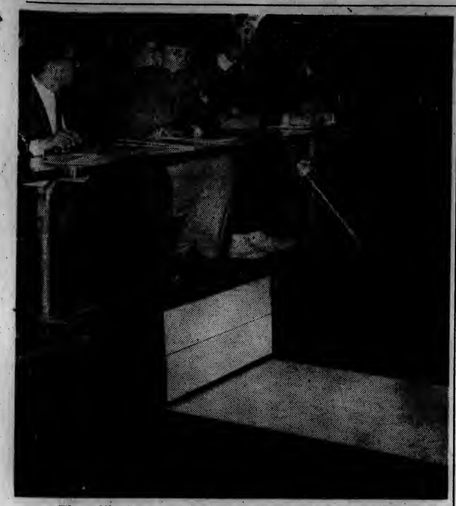
1) Posters may be placed only on University bulletin boards

2) Neatly constructed signs may be placed in the area adjacent to Classroom Annex.

3) Handbills cannot be placed in Dougherty Hall, classroom buildings, or in the library.

4) No posters may exceed 18" by 12".

5) Microphones and public address systems will not be permitted before election day and then only between classes.



6) Signs and posters may be placed around Alumni Hall only on the day of elections.

7) Campaigning will be prohibited for an area of 10 sq. ft. in front of the stairs leading to the polls.

8) Campaign expenses shall not exceed $50 per man. Itemized expense accounts are due at least 12 hours before election day.

9) Party limit $100. Candidates contribution to be deducted from $50 allowance.

10) All rules to be enforced by the Elections Committee who will penalize for infractions.

Palestra's New Rectangle Represents Many 'Incidents'

By TONY MACKLIN

Anyone visiting the University of Pennsylvania's Palestra, where Villanova has played its major home games since the 1949-1950 season, should be sure to take notice of a recent innovation at that arena. The innovation is not impressive in itself but it does have a remarkable history.

It achieves eminent importance when one becomes aware of that history. This innovation is a white rectangle painted on the court, just out of bounds, in front of the official scorer. It measures approximately three feet by four feet. In the past the official scorer wore a red cap to distinguish himself but now this is no longer sufficient by itself.

The white rectangle did not come about because of some caprice of the Palestra's interior decorator. It was the direct result of what happened in the Villanova-Providence game. To reconstruct that classic briefly, Villanova's center John Driscoll fouled out of the contest with the score tied at 79-79 with less than four minutes remaining in the fourth overtime period. George Emma replaced him.

A murmur went through the now nearly exhausted crowd who remembered George's clutch play particularly in the overtime periods of the LaSalle game last year. But on this fated night George never got a chance. Although Emma had been waved into the game he had not "reported" to the official scorer.

Typical of Villanova

Villanova was assessed a technical foul which gave Providence a three point lead and possession of the ball with which they quickly scored. Being only human, the 'Cats were demoralized and that was the ball game. And so today we have the "foul box".

Most likely that rule will not be invoked again this year anywhere across that nation and certainly not at the Palestra. It seems that a few of the referees in this town always seem to be able to dig up some unused rule, strike Villanova over the head with it, and then deposit it in storage not to be heard from again. Either a rule should be rescinded or made uniform. In truth, the very same rule that victimized George Emma was "broken" this week at the Palestra and nothing happened.

Actually the "foul box" does not just stand for the Providence game to Villanova. It has an almost tragic tradition in back of it. Probably the most bitter portion goes back to 1955 and the Eastern Regionals of the NCAA tournament. The Jack Devine-Bob Schafer team played Canisius. With one minute and a half remaining in the game and with Villanova leading 67-64 the unbelievable happened. The 'Cats were in possession of the ball when old Lady Luck chuckled and slapped the referees on the back. Twice without getting the ball past mid-court the refs called pickoff fouls on the 'Cats.

These two backcourt one-and-one fouls gave Canisius four points and a stunning 68-67 victory. And so due to questionable calls Villanova was burdened with its most crushing defeat for had they won they would have had a crack at the Tom Gola-led LaSalle team which went to the finals. Who knows what might have happened?

Recent Evidence

More recently and still branded fresh in mind is last year's game with West Virginia, at that time the number one team in the country. In a blazing, frantic battles the Wildcats saw a precious ten point lead slip to one fantastic point. Seconds remaining in the game and Villanova had possession of the ball underneath their own basket. Before they could bring it in to play, the ball got loose and went to the stands. Captain Tom Brennan was forced to retrieve it.

By the time he had returned to court side and made ready to bring the ball in referee Daniel Smeddy had counted off the "alloted" five seconds. When Brennan realized what was happening he tried to call time out but Villanova lost possession of the ball, the game, and all faith in referees. Another rule garnered from the depths of the rule book had been used and was now sent out to pasture to join its iniquitous fellows.

Villanova, without a doubt, holds the intercollegiate record for most impossible decisions against a team. You never can tell when some unsuspecting Villanovan will be called for a—"smiling with the ball" foul.

From Long Ago

Since the days of Paul Arizin, the Palestra has been known as the "house that Penn built and Villanova paid for." Now with the "foul box," Villanova is responsible for an integral addition. It is a symbol. The rumor that it was painted with the dyed tears of Villanovans is absolutely untrue. It is Villanova's escutcheon. We refuse to go along with the cynics who want a big red apple painted on it. Nor do we agree with those who feel that there should be a picture of "Big Brother Referee" on it. Rather, leave it the way it is.

It is a monument to Villanova's failure to succeed consistently with fickle Lady Luck. It is a monument to Villanova's losing battles. It is a monument to Villanova's clash with referees and rule books. And it is a monument to the best games played in the city, year after year, by the most exciting team.

Next time you are down at the Palestra take a good long look at it.

Collymore Defends 600 Title In Inquirer Meet Tomorrow

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

The bulk of Villanova track fans get their first look at the 1959 version of the Wildcats and two recent graduates, and a preview of the prospects for the future at the Inquirer Games at Philadelphia's Convention Hall on Friday night.

As this was written, there were still some tickets available for the fifth big indoor carnival of what is rapidly becoming the most exciting winter campaign in years.

Ed Collymore, who had developed into the finest collegiate sprinter at the end of last spring's season, will run the 600 again, as he has for the past four weeks.

In high school, Collymore was a quarter-miler. Coach Jim Elliott successfully switched Ed to the shorter distances. But now, aiming for the 400-meter championship in the 1960 Olympics, Collymore has again returned to longer distances.

Won First 600

In his first 600, in Boston KC Games, Colly rode home in one minute, 11.1 seconds. In Washington, he ran only in the mile relay, because of an entry muddle.

In New York's Millrose Games, Ed won in 1:11.8. Then, last week in his hometown of Boston, he won in the tremendous time of 1:10.3, beating Charley Jenkins, Olympic 400-meter champion who was his teammate and buddy when Charley went to Villanova.

Charley Stead, high-jumping better than he has since his sophomore year, has already grabbed a first place (6-8¼, for a new meet record in Washington), a third (6-8 in the Boston KC), and two fourths (6-7 at Millrose and 6-6 at Boston A.A.)

Stead will also be party to one of Jumbo Elliott's strange and nearly always successful switches, when he competes in the 50-yard dash. Stead has done a lot of running, but usually he competes in the mile relay.

Broke Millrose Record

Ron Delany and Don Bragg are continuing their headline work. Bragg, now in the Army, has beaten recordholder Bob Gutowski four straight times in the pole vault, his most impressive performance being a 15-6½ job for a Millrose record.

Delany has won the three miles he has run thus far this year, making up a 45-yard deficit to beat England's Brian Hewson in 4:04.3.

The Villanova graduate student has now won 27 consecutive miles and 31 straight indoor races. After the mile on Friday night, Ron will put that record in real jeopardy on Saturday when he competes against a first-rate field in the half-mile in the New York A. C. meet.

In the mile relay, the Wildcats have won three sectional races, but it took a great final lap by Collymore to post the best clocking—3:21—in the Millrose Games.

Mile Team Unsettled

Coach Elliott is undecided as to who will comprise the team this week, but Joe Mannion, Nick DiAngelis, Jim Blackburn and Vic DiMaio or Collymore are likely candidates.

Bob Godesky, DiMaio, Bill Tinney, and Gene Rodgers, DiAngelis or Tim MacNamar will compete in the two-mile relay. The group took a second place in the Millrose Games.

Freshman Paul Drayton, who took a fifth in the 80 and a third in the 100 in the Washington Star games, both behind Bobby Morrow, will join Stead in the 50.

Budd is Sidelined

Frank Budd, who beat Morrow in the 70, then finished fourth in the final 70, 80 and 100, will sit on the sidelines because of an ankle injury.

John Buckley, IC4A broad jump titlist, will compete in special hop-step-and-jump event on Friday afternoon, as will junior Kent Lydic and freshman basketball ace Hubie White.

White never tried that event until last spring, when he worked out with Olympian Ira Davis. In but four AAU meets this summer, Hubie mastered the event well enough to jump 47-feet, 2-inches. Davis, in four years of competition, never hit 53-feet.

Sohpomores Henry Neil and Lance Hugelmeyer will compete in the Novice 1000. Freshmen Bob Collins and Art Crowley will run in the handicap 1000.

The freshman mile relay team, which has already won the Washington Star open handicap mile in the rather ordinary time of 3:27.9, will be Bob Raemore, John Mannion, Pat Nicastro and Bob Coffil.

The frosh medley relay team will have Jon Dante running the half-mile; Frank Hagerty, the 440, Carl Wagner, one lap around the Convention Hall boards, and Angelo Sivieri, the mile.

In events for collegians only, soph Norbert McNulty will pole vault, freshman Gerald Dionini will throw the shot, senior Jack Van Deusen and freshmen Leon Pras and Coffil will compete in the high hurdles, and soph MacNamar will run in the two-mile.

'Cats - Cincinnati Game Next Season?

Palestra scuttlebutt has it that the Villanova basketball team will face Cincinnati both next year and also the following year. If the rumor proves true, it shows an attempt to improve a schedule that has been so widely criticized this year.

'59 Gridders Face West Chester, Virginia Tech, and Dayton At Home

By JIM MURRAY

The 'Cats will open the 1959 season by playing last year's opening rival West Chester State Teachers College, a perennial small college powerhouse, on Saturday, September 19, in Goodreau Stadium.

Following West Chester, Villanova will take to the road for their next four games meeting Xavior of Ohio, Holy Cross, Boston College, and Miami of Ohio.

Returning home the 'Cats meet Virginia Tech and Dayton. The team then takes to the road again traveling to West Point to meet the Cadets of Army. They then meet Rutgers, a surprise team of 1958. The Wildcats close the season at Detroit Xavior of Ohio, Holy Cross, Miami of Ohio, Virginia Tech, and Rutgers will be new-comers to the schedule. Virginia Tech last met the Cats in 1957, defeating them down in Virginia, while Rutgers returns to the schedule after a lapse of 26 years, the last meeting being in 1933.

The Wildcats open the 1960 schedule on the road meeting Marquette at Milwaukee on Saturday, September 17. Villanova then plays the Naval Academy at Annopolis or possibly Baltimore.

Following an away game at Dayton, the Wildcats meet the powerful College of Pacific team from Stockton, California, Villanova then travels to West Point and Rutgers on successive Saturdays.

To end the season the Wildcats play their last three games at home when they meet Boston College, Detroit, and Xavior of Ohio, all formidable opponents.

Villanova followers will notice that the Wildcats have scheduled largely Eastern teams in their return to the campus movement.

Villanova Accepts Tournament Bid

Coach and Player in Anticipation

By TOM TROY

Villanova court mentor Al Severance has suddenly found himself a year ahead of schedule —and he doesn't mind a bit.

The silver-haired squire's long-ranged plan for Villanova's climb back to basketball heights received a welcome disruption this week with the University's formal acceptance of a bid to appear in the post-season National Invitation Tournament in Madison Square Garden.

This will be the first time that the Wildcats have played in the NIT, which gets under way March 12. The Main Liners have played in the NCAA tournament four times and hold a 4-4 record in that competition.

Villanova and St. John's — two-time conqueror of Philadelphia's other tournament aspirant, St. Joseph's— were the first two teams to receive and accept NIT bids. Several other teams, among them such powerhouses as St. Bonaventure's and Providence, have received "feelers" from the selection committee.

Ken Norton, head coach at Manhattan College and spokesman for the NIT acceptance committee, numbered the Wildcats among the best teams he has seen in action this year when announcing their selection to the press.

For Severance and his team, the inivitation marked a surprising advance. This year's Villanova five is a young team (three sophomores, a junior and a senior make up the starting five) and while they were expected to compile a fine record against their easier-than-usual opponents, no one expected the excellent mark have recorded thus far.

The Main Liners reeled off eight straight wins to start the season before losing to St. Joe's, and had a 14-4 mark when they accepted the NIT bid.

Not that Severance thinks this year's unit isn't a good team as he explains: "I know we have the freshman team and that a couple of great prospects on we're in the early stages of a building program, but this present team is one that can't be sold short.

"It's a young team—we dress eight sophs—and nobody, especially the reserves, is used to the kind of pressure we'll face in the NIT. That, of course, is going to hurt us a little.

"And we're green. We lack that one intangible that's so important—experience. We'll show that; some of our losses already have resulted directly from that lack of experience.

"But this team has one thing that any team needs, something that's the mark of a true potential champion. And that's heart. Nobody can build up enough of a lead to stop worrying about them, because they can come back—like against St. Bonnies. Another few minutes and we'd have won that one.

"Best of all, we have nothing to lose by going to the NIT, that type of competition can't do anything but help us. And we'll give a good account of ourselves—inexperience or no inexperience."

"This is the way to New York," points Coach Al Severance as he shouts instructions during the Wildcats 85-69 victory over Boston College.

Jim Kenny eyes basket with anticipated success as John Driscoll sets up a perfect pick and Jim Huggard, game's high scorer (24), look on in the Boston College game at the Palestra.

Baseball manager Jim Murray has announced applications are now being accepted for the position of underclass baseball managers.

Geisz Dunked As Swimmers Upset LaSalle

By GENE HEWITT

This might be called the story of how Coach Ed Geisz went for a swim.

Seven years ago the swimmers of LaSalle College began a mastery over Villanova that was to last until last Saturday afternoon in the field house when the 'Cats put forth their finest effort of the season to send the Explorers to the bottom of the pool by a 47-41 score.

Inspired performances by seniors Bob Pinto and co-captain Larry Palacio, along with the usual good performances of Steve Carton and Jm Gregory led the way with important first places.

Palacio displayed a tremendous finishing drive to come from 10 yards behind in the final lap of the 200 butterfly to win by a stroke. On the other hand Pinto was the first to leave the block and the first one back in the 50 freestyle.

Refused to Lose

If one had to single out the finest performances from the tremendous team effort it would have to go to these two men for refusing to be beaten.

The medley relay team of co-captain Frank Keefe, Palacio, Gregory, and Frank Dunn won to open up the meet. Joe Harvey then took third on the 220 freestyle and Pinto and Bob Donahue finished first and third respectvely in the fifty freestyle.

Carton then took the dive and Palacio and Bobby Dow took first and third in the 200 butterfly.

In the 100 freestyle Donahue took third and Keefe took second in losing by a stroke in the 200 backstroke.

Harvey, finishing strong in the 440 freestyle, was just nosed out and had to settle for second. Gregory and palacio took first and third in the 200 breaststroke.

Thrilling Finish

The stage was then set for the final event, the 400 free relay, and the winner of this event would be the winner of the meet.

Frank Dunn led off and grabbed a lead of five yards, and Cassin and Donahue held it through their 100 yards. Pinto left the block and fought off a stern challenge by LaSalle's anchor man by swimming an exceptionally fast anchor.

To celebrate the victory, the Wildcats threw Coach Geisz into the pool while fully clothed.

In meets prior to this one the 'Cats lost to V.M.I. and Army, and took the measure of Penn. Their record is now 4 and 5.

Villanova To Meet Buffalo Before Traveling To N.Y.U.

By JOE FITZPATRICK

After last nights endeavor with Canisius the Cagers of Al Severance have a six day lay-off. Their rest ends on Wednesday, February 18 when they entertain Buffalo at the Palestra.

Previous to last night's game, Villanova had a 3-3 split in six games. Their three wins included victories over St. Francis of Loretto, Boston College and Wagner.

A series of unusual breaks cropped up in the three games on the loss side of the ledger. Buzzer and reporting difficulties caused the heartbreaking loss to Providence. Dubious refereeing was the trouble in the losses to both Duquesne and Saint Bonaventure's.

In action at Altoona, sophomore Richie Kaminski, replacing the injured Jim Kenny, scored 16 points and put Villanova back on the win trail as the 'Cats whipped St. Francis of Loretto 80-69.

Jim Huggard was high scorer for Villanova scoring 21 points. Joe Ryan hit for 19 and Tweetie Driscoll, 15. George Raveling was the rebound leader with 18.

Two nights before the game with St. Francis, Villanova was victimized by incompetent refereeing. The Wildcats dropped a 73-61 decision to Duquesne University.

Duquesne went to the foul line 36 times and converted 31 while the Villanovans were given only 11 free throws, converting seven.

Jim Huggard was again high scorer, hitting on 11 shots from the floor for 22 points. George Raveling and Tweetie Driscoll shared runner-up honors, scoring 13 points each.

Before traveling west the Wildcats dropped Boston College 85-69 and Wagner 72-63.

Against Boston College Jim Huggard started his scoring binge.

After sitting out the first 10 minutes Hug came into the game threw in nine field goals and six fouls for the 24 points and the evening high. Joe Ryan had 22 points and Jim Kenny, 19.

Wagner surprised the 'Cats who were down because of two tough losses, one to St. Bonaventure's and the other to Providence College.

The Seahawks from Long Island hit on 26 of 57 shots to push the 'Cats to a great effort in which George Raveling set the Palestra rebounding record for a regular season game—28.

George also led the Villanova scoring parade, hitting on 12 for 20 shots from the floor and converting three for seven from the charity line for a total of 27 points.

Now the tear-jerkers present themselves.

On Saturday evening, January 24 the Providence Friars, one of the hottest teams in New England, came to the City of Brotherly Love and boy some of the "Brothers" were really good to them.

In fact the friendly Philadelphians pushed buzzers and let them score unmolested and they failed to recognize the Villanovans when the hometowners reported to the scorer. All in all the New Englanders had it pretty soft.

The game went into four overtimes, mainly due to efforts of Joe Ryan, who scored 27 points and grabbed 18 rebounds. All the redheads efforts were in vain because as everyone knows, when Villanova goes into an overtime and needs a break they never get it.

When the Wildcats journeyed to St. Bonaventure's to avenge their loss to Providence they faced the same difficulties that had plaqued them at home— they were forced to play seven men rather than the usual five.

Joe Ryan again put forth a great performance, scoring the highest number of points in his collegiate career—31.

George Raveling tallied 20 points but John Driscoll was in early foul trouble and the Bonnies were gifted with a one and one situation for the last 16 minutes of the game.

Freshmen To Face Cape May In Finale

By DENNIS CARDONE

In their last home game of season, the Freshmen squad entertains the Cape May Coast Guard tomorrow night at the Field House. The South Jersey Servicemen have now become regulars on the Frosh schedule and usually floor a capable team. In the past, the guardians of the coastal waters haven't had too much success with the home forces, but this year they will arrive with a much improved squad.

Even if the game does not provide some competitive interest, and it should, partisans should be on hand to see if Hubie White can continue his scoring rampage. The springlegged basketeer has maintained a 31 point per game average and the followers of Villanova basketball are largely awaiting his arrival into the varsity lineup next year.

A bearded Cuban rebel represents all his fellow revolutionaries as Villanovan writer Jay Touhy junior Arts, holds the Rebels hand over his head in boxing's traditional sign of victory.

Castro's Men More Refined Than Beards Would Suggest

By JAY TOUHY
Special to the Villanovan

"Armed ruffians" was the way one news agency described Fidel Castro and his victorious revolutionary army. Actually nothing could be farther from the truth. On a recent trip to this Carribean hotbox, my parents and I found these Cubans well-mannered, religious, and very friendly.

Our first encounter with the rebels was aboard ship. They had come to welcome the ship at the place we docked. Some of the passengers, however, didn't like the combination of a .45 caliber automatic and a rosary on the men.

A few of the passengers were afraid the Catholic Church had dispensed with peaceful means of conversion, since practically every rebel wore a rosary around his neck, and carried at least one gun. Every rebel we met, however, bent over backwards to be friendly to the Americans.

When we arrived at Havana, we found the city well-populated with soldiers, but very calm and peaceful. We asked a few of the soldiers if we could take their pictures and they willingly obliged. Gratefully we offered them money, but they refused. This surprised us since Castro's soldiers receive only food and clothes as pay.

Looting by Riff-Raff

The reports that there was mass looting in Havana were quite erroneous. There was very little looting and this was done by the riff-raff, not the soldiers. The only evidence of destruction was the damaged parking meters.

Approximately 150 meters along the main boulevard had been decapitated by the same riff-raff. The meters represented one of Batista's sources of graft. We asked our cab driver about them, and he only said "revolucion," laughing.

Cubans are extremely bitter about the ousted regime of Fulencio Batista. There is a special paper in Havana called Revolucion in which appear stories of Batista's atrocities. Included are pictures showing long trenches of mutilated bodies. It is for these crimes and not for personal revenge that Castro and President Manuel Urrutia seek the return of Batista from

Area Police & Attorneys To Hear Wire-tap Debate

A score of local police chiefs and district attorneys have been invited to attend the debate on wire-tapping to be held tonight at the Villanova Law Forum.

Harold Gill Reuschlin, dean of the Villanova Law School, expressed hope that many of these municipal law-enforcement officials would be able to attend the debate, since it concerns a pertinent problem.

Both debaters are prominent Philadelphia legal figures. Victor H. Blanc, city District Attorney since 1956, will defend the discreet use of wire-tapping.

Opposing him will be John Rogers Carrol, prominent Phila. criminal lawyer, who has consistently opposed wiretapping as a violation of constitutional rights.

Moderator for the debate will be Samuel Dash, Phila. attorney and former district attorney. Dash is the author of a treatise on wire-taping to be released in May.

The Law forum session is expected to produce lively debate. Blanc has declared that the work of police officers is curtailed when the court refuses to permit wire-tapping.

Freshmen Elect Tomorrow Shamokinaki Dance Friday

By J. EDGAR LOHR
of the Villanovan Staff

The seventh annual Shamokinaki Dance will be held in the Field House this Friday. The money collected from this dance will go to the support of the Augustinian mission in Nagasaki, Japan.

The Dance originated in 1952 when a group of Villanova students were attending a going away party for a former Villanova Chaplain, The Rev. Thomas Purcell, O.S.A., saddened at Father Purcell's departure to Nagasaki, the students decided to establish a fund raising campaign for his mission.

To secure a name for the dance, the students took the name of Father Purcell's home town of Shamokin, Pa. and added a Japanese ending to give the name significance. This campaign, highlighted by the dance, usually nets over $3000.

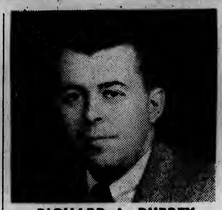
Students Donate

In addition to the dance, space in the program, which is distributed at the dance, is sold to area merchants. Also, donations are asked of all students through collections taken up in the religion classes.

The Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, O.S.A., will again act as moderator for the dance, which will feature music by "The Villanovans" and decorations of an oriental nature.

Bruce Sturm, head of the publicity committee, urged that all students buy tickets whether they are going or not in order to make the dance a huge success.

He also reminds everyone that the Shamokinaki Dance is the only social event of the Lenten Season at Villanova.



First Girl Chairman

Eileen Greyson, head of the program committee, is the first girl ever to be a committee chairman. The ticket committee will be headed by two brothers, Dick and Ken Horn. Jake Krupa will be decorations committee chairman.

Tickets are $1.50 per couple. They will be on sale in the Pie Shoppe daily, in religion classes, and at the door.

Door prizes and spot dance prizes will be awarded throughout the dance, which will run from 9 p.m. to 1 p.m., and refreshments will be served.

Many of the surrounding girls schools are expected to receive late permissions for the affair.

Belle Masque Ticket Sales Start Today

By THOMAS M. WOLFE
of the Villanovan Staff

Tickets for the 1959 Belle Masque show, "Inspector General", will go on sale today in the Pie Shoppe.

They will be on sale every day until next Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., according to Lou Kubinak, ticket chairman.

Tickets will cost one dollar for Villanova students and their dates, and the show will run from Wednesday, February 25, through Sunday, March 1, with show time at 8.30.

The show, a fast moving Russian comedy by Nikoli Gogol will be produced in arena form, in which the stage is surrounded by the audience. The producers expect to achieve a new realism of movement and a closer rapport between the actors and audience.

Satirized Rural Life

The play satirized Russian rural life and the politics of the age in which Gogol lived. Because of its representation of universal human frailities, the play has remained popular for the last hundred years.

Failure of two of the three candidates for the Freshman day-hop Student Council post to pass Administration screening led Elections Committee Chairman John P. Kelley to reopen nominations for this position last week.

Kelley's action was in accordance with the provisions of Article 5, Section 4, b5 of the Student By-Laws.

In essence, this ruling states that if for any reason there is only one candidate running for an office, nominations for this office will be reopened by a class meeting.

The special nominations meeting was held last Friday. Named to run against Dave Gilbert, the only approved candidates for the day-hop seat, were Robert Benson, C and F, and William Long, Arts.

In all, there are now six candidates from which the Freshmen can choose; three of these are seeking the resident Council post and three the day-hop seat.

The candidates who will appear on the ballots at tomorrow's election are—day-hops: Dave Gilbert, Arts; Robert Benson, C and F; and William Long, Arts; and residents: Bruce Beckhold, C and F; Jim McMonagle, Engineering; and William Sabo, Engineering.

Before the special nominations there were nine nominees. Four of these failed to gain the approval of the Administration while one dropped out voluntarily.

Kelley stated that to be eligible for office, the nominees had to have at least a 2.0 average and had to be in good standing with the Dean of Student Activities, the Chaplain and the Dean of Men.

Poor scholastic standing was given as the reason for all the forced withdrawals.

Publications Periled By Vacant Posts

By PAUL A. BUCKLEY
of the Villanovan Staff

The moderator and the president of the Junior Class have taken definite steps toward the filling of vacancies which will be open next year on the VILLANOVAN and the BELLE AIRE staffs.

In a direct appeal, letters have been sent to those students who are known to have had some experience in the field of journalism.

This was announced by the Rev. Thomas Calpin O.S.A., moderator, and by Sheldon Pollock, president of the class of 1960.

Direct Approach

Earlier this year, an appeal was made to members of the class by Pollock. This appeal did not produce sufficient response and consequently, this more direct approach was taken.

The editors of the two publications wish to make it known, however, that previous experience is not required. Those with interest in the publications will find a position.

Larry O'Rourke, editor-in-chief of the VILLANOVAN, emphasized the importance of Junior participation on the paper.

O'Rourke said, "unless Juniors get to work on the paper, there will be no Junior Week edition."

Yearbook Situation

Bob Pinto of the BELLE AIRE pointed out that the current editorial staff of the yearbook is composed mainly of seniors. Only a few Juniors have evidenced any interest in the publication. "Unless this situation improves," said Pinto, "there will be no yearbook."

The same situation prevails on the Villanovan, with all but one of the editorial posts being filled by seniors.

"It is the responsibility of the Junior Class to see that these publications are available to the student body," said O'Rourke.

Blood Donors To Enlist Now

Applications for the annual blood drive sponsored by the American Red Cross will be received tomorrow and Friday in Dougherty Hall. The drive will be held on March 4 and 5 in Alumni gym between 10:30 and 3:30.

The chairmen for this year's drive are Bruce Irving, senior Mechanical Engineering and Ralph Reynolds, senior Civil Engineering. Irving will serve as the overall chairman, with Reynold's directing the NROTC program.

Irving announced that students between the ages of 18 and 21 are eligible to give blood. Those students who are under 21 years of age must obtain permission from their parents.

Students may acquire applications in Room 131, Mendel Hall, after March 3.

V.U. Singers

The Villanova Singers presented a concert, followed by a social, at Cabrini College Tuesday, February 10.

Belle Masque Histronics

Members of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society intently watch two of their actors rehearse parts in the Society's forthcoming production, "The Inspection General," a Russian farce by Nicholai Gogol.

Belle Masque

It was last seen on Broadway when brought over by the Studio Company of Moscow in 1935. The lead role was played by Michel Chekhov, grandson of another Russian playwright, Anton Chekhov.

As a satire, it aroused many of the theatergoers in Moscow when first produced in 1936. Its humor is not intentional. The humor of "Inspector General" lies in its exaggeration of character that flow from the pen of Gogol.

Contemporary Implications

What he expresses is sufficiently universal to apply to the contemporary world. The audience will probably be reminded of the modern means of dispersing scandal—from the backyard fence to the Nation's capital.

Mr. Richard A. Duprey, head of Villanova's new Graduate program in Drama, is for the third straight year directing the show.

Included in the cast are John Barlas, junior pre-law major, Raymond Kantra, junior chemistry major, Anthony Provenzano, Alan Willig, Lincoln Hallowell, John Cannon, and Peter Allard.

Michael Keating is stage manager, and crew chief heads are Ted Glinka, Hap Georges, Paul Ford, and George Becht.

Reimel Award To Certiorari Club

The Certiorari Club, represented by John T. Grablewski and William Griffin won the annual petition.

Grablewski and Griffin were opposed by the Hughes Club's John Hall and Peter P. Smith.

The final round saw the teams argue before the Honorable Peter F. Hagan, President Judge of Common Pleas No. 1, Philadelphia County, the Honorable Morris Gerber, Judge of the Common Pleas Court Montgomery County, and the Honorable Harold K. Wood, United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

By winning, the Certiorari Club became the recipient of the cash award offered each year by the Honorable Theodore Reimel of Court of Common Pleas No. 5, Philadelphia.

WVIL Denounces Laxity In Student Council Plans

By THOMAS C. GOLDSCHMIDT
of the Villanovan Staff

The Student Council has been challenged to supervise the preparations for Villanova's participation in the National Invitational Basketball Tournament in New York, starting on March 12.

The News and Sports department of WVIL, the campus radio station, in an editorial delivered by director John Oberlies last Tuesday, said that it expects the Council to procrastinate until the last minute and then to hand the work over to Bruce Irving and the Spirit Committee.

WVIL feels that the annual Student Council "free day" should be slated during the NIT tournament so that students may more easily attend at least one of the tourney games.

During last Wednesday's Student Council meeting a proposal to designate the "free day" was temporarily tabled. Council President Bob Murphy told the VILLANOVAN that he has an open mind as to what day will be chosen.

May Day Seen Set

However, Oberlies, in the WVIL editorial, said that he understood "the Council is pretty well convinced that the day off will be in May, two weeks before the final examinations."

The editorial called upon the students to contact their representatives on the Council and tell them which day they would prefer to have free.

"Granted that a free day in May would create a 'long' weekend as a break in the uninterupted stretch of eight school weeks from Easter to the end of the semester," said Oberlies. "I'd like to have that break as much as the next guy."

"But the day off during the NIT would aid the school, not the individual student," he continued. "This is the first time that Villanova has appeared in the NIT and I think we should try to make a good impression, and at the same time give our young basketball team plenty of support.

Too Much Work

The editorial reminded the students that the Spirit Committee had to do an undue amount of work in a short space of time when Villanova played Army in football at West Point last November.

"We put on quite a display of school spirit up there thanks to the unselfish work of a few persons," said Oberlies, "but it could have been better, and the work could have been spread out more evenly."

The solution, according to Oberlies, lies in the Student Council's immediately undertaking complete supervision of the NIT plans, starting by slating the "free day" during the tourney.

Paar to Pick Senior Queen

Jack Paar, star of the "Tonight" T. V. show, has consented to judge all pictures entered in the 1959 Senior Prom Queen contest.

The pictures will be sent to Paar in New York, and the winner will be announced on April 18, the evening of the Prom.

Senior History major John D. Kelly, a member of the Prom committee was responsible for securing Paar as the judge for the contest.

Entries are now being accepted in either 122 Sheehan or in the Student Activities office. The deadline for all entries is March 4.

The following information should be printed on the back of each picture submitted by a Villanova Senior: his name, his major, his date's name, her school or occupation, her hometown, her height, color of hair, color of eyes, and her age. Each photo must be at least five by three inches.

Engineering Tests

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering announced that the Engineer-in-Training Examination will be given on Saturday, May 2. Applications must be in by April 13.

Penna. IRS Convene Here March 13-14

The Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Clubs will hold its annual convention at Villanova on March 13-14 under the auspices of our campus I.R.S.

President of the I.R.S. is Robert Rafano. Vice-president is Clinton Chin, who is also president of the Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Clubs. Chin is a foreign student from Jamaica, British West Indies. Co-chairmen of the convention are Bob Rafano and J. P. Kelly.

The convention is being held expressly for the purpose of discussing the recent problems in the Middle East.

A meeting of the I.R.S. has been called for tonight. at 7:30 p.m. in 207 Mendel Hall. Plans for the convention will be discussed. In addition, tentative arrangements have been made for an Israelian speaker.

Committees formed to handle the situation that will arise from the convention are as follows: Banquet, Hotel Accommodation, Social, Speaker and Scheduling, Group Discussion, and Publicity.

These committees will be under the following chairman in the above order: Bob Rafano, Richard Faulk, J. P. Kelley, John Castano, and Joe Monahan.

Night School Offers New Computers Cour

An Evening Course on "Indoctrination to Digital Computers", with special Emphasis on Univac Scientific, will be given starting tomorrow between 7-9 p.m. and continuing for fifteen lectures.

Although no credit is received, a certificate will be awarded upon the completion of the course. An entrance fee of $40.00 will be required of those who sign up for the course.

Mr. Ted Sable, an instructor at the Sherry-Rand Corporation, will conduct the course.

The advantages of the course are two two-fold. First, it offers a "ticket" for jobs in the field of digital computers. Secondly, preparation for more advanced courses in the Fall is given.

Price of Directory Expected to Rise

Subscriptions to the student directory will continue on sale until Friday in the Pie Shoppe.

The Student Council sponsored directory, which will list every student in the University and his home address, will go to print following the deadline date.

Rather than have the University take a loss, the Council will print only as many copies as have been subcribed. Originally, 1000 copies were planned but to date only 350 subscriptions have been received.

The tentative price of 75 cents, first set by the Council, may have to be raised because the estimate was made on an expected sale of 1000 copies. However, the price will not exceed $1, the Council announced. A 50 cent deposit is required.

Villanova SAM Chapter To Host March Conference

The Villanova Chapter will be the host for the eleventh annual conference of the Society for the Advancement of Management on Thursday, March 12.

The conference, which has for its theme "The Science of Management", will take place at the Commerce and Finance Bulidng.

Attending will be representatives from universities and colleges belonging to the Philadelphia Student Chapters.

Registration at 1:30 P.M. followed by a tour of the campus will commence the day's events. At 2:15 the conference will get under way with the invocation given by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O.S.A., Dean of the Commerce and Finance Division of Villanova.

Villanova President Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., will then give the welcome address. Following this, Mr. James A. Marley, president of the Villanova Chapter, will introduce the guests and conference theme.

At 2:45, three simultaneous panel discussions will be presented. These include "The Future Requirements of Management"; "Computers as a Tool of Management"; and "What Management Expects of the University Graduate."

Midway in the afternoon session there will be a brief intermission permitting a student to move in on one of the other panel discussions.

At 5:30 there will be a dinner at the Conestoga Mill. Following this the gorup will return to the Commerce and Finance Building at 7:30 for an after-dinner meeting at which there will be a speech on the "Philosophy of Management."

Debate Team Wins Five At Harvard Meet

Two Villanova Debaters attended the forensic tournament at Harvard University last week and posted five victories and three losses.

Frank Cunningham and Jim Corey, both senior political Science majors and officers of Beta Gamma Debating Society, represented Villanova at the sixth annual tournament.

The topic of this year's debate was: Resolved—that the further development of nuclear weapons be prohibited by international agreement.

Both Sides Debated

One team from each college debated, in alternate rounds, both the affirmative and negative sides of the topic.

Villanova's wins were registered against Grinnel College, the University of Connecticut, Trinity College, Temple University and St. Michael's College.

Losses were suffered to Tufts, Providence and Syracuse College of Forrestry.

Attain Semi-Finals

Seventy-two schools attended the tournament with M. I. T., Northwestern, Pittsburgh and Ohio State attaining the semi-final round.

Villanova has been invited to compete in several tournaments in the future, including debates at Kings College, New York University, Brooklyn College and the district final eliminations at Seton Hall University.

Finance Society Plans Wash. Trip

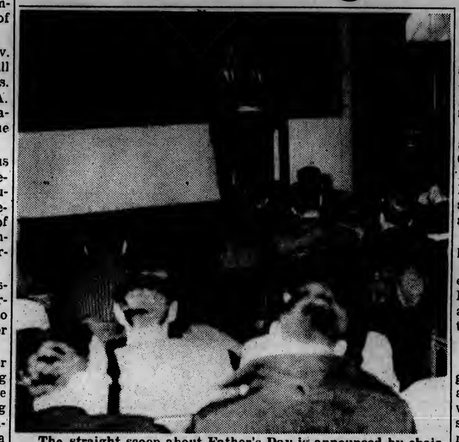
The Villanova Finance Society will travel to Washington, D.C. next Tuesday for their annual field trip.

The Society will visit such places of interest as the Smithsonan Institute, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and the Baltimore-Washington Stock Exchange.

For the past few years, the organization has visited New York. Since many members had been there several times, Washington was chosen as this year's destination.

Room is available for 41 students, so those finance majors interested should contact Lou Kubinack, Room 144, Sullivan. The price is five dollars, round trip.

Foreign Affiliations Acquired by WVIL



To add interest and education to their program, WVIL has secured affiliations with the British Broadcasting Corporation, the French Broadcasting Corporation, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the Japanese Broadcasting Corporation, and the American Education Association.

These programs are now available for campus organizations and educational departments of the University through WVIL. WVIL plans to schedule these programs for broadcast if requested.

The organization requesting the program must pay only the actual cost of the broadcast, a spokesman for the station said.

Since WVIL does not, own a tape recorder, organizations that wish to sponsor the taped broadcasts must supply their own. Persons interested in this new program can contact Gary N. Mara, WVIL Program Director.

Bucks County Spot Probable For '59 Parting Festival

The straight scoop about Father's Day is announced by chairman Don Kempf at last Thursday's Senior Class meeting in Vasey Hall Auditorium. Kempf stated that so far no one has been signed to speak at the Father's Day dinner.

By LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE
of the Villanovan Staff

The final Class of 1959 undergraduate activity, the Parting Festival, will probably be held this year at the Fountainhead, near New Hope, Bucks County.

This was revealed last week at the senior class meeting by Oscar Scogna, president.

"The affair was held at the Bucks County spot two years ago," Scogna said, "and it was a huge success."

"There is a large swimming pool and plenty of picnic area."

Scogna said he had been dickering with operators of the Medford Lakes, N. J., Park, for an option to hold the festival there.

Share With Others

"We would have to share the grounds with 100 members of another club, and that we do not wish to do," Scogna told the some 150 seniors attending the meeting.

The festival is now scheduled for Saturday, May 30, the day after the final exam session and the day before the Bacculaureate Mass.

Graduation is planned for Monday, June 1.

Other topics discussed at the meeting included a proposed senior class jazz concert, Senior Weekend, with prom and dinner dance, and Father's Day.

'Rolling Meadows' Needed

"The only thing needed now in order to have a jazz concert is a rolling meadow," Jazz chairman Don Kempf announced.

"This meadow should be in the vicinity of Villanova, and you know, be rolling just the right situation for a modern jazz outfit."

Kempf said that he hoped the money raised from the jazz concert and other class functions could be used to provide a stained-glass window for the proposed seminary chapel.

On the subject of money, Scogna said that the class had only $756 in the treasury. Much of this will soon go for contract advances to the Senior Weekend bands.

Tickets on Sale

"Buy your tickets early," Scogna said twice, "You get a better selection and we get the money."

He pointed out that tickets for both weekend functions go on sale March 2. "The prom will probably cost $2500," Scogna said.

Dinner dance chairman Harry Devlin announced the Paul Judge orchestra would provide the music for the Saturday night affair at the Broadwood Hotel.

Tickets will be priced at $11.50, he said.

Speaker Needed

Father's Day, May 9, was the last item discussed during the 35 minute meeting at Vasey Hall auditorium.

"We still need a speaker for Father's Day," Kempf said, "any suggestions ?"

In response to a question from the floor, he revealed that the day would be ticketed at $5, and there would be only one meal instead of the traditional two.

Scogna closed the meeting by asking for continued senior support. He said that there are still openings on several committees.

Students Express Opinion Of School Food Tomorrow

The Student Union and Special Problems Committee of the Student Council will sponsor a food poll, tomorrow, in order to determine the daily menu likes and dislikes of the resident students.

Forms, listing the meals served in the resident cafeteria, will be available at the head of the ramp. Students are asked to complete the forms and drop them in the boxes provided at the cafeteria exits, no later then Friday night.

Fred Wiele, co-chairman of the Student Union Committee, urges all students to fill out the forms conscientiously, and not to judge any dishes with which they are not familiar.

A space will be provided students' suggestions on improving the food situation.

Rofinot Lectures on American Technology

Dr. Henry L. Rofinot will speak on "The Deadline and Fall of Agrarian America" at a meeting of the Villanova chapter of the American Association of American Professors in the Faculty Lounge of Dougherty Hall at eight o'clock tomorrow night.

Dr. Rofinot a member of the History department here since 1947, will discuss the American technological revolution in agriculture from its inception following World War I to the present.

The speaker is considered to be well-versed in his topic, having studied under historian Allan Nevins, formerly of Columbia University.

GIVE BLOOD

Senior Class Problems Disscussed

Don Kempf, Father's Day chairman and Harry Devlin, Senior Dinner Dance chairman, help Senior Class president Oz Scogna worry about class finances at last week's class meeting.

Why Does Sen. Kennedy Oppose Papal Ambassador?

"For 170 years, the U.S. Constitution has decreed that 'no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.' Despite this, both parties have applied a religious test, with but one exception, since heir founding. The Democrats may erase this test next year, banishing the unspoken warning to presidential candidates: 'Protestants only need apply.'"

The above is a direct quote from an article that appeared on the news stands in LOOK magazine yesterday, written by Fletcher Knebel of the biweekly publication's Washington staff and headlined "Democratic Forecast: A Catholic in 1960." The article dealt with, obviously, the pre-eminence of Catholic presidential candidates in the Democratic party, with particular emphasis on the party's front-running Massachusetts senator, John F. Kennedy.

The story was just one of many along the same line, all of which point out the changes in the political outlook of Americans in regard to the religious question since the days of Al Smith. The change was manifested in statistics given early in the report:

"Catholic Democrats in 1958 won the governorships of seven states, two as repeats; the party now has eight Catholic governors. Also, eight Catholic Democrats, four of them newcomers, won election to the U.S. Senate, to increase the number of Catholic Democrats in the Senate to 12."

The article went on to point out impressive victories recorded by Catholics in the last election and show that a Catholic (presumably Kennedy) could very likely be nominated in '60.

That brings up several questions to be answered by the Catholic candidate, if for no other purpose than to reassure the Protestant voters who might fear that his religious beliefs might interfere with his political duties.

Kennedy, in making a stand on the most talked-about of the problems often presented to a Catholic, opposed Federal support of parochial schools, opposed the sending of an ambassador to the Vatican and urged the strict separation of church and state.

The separation of church and state has always been a part of our American system, and we can understand easily Kennedy's opposition to Federal funds for private schools; for, as the senator says, such is forbidden by the first amendent. On the other point, however, we're not so clear.

Kennedy reasons this way: "I am flatly opposed to the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican. Whatever advantages it might have in Rome—and I'm not convinced of these—they should be more than offset by the divisive effect at home." In other words, it would seem that there is no reason for not sending an ambassador to the Vatican except that such might not be a popular move with United States Protestant voters.

There has never been an official ambassador to Rome from this country, but former President Harry S. Truman did have an unofficial representative in the Vatican. It seems to us that the Roman Catholic Pope, just by virtue of his position as spiritual leader of millions of men, would warrant diplomatic recognition by this country—regardless of the religion of the president.

Unless Senator Kennedy can give some adequate reasons for opposing Vatican recognition, we're afraid it's going to look like he's playing politics.

Any Catholic candidate will have a tough road to travel, and will probably have to give his views on his religion and its effects on his position as an official of the state.

But he's going to have to give sound and adequate reasons for every thing he says, or else in trying for the Protestant vote he may lose that of the Catholics.

Just Another Peaceful Winter Night

By LARRY O'ROURKE

Sixty cops talk as only emotional men can. They are in the harsh and unpretentious roll call room of a center city police district.

Half of these men are finished their eight hours against man's barbarism to man. The others are beginning their tour.

A pair of bluecoats less than 55 minutes before raised a 15-year-old male from a gutter fewer than ten steps to a bar while ten streets to a playground.

One of the others, not yet 24 and father of two healthy daughters, routinely finishes a report.

At 9.22 p.m. he turned a sharp corner into the middle of raging knife fight. He stepped quickly between two wild would be slashers. Startled, they halt their battle and flee. Just as startled, the badge stands there. A dropped eight-inch switchblade lies at his feet.

He'll walk the same beat tomorrow night.

Two cops fill out a routine "48". At 8.32 they get a report of "man with gun." They drive to the three-story apartment building in which 13 families call home.

The cops go up the front stairs. Their pistols are in their hands. Between them, they parent nine children. Nobody's at the top. It was a hoax.

Just a routine "48".

In the same district that night there were three holdups, four pocketbook snatches, one shooting, and an attemped rape. There were three arrests. The upstairs detective division has the problems now.

The problems of the big and small, who live and work in these 3.2 square miles, always arrive at the district.

In charge of all this is a tall solid energetic man less than 40. He's the captain, the guy who gives back-pats for jobs well done. He's the first to raise Hell when there's trouble.

He sits on the desk in his ten by fifteen office. A map of the sector marked by red dots is attached to the rear wall. Confidential is marked on the index card inserted in the front of a filing cabinet.

The Captain's desk is covered with communiques from the Commissioner, messages from headquarters and gripes from the citizens. They don't get the same consideration.

In all he has 110 men to direct. They have as many varied personalities. They have more problems than most.

The Captain has the reputation of being able to impress a witness. He isn't afraid to hold his blackjack during the interrogation.

These cops are real. This Captain is no figment of an imagination. I watched them all for two hours last week. I'll do the same thing this weekend.

I'll come away as usual a little more impressed with the dispensation of justice. It's amazing how reality beats television.

LaSalle College Students Raise $6,000 In Bell Drive

By JOHN M. HONE
of the Villanovan Staff

After a long and arduous campaign of selling chances and soliciting donations from private sources, LaSalle College has secured the necessary funds for the purchase of a bell system.

The campaign was started last October by students of the college desiring to give LaSalle something, according to the LaSalle Collegian, that "would have a lasting effect both on the students and the college itself."

During the drive, many ideas were utilized to raise the desired $10,000.

A Bell-Donation Day, where for each $100.00 collected, there was a two minute ringing of bells; a mile of Dimes Day (reportedly stretching from the campus to Broad st. and Erie ave.)

Broad Street Subway cashiers reported that they were collecting more dimes as fares that day than any other day in their history, dances, and intramural basketball games.

Prizes offered for students selling the greatest number of chance books included: key chains containing bell images, a record entitled "Around The World on a Carilion," and replicas of the Liberty Bell.

The campaign was a success with over $6,000 being collected. The bell system installation will take place shortly, their campaign manager reported.

For the past few weeks there have been reports of further activities on the LaSalle campus. One student was heard to say that he has high hopes of selling a bell that he has stored in Independence Hall if he can cover up the huge crack in it.

There are still a few students around that dislike snap courses. In Holy Cross College's newspaper The Heights an editorial blasted the quality of the Theology courses offered to the students.

It complained that the courses were geared to those students with no prior religious training; that it was "boring" to relearn doctrines that had been previously learned in the third grade Baltimore Catechism.

It advised that the college should make a distinction between the advanced and beginning student, with courses being offered to suit the needs of each. The editorial appealed for the end of the "endless succession of rotten exercises".

Catholic University has begun an attack on the sloppy attire of some college students. Recently proposed rules on dress include: the outlawing of jeans, overalls and levis on campus, the end of "T shirts" as outer garments; and in regard to the coeds, curlers, bermudas, slacks and jeans are to be prohibited in walking through the campus.

Until a few years ago, there was no problem at Villanova about curlers. Old time students tell of the one student back in 1950 that did wear curlers, but only until someone sneaked into his room one night and made off with his wig—the curlers in it. Since then his idol has been Yul Brynner.

Teachers Not Necessary?

Editor's Note: The question as to whether teachers are necessary beings has been debated rather heatedly among local philosophers of late. The VILLANOVAN herewith presents an analysis of the problem, formulated by Mr. Paul Yurchak, who calls himself "an astoundingly brilliant scholastic philosopher."

Whether the Teacher Is a Necessary Being ?

We proceed thus to the First Article:

Obj. 1. It would seem that the teacher is a necessary being, for without him students could not learn. This is evident in the words of Dr. Houde: "What do you think about that?" Since thinking is the mode of learning, the teacher, as cause of the thoughts of students, is a necessary being.

Obj. 2. Further, the act of knowledge is manifested by the intelligent actions of the knower. Now students fail to act intelligently unless directed and taught. Dr. O'Shea testifies to this when he says "What shall we do with these animals?" Therefore the teacher is necessary as director and guide to the students.

Obj. 3. Further, the teacher is a necessary being, inasmuch as there must be an intermediary between the students and the great thinkers. Now students cannot recognize greatness unless it be pointed out to them, and this is the office of the teacher.

Obj. 4. Further, it is necessary that students be tested on their knowledge, for the Philosopher says "The proof of the pudding-head is in the testing." Now only teachers are qualified to test, since they alone know the real meaning of the questions.

On the contrary. It is said in the Student Handbook: "For we have these three, students, administration and teachers, and the greatest of these is the student."

I answer that, The Handbook is right in asserting this truth, for the teacher exists at the will of the administration. Therefore the administration is the cause of the teacher and the student the cause of all other difficulties. And the gloss adds that the administration exists for the student, and therefore he is supreme. Further, the mind of the student is unmoved by the teacher, since only his notebook is filled. In moving the teacher to despair, the student assumes his rightful role as unmoved mover. Again, teachers are merely people. This can readily be proved from causality. A thing may be said to be caused in four respects: formally, efficiently, materially and finally. Now a teacher is not formally caused since he has received his form from no other, for who would take the blame? Neither is he efficiently caused, since his wife must correct the homework. Nor is he materially caused, since knowledge is immaterial. Lastly, he cannot be finally caused, as is evident by his need of sabbaticals. Therefore the teacher is not a necessary being.

Reply Obj. 1 To say that the teacher is the cause of the thoughts of students is plainly false, for teachers themselves testify to the contrary: In the words of Father Sullivan: "You're not thinking!" Therefore the teacher is not a necessary being.

Reply Obj. 2. The argument from direction is specious, inasmuch as students do not act intelligently under any circumstances. This is evident from the fact that students never draw from the true source of learning—the library—for Father Falvey is wont to remark, "It's so peaceful in here."

Reply Obj. 3. Students readily recognize greatness, for, as they say of football weekends, "That's great!"

Reply Obj. 4. On this point the madness of David of Dinant stands confounded. He dared to assert that there is real meaning in examination questions on the ground that if there were not, the examination would be idle. David's position was the result of ignorance. He did not know how to distinguish between answer and knowledge. Now, the answer is the transferral of the lecturer's words to correspond to his question, through the medium of the pony. Something is called knowledge when it can be used to make money. Thus we read, in the Gospel of Nicodemus "Knowledge is the means to comfort," as any student knows.

The Zode

I sat upon the ground one day,
On a hill by an open road.
I saw some children laugh and play,
Unaware of an ugly zode.

The zode was dark and quite decayed—
A zodeness that instills great fear.
But the kids saw him not—and stayed,
And they sang as the zode grew near.

The zode lashed out with all his hate,
And the children began to cry.
And then that night, as if by fate,
All the children began to die.

Now as I sit upon the ground,
On that hill by the open road,
New children laugh and play around—
Approached by that same ugly zode.

Close Poetry Analysis

BY DONALD KEMPF
of the Villanovan Staff

Often at social gatherings or when delivering lectures I am questioned in regard to my poetry. Eventually the conversation concerns itself with perhaps the most popular—yet least understood — of my poem, "The Zode".

The Zode as it was written while I was studying art in Spain, bears the general characteristics of my "cubist phase" works. And like so many of the other spontaneous work of my cubist phase, it is only now, in retrospect, that I am able to determine and analyse the factors that influenced my writing of the poem.

The poem was written as I sat upon the ground one day on a hill by an open road a few miles from the villa where I was staying. As I suggested in "Poems from the Villa" (Rephar Press, New York, 1948), the villa itself greatly influenced my thinking at this time, for it was there that I first met and worked with Rene Dupre.

Follows Aneximander

The question of the difference between an open road and a closed one has been puzzling philosophers since Thales. I have accepted, for the sake of clarity and convenience, the doctrine of open roads as expounded by Anexamander and Kerouac.

The meter in the third stanza is exactly the same as that used by John Milton in "Il Penseroso," and, incidentally, exactly the same as that of the other three stanzas of "The Zode."

It was in "The Zode" that I used my ASDFGHJKL:@ rhyme scheme for the first time, abandoning the less dynamic asdfghjkl;c which I had been using up to this period.

Although I was probably unaware of it at the time, I now feel quite certain that the dovenshister allusions in the second stanza were inspired by John Crowe Ransom's "Philomela" in which he clearly states (sixth stanza):

"There was no more villainous day to unfill, the diuturnity was still."

Subconsclous Effect

And the symbolism no doubt represents the subconscious effect of my extensive contact with the works of Rimbaud and Mallarme' while I lived with Rene' Dupre'.

The children represent more than the young age and spirit. In them we see the working classes, the poor but rising farm laborers, the liberal reformers struggling against the economic dictates of a false world—confident, yet doomed—and, perhaps, even the whole of human society.

The conflict may be identified with any struggle in which man partakes, and the outcome suggests that, while most struggles are futile, it is the conflict itself which is important—and not the outcome. As Jean Anouilh has already stated, it is the continuation of a struggle by a person, knowing a negative decision to be the absolute and only result possible, from which nobility is derived.

As to the symbolism of the zode, as such, I have left it in the past, and will continue to leave it forever, entirely with the reader, for I feel that each man has his own personal zode.

To some the zode is the cleric, to others he is the anti-cleric, and, while one man holds it to be the intellectual, his counterpart believes it to represent the anti-intellectual. And thus the zode could be whatever you would make it.

Perhaps it is only a four-letter word rhyming with road.

Sales to Start March 1 For Senior Dinner Dance

Tickets for the annual Senior dinner dance will go on sale Monday, March 2.

The tickets will be available early, in order to obtain an idea of how many will attend the affair. Seniors are urged to purchase their tickets early to help the committee in this respect.

The dinner dance, following the Senior Prom, is the last big senior activity, and a theme has been formulated.

No orchestra has yet been named for the affair. However, Paul Judge is under serious consideration because of the acceptable job he did last year at the dance.

Harry F. Devlin, Jr. is chairman of the dinner dance, and Johnny Fichetti and Lou Desiderio have charge of tickets. Greg Dean is responsible for the band and photographers, while Tony Rossi's job is publicity.

Others responsible for making the affair a success are Bill McCann, food preparations; Walt Einhorn, programs; Frank Lamprecht and Joe Cooke, decorations; Tom Brady, floral arrangements; and Joe Monahan, "Special Effects".

Sigma XI Branch To Be Formed At V.U.

Dr. William J. Rice, Chemical Engineering professor, announced faculty Sigma Xi members have formed a committee in order to establish a branch of the Society at Villanova.

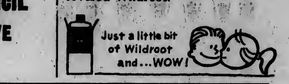
The purpose of the Society is to encourage original investigation in the sciences both pure and applied.

Membership in Sigma Xi is opened to all Chemistry, Physics, Biology, Mathematics, Philosophy, Psychology teachers.

At a future date senior majors in these departments will be admitted.

Position Openings Announced by WVIL

WVIL announced recently that a limited number of positions are now available for ten announcers, five men in business, five engineers (technical and operating), four in public relations, and five in news and sports.



Auditions will be held only tomorrow from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. and on Friday, from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Frosh Elections

The election will be tomorrow from 9:30 until 3:30. This is considered ample time for any freshman, no matter what his schedule, to cast his vote. The polls will be located in Alumni Hall Gymnasium.

Included in this issue of the Villanovan are pictures and short biographies of many of the candidates. The Elections Committee Chairman has urged that the voters read these biographies carefully in order to best judge the candidates.

"This is a very important election," he said, "because the students chosen will represent their class not only for the remainder of this year but mainder of this year but throughout all of next year."

"Since the winning candidates must represent Freshman interests among more experienced upper classmen, they must be of an exceptional character. High integrity, a strong personality and above average ability should be the final considerations when the voter is making his choice," Kelley added.

On tomorrow only, the Student Council's election rules permit the use of microphones and public address systems. They They can be employed only between classes, however. In addition, posters may be placed around Alumni Hall.

Campaigning at the polls will be prohibited for an area of 10 feet in front of thes taairs leading into the Gym.

Freshmen Candidates For Student Council Seats

Engineer from Philadelphia's LaSalle High. Member frosh basketball team. Active in sports, math club in high school. Junior Achievement President of the Year last year. Advocates thorough student government.

WILLIAM BARO
Graduated Marmion Military Academy, Aurora, Illinois. Studying engineering. Basketball, track and officer's club were high school activities. An engineer for WVIL and a candidate for NROTC.

BRUCE H. BECHOLD
From Cleveland Heights, Ohio. Attended Gilmour Academy in suburban Cleveland. An C and P student, made Dean's list last semester. Plans to study law.

William Long
Attended Brooklyn Prep and Monsignor Bonner High. An athlete, journalist and debator in high school. In Arts division at Villanova. Member of N.R.O.T.C. and Spirit Committee.

Robert Benson
Graduate of Monsignor Bonner High. Member of swimming and rifle teams in high school. Also served on many student committees including prom committee.

Dave Gilbert
Graduated third at Malvern Prep. Student Council representative, year-book editor, swimming team captain, cheerleader, debater while there. Experienced in student government. "Already has proven sincerity, devotion at Villanova."

The students pictured are the candidates in the Freshman Student Council Representative elections to be held tomorrow in Alumni Gym from 9.30 until 3.30.

Space was donated by the Villanovan so that the Freshmen might see the candidates and know something about them and their past records.

While the Villanovan staff reworded the biographies they were actually written by the candidates themselves.

Moritz Calls Job Outlook Brighter Now

The outlook for this year's crop of college graduates appears brighter than it was last year, John J. Moritz, placement director at Villanova, said last week.

The placement office completed the first part of a nine week recruiting period designed to find jobs for nearly 500 prospective graduates.

Representatives of more than 150 business and industrial organizations will visit the campus during the period.

Employers Cautious

"Most of the representatives who have visited us so far are cautious about present employment" Moritz says.

But they seem to feel that the next few months will see continued economic recovery and by June the employment situation should be improved."

The placement director doesn't forsee the same job opportunities that existed in 1956 and 1957 but sees definite improvement over last year.

Engineers Highest Paid

Engineers still seem to be the most widely sought and the best paid. A Villanova graduate engineer can expect a salary of between $450 and $525.00 per month to start.

Non-engineers can expect to make between $400 and $450.00 per month.

Cuba

his refuge in the Dominican Republic.

Batista also managed to take with him $6 million, which has practically depleted the Cuban treasury, another reason why the Cuban authorities would like to get hold of the ex-dictator.

Joy Over Revolt

Everywhere in Havana we saw evidence of Cuban joy in the new government. On the on, were "26 de Julio," "Viva Fidel", and other revolutionary walls, written in chalk and craycries. Even the buses carried signs saying "Gracias Fidel."

Castro possesses at this moment unbelievable popularity; you cannot pas a store window without seeing his picture. To Cubans, he not only represents their cause—Fidel Castro is Cuba.

Even the merchants are taking advantage of the revolution. On the sidewalks they sell army hats, pictures of Fidel, and pins on which are imprinted the number "6" in the rebel colors, red and black.

Located in Havana is one of the most beautiful night clubs in the world, the Tropicana. It is roofless and has beautiful palm trees growing out of the floor. Its beauty is exceeded only by its prices.

Wear No Rifles

During the show the soldiers would walk in, dressed in formal attire (no rifles, only pistols), and sit at the tables. They never drank anything and behaved very well. After dancing with the chorus girls for a while, they got up and left as peacefully as they had come in.

There are many plush hotels in Havana, the most luxurious being the Riveria (thirty-eight dollars per day, per person, without meals). These hotels are all doing only about one-sixth of their normal business now because Castro had not yet lifted his ban on gambling, even for tourists.

There is also an absence of Jai alai, because of the fact that most of the interest is centered around betting on the winner. It has the same type of fan appeal as our horse racing. No gambling, no interest.

The youngest rebel we met was sixteen (at far right on the picture). Many were under nineteen, and all, if physically capable, grew beards. If this could not be achieved they would let their hair grow to their shoulders, and a few of the braver patriots wore their hair in pony tails.

Looking back on our days in Havana, we all hoped we had impressed the Cubans as favorably as they had impressed us.

Villanovan Promotes Four, Dynan News Staff Executive

Frank J. Dynan, senior general Arts major and editor of the LYNX, was today named executive news editor of the VILLANOVAN.

Dynan was named to this just-created position after serving nearly a year as news editor.

Succeeding him in the news editor spot is Paul A. Buckley, senior English major and former campus news editor.

William Speers, freshman Arts student, was named campus editor to succeed Buckley.

Discussion Held

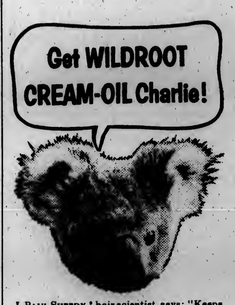
The editoral switches were announced by editor Lawrence M. O'Rourke, Jr., senior English major, with the approval of the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O. S. A., moderator.

The new positions were revealed after a discussion among O'Rourke, John J. Curtin, managing editor, and Thomas C. Goldschmidt, associate editor. Both are senior English majors.

An Accounting major was named to the revived position of exchange editor. He is senior John M. Hone.

William Christmann, senior engineering student and coordinator of the student director, resigned his position as copy editor.

The editorial switches, O'Rourke explained, are designed to serve as an impetus to VILLANOVAN effort.



Positions Available

The change is also meant to demonstrate to underclassmen the editorial positions on the student newspaper available next year. All editors but one on this year's staff are seniors.

Speers, the freshman, is the lone underclassman serving in an editorial capacity.

The switch went hand-in-hand with recent Junior Class action to get interested students active on student publications.

Both O'Rourke and Robert Pinto, editor of the Belle Aire, have already warned that the publication picture at Villanova for next year is dark.

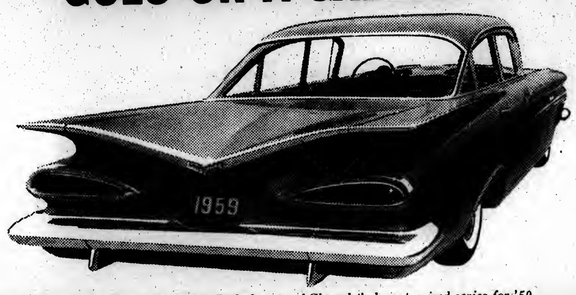
Credit Given For Physics T. V. Course

Villanova graduate division will offer academic credit during the spring semester for a nationwide, atomic age physics course given over the National Broadcasting Company's television network.

The Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., dean of the university's graduate division announced today that Villanova would give credit for the successful completion of the second semester course of "Continental Classroom", an early morning NBC program devoted to the study of nuclear physics.

The five day week, 6:30 to 7:00 a.m. telecast is intended to provide students with up to date information concerning recent developments in the field of physics.

Professor William G. Driscoll, chairman of Villanova's department of physics will supervise the course at the university.



The program is seen on 149 television stations throughout the nation and is sponsored by the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education and NBC.

The second semester will begin on February 11.

Three semester hours credit will be given for the completion of the course, Father Rongione said.

All queries for participation in the course should be directed to William G. Driscoll, Chairman of the Department of Physics, Villanova University, Villanova Pa.

More miles are back in a gallon of regular-grade gas—up to 10% more—and Chevy's new Hi-Thrift 6 engine puts them there. It also gives you more "git" in the speeds you drive the most.

Here's an engine that always seems able to coax extra miles out of a tank of regular-grade gas. In fact, if you're one of those drivers who keep tab on things like gas mileage, you'll soon see for yourself that this new Hi-Thrift 6 gets up to 10% more miles a gallon.

Another thing you'll like about this 135-h.p. 6 is the extra pep it gives you for passing and climbing hills. This is due to higher torque at normal speeds.

It may be hard to believe anything that looks and moves like this '59 Chevy can be such a stickler for economy. But—whether you pick the Hi-Thrift 6 or a vim-packed V8—this is just one more reason Chevy's the car that's wanted for all its worth. Stop by your dealer's and see.

'Commercial' Ogontz A Hit 'Arty' 43rd Street Flops

By WILLIAM G. GALLAGHER
of the Villanovan Staff

The Ogontz Theatre remains open but the 43rd Street Theatre is forced to shut its doors. These are the first results of the recent off-Broadway to Philadelphia movements.

How long the Ogontz will stay in business is open to conjecture. Certainly this year's list of shows is inoffensive and commercial enough to appeal to a mass audience.

"Fair Game", for instance, this weeks presentation, isn't a gem. It isn't even a "Potting Shed". Which brings us to the sad, sad case of the 43rd Street Theatre.

Second Show Is Last

Because this theatre couldn't find enough support to keep it even half filled, it has been forced to stop operations after its second show. Its two shows were: "The Potting Shed" and "Volpone".

"The Potting Shed" was a written debatable selection with which to open the season, Although it is the best written by Graham Greene, it is a second rate play.

It has only one truly dramatic scene: the one wherein nephew confronts druken priest in an attempt to discover what took place between the youth and uncle in the potting shed many years ago, what miraculous event transpired which no one will discuss.

Chapel Players Imported

The Chapel Players from off-Broadway were imported for the occasion. For a group that had played together for months, it was surprising to discover that they did not act as an ensemble but rather as individuals and since there was a large family being portrayed, this was understandably disconcerting.

One actress would be gazing off stage until it came time to come in with her line and then she would bounce back into the mood, delivering her line with great gusto.

Redone Movie House

None of the acting appeared to be on a high professional level. The stage setting was poor, which might be expected of a theatre having financial troubles. The theatre itself is not ideal. It is a made-over movie house (quite a switch) and the stage is low, not elevated.

Since the aisles slope downward as most movie house aisles do, it is difficult to see all the action because of latecomers who block one's vision. And if there is noise in the lobby, one can't hear the dialogue.

There is talk of reopening the theatre as, if, and when the backers can raise additional capital. It is to be hoped that they do because their list of future attractions is very promising.

For Europe Grant Competition Starts

Competition for a scholarship offered by the American Committee on United Europe to attend the 1959-60 session of the College of Europe at Bruges, Belgium, is now open to American college graduates.

The College of Europe offers a one-year, graduate program applications is March 1. Applicand seminars are given in the social sciences with emphasis on European economic and political problems. A series of study trips is to be part of the curriculum.

The deadline for scholarship applications is March 1. Applicants must be United States citizens, under 30, single, able to speak French, and have a bachelor degree by October 1959.

The scholarship, valued at $1,750, covers travel, tuition, board, lodging and incidental expenses.

Further information on how to apply can be obtained from the American Committee on United Europe, 120 East 56th Street, New York 22, N. Y.

Final Date Night Set For Feb. 18

February 18, the date of the Villanova-Buffalo game at the Palestra, has been designated as the season's final date night.

For this game, a student may purchase one additional ticket at the student price of fifty cents.

For all Palestra games the ticket office in the field house will be open Monday through Friday (except holidays) from 9:00 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. The office will not be open on Saturdays for Saturday games. Tickets must be purchased before 4:00 p.m. on the preceeding day.

For games played on nights other than Saturday, the ticket office will be open until 2:00 p.m. the day of the game.

The matriculation card must be shown at the Palestra by anyone using student tickets.

Israel And Russia Tours Arranged By Travel Firm

The United States National Student Association has announced that its subsidiary, Tour Education Travel Inc., is now in the process of arranging its summer student tours. So far, plans for two trips have been completed.

One tour will take students, first, to Israel via the Zim Line ships, the S. S. Zion and the S. S. Israel. Two weeks will be spent in Israel, during which time the student group will spend five days living in a kibbutz, a cooperative work camp.

The cites of Haifa, Upper Galilee, Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, and other places of interest both to Christians and Jews, will be visited. The tour will continue on through Greece, Italy, Switzerland, and will commence in England.

The second tour will be a 76 day program, in which a limited number of students will visit nine Western European nations including the Iron Curtain countries of Poland and Russia.

In Russia, the group will visit Leningard, Moscow, Smolensk, Minsk and in Poland, Warsaw, Krakow, Zakopane and Katowice.

The prgram will also enable the students to make an extensive tour of Scandanavia for the first part of the summer.

Students desiring additional information should write to the USNSA, Educational Travel Inc., Department N, 701 Seventh Avenue, New York 36, New York.

Persistance, Determination Gain Success for Jim Huggard

By TONY MACKLIN
of the Villanovan Staff

Jim Huggard's goal is to excel. It is a goal that he has had for a long time. He had it when he was cut from the basketball squad at Philadelphia's West Catholic High School because he was too small. It was with him when he went into independent ball and it fired him as he led the Dreger team to victory in the AAU championship in 1957. And he had this goal when he averaged 19.9 points per game in leading the Wildcat freshmen quintet to an undefeated season last year.

It is with him every time he comes downcourt with that familiar jogging dribble or when he slingshots a jumper through the cords, or spins off a snappy assist. It is there as he endlessly practices sinking left handed shots. It was there the night he handed off ten assists against LeMoyne and the night he threw in twenty-six points against Brandeis. It is incorporated into each one of the 312 points he has scored so far this season in leading the team with a 15.6 scoring average. The story of Jimmy Huggard is a story of determination.

Jimmy Huggard is a twenty-five year old sophomore who weighs 170 lbs. and stands 5'9". "Hug," as his teammates call him, is intelligent, sincere and soft spoken. He plans to major in Pre-Law, is a natty dresser, likes to swim, and enjoys music —say classical." When the opportunity to come to Villanova arose he took it since he had "always wanted to come to Villanova." His biggest thrill—"winning the AAU championship in Denver." His biggest collegiate thrill—"scoring my first two points." We hope that both these thrills will be surpassed come March 12. The best ball player he ever played against—"Guy Rogers." Person who influenced him the most—"Joe Dreger."

What is his greatest ambition? "For us to win some championship to prove that Villanova is a top-flight basketball school," he says thoughtfully. About the NIT, he says: "I think we would be the Cinderella team if we play the kind of ball we did at St. Francis." (V.U. won 80-69 as Huggard scored twenty.)

Come Midnight

If only the horses don't turn to mice.

"Hug" feels that the present team has a lot of potential and that they have begun "pulling together."

There is no question of the team he would like to get a crack at first in the NIT. "Providence. A lot of people think he (Egan) got the best of me. But we were in a zone. I want to show them." In truth, Egan did score 39 points while Huggard had an off night but near the end of the game when Huggard went man-to-man on Egan he showed signs of taming him. The wish to get a chance at doing a defensive job on Egan is typical of Huggard's desire.

Since Huggard is a stand-out player the crowd sometimes gets on him. As for the adverse criticism from the stands he shrugs it off, "I don't listen to them." However, having visited Madison Square Garden, where the NIT is to be played, with the team he came to the realization that—"the fans there don't give you a chance. They expect you to do so much, and if you don't—." It seems that Mr. Delany would surely agree.

Some people think that Huggard tries to mirror the famed Bob Cousy of the Boston Celtics. "I can't dream of ever going that high. I just want to make good," he says significantly. "A lot of people counted me out before I got started. "This is an essential point of his battle to succeed. Huggard has an intense desire to prove himself. To quote one onlooker close to the team—"Huggard feels that he has to make good . He's not like the rest of the guys on the team. He takes losing differently."

Equal to Glassmire

To quote coach Al Severance: "Huggard in my mind can become one of the better known little men of basketball both locally and nationally. However, having played his first year of collegiate basketball under collegiate conditions I believe he will become a conformist and do justice to himself and Villanova and if he follows instructions will be linked with another great little man, Sammy Glassmire, and such an association speaks for itself." (Glassmire starred under Severance 1950-53.)

There is no question that the change from independent ball to college ball is a challenge. It is not to be worked overnight. Huggard himself has said that college ball is better ball and that it follows a pattern while in independent ball there are a few individuals who dominate. He was one of those individuals.

Even though he never played under a coach until he entered Villanova ,Jimmy Huggard has and can be a great contributing force in Villanova's basketball history.

Plays With Brains

Dynamic, fiery, agressive, he tends at times to dominate the play which can diminish his contribution; however, when he puts his cumulative ability to work in team play he is unmatched. Being of small stature, he must of necessity play with his brains rather than brawn. Being quick and having good hands he is ideal for the fast break. His courage, tenacity, and never-say-die-spirit make him an invaluable asset and are to be reckoned with in the next two years. Following "instructions" and coaching aims he should go down as one of the finest little men in Villanova's basketball history.

Freshmen Learn Tricks Of Indoor Relay Races

By THOMAS C. GOLDSCHMIDT
of the Villanovan Staff

Two races last weekend should have taught the freshman mile relay team a lesson they'll need to know when they start competing for the varsity next year.

They should now know that speed is not the only requisite for winning races. You've got to have the knack of grabbing the inside lane early and you've got to be able to gain, not lose, on the baton passes.

In the Inquirer Games on Friday night, the frosh, running with a handicap of 15 yards, won by at least 10 yards over some of the best track clubs on the East coast.

The quartet of John Mannion (Malvern Prep), Pat Nicastro (Roman Catholic High, Philadelphia), Bob Raemore (Williamsport, Pa.) and Bob Coffil (Rindge Tech, Mass.) won in 3:22.

Nicastro Takes Lead

With Nicastro taking advantage of quickness on the turns, the frosh took the lead midway through the second leg and held it against the determined bids of N. Y. Pioneers ((who had Manhattan grads Joe Soprano and Tom Murphy) and Philadelphia Pioneers (Charley Pratt, George Sydnor, Ira Davis and Josh Culbreath).

The victory could have been even easier, but Mannion was gabbing with a track-edge spectator as the gun went off, and he lost at least five yards at the start.

To that mistake were added a couple more in the N.Y.A.C. meet on Saturday night. Mannion started on time, but he got himself boxed in and couldn't get around runners who were actually slower than he.

Then Mannion seemed to have trouble finding Nicastro at the end of the first leg. By the time Pat got the baton, he was 40 yards behind the leaders. Nicastro quickly cut that deficit to 15, but he, too, slowed as he was about to hand the stick to Raemore.

Couldn't Gain

The result was that Raemore and Coffil never could get back in the race. The frosh finished fourth to the Philadelphia Pioneers.

There was a blunder in the freshman distance medley relay in the Inquirer Games, too, but it was the officials', not the runers'.

Jon Dante (Union, N. J.) and the rest of the field who were running the leadoff half-mile had to run seven laps instead of six because the officials fell asleep.

Frank Hagerty (St. Francis Prep, N. Y.), Carl Wagner (West Catholic, Philadelphia) and Angelo Sivieri (West Catholic) stretched Dante's quarter-lap lead to more than a half lap. They ran the quarter-mile, one lap (143 yards) and one-mile, respectively.

Drayton Impresses

Some of the other sparkling freshmen did more than all right in varsity competition Paul Drayton (Cleveland) took third in the 50 in Philadelphia and third in the 60 in New York. In the latter race, Drayton was no more than a step behind winner Ken Kave ,who tied the world's record with a 6.1 clocking.

Gerald Doninni took fourth place in the varsity shot put on Friday with a toss of 49 feet, 1 inch. Hubie White, better known for his basketball playing, placed second in the hop-step-and-jump with a leap of 47 feet, 6 inches.

Art Crowley, running with a 30-yard handicap, took second place in the 1000-yard handicap on Friday. The same night, Coffil took third in one of the heats of the invitation 50-yard high hurdles.

Swimmers In Finale Today

When Villanova's swimming team closes out the 1958-59 season today against Gettysburg in their opponents pool, chances are little Johnny Rumbarger won't have his heart in the competition.

Not that Rummy (as his friends call him) isn't a fierce competitor. Next to a free cigarette, Rummy likes swimming best. And he's not a bad swimmer either.

But as a part of the non-scholarship powerhouse that coach Ed Geisz has built at Villanova, Rumbarger has been less than a star. He has instead become one of the "hidden" point gatherers, one of the guys who pick up the seconds and thirds that go toward a team victory.

Victory Elusive

Rummy always managed to come up with at least one victory in his sophomore and junior years on the squad, but that first place was mighty elusive in this, his last year of competition. That is, until last Saturday.

The little guy swept to a 25.1 second clocking in the 50-yard freestyle to edge teammate Bill Cassin for first place as Villanova swamped Seton Hall, 52-29, at South Orange to up their team record to 6-5.

It was the best time of Rumbarger's career, and you can bet that today's match is nothing but an anti-climax to him.

Unsung Star

With Geisz taking pity on the weak Seton Hall unit by benching his top swimmers (Larry Palacio, Jim Gregory, Bob Pinto) a lot of the unsung heroes came in for their share of glory. Soph Bob Dow, a Seton Hall Prep grad, had the most fun in his homecoming, winning the 200-yard butterfly and orthodox breaststruke races and swimming third on the winning 400-yard medley relay team.

Frank Keefe was the Wildcats' only other double winner, leading off the victorious relay and taking his specialty, the 200-yard backstroke. Other winners were Frank Dunn and Joe Harvey.

The swimmers picked up another victory last week, belting PMC, 50-32, on Wednesday. Harvey, Dow, Dunn, Keefe, Bob Donahue, Bruce McCreedy and Ted Moriarty picked up firsts.

Rumbarger, prepping for the big one, was third in the 100.

Bob Pinto-Swimmer, Scholar

By JIM MURRAY
of the Villanovan Staff

Bob Pinto is a senior English major with aspirations of going to law school after leaving Villanova. This, in itself, does not make Bob any different than any other average Villanovan. Bob, however, is a B+ student, editor of the Belle Aire a feature writer for the VILLANOVAN, contributor to the Lynx and in his "spare" time, a member of the varsity swimming team.

All these activities would seem to make Bob a little more than average . . . not so, according to Bob, who explains it away as part of the Thomistic philosophy which says four hours of study, four hours of of intellectual relaxation and four hours of physical relaxation . . . and when you lie down at night you feel that you have accomplished something.

Our concern is with the physical relaxation part of Bob's day . . . his swimming.

In relating how he got started in swimming and describing his biggest thrill since he began his career as a tankman, Bob tells quite a story.

"I wanted to be in a sporting activity at West Catholic High so I joined the bowling team and when that didn't satisfy me I went out for the track team. I was lucky and won a spot high-jumping. This new position didn't last long because I developed a condition in my knee (long medical term) which I didn't realize I had until one day I went over the bar and my leg snapped."

While recuperating in the hospital, both Bob's nurse, a Mrs. Wakely, who had a son who was a standout swimmer for a Philadelphia school and Bob's doctor prescribed swimming to get the injured knee back in shape.

Bob took their advice and his aquatic career was underway. Bob was successful from the beginning.

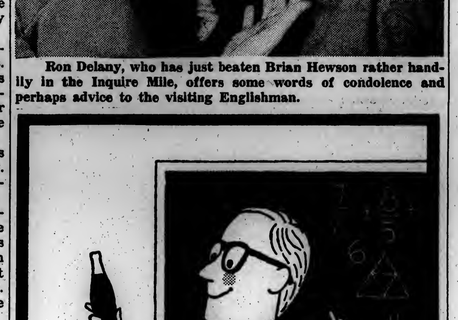
He came in second in Philadelphia in the sprints and made the team at Villanova. He was also on the freestyle relay team which set the school record last year against V.M.I. (3:48.7 B. Pinto, L. Pinto, L. Schoener, Joe Mason.)

Bob's biggest thrill came against the University of Pennsylvania. Bob won both the 50 and 100 yard sprints. The meet was all tied up going into the last event, the freestyle relay. Bob was anchor man (Penn's anchor man was Joe Wakely, the fellow whose mother, a nurse, suggested that Bob take up swimming) Joe and Bob swam stroke for stroke for the entire race but Bob "touched out" first and won the race and Villanova won the meet.

It was difficult to get a personal story out of Bob because all that he wanted to talk about was the team and swimming in general. Excitedly he blurted out, "I think that swimming is the best sport at Villanova. There are no scholarships, therefore no pressures . . . if you can't make a practice you simply tell coach Geisz or Jack Lumsden. As long as you're serious about wanting to be on the team they'll work out a training schedule and help you. Our swimming schedule is like Notre Dame's football schedule. We meet Army, Navy, West Chester, LaSalle, etc . . . all scholarship schools."

Well, this interviewer sure was convinced by Bob, in fact when he was done talking I was ready to jump into the pool—clothes and all—and I can't even swim. Bob doesn't like law school, he would make quite a salesman.

Ron Delany, who has just beaten Brian Hewson rather handily in the Inquire Mile, offers some words of condolence and perhaps advice to the visiting Englishman.



Russell Hits Mark

Charlie Russell last week hit the rifle shooters' magic number by shooting a magnificent 290 out of a possible 300. Russell, a sophomore, is only the second Villanovan to reach 290; Hank Miller did it in 1956.

However, despite Russell's brilliant score, Villanova bowed to unbeaten Lehigh, in an away match, 1402 to 1390. For the Wildcat varsity it was the second loss in five outings. Other Villanova scorers included Chris Kloss, 280; Lou Spevetz, 277; Frank Murtha, 276; and Ed Hogan, 267.

This Saturday the team travels to New London, Conn. to compete in the Coast Guard Academy's annual invitational tournament.

The N.R.O.T.C. rifle squad also suffered defeat last week, being sunk by P.M.C., 1367 to 1350. Lou Spevetz, top man in the match, shot the highest score of his career, a fine 287. The other four who counted for the Navy unit were Carigliano, 275; Ackerman, 266; Walsh, 262; and Nolan, 260.

POVERTY CAN BE FUN

It is no disgrace to be poor. It is an error, but it is no disgrace.

So if your purse is empty, do not skulk and brood and hide your head in shame. Stand tall. Admit your poverty. Admit it freely and frankly and all kinds of good things will happen to you. Take, for instance, the case of Blossom Sigafoos.

Blossom, an impecunious freshman at an Eastern girls' college, was smart as a whip and round as a dumpling, and scarcely a day went by when she didn't get invited to a party weekend at one of the nearby men's schools. But Blossom never accepted. She did not have the rail fare; she did not have the clothes. Weekend after weekend, while her classmates went frolicking, Blossom sat alone, saved from utter despair only by her pack of Marlboros, for even an exchequer as slim as Blossom's can afford the joys of Marlboro—joys far beyond their paltry price: rich, mellow tobaccos, lovingly cured and carefully packed; a new improved filter that works like a charm. Croesus himself could not buy a better cigarette!

However, Marlboro's most passionate admirers—among whose number I am paid to count myself—would not claim that Marlboro can entirely replace love and romance, and Blossom grew steadily moroser.

Then one day came a phone call from an intelligent sophomore named Tom O'Shanter at a nearby men's college. "Blossom," said Tom, "I want you to come down next week for the barley festival, and I won't take no for an answer."

"No," said Blossom.

"Foolish girl," said Tom gently. "I know why you refuse me. It is because you are poor, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Blossom.

"I will send you a railroad ticket," said Tom. "Also a small salami in case you get hungry on the train."

"But I have nothing to wear," said Blossom.

Tom replied, "I will send you one suit of cashmere, two gowns of lace, three slacks of velvet, four shoes of calf, five socks of nylon, and a partridge in a pear tree."

"That is most kind," said Blossom, "but I fear I cannot dance and enjoy myself while back home my poor lame brother Tiny Tim lies abed."

"Send him to Mayo Brothers and put it on my tab," said Tom.

"You are terribly decent," said Blossom, "but I cannot come to your party because all the other girls at the party will be from rich, distinguished families, and my father is but a humble woodcutter."

"I will buy him Yosemite," said Tom.

"You have a great heart," said Blossom. "Hold the phone while I ask our wise and kindly old Dean of Women whether it is proper for me to accept all these gifts."

She went forthwith and asked the Dean of Women, and the Dean of Women laid her wise and kindly old hand on Blossom's cheek and said, "Child, let not false pride rob you of happiness. Accept these gifts from Tom."

"Lord love you, Wise and Kindly," breathed Blossom, dropping grateful tears into the Dean's reticule. "I must run and tell Tom."

"Yes, run, child," said the Dean, a smile wrinkling her wise and kindly old eyes. "And ask him has he got an older brother."

Collymore, Delany, Jenkins, Bragg Headline AAU Card

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT
of the Villanovan Staff

Even though the under-manned Wildcats have no chance of winning the team title they held in 1957, Villanova track fans are expected to converge on Madison Square Garden in force for the National AAU championships on Saturday.

Not only does this promise to be the most thrilling meet of what veteran track fans have called "the best indoor season in years," but four Villanovans or former Villanovans will put their 1958 national championships on the line.

More correctly, three of them will be defending their titles. Ed Collymore, winner in the 60-year dash last year, will probably try to win the 600 this week.

The local defenders are Charley Jenkins (1957 grad) in the 600, Ron Delany (1958 grad) in the mile and Don Bragg (1957 grad) in the pole vault (in which event he was co-titlist with Bob Gutowski).

Fourth Straight

Collymore won his fourth straight 600 in the Inquirer Games last Friday, but a heavy cold and the lack of workouts due to poor weather held his time down to 1:13.4.

Towards the end of that race Colly was laboring, and he just withstood the late rally by Josh Culbreath. Then, in the mile relay, in which Villanova came in third behind Morgan State and Manhattan, Ed was straining to finish his lead-off leg.

On Saturday in the New York A.C. meet, Collymore felt sick, so he scratched from the 500 and the mile relay. A quartet of Joe Mannion, Vic DiMaio, Jim Blackburn and Nick DeAnglis won a section mile relay in 3:23.1.

If Collymore is well enough, he will go after Jenkins' crown in the 600 and may also run on the mile relay team. Then again, Coach Jumbo Jim Elliott may elect to go along with the quartet of two juniors and two sophomores.

Charley Stead took second place behind George Dennis with a 6-8 high jump on Friday, and tied for second on a 6-5 leap on Saturday. The stimulus of championship competition could carry Stead even higher this week.

John Buckley, defending IC4A outdoor broadjump champion, will compete in that event this week (for the first time this winter) after taking fifth place in the Inquirer's hop-step-and-jump.

Hubie White, freshman basketball star, will join Buckley in the broad jump. He took second place in the Inquirer hop-step-and-jump with 47 feet, 6 inches.

In the 60-yard sprint, freshman Paul Drayton will try to improve on his third-place finish in last weekend's two meets. Another freshman, Frank Budd, may also compete, although an ankle injury could shelve him for another week.

Freshman Quartets

In the sprint medley and two-mile relay, Jumbo Elliott will probably elect to use freshman squads. He says he doesn't know who'll run on the teams, and probably won't decide until Friday.

But, chances are the two-mile squad will be composed of Pat Nicastro, Francis Hagerty, Jon Dante and Angelo Siveri. A likely group for the sprint medley is John Mannion, Carl Wagner, Bob Raemore and Bob Coffil.

In the high hurdles, senior Jack Van Deusen and freshmen Coffil and Leon Pras will compete. In the pole vault, it'll be soph Norbert McNulty, who took fifth place in an afternoon event in the Inquirer Games.

Two-Mile Relay

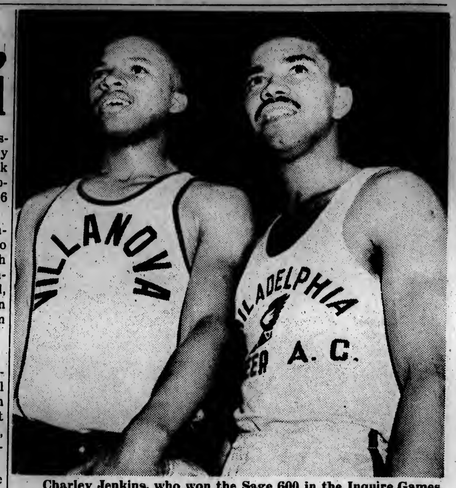
There is a chance that a varsity two-mile relay team will compete, composed of sophs Bill Tinney and Gene Rogers, junior Bob Godesky and senior Vic DiMaio.

That unit did not look very good in the Inquirer meet, finishing a distant fourth in its section. If Elliott does not enter them in the relay, they will probably compete singly in the 1000, mile or two mile.

In the Philadelphia meet, sophs Lance Hugelmyer and Henry Neil took third and fifth, respectively, in the 1000 novice run. Tim McNamar finished far back in the pack in the two-mile.

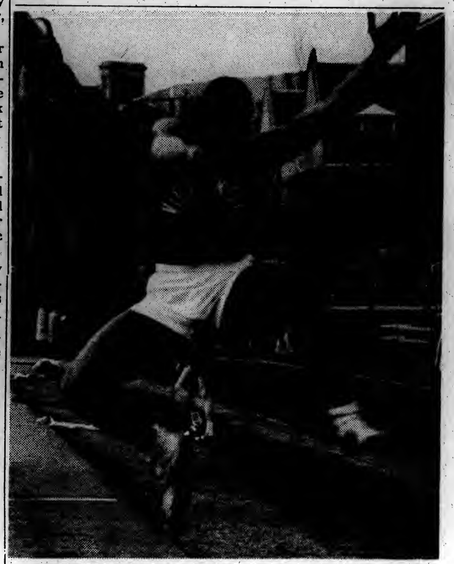
Old Grads Capture Indoor Track Glory

Villanova graduates had a big weekend on the banked boards over the past weekend.



Don Bragg broke the world's indoor record in the pole vault by going over 15-feet, 9½ inches in the Inquirer meet. Then he set the N.Y.A.C. meet record by doing 15-4½ on Saturday.

Ron Delany broke the Inquirer Mile record with a 4:05.8 clocking, then outsprinted Tom Murphy to win the 880 on Saturday for his 34th straight indoor victory.



George Sydnor, showing none of the muscle trouble he suffered last year, looked sharp in taking second in Friday's 50 and fourth in Saturday's 60.

Alex Breckenridge, of Scotland, won a "B" two-mile race in 9:22.8, then finished a distant fourth in faster company on Saturday. He is not yet in top shape.

Charley Jenkins looked plenty fast in the 500 on Saturday, but that extra sharpness that comes with steady training was missing as he failed to catch winner Josh Culbreath. It was only Jenkins' second race of the year.

Charley Jenkins, who won the Sage 600 in the Inquire Games last week, poses with Josh Culbreath, of the Philadelphia Pioneers, who took second place, not more than a stride behind Collymore.

Hubie White, freshman basketball star, leaps 47 feet, 6 inches to take second place in the Inquire hop-step-and-jump.

'Cats Meet Buffalo Tonite

By TOM TROY
of the Villanova Staff

Villanova, forced into a week-long idleness by a rather preposterous schedule, returns to the hard wood tonight to begin what should be a hectic four night travelogue.

After defeating Canisius 57-48 in a satisfactory, albeit nonstirring, contest last Wednesday, the Cats have spent a week without competition. They more than compensate for this in the next four days.

Tonight they take on Buffalo in the second game of a doubleheader at the Palestra. Then they journey to New York where they meet tough N.Y.U. in Madison Square Garden Thursday.

Just how tough N.Y.U. is was indicated last week when they defeated highly rated West Virginia in a bruising over-time battle.

Following the N.Y.U. game, Villanova will take the North Carolina extension of the I.R.T., and travel to Raleigh to play sixth-ranked North Carolina State.

How to Stress the Obvious!

Raleigh, N. C.! There they many expect an anything but hospitable welcome from coach Everett Case's Confederate Yankees. Led by two Philadelphians, 6-8 John Richter and 5-9 Lou Pucillo, the Wolfpack is as friendly as its nickname.

John Driscoll and George Raveling will really have their hands full in trying to combat Richter George Stepanovich, and Bob MacGillivary off the boards.

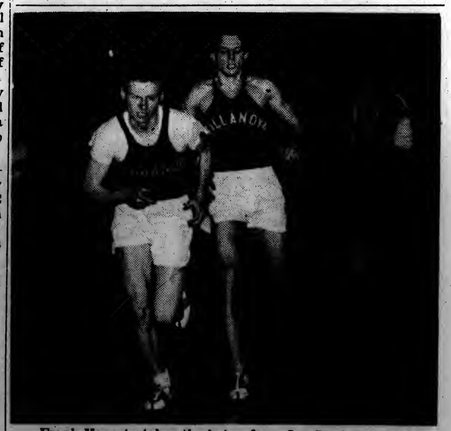
And Richter, besides being a fine rebounder, just passed the 1000 point mark in scoring, and he is rated as one of the best centers in the South.

His South Philly buddy, Pucello, is about as good a ball-handler as there is, and when he and the big V's Jim Huggard meet, sparks should fly.

Coach Al Severance has been extremely successful in his choice of reserves in the last two games, however. In Altoona, he called on Rich Kaminiski, and Rich responded with a fine floor game and 16 big points.

Then Villanova received its second successive starring performance by a reserve as it defeated the defensively tough Griffins of Canisius last week.

Kenny Harrison, lithe, springy senior, came off the bench very late in the first half to propel Villanova into a 23-20 lead, then sparked in the entire second half as he scored a season's high of 18 points.



Canisius employed the now usual tactic of holding the ball and trying to draw Villanova out of its zone defense and stop the Cats fast break attack.

They partly achieved this—the Cats ran less than in any other game—but the tight 1-2-2 zone and good shooting by Jim Huggard and Harrison (7 for 8) enabled V.U. to overcome this strategy.

Huggard wound up with 14 points, and Jim Kenny threw some nice passes to George Raveling (11 points), but this game was all "Harry".

If Harrison can repeat his performance and the enigmatic Ryan will produce at his potential, the 'Cats would stand a chance of upsetting North Carolina State.

And should that happen, Villanova would be in a fine mind to deal with its last regular season appointment—LaSalle

Frank Hagerty takes the baton from Jon Dante as he begins the 440 leg of the freshmandistance medley relay in Convention Hall. The frosh squad of Dante, Hagerty, Carl Wagner and Angelo Sivieri won by half a lap.

Tommy Dorsey Band Chosen For Junior Prom, May 1

WARREN COVINGTON
In The Dorsey Manner

The Tommy Dorsey Orchestra will provide the music for the Junior Promenade on May 1.

Victor Manfredi, chairman of the band committee for the affair, announced today that the Dorsey band—under the direction of Warren Covington—has been signed for the prom, which will be held as usual in the field house.

The theme of the prom, which is generally considered one of the highlights of Junior Week, will be "Midnight Magic," according to co-chairmen Larry Maucher and Dan Spada.

Chairmen Pleased

Both chairmen expressed delight with the signing of the Dorsey orchestra. Said Maucher, "This is the band we wanted. It was the first one we went after, and we're proud to have signed an orchestra of this stature for the prom. Vic (Manfredi) deserves a lot of credit for all the work he did."

Announcement of the signing of the Dorsey unit completed the list of musical arrangements for the major social events of the second semester.

The senior class announced that they had procured the Glenn Miller band for their prom last month.

By coincidence both classes signed bands which are performing under the names of their original leaders, now deceased. (The Miller band is presently under the leadership of Ray McKinley.)

From Upper Darby

Covington, who took over Dorsey's orchestra under the sponsorship of the Dorsey estate following the death of the man who became known as the "Sentimental Gentleman," is a native of this area. He began his musical career singing in his church choir in Upper Darby.

As with Dorsey, his first musical training was on a trumpet, but he switched to the trombone in high school. Strangely enough, that paths of Dorsey and Covington, the young man who would one day wave his baton, crossed very few times.

Their only appearances together were when Covington played with the Dorsey band for a few recording sessions.

Covington's trombone work, however, was being featured with some of the country's top bands, including Les Brown and Gene Krupa.

Keeps Dorsey Style

When Dorsey died, he left behind a traditional style of music—featuring the "sweet" trombone—that had become a part of the American band scene. Covington, when selected to succeed the famous leader at the helm of the band, elected to direct in the same style.

Thus, for the second time this year the famous music of a man now dead will echo through the field house.

Free Day Fate Up In Air; Vote Tonight

By JOHN J. CURTIN
of the Villanovan Staff

Tonight's the night when what used to be the easiest and most pleasant of all Student Council functions could erupt into a full-scale battle royal.

At its regular bi-weekly meeting in the center lounge, Dougherty Hall, this evening at 6:30, the council will find itself confronted with the suddenly controversial "free day" decision.

The motion was tabled for further investigation at the last meeting, but there seems no escape this time.

It used to be that the decision over the allotment of "free day" allowed the council each year came as a matter of course—the day off generally coming around St. Patrick's Day.

This year, with St. Patrick's Day coming on a Tuesday, it

Russian Satire Premieres Tonight In Field House

By FRANK J. DYNAN
of the Villanovan Staff

Freshman William Long, newly elected Student Council resident representative is congratulated by his campaign committee. They are left to right: Robert Dwyer, Long, Ted Rodgers, Terry Donnelly, and Dom Minerva.

"Inspector General," written by Nikoli Gogol and produced by the Belle Masque Dramatic Society, opens tonight at 8:30 in the Field House.

The production, a Russian comedy, will continue through Sunday night; curtain time for all performances will be 8:30 p.m. Price to Villanova students and their dates has been set at $1.

Tickets are still available today in the Pie Shoppe, and hereafter can be purchased at the box office.

Drama Arts head Richard A. Duprey, the play's director, has announced that the show will be staged "in the round," that is, the stage will be circular, areana type, encircled by the audience. This was tried here once before, also under Duprey.

He feels that the theatre in the round method will be an asset in the production of this particular show. "It is exeremely important to get the actors closer together," he said.

Creates Realism

Another advantage is a certain sense of intimacy which it creates between the actors and their audience. It helps the playgoers forget that what they see is a performance rather than an actual occurance.

"Inspector General" is a satire which pokes fun at the ways of the country people and politicians of Russia more than a century ago, and in general, the characteristics of all men.

Duprey cited several reasons for choosing this particular play. Among them are its ranking as one of the greatest comedies of all time, its large number of male roles, and its Russian background in a Russia conscious age .

The choice has presented a few problems ,he admitted. "Like all good comedy, it needs precise timing. Also it requires a great number of demanding roles, and the humor must be delicately balanced between broad slapstick and subtle exaggeration."

Cast Interviewed

In the past week, many of the cast members were asked their opinion o fthe show and its state of readiness. Senior English major Owen Klein and junior Education major Alan Willig both expressed a cautious dislike for the play.

Klein stated that "the show lacks some o fthe high and low moods that many audiences look for." Willig said that the roles were challenging but that the cast has for the most part fulfilled its obligations to Gogol."

Senior Political Science major John Cannon said that "that the Freshmen Elect McMonagle, Long To Student Council

BY WILLIAM J. SPEERS
of the Villanovan Staff

James McMonagle, resident engineer, and William Long, day hop arts major triumphed in the Freshmen Student Council Elections last Thursday.

The official vote:

James McMonagle—316
William Long—207
David Gilbert—162
Robert Benson—151
Bruce Bechold—132
William Sabo—65

McMonagle, a member of the freshmen basketball team, and Long, an NROTC student, both thanked the freshmen and those who assisted in the campaigns.

Long vowed he would seek more recreational facilities for day hops and in event of a food poll failure, a resident cafeteria improvement program.

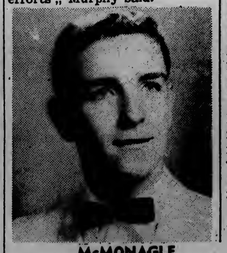
Kelley Angry

John P. Kelley, elections committee chairman, was annoyed at the poor turnout for the elections.

Of 1138 possible votes, only a few more than 500 were cast. Kelley gave no reason for the poor vote. "My committee did a complete job of publicizing the event," Kelley said.

Kelley admitted that the various candidates did a "fairly good" job in organizing and executing their campaigns.

He also thanked the committee members, including, Jerry McGrath, Francisio Pacheco, Tom Hoffman, Pete O'Brian, Tom Chambers, John Dinnen, Mimi Crowson, Bob Murphy, Frank Dunn, Sheldon Pollock, Bob DeLisa, and Larry Oirourmc.



Formal Acceptance

Murphy, president of the Student Council, congratulated the new representatives and announced that they would be formally accepted into the Council soon.

"We welcome them and which them the best of luck in their efforts", Murphy said.

Orchestra To Accompany T'nT's 'Piper-Heidsieck 98'

BY THOMAS M. WOLF
of the Villanovan Staff

Turf 'n Tinsel's spring musical will be accompanied by an orchestra for the first time since 1950, according to Gary Tackas, president.

This year's offering will be a revival of 1950's show, "Piper-heidsieck 98," slated for presentation April 22-26.

Membership in the group has swelled to 120, and 62 students, largely sophomores and freshmen, tried out for parts February 12. Two rehearsals have already been held for the two dance groups which will alternate numbers during the show.

A large measure of enthusiasm has been aroused over the return of the orchestra, which will replace the piano accompaniment used for the past eight productions.

Rev. Henry Syvinski O.S.A., is organizing the orchestra in collaboration with Herbert Fisk, director of the band and glee club. Tackas, senior Finance major, hopes to use Villanova and Immaculata College girls to supplement the string section.

Seniors Star

The cast has been chosen, and the major roles will be filled by seniors Tackas, Bernie McGee, Don Kempf, Joe Lynch and Bob Dilks.

In line with the tradition of casting athletes in minor roles, eight football players will represent Atlantic City lifeguards in a specialty number.

Participants in the past have been Don Luzzi in 1958, Don Bragg and Ron Delany in 1957, and Gene Filipski in 1954.

jkq-a

"Piper-heidsieck 98" is the name of a quality champagne, and was chosen as the show's title by the author and composer, Bob Whelan, publicity director of the athletic department.

An appeal for stage workers has been answered by over 40 applicants, and set construction will begin next week, under stage crew chief, Andy Lohr, senior Marketing major.

Ambitious Sets

Staging this year is an ambitious project. Sets will be made for scenes of the Main Line, Vienna, Paris and London. "This is a greater construction task than ever before attempted," said Tackas.

A business staff, headed by Mike Axt, senior Finance major, has sent letters to the parents of each student, soliciting patrons, for $2, and sponsors, for $5. The purchase of a sponsor entitles the buyer to two complimentary tickets to any evening show.

A special showing will be given on Sunday, April 26, for mothers of juniors who are here for Junior week.

WVIL Meets To Nominate New Officers

Radio station officials for next year will be nominated tonight at a meeting in WVIL's studios at 7 P. M. They will be selected primarily from this year's underclassmen.

Station manager Bill Washington said that eligible students were discussed at last week's meeting but that the decision was deferred until this week. Underclassmen are expected to be named to almost all the available positions.

Last week's meeting saw the reopening of the question of the station's popular music policy which has often been the target of criticism in the past.

Requests Allowed

As a possibile solution, the music department made plans for a request system. Request forms to be filled out by interested students are now available at the Dougherty Hall bulletin board.

Space has been provided on the cards for the desired song, the recording artist, and the show on which it should be played.

At tonight's meeting Washington stated that plans for possible broadcast of a Villanova-NIT game will be discussed. He said however that because of existing station schedules, only a Thursday night game could be covered.

New Shows

New shows recently inaugurated by WVIL are an interview program conducted by senior English major Ed Currall and a section of Jazz Suite, to be announced and produced by Tom McKenna, another senior English major.

Varsity basketball player Ken Harrison, who produced his own beatnik jazz show last semester, is expected to return in the near future, Washington also announced.

Beatnik Talk Given Today By Quaglia

The Literary Club will hear the presentation of a paper dealing with Kerouac and his "Beat Generation" by senior English major Ray Quaglia this afternoon in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The meeting—first of the second semester for the campus literary organization—will be held at 3:30 p.m.

Club president Jack Curtin, senior English major, said that the public is invited to attend the reading and discussion period that will follow.

"We think that the Beat Generation, because of the publicity it has received, is of interest to every modern student," said Curtin, "and the author of this particular paper is quite familiar with the work of Kerouac Quaglia first presented the paper in fulfillment of the requirements for his senior English seminar. It was recommended for presentation to the Literary Club by Dr. John Philipson, of the English department.

Curtin also said that the showing of a motion picture, announced last semester in conjunction with the Opera Classica and Belle Masque societies, is now "beyond the planning stages, and the movie should be shown in the next two weeks."

Council Votes On Training Student Office Candidates

The Student Council will vote tonight on a motion made by senior class president Oz Scogna, proposing the establishment of a training program for Student Council representatives.

The training program consists of three hour long sessions to be held a week before nominations and the two weeks following the nominations.

Attendance at these meetings is voluntary but a list of those attending will be published.

The first meeting will introduce the nominees to the program in general.

It will also divide the nominees into seven groups, candidates for Student Council, Class Vice Presidents, Secretaries, Treasurers, and Sophomore, Junior, and Senior Presidents will be put in separate groups.

Copies of the Student Council Constitution will be distributed.

The second meeting will consist of the talks by two representatives of the administration and two representatives of the Student Council on duties and responsibilities of officers.

The talks will last about one half hour and the remaining half hour will be devoted to a question and answer period.

The final meeting will be a discussion of the constitution and a short test on the basic content of the constitution.

John Rogers Carroll, left, Victor H. Blanc, center and Samuel Dash, right, study an old edition of Pennsylvania Laws by Benjamin Franklin before their debate on wire-tapping last Wednesday.

Mechanical Engineers Will Hold Freshman Orientation

Pi Tau Sigma, the honorary Mechanical Engineering fraternity on campus, will hold freshman mechanical engineering orientation today at 2:30 p.m. in 215 Mendel Hall.

The afternoon program will feature talks by Professor George Auth, head of the Mechanical Engineering Department, by other faculty members and by senior Mechanical Engineers.

These talks will be followed by a guided tour of the facilities of the Mechanical Engineering Department and demonstrations of the equipment in the various laboratories.

Help In Picking

The primary purpose of this "open house" is to assist the freshmen engineers in picking their major.

The fraternity members hope to achieve this end by presenting a thumbnail sketch of Mechanical Engineering from classroom to industry.

The various courses of the engineering curriculum will be outlined and dealt with in brief. After running through this phase of engineering, the freshman will be acquainted with the jobs available to Mechanical Engineers after graduation.

Both the faculty members and the seniors will answer any questions or difficulties which may arise during the afternoon.

Upper Quarter

The fraternity is composed of Junior and Senior Mechanical Engineers who are in the upper quarter of their class on the basis of cumulative averages, and who show sound engineering ability and promise of success in their field.

The Villanova chapter of Pi Tau Sigma was chartered on April 10, 1958. The purpose of the fraternity is to honor outstanding Mechanical Engineering students and to assist the Mechanical Engineering Department.

The present officers of the Villanova chapter are George Christman, president, Jim Woodward, vice president; Melvin Ventura, treasurer; and secretaries Joe Hargadon and Bob Powers.

Dinner Dance Ducats Go On Sale Monday

Senior dinner dance chairman Harry Devlin announced yesterday that the theme of the dinner dance will be "When Twilight Shadow Gather". The use of a theme will be in keeping with a precedent established by the class of '58.

Tickets will go on sale March 2, and continue until March 6.

Joanne Zaremba senior nurse, has been appointed to the dinner dance committee, in charge of favors.

Nickel Distribution

An estimated 60 per cent of the total free world nickel supplies available in 1957 was delivered to the United States.

IC4A Tickets On Sale

Between 400 and 500 tickets have been made available to Villanova students for the IC4A track championships in Madison Square Garden, New York on February 28. They are now available at the field house for one dollar.

The annual event has been won by Villanova for the past two years. Student attendence at the meet has always been high.

Entries For Queen Contest Now Accepted

Entries for the Senior Queen contest are now being accepted in either 122 Sheehan or in the Student Activities' Office. The deadline for all entries is March 4.

Photo must be at least 3 x 5 inches in size, and should contain the following information on their reverse sides: student's name, his major, his date's name, her school or occupation, her hometown, her height, color of hair, color of eyes, and her age.

Television personality Jack Paar will select five finalists. The queen will be chosen from the finalists, and she will be introduced at the Prom. Names and pictures of the finalists will be published in the VILLANOVAN soon after the Easter vacation.

It was announced by Greg Dean, Prom chairman that the final date for entries will be extended to March 6, if necessary.

The Queen will receive a bouquet and the tickets for the dance.

Tchaikovsky's Opera Presented Tonight

The Opera-Classica club will present Bruchner's Symphony No. 5 and Tchaikovsky's Marche Slav tonight in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall. The program will begin at 7:30 P. M. All members and others interested in classical music are urged to attend.

The Opera-Classica club has has announced that The Academy of Music is presenting Renata Tibaldi Thursday evening and a complete sell out is anticipated.

Radio Editorial Boosts Poll on Food Preferences

BY MICHAEL TIGHE
of the Villanovan Staff

The results of a food poll taken last Thursday and Friday in the residents' dining hall are now being tabulated.

The poll came as a result of numerous complaints by resident students concerning the quality of the food now being served.

Conducted by the Student Union and Special Problems Committee of the Student Council, the poll was the first positive action taken in answer to the universal concern for the food problem.

In an editorial delivered last Wednesday by the News and Sports Department of radio station WVIL, the acuteness of the cafeteria food situation was emphasized.

Food Question

The poll, three pages long, listed over 100 meals, and posed the question, "How do you like this dish?" Choices of answers were "not at all," "indifferent," "good," and "very much."

WVIL, in its editorial given on the eve of the poll, stressed the seriousness of it. It asked that the students be sincere in their critique of the kitchen, and that they refrain from tagging everything "lousy".

Poll Results

John Specha, superintendent of the Cafeteria, said that the results of the poll would "definitely have a bearing on the preparation of future menus."

In commenting on the result tabulated to date, Fred Wiele, Junior Electrical Engineer Chairman of the Special Problems Committee said, "The majority of the students seem to have taken the poll as a serious thing, and have been conscientious in their answers."

Reported the OCCIDENTAL, 50 sophomores kidnapped the freshman leader as he left a class, told him he had a one-way ticket to Honolulu and put him on a plane with a stack of literature on Hawaii.

Every soldier snapped to attention when the major entered the mess hall except the new recruit cook.

"Why didn't you come to attention when I entered?" the major asked.

"Sir," came the recruit's reply, "I'm cooking a recipe that says 'Do not stir for 20 minutes.'"

Villanova Second In Big Five Vote

When Villanova takes on La-Salle College in the final city Series game on March 7, the deciding ballots will be cast for the winner of this year's Sportsmanship Award among Big Five schools.

This week's standings for the award show St. Joseph's College, winner for the past two years, still in the lead with a rating of 9.45 out of a possible 10 points.

With less than two weeks remaining in the City Series scnedule, Villanova is in second place wth an 8.27 rating. LaSalle is running a close third with 7.96, and Temple and Penn follow in fourth and fifth place respectively.

This is the third year for the award, which was instituted by the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia.

The judging is done by representatives of three Philadelphia newspapers, and the sports department of radio station WIP.

Arts Frat Continues Pledging To Easter

Delta Pi Mu, Villanova's arts fraternity, held its initial pledge meeting on Monday, February 9.

Of the 88 candidates who originally applied, 36 remain.

President Al Dombrowski announced that the pledging would last from the beginning of Lent until the Easter break.

The fraternity's pledge master is Harry Rowe. Junior pledge masters are Dennis Cardone and Terry Curley. Joe Sayers, and Jay Callahan will serve as senior advisors.

All pledge officials, with the exception of Rowe, were chosen by the executive council.

Villanova Seeks New School Song

Bruce Irving, Spirit Committee Chairman has announced a contest with the objective of finding a new school song and cheer. A singable "catchy" song set to a well known tune is also desired.

Entries will be accepted from now until March 8th at the Student Council office in Dougherty Hall. The new song and cheer will be heard for the first time when Villanova plays in the N.I.T. tournament in New York City.

Irving urged all students to participate. Winners will be awarded prizes on March 10th and their names will appear on their contribution which will remain permanent in Villanova's repertoire of songs and cheers.

Rafano Reports Discussion Of Middle East Questions

Robert Rafano, president of the International Relations Society said last week that several guest speakers will address the coming conference of the Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Clubs.

The convention, which will deal primarily with the Middle East situation and the Arab-Israeli question, has been scheduled for Friday and Saturday, March 13, 14.

"The General Outlook of the Middle East" will be the subject of an opening lecture by Keith Wheelock, research assistant for the Foreign Policy Institute of the University of Pennsylvania.

Speaking also at the convention will be Yaakov Morris, officer for the Israeli Office of Information in New York City. The Arabian viewpoint will be discussed by Jamal Sa'd, Assistant Director of the Arab Information Center in Washington, D. C.

Following group discussions on Saturday afternoon, Villanova's Dr. Fred J. Khouri, an authority on the problems of the Middle East, will address the representatives at the banquet which will climax the conference.

According to Clinton Chin, President of the P.A.I.R.C. and Vice-President of Villanova's I.R.S. several Pennsylvania colleges will be represented at the Convention, which promises to be a most successful affair.

Co-chairmen of the event Rafano and J. P. Kelly, expressed the hope that most of the I.R.S. members will attend the conference.

(ACP)—The other day the psych class lecture was on job aptitudes.

The prof finished, "The point is a good poker player can hold down any sort of an executive position. Now then, are there any questions?"

Came the voice from the back of the room, "What would a good poker player want with a job anyway?"

Students Urged to Voice Free Day Views to Council

This evening at 6:30 the Student Council will begin a meeting at which they will decide many things, all of them affecting the students of the university.

This is something that happens every two weeks, but all too often goes unnoticed. This uninterested attitude on the part of the student body stems from many factors, but the one most often heard is the complaint that council meetings are dull and council decisions mean nothing anyway.

Tonight things are different.

No student can complain that what happens in the council chambers this evening does not affect him, for a decision will be rendered concerning one of the year.

That is, of course, the decision regarding the annual "free day" awarded by the council to the student body. Before the council disbands this evening a decision will have been made.

The controversy regarding the choice of a day off—as reported on the front page of the VILLANOVAN—centers around Villanova's acceptance of an NIT bid.

One faction of the student body claims that the council should take off one of the days during the tournament, not only because Villanova is in the competition, but also because the NIT comes at the time that traditionally is the "free day"—St. Patrick's Day.

Another group would like the council to declare May 8 as the "free day," since it is the Friday after Ascension Thursday and would mean a four-day weekend late in the year.

Obviously, only one side can win, and therefore there are going to be many disappointed students no matter which date is chosen. But how many will do something about trying to get the date they want chosen, so that they will not be a part of this latter group?

The Student Council represents the student body. There is a man on the council to represent each and every student in the university as of the freshman elections last week. Any student who has anything to say about the "free day" can be heard, either through his representative or by attending the meeting in person tonight and speaking his piece.

In fact, we urge every student to do both—see his representative and attend the council meeting. Let the council know where you stand before the vote is cast; not afterwards when it's too late.

The VILLANOVAN feels that the best possible date to be chosen is May 8, for a variety of reasons. For one thing, just by virtue of the fact that no one knows when Villanova will be playing would seem to wipe out any of the NIT dates as a choice.

And the idea of choosing St. Patrick's Day just because it has become somewhat of a tradition appears ridiculous. The holiday falls on a Tuesday this year, and without the intervening Monday off, there can be no logic in taking Tuesday as the "free day."

But these are negative reasons, and the positive aspects of the date in May are more appealing. For one thing, the May 8 choice will give the students a four-day break after eight solid weeks of class—a period that can be used either for relaxation, catching up on class work or preparation for exams, which follow in two weeks.

For another, the four day weekend would fall on the weekend immediately following Junior Week, and allow the juniors to recover from the biggest week of their lives.

For a third, such a selection would seem to better benefit the college community as a whole, for the four day period would be useful to faculty and administrators too, as well as the students.

We've made ourselves clear—we're for May 8. If you're smart, you'll make your opinion just as clear to your representative before he casts his ballot tonight.

Letters to The Editor

Recognition Not Due Spiritual Leader

In the VILLANOVAN of February 18, 1959 you published an unsigned editorial critizing Sen. John Kennedy, potential Catholic Democratic presidential candidate in 1960, for his opposition to the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican. We feel that you have unjustly assaled him by saying:

> It seems to us that the Roman Catholic Pope, just by virtue of of his position as spiritual leader of millions of men, would warrant diplomatic recognition by this country. . . .

If the United States government appointed an ambassador to the Roman Catholic Pope because he is spiritual leader of millions of men, would it not be, in fact, appointing a representative to an established religion? It seems to us this could be construed to a violation of Article I of the Bill of Rights, which states, "Congress shall make no law respecting an established religion. . . . "

If the Pope warrants a diplomatic representative because of his spiritual leadership of millions of Catholics, by your reasoning, Queen Elizabeth, since she is the head of the Anglican Church, also warrants a diplomatic representatives. Following your thinking, are we safe in assuming that the VILLANOVAN recomends the United States sending a representative to the Aga Khan, a spiritual leader of millions of Moslems.

You ignore the fact that an ambassador could constitutionally be sent to the Vatican City, which is a soverign state. In doing so we would be indirectly sending a representative to the Pope, the temporal head of the Vatican City.

The Vatican City is merely the physical center of the Roman Catholic Church and home of its spiritual leaders. The United States of America is a political institution founded to safeguard the rghts of man. It is our contention that nothing advantageous for the U. S. could be obtained from the union of a spiritual state with our political instituton.

While we admire your paper's religious sentiment, we feel that religious fanaticism will not and should not be a prominant factor in an American election.

Sincerely,
F. W. Boufford, Arts 1961

Swap the Phillies

I have recently read that the Pennsylvania Tax Advisory Committee has recommended that the state sales tax be increased, that the cigarette tax go up a penny, and that pari-mutuel betting be legalized at licensed race tracks.

I would counter the first recommendation by suggesting a real estate tax on the Governor's Mansion. The second proposal is fine with me because soon the tax on cigarettes will be so high that I'll have to give up smoking, which I've always wanted to do anyway.

The third suggestion is the best. Instead of shippin gall our money across the river as we do now, maybe we can arrange a swap with Governor Meyner, giving him the Phillies in return for Garden State Park. The race track proposal should appeal to many students. They wouldn't have to cut as many classes in the spring in order to get to the track by post time.

Breaks 112-Year Barrier

CONNIE DONOHUE

First Female Engineer Oozes Charm and Talent

By BILL SPEERS

In 1954 ,when a handful of young ladies entered V.U.'s newly organized Nursing School, the Villanova 112 year female barrier was finally broken.

But in September of the present school year, when a tall, comely girl of 18 entered our Engineering School, Villanova welcomed its first actual co-ed.

Connie Donohue's entrance into Villanova was not a long-awaited, hard fought affair as some might suppose. Actually the whole thing came about rather casually.

Took Summer Courses

Connie began her college education in September 1957 at a small women's college called Trinity. At the conclusion of the school year she decided to take a few summer courses at Villanova.

While at Trinity, she had been taking a Liberal Arts course, but as the year progressed, she began to think seriously of switching to Engineering.

So while continuing her summer courses here, she made a request of the University that she be permitted in the fall to continue as a full time student in Engineering. She was promptly turned down and so far as Connie was concerned that was the end of that.

But the best was yet to come. For near the end of the summer, a phone call notified her that if she still desired to take Engineering here, she would be accepted.

Easy Going Nature

On first meeting Miss Donohue, one at once becomes aware of her cheerful disposition and her good natured carefree attitude about things in general.

During the first few days of school this year, no one got a bigger kick out of the Prof's red faces and apologetic remarks than Connie herself as they would breeze through the roll, never flinching as they referred to her as Mr. Donohue."

The sometimes obvious restraint in some of her teachers' story telling continues to amuse her.

We asked Connie if she had any trouble whatsoever in adapting to her new environment. Expecting her answer to be anything from studies to male rejection of her, we were a bit surprised when she answered:

Bad On Names

"The only trouble I've had so far is my lack of a memory for names. Since coming to Villanova I've met many of the students here, but it's really embarrassing when I'm talking to one I've recently met to realize that I've forgotten his name.

"It must seem rather ignorant of me at the time but I honestly have a terrible time recalling names; and with most of the fellows wearing those blue blazers, it doesn't make things easier."

Being able to remember names or not, Connie has been well received by the male and female students alike. Through her sincere interest and genuine friendliness toward others, she has become, in the short space of five months, one of the most popular figures on campus.

Connie resides in Paoli with her parents and younger sister. One need not look beyond her immediate family to find the roots of her interest in Engineering. While Mrs. Donohue has no previous experience in the field, Connie's father has more than enough for the both of them.

Inventor Father

He operates his own company—Donobilt Products—and holds several patents on his own inventions. His specialty is the design of new heating processes.

When speaking of her family, Connie makes it clear that no influence from home has been exerted on her in her choice of a career.

Miss Donohue's outside interests are many and varied.

One of her favorites is travel. She has been to Europe—where Switzerland caught her fancy—and to Canada where she studied French in a school at Quebec.

Notes Foreign Resentment

Connie noted that while she was abroad she detected a resentment among Europeans toward Americans for not being able to speak any language but their own.

"What makes them even more annoyed is that all Americans assume that all Europeans speak at least a minimum of English," says Connie.

But of all Connie's interests, besides Engineering, the stage is her most avid. She was seen in the last Belle Masque production, "Tiger at the Gates," and will be seen in the group's present production.

An Excellent Actress

One of her fellow Belle Masque members describes her as "an excellent actress".

In addition to her acting, Connie ably plays the violin and the piano and sings with a rich soprano voice.

As far as sports go, tennis and swimming are tops with Connie. Many hours of class and study as a Mechanical Engineering student limit her activity in these, however.

While one of her frends in the nursing school remarked that study seems to come easy to her, Connie is quick to state that her work is anything but easy. But pleasure in her studies makes the work that much more bearable.

Many wonder why Miss Donohue chose Villanova, where, previous to her entrance, women engineers were taboo.

Reason for Choice

"Well I wanted to take Engineering, but I also wanted to reside at home. Villanova was the school with the greatest attraction for me."

As far as schooling goes, Connie has some pretty definite opinions on education in general. She believes that our elementary and high schools are not sufficiently preparing the student for college work.

"I think that the reason many students are not making college or are having trouble when they do, can be traced to their previous schooling," says Connie. "Many courses which are now taught in high school and even college could have been taught in Junior High School or even earlier. Pre-college instruction is just too simple."

J. P. Blasts Villanovan, Solves Kennedy Dilemma

By J. P. KELLEY

In last week's edition of the VILLANOVAN an editorial appeared entitled "Why Does Senator Kennedy Oppose Papal Ambassador?" The basis for this editorial was an article appearing in the February 20th edition of LOOK Magazine: "Democratic Forecast—A Catholic in 1960."

In my opinion, the VILLANOVAN is taking the stand that Senator Kennedy is putting politics ahead of his own Catholic religion. They base their opinion, as far as I can determine, on one statement of Kennedy's.

To quote: "I am flatly opposed to the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican. Whatever advantages it might have in Rome—and I am not convinced of these—they would VILLANOVAN substituted "should" in this direct quote) be more than offset by the divisive effect at home."

They interpret this statement as follows, "In other words, it would seem that there is no reason for not sending an ambassador to the Vatican except that such might not be a popular move with United States Protestants." This statement is, of course a fallacy.

'Divisive' Key

The VILLANOVAN's interpretation of Kennedy's words centers about the word "divisive" in his Papal comment. The "divisive effect" according to the paper was that Protestant voters would be displeased with Papal recognition, while Catholics would be pleased. Thus, they are dividing the population into two segments—Protestants and Catholics.

My interpretation also centers about "divisive," except that the "divisive effect" in my opinion alienates many religious segments in the population —Catholics, Protestants, Jews, Moslems, Budhists, etc.— some of each expressing a pro or con argument in favor of Papal recognition.

Thus, great disunity in the U. S., according to Senator Kennedy, would (not "should") follow the sending of an ambassador to the Vatican. This, in Kennedy's opinion is not worth advantages that might occure to either us or Rome.

The VILLANOVAN is also guilty of a grave misstatement of fact. To quote—"It seems to us that the Roman Catholic Pope, just by virtue of his position as spiritual leader of millions of men, would warrant diplomatic recognition by this Country—regardless of the religion of the president".

This is erroneous, since according to the Constitution the power is truly in the hands of the President to recognize a state, but not a spiritual leader. Wouldn't it be silly to diplomatically recognize the head of Buddhism, whoever that may be, if there is one? Our government does not recognize the man but the state.

Three Major Errors

In summary then, the VILLANOVAN must plead guilty to three major errors—misquoting Kennedy, misinterpreting his statement concerning Papal recognition and ignorance of the procedure of diplomatic recognition.

Therefore, the implication derived from reading the editorial—that Kennedy is playing politics with the Catholic Church—must be termed an untruth and the result of an incorrect analysis of the article. His reasoning ,according to my interpretation, which I believe to be correct, is "sound and adequate".

In a previous political column, I stated in substance that Kennedy would have to be ruled out by the politicians as a Presidential possibility because of the controversy concerning his religion. The VILLANOVAN has built up this controversy, and perhaps I am guilty of the same error for defending him. Poor Senator Kennedy.

Certainly everyone should read the VILLANOVAN. Let them think for themselves about other things.

There is always free cheese in a mousetrap.

MARXISM AND SOVIETISM EVALUATED

By DOUG McCLATCHY

To gain a fuller realization of the horror of the present world situation it is of primary importance to grasp the synonymous meaning of the terms Sovietism and Marxism. It is because too many people do not see the undeviating similarity between the two that the Soviet thrust for power is underestimated.

The error comes from not having a full understanding of Marxism and the fluidity which the philosophy contains. Those who have a simple knowledge of the basic tenets of Marxism cannot reconcile Soviet policy with it, and therefore look upon the Soviet as merely another totalitarian state and to be reckoned with as such. They underestimate the fanaticism of the men who control Russia, and are being just as foolish as a man who would go out to fight a hungry lion with kind words, if they feel that Communism can be dealt with in such a way.

Why is the feeling so prevalent that Sovietism is not Marxism? Mainly, for three reasons: first, the Soviets let the people practice religion and Marxism denies the validity of religion and the existence of God; second, a state exists in Russia as well as classes in society and Marx preached a classless society without the existence of a state; third, Soviet policy is contradictory and doesn't really follow any one line and therefore can't be Marxism.

Lets examine each of these closely. There is first, the seeming irreconcilability of Marxism with the existence of religion in the Soviet. Marx looked upon religion as "the opium of the people," an institution created by fear of natural forces and the burden of human hardships. It gave man a hope. It acted as an opiate in that is eased the physical and mental suffering of this life by promising a greater happiness in a future state of existence. It is in this view as an opiate that we have our answer.

As the Rev. Charles J. McFadden, O.S.A., states in his book "The Philosophy of Communism:" Present day Russia attempts to destroy all organized religion but tolerates what it calls 'freedom of conscience.' In a word, it realizes that it must crush organized religion if it is to annhilate capitalism, but it knows also that there will be economic suffering in society until true communism arrives and that man will have a natural need of the 'opium' of religion until that time."

From this first explanation we gain a clue to the compatability of the existence of a state and classes in Russia and the Marxist doctrine of a classless society without any state. As so many think, Marx did not simply preach that there would be a revolution of the proletariat and that then a Utopian classless society would come into being taking the place of present society. He had much more forsight than that. He knew that it would take many years, perhaps a century or more, before his ultimate goal was achieved. In the interim he predicted that a "dictatorship of the Proletariat" (still a state) would reign.

The fact that it is a new order does not prevent it from being open to many of the failings of the old state. It openly acknowledges its class character. It is merely an organ created to suppress the bourgeois class, and any form this suppression takes is merely incidental to the end desired. The "dictatorship" is only a transitional stage between capitalism and communism, and will last only as long as the bourgeois class itself.

The solution to our third point, the contradictory nature of Soviet policy, is also to be found inherent in the philosophy of Marx. The ruthlessness, the inhumanity, the slaughter, the reversals of position, the promotion of war while pleading for world peace, the poverty and hunger of the Russian people, all these fit into the puzzle and become clear and definable as one undeviating policy when an understanding of Marxism morality is had. Most simply, it is this: Any act that is in the interest of the advance of communist power and world conquest and in the direction of history's will is a moral and righteous act.

In other words, the end creates the means—any means if they produce the desired end. Murder then can become a good act, as well as lying, deceit, trickery. To the Soviets or Marxists (for it should) this is not immorality, but rather morality on a high order. It is a new morality, formed from the moralities of the past (if there really was more than one true morality). It is part of the grand synthesis—an integral part of Marxism philosophy.

We must understand that this Marxism morality is not simply a means of rationalizing their guilt for heinous acts, but a way of life, of thinking believing, acting; just as Thomism is a way of life for the Roman Catholic world. We must understand that they do not think in terms of the same values we do, that truth to them is a relative and changing thing, that whatever is most expedient to the present situation is true while tomorrow it may not be; that they want peace most sincerely—their type of peace, a communistic peace.

We must understand that Marxism is not stupid, simple philosophy. It is diabolically clever and deceitfully logical. Its idealogy of applied godless materialism apparently exercises an overwhelming appeal for the student mind. It is able to corrupt even the most intelligent of us, and it will, unless we recognize it for what it really is—the unholy cause of a group of fanatics who undeviatingly follow its philosophy, aiming ultimately at the communist utopia, classless society.

Sovietism is Marxism. This is the key that unlocks the door to our understanding of the Soviet. Unless we use it we will flounder in ignorance, not grasping what is happening to the world. Marx drew up the blueprint for world conquest, and the communists are following it as scrupulously as an engineer follows his blueprint when he builds a bridge.

Engineering Tests

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering announced that the Engineer-in-Training Examination will be given on Saturday, May 2. Applications must be in by April 13.

Columbia-Southern Chemical Corporation
Interview Date: February 25

Opportunities available in seven plants: New Martinsville, W. Va., Barberton, O., Lake Charles, La., Corpus Christi, Tex., Jersey City, N. J., Bartlett, Calif., and Beauharnois, Quebec, Canada.

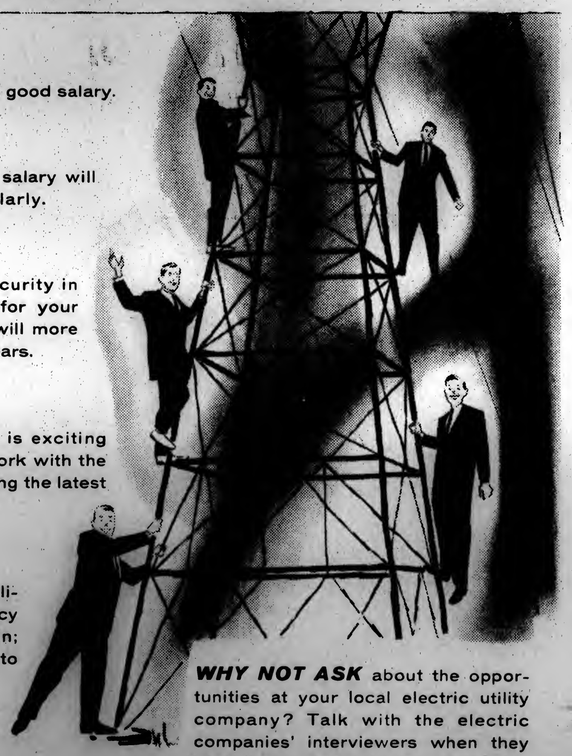
Producers of heavy industrial chemicals; soda ash, chlorine, caustic soda, anhydrous ammonia, titanium tetrachloride, and other chlorinated products.

Research, development, production, design and maintenance opportunities open for men in these categories:

BS, MS, PhD Chemists; BS & MS Chem. Engrs.; BS CE's; BS ME's; BS EE's; BS Indus. Engrs.; BS Instrument Engrs., and PhD Physicists.

Why your engineering career with an electric utility is

MORE THAN JUST A JOB



BECAUSE you begin at a good salary.

BECAUSE your salary will be reviewed regularly.

BECAUSE you enjoy security in your profession, security for your family, in an industry that will more than double in size in 10 years.

BECAUSE the work is exciting and challenging; you work with the top men in the field, using the latest equipment.

BECAUSE the electric utilities generally follow a policy of promotion from within; your chance of continuing to advance depends on you.

WHY NOT ASK about the opportunities at your local electric utility company? Talk with the electric companies' interviewers when they visit your campus, or write to:

If you will close one eye and stare steadily at the X on the left-hand side, the black dot on the right-hand side will disappear. In normal persons, opening both eyes will cause the dot to reappear. Closing both eyes will cause the X to disappear.

The added expanded ond contracted lines cause one of the two lines forming the centers of these designs to appear longer than the other. Actually, both are the same length.

In some people one eye is higher than the other, causing these parallel lines to appear to converge toward the lower eye.

If you will stare long enough at the dark spot it will appear to move toward the edge of this newspaper and fall off the side. Seat yourself in a comfortable chair when you try this, as it may take days.

AREN'T GAMES GRAND!

Tutor Program Presented To Student Congress Tonight

A motion will be presented to the Student Congress tonight concerning the establishment of a undergraduate Student Tutor Program.

The Academic Affairs Committee, chaired by Jerry Hepburn, senior Civil engineer, in conjunction with the Rev. John J. Boyle, O.S.A., and the Student Faculty Committee, has devised an extensive program to promote the intellectual welfare of the students of Villanova.

The program will provide student tutors for the explicit aid of students having difficulties in specific courses. The following is a prime example of how this new system would function.

Trouble With Chem.

Having trouble in a chemistry course, a student desires extra-circular assistance and is referred to the coordinator of the program, who assigns him to a student chemistry tutor.

To qualify a tutor must have already completed the course and maintained at least a B average in it.

The student and his assigned tutor would then set up a schedule, which would be convenient to both of them. These meetings would be held during the day and not in the evening.

The student, who may continue with the tutor as long as he feels that he needs further assistance, will be free to withdraw from the program at any time.

To be run on a strictly confidential basis, the program will be provided without charge to the student. The student must not expect the tutor to do his assignments for him, but rather he is to expect help in understanding the basic fundamentals of the course.

Starts in March

The program is expected to

BY J. EDGAR LOHR
of the Villanovan Staff

go into effect sometime in March and will continue until approximately two or three weeks before final exams.

Being only a pilot program, students must realize that more emphasis will be placed on basic courses at this time; such as English Composition, General Chemistry, French, and Engineering Math.

At the University of Pennsylvania this program was instituted with a result of an overwhelming sucess. The following statistics point out the tremendous possibilities for a student tutor program.

During the past year the Penn program assisted 168 students. Of this number 5.3 percent received A, 9.5 percent received B, 26.9 percent earned C. 34.5 percent received D, and only 23.8 percent failed in the course that they had been tutored.

Basic Principle

The basic principle, upon which the sucess or failure of this program depends, is the quality and interest of the tutors themselves.

The Student Council, which is theoretically made up of all the students at Villanova, should concern itself with improving the intellectual output of fellow students.

Therefore, the responsibility of this program and its failure or sucess depends upon the interest of whole student body.

"We obviously need many intelligent men who are willing to devote a few hours of their time each week to be tutors." stated Hepburn.

Students who would qualify for such a position are asked to consider seriously this program and to attend a meeting planned for the near future.

Gain Self-Satisfaction

Possibly the greatest advantage will be the self-satisfaction derived from helping a student acquire a higher grade. Such a program would also be an excellent review of a course for the tutor.

A position of this nature while in college will be definite asset when the individual in applying for a job.

Gratitude and appreciation would be extended to the members of this tutor society by the University Administration, as well as the undergraduate body.

Hepburn stated further, "Remember the success of the program depends upon you, the Students of Villanova. Only with your cooperation can this new venture become a success and its paramount benefits fully realized."

Villanova Singers Begin Spring Activity Schedule

The Villanova Singers, under the direction of Herbert Fiss and moderated by the Rev. Edward Syvinski, O.S.A. commenced a full schedule of activities last week with a concert program at Cabrini College. Last Thursday the Singers performed at Villa Maria Academy.

Plans for the future now include several concerts at nearby colleges and schools and a joint performance with Manhattanville College. A stereophonic tape recording by the Singers is also seen in the near future.

The Singers will participate in the Inter-Collegiate Choral Festival at St. Joseph's on March 21 at 8 p.m. This, a federation of eight area glee clubs was instituted by Villanova four years ago.

The Festival is patterned after the famous Big Ten Festival, with each group performing four selections and a grand finale in which all the glee clubs take part.

Schools participating in the Festival will include Villanova, the Unversity of Pennsylvania, Temple, St. Joseph's, Rosemont, Chestnut Hill, and St. Peter's of Jersey City, N. J.

'Free Day' Vote Tonight

was generally believed that the day off would be chosen sometume in May to relieve the strain or the eight solid weeks of class which follow this year's early Easter.

Before NIT Bid

But that was before Villanova found itself in the National Invitational basketball tournament in Madison Square Garden.

Tournament play in New York will be on March 12 (Thursday), 14 (Saturday), 17 (Tuesday), 19 (Thursday) and 21 (Saturday). Should Villanova play on the first Thursday or either Saturday, scheduling will make it possible for any student who desires to attend the game.

But if the Wildcats should be in action on either the 17th or the 19th, a problem could arise, since games on those days are played both at night and in the afternoon.

The thing is, there is no assurance that Villanova will even get past the first round of competition. In fact, it is not known yet whether or not the Main Liners are a seeded team.

Possible Tuesday Debut

Should the Wildcats be seeded (i.e.—chosen one of the four favored teams in the NIT) they wouldn't even have to play until Tuesday the 17th. If they're not seeded, the situation, obviously, is even more confused.

In the middle of all this, there still exists a hard core of representatives who want the May 8 date as the "free day," with council president Bob Murphy presumably among them.

These men claim that because of the uncertainty of the NIT scheduling and because of the ideal location of their date (the Friday after Ascension Thursday, thus giving the students a four-day weekend; the weekend following Junior Week; two weeks before finals.)

Need Three Weeks

Another problem, according to vice chairman Tom Hoffman, is the time element. "We'd have to know at least three weeks ahead of time to let the Administration know and get things in order," Hoffman said.

Hoffman will go into tonight's meeting with a definite voting policy in mind. "Being a representative of the junior Arts section, I have to vote for the day which they would prefer. After talking to several members of my division, I've found that the majority seem to favor May 8. That's how I'll vote."

As for the council itself, however, Hoffman had other ideas. "If we're seeded, I predict that the council will take off March 17, to combine both St. Patrick's Day and a chance to see the team play. Otherwise, I think they'll go along with May 8."

N.F.C.C.S. Series Planned

NOTE: In an effort to better acquaint the Villanova students with the National Federation of Catholic College Students (NFCCS), the VILLANOVAN is running a series of articles on the purpose, structure, and activities of the organization.

The NFCCS is an organization set up for the purpose of representing the American college students policy and opinion on the local and national level. It also serves the common interest of student government on campus.

Two hundred Catholic universities claim membership in NFCCS which had its beginning in 1937. The organization is divided into eighteen regions, with Villanova being a member of the Philadelphia division.

NFCCS's basic unit is each college student government. These governments are affiliated with a regional branch which in turn are associated with the national branch itself.

Permission Being Granted To Make Closed Retreat

Sophomores and freshmen have been granted permission to make a closed retreat rather than attend the one held by the University, the Rev. Norbert Whitley, O.S.A., Villanova Chaplain, has announced.

It must be made at an approved Laymen's Retreat House, Father Whitley said. This concession was granted after repeated requests by members of the two classes.

Unfortunately, St. Joseph's in the Hill's Retreat House at Malvern, Penna. cannot accept any more reservations. However, arrangements have been tenatively made at the St. Pius X Retreat House at Blackwood, N. J., which is not far from Camden, to accept any Villanova Students who would care to make the Retreat there.

There are three weekends on which they could accept as many as 100 students. These weekends are: February 27, March 1, March 13-March 15, and March 20-March 22.

The fee for the weekend retreat at Blackwood is 20 dollars. This includes room and board. A minimum of 25 are required, however, to hold the retreat.

Those wishing to make the Closed Retreat at Blackwood are required to contact the Chaplain's office by the Monday preceding the Friday on which the Retreat begins.

Arrangements for transportation can possibly be made, for a nominal fee, with one of the local bus companies for the transfer of Retreatants to Blackwood on Friday afternoons and their return to Villanova on Sunday following the close of the Retreat.

Franklin Inst. Movies

The Franklin Institute's Nickelodeon will present for twelve days only starting February 16 "Adrift on Their Honeymoon" starring Fatty Arbuckle and Louis Facenda, and "Monkey Business" with Our Gang.

Green Announces Sociology Speech

Joseph Green, of the Sociology Department, has announced a lecture to be given on March 2 at 1:30 P. M. in the Vasey Hall Auditorium.

John Kane, chairman of the Sociology Department at Notre Dame University, will speak on "The Status of Catholic Leadership in Social Sciences".

Kane, an authority in his field, is the author of numerous books and articles on Catholic-Protestant relations, marriage and family and similar subjects.

Library Anniversary

The 10th anniversary of Villanova's Library will be observed on March 1. Members of the Friends of Villanova Library will conduct the proceedings.

The First Editions of James Brendan Connolly will also be displayed at this time. Connolly, a well-known American author of sea-stories, was the first winner in the Olympic Games when they were re-initiated in 1896 after being suspended since 394 A. D.

Villanova Featured On University Round Table

Villanova was featured last Friday night on "University Round Table," a new educational program heard over radio station WCAU.

The series, heard every Friday evening 9.30 is under the joint directorship of George Lord and Mary Margaret Kearney, both of the WCAU staff.

Dr. Fred Khouri, of Villanova's Department of Political Science, moderated the discussion, "Will Alliances Keep the Peace?"

The three student panelists were Jim Corey and Frank Cunningham, both Senior Political Science majors, and Pete Leehuis, a senior History major.

Featured as guest on the show was Abdul Rizwi, principal of a high school in Pakistan. Rizwi is presently attending the University of Pennsylvania, and will received his doctorate this June

Topics discussed by the panel included the NATO and SEATO military alliances, and concentrated on Southeastern Asia's need for economic culture, and scientific alliances.

The panelists concluded that although the threat today is not one of all-out war, the nations of the free world must nevertheless be prepared in their role as defenders.

Research Program For VU Engineers

Civil Engineering at Villanova is keeping abreast of the times in research, thanks to Professor Richard H. Miller, whose efforts have brought research sponsorship to the department.

The Civil Engineering Department now conducts research investigations both in the lab and in the field, under the patronage of the Corson Company of Plymouth Meeting, and the National Gypsum Company.

The making and testing of soil aggregates with a view towards their use as a roadway sub-base is the essence of the research program.

The work itself is carried on by the Civil Engineering faculty, under the direction of Professor Miller, whose chief aides are Professor McNicol and Professor Brown. Several salaried engineering students also participate in the project.

Professor Gallen, head of the Civil Engineering Department, planning expanded research activities and has applied this year for a National Science Foundation grant.

DebatorsGain Even Split In Tourney

Four debators from Villanova split even in 10 debates at the annual forensic tournament at Kings College on February 13 and 14.

Oz Scogna and Tom Pfieffer had a 3-2 record as the negative team, while Jack Serafin and Joe Remy were 2-3 as affirmative.

Victories were registered against Juniata, Kings, Fordham, and Duquesne, whereas defeats came against Duquesne and Penn State.

Kings College had the best record with nine wins and only one loss. However, they declared themselves ineligible for 1st place, so the eventual winner was St. John's College. Penn State, last year's champ, placed second.

The Debating Society President, senior Jim Corey, announced that weekly executive committee meetings would be held every Thursday at 3:30 to prepare for the seven varsity tournaments coming up in the next two months. In addition, the weekly Monday night meetings for formulation of issues will continue as scheduled.

Corresponding Secretary Frank Cunningham announced that the Society is joining the Pennsylvania Debate Association, and will attend the Association's annual tournament, thereby necessitating the dropping of the Brooklyn College tourney.

GIVE BLOOD

The Rev. Daniel P. Falvey O.S.A. and miler Ron Delany admire the Villanova Library's new exhibit based on the newly acquired first editions of author and Olympic athlete Brendan Connolly. Connolly was a medal winner in the first modern Olympiad in 1896. Delany won the 1500 meters in the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne, Australia.

Banking Leader Kelly Guest of Management

William F. Kelly, President and Director of the First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Company, will deliver the after-dinner speech at the eleventh Annual Conference of the Society for the Advancement of Management on March 12. The topic of his speech will be "The Philosophy of Management."

Kelly is prominent in the affairs of three local educational institutes. He is a member of the Board of Managers of La-Salle College, a member of the Board of Trustees of St. Joseph's College, and a member of the Advisory Board of Lay Trustees of Villanova.

The guest speaker is also president of the Philadelphia Industrial Development Corporation and holds directorships with several large corporations in the Philadelphia area.

Knights Chapter Votes to Sponsor Indian Seminarian

The Villanova Chapter of the Knights of Columbus announces that they will sponsor a native seminarian in India. Sponsorship will include that room, board and other necessities of this seminarian.

Recent laws in India forbidding entrance of Catholic missionaries have made it necessary for the immediate training of native priests and Bishops.

The fact that the Knights of Columbus would sponsor the seminarian was decided at a recent meeting. The decision was made after a careful investigation by Andrew Sheedy. Sheedy is Chairman of the Catholic Action Committee.

The Council will observe Laetare Sunday, March 3rd, by attending Mass and a Communion Breakfast.

The Knights will attend the nine o'clock Mass in the University Chapel, after which they will have breakfast at Stouffer's Restaurant in Wynnewood.

Tickets may be obtained from the chaplain's office or from representatives in the dorms. Price is one dollar.

VU Debates Rosies

Villanova debaters are to face Rosemont foes in debate at next Monday's Knights of Columbus meeting. The debate will be a novelty because it will be the first meeting of V.U. debaters with those of Rosemont.

SAM Members See Advanced Phones

Members of the Society for the Advancement of Management and sophomore Industrial Administration majors visited the Bell Telephone Offices on March 8 and inspected their automatic accounting equipment.

The equipment, being the most modern of its type, automatically records long-distance calls by origin, places called, and the time and duration of the calls.

The equipment also computes the cost and feeds accounting machines which sort the information and bills the customers.

Members of both SAM and the Industrial Administration department were given insight into the computing and accounting fields through this very interesting and beneficial field trip.

Blood Donor Goal Set at 350 Pints

A Red Cross Bloodmobile, under the sponsorship of the Spirit Committee, will be available Wednesday and Thursday, March 6 and 7 at the Alumni Gym.

Villanova's quota this year is 350 pints. Last year the quota was missed by 15 pints.

Villanovans are reminded that anyone donating blood is insured along with members of his immediate family, for one year.

Those who did not sign up originally will be able to give blood in the capacity of walk-in donors.

Precious Contacts

The precious metal palladium is employed extensively for electrical contacts in automatic controls because it resists tarnishing and spark erosion.

VU Security Guarr Dies After Illness

James H. McCoog, Villanova security guard, died after a long illness on February 15. The officer, second of the security group to die in three weeks, was in Women's Medical College Hospital since early January.

The World War I veteran was a member of the force since September 1955 and was buried in Beverly National Cemetary.

He is survived by a wife and six children of whom four are married and three remain at home.

John J. Kelly is the other recently deceased guard. He suffered a heart attack and died at Bryn Mawr on January 26.

ASME Holds Elections

The Villanova chapter of the ASME will hold election of officers Monday, at 11:30 a.m. in the third floor drawing rooms of Mendel Hall.

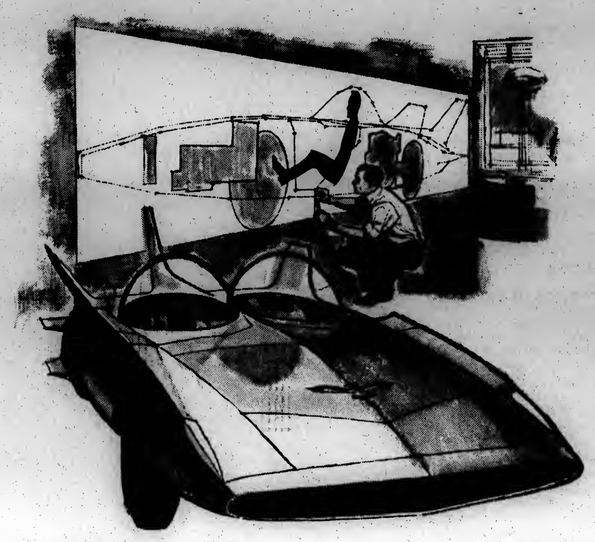
President Jim Woodward has announced that balloting will last only for the duration of the engineering activities period.

The practice in the past has been to keep the polls open for a whole day. Woodward explained that this system was abandoned because of the extra amount of work which it entailed.

Only Junior class members are eligible to hold office.

The purpose of holding elections at this time is to enable the outgoing officers to help the newcomers handle any difficulties that might arise during the first part of their tenure of office, Woodward said.

Reagan to Speak



Head football coach Francis X. Reagan will speak in Milwaukee at the 13th annual Wisconsin Catholic Action Convention on Saturday.

Reagan will address a convention session for Catholic high school students on "The Place of Athletics in a Changing World."

JOB OPPORTUNITIES!

A General Motors representative will be on campus March 5 and 6.

Contact your college placement office to arrange an interview.

At General Motors there's room to stretch your imagination!

A single control starts, stops, and steers the Firebird III—or this GM "laboratory on wheels" can be safely guided by electronic impulses sent from a cable buried under the road!

Fabulous steps into the future, such as this, can be made only by men with fabulous imaginations. A lot of such men work for General Motors and its divisions. There's room for a lot more—maybe you.

In addition to research in the automotive and appliance fields, General Motors and its divisions are concerned with solar energy, astronautics, astrodynamics, electronics, and many fields of space engineering. If these areas of scientific study challenge your imagination, perhaps GM has a place for you at one of its plants in 71 cities.

Here is a real opportunity to put your imagination to work on everything from tiny transistors to dynamic diesels.

GM positions now available in these fields for men holding Bachelors', Masters' and Doctors' degrees: Mechanical Engineering • Electrical Engineering • Industrial Engineering • Metallurgical Engineering • Chemical Engineering Aeronautical Engineering • Ceramic Engineering Mathematics • Industrial Design • Physics Chemistry • Engineering Mechanics.

Blanc Tells Law Forum He Tapped Wires Three Times

By LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE
of the Villanovan Staff

The only agreement reached last week at the Villanova Law Forum was that wiretapping is a serious and controversial problem.

All aspects of wiretapping were discussed by Victor H. Blanc, Philadelphia District Attorney, and John Rogers Carroll, criminal lawyer, at the opening session of the Spring Session Law Forum.

Samuel Dash, former District Attorney and author of a treatise on wiretapping compiled under the auspicies of the Philadelphia Bar Association, was moderator of the two hour debate.

Blanc defended wiretapping as an effective weapon in the hands of law enforcement agencies. "Let's be realistic," the District Attorney said, "and not just academic.

"When I took over as District Attorney three years ago, wiretapping was legal in Pennsylvania. Our office used wiretapping in only three instances during the next two years, and each time we achieved important results."

Blanc said tapped telephone wires led to the exposition of three convicts attempting to organize employees of center city restaurants.

Wiretapping also led to the breaking of a vice ring in Philadelphia, Montgomery County, and Woodbury, N. J., Blanc said, as well as the cracking of a giant dope ring netting more than one million dollars a year.

Carroll charged that wiretapping is an invasion of constitutional rights. "Give up one right, then another right, and soon our basic rights wil be gone," Carroll said.

The attorneys exchanged a barb over the recent controversy involving the witnesses in the Scoleri murder case in Philadelphia.

"Who will watch these wiretappers to see that they don't use the information for themselves?" Carroll asked. "Who will watch the watchers? The police cannot even watch three witnesses in two center city hotels."

Blanc retorted. "My friend John has spoken flippantly of the recent Scoleri case." The District Attorney said his office "had been cleared on any illegality in the case."

Accounting Group Hears Kensky Talk

Harry Kensky, Supervisory Auditor and assistant to the Regional Manager of the Philadelphia Regional Office, United States General Accounting Office was a recent speaker at an Accounting Society meeting.

Opportunities in the Government Accounting Office was the theme of the Kensky speech. He pointed out that the G.A.O. employed the highest quality accountants and students should be in the top quarter of their class to even consider this office.

After a twenty minute talk, Kensky held the remainder of the period open for questions.

In other Accounting Society news, plans are being formulated for the annual Society dinner-dance which will be held on May 16, Edward Gavin is the dance chairman.

CummingsTo Open Government Talks

Foreign policy will be discussed by members of the Department of History and Political Science during a March lecture series.

The speakers will analize foreign policy in the light of historical background.

Raymond Cummings, former Fulbright scholar who teaches modern French Politics at Villanova, will open the series next Wednesday, at 7:30 p.m. in the C & F ampitheatre.

Future lectures will be held on March 11 and 18. Speakers on these dates will be Dr. Fred Khouri and Dr. Geo. K. Alapatt. Topics for these lectures will be announced later.

WHIRL to Sponsor Literary Contest

Co-editors Ed Ward and John Barone announced that "Business Whirl" for the best article. Aspirants should strive to portray any aspect of the business enterprise whether humorous, serious, or otherwise.

The judges for the contest will be a joint faculty-student committee.

All articles can be submitted to any of the editors personally or left in 9 Sheehan Hall.

success o fthis comedy depends on creating distinctive characterizations." He added, "It has been a demanding job but in most cases I feel that the cast has licked it."

Optimism was expressed by both John Barlas, junior pre-Law, and Immaculata sophomore Diane Viti. "The cast is coming along fiine, especially in cooperation and teamwork," Barlas said. Miss Viti stated that "if done right, the play can be hilarious, and I think it will be played right."

ICG Annual Conference Planned for Immaculata

This year's regional conference of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government will be held on March 7 at Immaculata College, according to chairman Frank Cunningham, senior Political Science major.

The state convention at Harrisburg will convene on April 16.

For the next two months, the Villanova club will work on the bills to be presented in committee at both the regional and the state conventions.

Cunningham said that all committee assignments within the Villanova chapter had been made, but that here is still some doubt as to the chapter's specific committee assignment on the regional level.

Cunningham also announced that a regional executive meeting will be held at the University of Pennsylvania on March 2, to make final provisions for the rules of procedures governing the regional convention.

Other delegates from the Southeastern region will represent Penn, West Chester, Immaculata, Rosemont, P. M. C., Haverford and Bryn Mawr.

Biology Club Meets

The Biology Club will hold a meeting tonight at 7:30 in the biology lab. Graduate students David Liberto and Marshall Silver will present reports based on their research work. Liberto will speak on bacteriology; Silver will report on the muscular system.

Religious Books Now On Racks

Religious pamphlets on a variety of subjects interesting to a Catholic college student are now available on campus.

The topics include questions most asked non-Catholics and what Catholics should know about their religion. Various religions and vocations are also discussed.

Palacio Calls Swimmers Top Catholic Team Without Aid

By JACK CURTIN

"Right now, without the aid of scholarships, Villanova University is the best Catholic college in the United States in inter-collegiate swimming competition.

"With the aid of only two or three scholarships, we could match an yschool in the East—and that includes Yale."

Those are the words of Larry Palacio, co-captain of the 1958-59 Villanova swimming team, who closed out his three year varsity career last week as a part of a record setting 440 medley relay team and with a victory of his own in the 200 butterfly as Villanova downed Gettysburg, 44-42.

They are strong words, but Palacio thinks he has the facts to back up his argument.

"With the National Catholic Interscholastic Swimming Championships held at Villanova every year, we have the cream of the high school swimming crop coming to the campus. Many of them enjoy it here, and would like to attend Villanova.

Can't Pass Up Aid

"But it's pretty hard to turn down a good scholarship offer such as they get from other schools. Just give our swimming team a couple of scholarships to hand out and see the team we'd have."

Whether or not Villanova is now the best Catholic college in swimming competition, or whether or not two or three scholarship swimmers could raise the Wildcats to the level of mighty Yale, there can be no denying that the Main Liners, despite the university's non-scholarship program, have been surprisingly strong.

And in spite of—or perhaps because of—the success of the Villanova mermen, swimming has become the university's most controversial sport.

Swimming at Villanova is considered a "minor" sport, as are golf, rifle and pistol and cross-country. The swimmers, however, feel that they deserve varsity recognition; their argument being that the sport is considered of varsity caliber by most colleges and that it is well covered by the newspapers, thus bringing a good deal of publicity to the school.

Got Cold Reception

Two years ago, a committee representing the swimming team approached the Administration about the possibility of varsity status and the awarding of varsity letters to the swimmers, but were turned down.

And since the swimming team is not a varsity team, it has no scholarships to offer. This, according to Palacio and many others, has detracted from swimming at Villanova.

At least one swimmer disagrees. Freestyler Bob Pinto, who also ended his career in the Gettysburg meet with an individual victory (100 freestyle) and as a partof the record-setting relay team, likes the Villanova set-up just fine.

"This to my mind, is the way a sport should be undertaken," he says, "there's no pressure on the athlete to continually work himself to death for fear of losing his scholarship. Every thing he does, he does because he wants to, and his feeling of satisfaction for victory comes as a result of his own achievement, not because someone drove him to do it."

Pinto Sees Dangers

Pinto has an answer for the scholarship question too. "Sure, Villanova might be great with a couple of scholarship boys. But again, there's no telling how a person will develop under the Villanova system."

The Villanova system. This too must be taken into consideration. What it involves is the fact that coaches Ed Geisz and Jack Lumsden are also directors of the university intramural program and cannot spend as much time as they would like in practice sessions with their athletes.

In involves long and often uncomfortable automobile trips to away meets. And it means giving up—by his own choice—much of the swimmer's free time for practice sessions of his own; practice session in a pool that very often is crowded with other persons, for the field house pool is one of the university's main sources of recreation.

It could be that all these difficulties are the very reason that the swimmers so dearly want varsity recognition. In the words of John Rumbarger, third of a quartet of seniors who ended their Villanova swimming last week, "I've enjoyed swimming, and I'd do it all over again if I had the chance.

Represent School

"Maybe it's just a matter of pride, but I'd like to be able to wear that varsity sweater though. I feel that the swimming team represents Villanova and represents it well, and I think we deserve something for it. If we do anything to disgrace Villanova on the road trip, we can be expelled for it; so why shouldn't we get recognition for what we do to embellish the university's name?"

The senior quartet is optimistic, however, looking back on their three years of competition, a period during which Villanova racked up 25 victories against only eight losses and one tie.

'Quin-Caps' Lead Bowling

One team has emerged as a solid front-runner after six weeks of intense competion in the Intra-mural Bowling League.

The "Quin-Caps" are composed of five varsity football players and are paced by senior fullback Gene Paja.

A playoff will determine the overall winner of the league which is divided into three divisons. Individual trophies will be awarded.

For the first time in the league's history, a 15-man contingent will represent Villanova in the National Inter-collegiate Bowling Congress which will be held in New York in the spring.

HUSBANDS, ANYONE?

It has been alleged that coeds go to college for the sole purpose of finding husbands. This is, of course, an infamous canard, and I give fair warning that, small and spongy as I am, anybody who says such a dastardly thing when I am around had better be prepared for a sound thrashing!

Girls go to college for precisely the same reasons as men do: to broaden their horizons, to lengthen their vistas, to drink at the fount of wisdom. But if, by pure chance, while a girl is engaged in these meritorious pursuits, a likely looking husband should pop into view, why, what's wrong with that? Eh? What's wrong with that?

The question now arises, what should a girl look for in a husband? A great deal has been written on this subject. Some say character is most important, some say background, some say appearance, some say education. All are wrong.

The most important thing—bar none—in a husband is health. Though he be handsome as Apollo and rich as Croesus, what good is he if he just lies around all day accumulating bedsores?

The most important thing in a husband is health

The very first thing to do upon meeting a man is to make sure he is sound of wind and limb. Before he has a chance to sweet-talk you, slap a thermometer in his mouth, roll back his eyelids, yank out his tongue, rap his patella, palpate his thorax, ask him to straighten out a horseshoe with his teeth. If he fails these simple tests, phone for an ambulance and go on to the next prospect.

If, however, he turns out to be physically fit, proceed to the second most important requirement in a husband. I refer to a sense of humor.

A man who can't take a joke is a man to be avoided. There are several simple tests to find out whether your prospect can take a joke or not. You can, for example, slash his tires. Or burn his "Mad" comics. Or steal his switchblade. Or turn loose his pet raccoon. Or shave his head.

After each of these good-natured pranks, laugh gaily and shout "April Fool!" If he replies, "But this is February nineteenth," or something equally churlish, cross him off your list and give thanks you found out in time.

But if he laughs silverly and calls you "Little minx!" put him to the next test. Find out whether he is kindly.

The quickest way to ascertain his kindliness is, of course, to look at the cigarette he smokes. Is it mild? Is it clement? Is it humane? Does it minister tenderly to the psyche? Does it coddle the synapses? Is it a good companion? Is it genial? Is it bright and friendly and full of dulcet pleasure from cockcrow till the heart of darkness?

Is it, in short, Philip Morris?

If Philip Morris it be, then clasp the man to your bosom with hoops of steel, for you may be sure that he is kindly as a summer breeze, kindly as a mother's kiss, kindly to his very marrow.

And now, having found a man who is kindly and healthy and blessed with a sense of humor, the only thing that remains is to make sure he will always earn a handsome living. That, fortunately, is easy. Just enroll him in engineering. © 1959, Max Shulman

Frosh Lose Final Game

In less than spectacular fashion, the frosh closed out their season last Tuesday afternoon.

Travelling up to Temple, they were trounced by the Owls, 87-73. This marked the second time Villanova has fallen before the Owlets this season, and as a result, their record stands six wins and four losses for the year.

The 14-point deficit belies the closeness of the contest. In fact, Villanova lead Temple through most of the first half. It wasn't until there were two minutes to play in the half that the Owls closed the gap and pushed ahead.

From there on, it was just a case of too many Indians (or Owls) for the Wildcats.

White Scores 29

Statistically, there were some bright spots for the frosh. Hubie closed out a spectacular season with 29 points in the losing cause.

A consistent contributor throughout the year, Dan Higgins chipped in with 15 points.

High for Temple was Bruce Drydale, who managed 22 points. Palestra fans will be seeing this boy on the Litwack five next year.

Looking at the season as a whole, the freshmen looked impressive in some games and somewhat less than that in others. Highlights were victories over St. Joe's twice, one of these breaking the century mark.

Lost Four Games

Lesser performances were seen in the Temple and LaSalle games, which accounted for the four losses.

Swimmers

Jim Gregory, who had the best day of all against Gettysburg by setting a new Villanova mark in the 200 breaststroke as well as swimming on the medley record-breaker ,express it best.

"Swimming at Villanova has gotten better in the time, I've been here, and it will improve even more. And I think we're moving toward varsity recognition, although not in the near future."

In all, it would seem that, though they have achieved a good deal of success at Villavona, at least three of the four graduating swimmers are not satisfied with the set-up. Even Pinto will admit that his viewpoint might differ in that "I wasn't a champion when I came here like Palacio and Gregory were."

All Were Champions

Champions they were. Palacio was a National Catholic high school titlist and Gregory was a New England All-Interscholastic champ. But Pinto and Rumbarger had their measure of recognition too. Along with Palacio, they made Philadelphia All-Catholic.

Thus all four met at Villanova. They, along with several other, comprised the strongest froah swim squad Villanova has yet seen four years ago.

The other dropped from competition over the years, but these four remained — because they loved the sport.

At the moment, Villanova feels that it cannot afford to provide additional reward for the swimmers. On the other hand, it would seem that the university cannot afford to ever lose men like these.

New York Track Fans Given Records At Phantom Indoor Meet In Garden

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

There are 15,873 people sitting in the Madison Square Garden stands. Hundreds of sweat-suited athletes sit on the edges of the boards and in the infield—a pied panarama of cross-legged figures.

Pincus Sober, speaking with an expression of matter-of-fact-ness which he alone can affect in such a situation, snaps off the conversational buzz of the crowd by saying he has the results in the one-mile run.

"The winner is Ron Delany, of Ireland; second, Phil Coleman, of the Chicago Track and Field Club; third, Laszlo Tabori, Santa Clara Youth Center; fourth, Dan Waern, of Sweden." The New York regulars, self-acknowledged cognoscenti all, do not need this. Delany's the man in the mile. He always wins.

A very slight pause. Sober again, imperceptably more interested. "The time of the winner, setting a new world's indoor record for the distance, four minutes, one and two-tenths seconds."

The crowd, like a sleeping giant, is slow to stir. But, as the realization that there has been a record set sinks in, it roars and applauds wildly.

Ron Delany And The Pack

A man who has been drinking Ballantine in a cup in the Garden during most of the indoor meets for the past four years, jumps up and down, shouts "A record, a record, a RECORD. Oh that Delany! What a hell of a harp."

Damned for Just Winning

More than twenty other times in the Garden, the same man wanted that "hell of a harp" damned to the fires for only winning races. "He's a bum, a skinny lazy bum. Everybody's breakin' records. But that big-nosed bum just wins races."

Now he has been there for a record mile. "What luck I always have," he tells another celebrant. "I see all the records set." He takes a swig on his beer, and it trickles out the side of his mouth and runs down the front of his coat.

This record mile was never run. There were 15,873 people sitting in the cavern on Eighth Avenue. Athletes sat in small groups on the floor. Officials in black were spread out among the athletes, as though to tone down the unreal field of flashy colors.

But no one ever ran around the board track that night. There were no races at all. The track officials had responded to the fans' apparent disinterest in the races as races. If it was records they wanted, Dan Ferris, Pincus Sober, Asa Bushnell and the rest would give them records. Nothing but records.

Every 15 minutes that night, Sober walked to the microphone and read the results of a phantom race. Then the announcement of a new world mark. "Jenkins' time was one minute, nine and one-tenth seconds . . . Tom Murphy, the winner, in the time of one minute, fifty and one-tenth seconds . . . "

Did Not Want Phantom Races

Ferris and the rest had not wanted to do it. Every Brundage had cautioned that Americans did enough sitting already without having the athletes rest Indian-like on the Garden floor.

But something had to be done. The people would soon stop paying money to see indoor meets. Culbreath outkicks Jenkins in a thrilling finish, but the crowd gives only catcalls as thanks for a performance which does not erase a record.

Two recent races had been the clinchers. Bill Dellinger, moving to the two-mile after failing to beat Delany week after week, opens up a fifty-yard lead. Not much of a contest. The crowd takes advantage of the lack of action to buy a beer and a hot dog. A gentle patter of applause as Dellinger crosses the finish line an easy winner. Then the announcer says, "A new world indoor standard for Dellinger in the two-mile." The crowd explodes, cheering wildly and long. Thousands who were in the corridors to get their snacks rush back to make sure they are part of the celebration.

Ron Delany, after breaking the PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER Games record for the mile by out-kicking Tabori, drops down to the half-mile the very next night. He has not run that distance indoors since he was a freshman in college. He faces America's two top half-milers—Tom Murphy and Dave Scurlock; a once-great now getting back into top shape—Arnie Sowell; the European 800-meter champion—Mike Rawson; and a very good if not great half-miler from the N.Y.A.C.—Joe Soprano.

Murphy Sets Own Pace

After the first 60 yards, Soprano takes the lead. At the end of two laps, it's Murphy out front. He is setting the pace, fast enough, he thinks, to tire the already-tired Irishman, but not too fast to leave himself without enough pep to withstand Delany's usual kick.

With just one lap remaining, Delany starts his move. Murphy is still running free and easy. At the last turn, Delany shortens his stride and starts to sprint. Murphy, as good a quarter-miler as he is a half-miler, sprints at the same time. He's got a three-stride lead. Delany pulls even. They flee toward the tape side-by-side, like galloping horses rigged to the same carriage.

The Irishman leans forward just as they hit the finish line. He's a winner by a foot. The crowd is as limp as the jogging runners. Every other athlete rises and applauds for fully three minutes. Hundreds of them rush to Delany, slap him on the back, on the buttocks. They KNOW what it took to win that race. The people in the stands are still shouting. One hears "great race," "greatest race," "thrill of a lifetime" bandied around.

Pincus Sober announces the order of the finish, then says the time was 1:52.2, a good but not outstanding mark. The crowd stops cheering. Some make faint boos amid swigs of beer. On the Garden floor, the athletes are still clapping their hands in tribute.

Like Ron for the Record

Ron Delany did not run a phantom mile race last Saturday in the Garden. It was as real as sweat. Forced to keep up with the fast early pace set by Peter Close and the biting kick by Istvan Rozavogyi, Delany blasted to a 15-yard victory while setting the world's indoor mile mark—four minutes, two and five-tenth seconds.

The capacity crowd sitting in on the National A.A.U. indoor championships gave Delany a thunderous hand when the time was announced. This was the greatest record set on a night when four other marks were established.

But the crowd failed to notice that, with the big lead at the finish, Delany slowed down to an easy trot over the last 10 yards. On another night, when no one is capable of setting a good pace, or the other runners choose not to do so, Delany will burst past the pack to win by a few yards. The time will be 4:07.5 or 4:09.2. Delany will be booed.

Let's have those phantom races, Pincus.

Garden Jinx Faces Basketball Team In Tourney

By TOM TROY

By now everyone knows that Villanova will play in the NIT. And everyone knows how much factors as experience and the publicity and prestige of the tournament affect the play.

Yes, these items, best described as intangibles, will have a tremendous effect on the caliber of play. Few people, however, consider the most important factor—the site of the tournament.

The site of The NIT, Madison Square Garden, exerts an influence like no other arena in America. Villanova feels this influence and is more affected by it than any other team around.

If there is a curse on the basketballers of Villanova then it is most explicitly manifested in the Garden. When a Villanova team enters New York and dons uniforms to play on the Garden floor there is a powerful—a very powerful—odor of malediction about the place.

Not Alone In Jinx

It should be pointed out here, however, that Villanova isn't the only team to suffer what has come to be termed "the Garden jinx." No! There are many others.

One doesn't exactly know what it is that causes a team to get the jitters in the Garden—but nevertheless the shakes are prevalent. Maybe the fact that New York is considered the basketball capitol of America causes many teams to falter.

Of course, this is now anamalous, for although that city once produced the finest teams in the nation, only St. John can now be considered to be a power.

But even though this is true, New York and Madison Square Garden are still looked upon as the proving ground, the big test, for a basketball team. Do well and you gain fame; fail and you usually sink into oblivion.

Thus, any visitor to the Garden is still very visibly affected. Sometimes entire teams are effected and at other times only individuals.

Didn't Bother Oscar

Of course, there are exceptions. Some teams and individuals absolutely thrive in this forbidden atmosphere. Oscar Robertson is a good example. He scored 56 points in his Garden debut and 45 points in his second visit. Tom Gola and his LaSalle teams always played extremely well in the Garden.

But by and large, the opposite effect takes place. Most teams just fold. West Virginia is a good example of a team that can't play winning ball in the Garden.

Last year they were rated number one in the country at the end of the season. They came to New York for the first round of the eastern regionals o fthe NCAA tournament Manhatten upset them.

Two weeks ago they returned to play NYU. They were upset again. It looks as if they will never win in New York.

For sheer consistency in this matter Villanova can't be topped. Here is a team that can't win for losing in the Eighth Avenue Arena. Let's look at the unenviable record:

Led By Arizin

In 1949, Villanova, led by the incomparable Paul Arizin, compiled a 22-3 record. They won 12 games in a row, were ranked number seven in the nation and were selected as the district two representative in the NCAA.

They journeyed to the Garden to play Kentucky, number one team in the world! Paul Arizin scored 30 points; Leo Wolf held All-American Ralph Beard scoreless from the floor. Result: Kentucky 85—Villanova 72. A few hardy individuals weren't enough.

In 1954, Villanova was invited to play in the Holiday Tournament. The 'Cats were undefeated in five games; Bob Schafer was an All-American and led the country in scoring with a 25.4 average. This team possessed really fine balance.

In the first round Villanova met Duquesne. The Wildcats were trounced 87-68. It seems that a fellow named Sihugo Green scored 38 points. Bob Schafer? Four field goals and four fouls for 12 points.

All right, Duquesne did go on to win the title. There wasn't a great deal of shame here. But in the second round a below-par St. John's team smashed Villanova, 89-77. Schafer had 16 points.

At the end of that season, after having put together a 16-9 record, the Wildcats were selected once more to play in the NCAA tourney.

A Win—But Wait

Of course the 'Cats had to play in the Garden again. Lo and behold they won. Villanova squeezed by Duke, 74-73.

But the victory was to no avail because sometimes the Garden jinx doesn't strike right away. It waits to strike at an unwary moment. Villanova was defeated by Canisius in the very next round.

By now the point is made but if there are still some doubters they might look at the 1956 Holiday Tournament in which Villanova was again a guest.

In this tourney Villanova lost three straight games. In Villanova's ten game tournament history the Wildcats have won only twice.

Now what conclusion can be drawn from this survey of Villanova versus the Garden in reference to the forth-coming NIT?

It seems as though the only choice is to be pessimistic, and if this isn't obvious one might consult anyone who saw the 'Cats in their only Garden appearance this year. They looked high-schoolish.

IC4A Meet

of the sprint medley.

It was Charley's first competitive running of the year, and it took its toll. The Wildcats won the sprint medley for the third time since 1950 with Collymore running the 440, Jim Blackburn the 100, Joe Mannion the 200 and Stead the 300. The time was 1:53.2, fastest for the meet since the Cats' 1:52.9 in 1956.

A new name in the roster of Wildcat track standouts Nick DeAngelis. He had been running on the mile relay team with fair success earlier in the year. But last week he was entered in the 600 and made a wonderful showing.

Races Veteran Field

He took second place in a heat, behind Charley Jenkins. Then, in the final, he placed fifth. Josh Culbreath won in 1:11.1. He and the next three finishers—Jenkins, Willie Atterberry and Mike Rawson—are college graduates and won't be competing in the IC4A's.

Junior Bob Godesky also made a good impression in the mile. He finished second in the second section of the mile, not far off the winning pace of 4:17.9. The large amount of work that this hustler does may earn him and Villanova some points this week.

John Buckley, defending outdoor IC4A broad jump champion, may be ready to compete on Saturday, after being sidelined for two weeks with a leg muscle pull.

Others who will probably see action include senior Vic DiMaio in the 1000, sophomore Norbert McNulty in the pole vault and senior Jack Van Deusen in the hurdles.

The mile relay situation is still up in the air. Blackburn, Mannion, Stead and Collymore are possibilities there. If Stead and Collymore are not fresh enough, Coach Elliott might decide to skip the race.

Only LaSalle 'Big 5' Game Remains Before Tourney

By JOE FITZPATRICK

With only 18 days remaining until the start of NIT festivities, the Villanova basketballers will have only one more chance to sharpen their claws.

The razor-sharp claws which netted the Severance men an early season eight game win streak have turned dull of late and if the Villanova team is to go anywhere in the NIT they will have to hone up against their Big Five rival, LaSalle on March 7.

The truth of the matter is that the Wildcats have lost five o ftheir last ten games and two o fthese losses came at the hands of teams which have already accepted NIT bids—St. Bonaventure and NYU.

The Villanovans had a good chance to avenge last week's loss to NYU when they met nationally ranked North Carolina State at Raleigh on Saturday.

Bad Second Half

The 'Cats dropped their chance when they blew a 5 point halftime lead, scoring only 19 points in the second half while the Wolfpack was scoring 34 points to win, 66-56.

Only the play of Joe Ryan could compare with the play of State's one-two punch, Lou Pucillo and John Richter.

Ryan scored 21 points but this wasn't enough because Pucillo scored 18 while his teammate Richter was scoring 14 points an ddominating the game in the rebound department.

The same story is true of Villanova's trouncing at the hands of NYU on Thursday with one exception—at least against State the Villanovans made a good showing.

In Madison Square Garden they were terrible.

The Violets couldn't claim a Pucillo and a Richter, but they had a Sanders and a Ramsey.

Big Men 'Harmless'

Against these two NYU players the Villanova "big men" were harmless. Sanders scored 28 points and Ramsey grabbed 19 rebounds while Villanova's big men were floundering around outside and doing little to aid the Villanova cause.

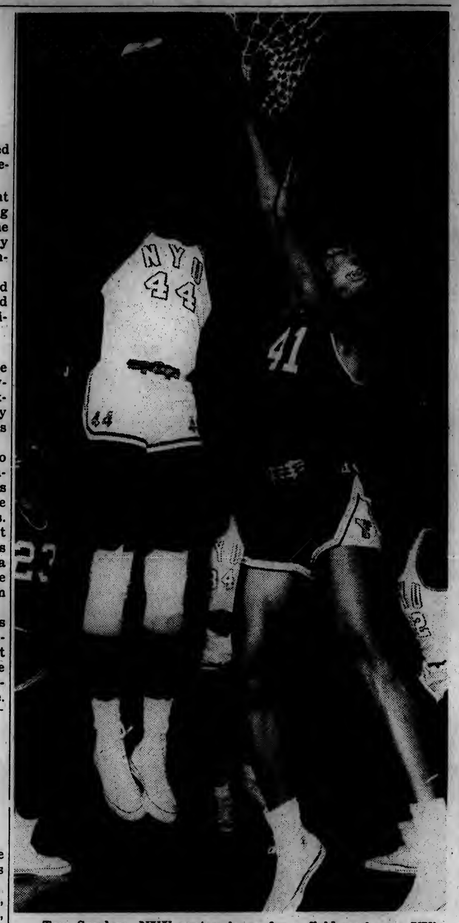
Ryan again was Villanova's high point man with 20 points. It was obvious that Joe had a "hot hand" but it looked as though his mates were unconsciously freezing him out.

The loss wasn't all in vain however. It gained an NIT bid for NYU.

In Villanova's last winning performance the 'Cats showed signs of weakness against a mediocre Buffalo team.

Villanova watched a 13 point lead almost dwindle to nothing as Buffalo edged to within one point of Villanova with only four minutes, 30 seconds remaining in the game.

Here Jimmy Huggard stepped in and his inspiring play carried the Villanova five to 67-54 triumph.



Early Tip-Off

Jim scored 25 points while the other Villanovans were giving NYU scouts an exact example of the play that they were going to see two nights later.

The only other Villanovan to hit double figures was Jim Kenny. Jim scored on three shots from the floor and six from the foul line for a total of 12 points.

Not in any of these three most recent outings did Villanova as a team show a semblance of a tourney-bound team. In fact the outlook is dim against a team of LaSalle's calibre.

Remember the Explorers played some pretty fair ball before bowing to the Hawks last Saturday and they have come a long way since their early defeat at the hands of N. C. State.

Tom Sanders, NYU center, leaps for a field goal over VU's George Raveling and Kenny Harrison. This was the start of a 28-point performance that helped to thrash the Wildcats, 78-60.

Wildcats Need A 'Miracle' To Repeat As IC4A Champs

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

The press-releases say that Villanova is the "defending champion" for Saturday night's indoor track and field championships of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America.

A much better appellation would be "former champions". It would take a major miracle and then some for the Wildcats to cop the collegiate title at Madison Square Garden.

Not that there is any reason to be ashamed of not having the goods to win the title this year. With numerically small squads, Coach Jim Elliott has managed to win both the indoor and outdoor titles two years running.

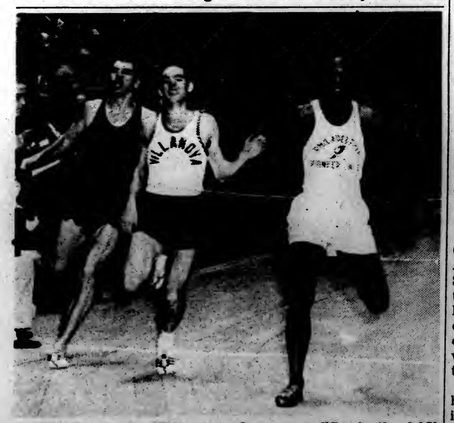
Manhattan's powerful strength in sheer numbers alone was bound to tell sooner or later. Even the greenshirted men from New York might find themselves trailing Penn State, Army or Yale, all of whom have excellent teams. The trio has stayed away from the inviation indoor meets, preferring to compete i ndual meets.

Vaulters Lost

The Wildcats defeated Manhattan, 29½ to 28 last year, the margin of victory being a fourth place and a tie for fifth by pole vaulters Ron Brady and Norm Cyprus, both of whom left the university for academic reasons at the end of last year.

In the three previous years, Villanova had belted Manhatten, 46-22½ in 1957, and lost to the forces of Coach George Eastman, 36-34 (1956) and 27-22½ (1955). In 1954, prior to the Delany - Jenkins-Bragg-Reavis-Collymore era the Cats scored only three points.

Even though the Wildcats will not be a threat for the team title this year, it is expected that the usual large delegation of Villanova fans will trek to New York for the meet. There are still tickets available at the Field House and up at the Garden.



One of the major attractions is expected to be the special invitational mile, in which Villanova graduate student Ron Delany, who last week set the world's indoor record for the mile (4:02.5), will face an outstanding field, including Hungary's Istvan Rozsavolgyi and Lazzslo Tabori, and Bill Dellinger, who has set the world's indoor marks in the two-mile and three-mile in the last month.

Ed Collymore, who lost his 60-yard crown in last week's AAU championships to Morgan State's Paul Winder, may face the latter again this week. If his recent bout with the flu is cleared up, however, he may choose to return to the 600 in which he is undefeated in invitational meets.

Charley Stead, who had been high jumping splendidly in previous weeks, could not get over 6-3 in the AAU Games. The prime reason was that Stead was worn out by the heats and final

Nick DeAngelis, Villanova sophomore, qualifies in the AAU 600-yard dash at Madison Square Garden with a fine second place finish behind ex-Villanova ace Charlie Jenkins in the time of 1:13.9. Later, Nick finished a respectable fifth in the finals.

Gregory, Palacio, Keefe Pinto Star In Swim Finale

By GENE HEWITT

Seniors Jim Gregory, Larry Palacio and Bob Pinto will always be remembered and junior Frank Keefe will be swimmers to watch if only on the basis of their performances last Wednesday against Gettysburg.

Not only did the Villanovan mermen defeat the Bullets, in their own pool 44-42, but they set four records as they brought a very successful (7-5) 1959 season to a close.

Keefe led off the medley relay with a blistering 1:02:9 10 yards on his back to set a new Villanova team record and Palacio, Gregory and Pinto followed suit with Pinto touching the wall. This quartet finished the mile relay in 4:10:4 lowering the Villanova team and Gettysburg pool record set by themselves just a year ago by four seconds.

Gregory, completing his tenure as Villanova's most outstanding breaststroke competitor led all the way in the 200 yard breaststroke to lower his old Villanova record by four seconds. The new record time is 2:32:4. This time is also a new Gettysburg pool record.

Frank Keefe came back in the 200 yard backstroke and finally broke the 2:24 barrier that has haunted him for three years. Frank's 2:22:2 in this event set a new Gettysburg pool record.

Palacio and Pinto, again displaying the drive and heart that helped break LaSalle's dominance over the Villanova swimmers, came through in fine style to win the 200 butterfly and 100 freestyle respectively.

Joe Harvey was just touched out in the 220 freestyle and 440 freestyle and he had to settle for second in each event. Bob Donahue took second in the 60 freestyle and Bob Dow placed second in the 200 butterfly.

Bruce McCreedy took second place in both the 440 and the dive and Jim Moran took third in the drive.

The medley relay team and its members have a good chance to place high in both their individual events and the relay events in the Eastern championships which will be held in two weeks.

ROLL CALL LISTING OF COUNCIL VOTE
See Page 12

Student Council President Bob Murphy (extreme left) counts a hand vote at last Wednesday's Congress meeting on a motion to select a free day. After heated and confusing parliamentary proceedings, Monday, March 16 was picked as the annual Student Council holiday.

March 16 Holiday; As Pressure Rules Student Council

by JOHN J. CURTIN
of the Villanovan Staff

A noisy and well-prepared band of Villanova students drove the Student Council into voting March 16 as the annual "free day" last week after a confusing and complicated one and one-half hour session.

The students—mostly senior members of the Commerce and Finance or Liberal Arts divisions—eventually saw the date they wanted decided upon by the council with a 25-14½ margin after the members had voted and re-voted upon amendment after amendment.

At one point, the three-way battle had become so confused that the council, which had gone through three amendments to completely change the original motion by senior Electrical Engineering student Bob Merkert, found itself voting on an amendment that would have reverted the whole question back to the original.

Murphy In Control

Council president Bob Murphy, struggling to remain unbiased, ruled the proceedings with an iron fist, and had to bang his gavel every few moments to keep order in the hot and heavy session.

Late in the proceedings, there were 13 "points of clarification" called in a 15 minute period, with Junior class president Sheldon Pollock asking for three himself.

Ironically, after the matter had been decided and representative Jim Corey was congratulating the members of the student body who had come to the meeting for their interest in council affairs, they rose as a man from the back of the room and walked from the council chamber.

The controversy broke wide open after Gerry McGrath, Tom Moakley and Gerry Hepburn plodded through the various committee reports. Things happened like this:

Murphy recognized Merkert for the un-tabling of the latter's motion to have the "free day" on May 8. Vice-chairman Tom Hoffman spoke in favor of the motion, re-iterating the reasons he had given at the previous meeting.

Senior Pete O'Brien then spoke in favor of what appeared to be the only alternative date, March 13, citing the National Invitation Tournament and St. Patrick's Day as reasons.

O'Brien also brought up two new arguments against the May 8 date—that it is just prior to Senior Father's Day and Blue-White Day, which fall on May 9, and could seriously hamper the success of both.

However, just as the council

'Inspector' Hears Critique

by THOMAS M. WOLF
of the Villanovan Staff

The first night audience for the Belle Masque production of "The Inspector General," last Wednesday, was invited to appraise the performance, and it let no flaw go unmentioned.

At the termination of Act III, Richard A. Duprey, faculty director, bravely asked for discussion, the "Critique", which Belle Masque has adopted in order to hear criticisms from the audience.

Duprey and the cast intended to weigh the comments, and apply the worthy ones to correction of the play's defects. The play as seen the last four days was the result of this.

Defects Noticed

A small, discriminating crowd (less than 100) was frank and scrutinous. It noticed that the governor's daughter was wearing a school ring which caught spots of light; it noticed that several characters were wearing loafers and everyday shoes; it observed that characters had been putting their heads through the imaginary walls of the house.

But not all of the comments were of such superficial nature. Most of them seriously evaluated the acting and directing.

The play was presented in arena fashion, surrounded on four sides by audience. The first question from the floor was: Why?

The significant reason, replied Duprey, is that the acoustics of the Field house are atrocious for a proscenium play. "There are dead spots in the hall which cannot be penetrated,

'Julius Caesar' Film Set For Vasey Hall Tomorrow

by PAUL BUCKLEY
of the Villanovan Staff

Charlton Heston and the Northwestern University Players in Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" and Siobhan McKenna in a reading of William Butler Yeats' poetry will be shown on film at 7:30 tomorrow evening in the Vasey Hall Auditorium.

The two films are being sponsored by the Literary Club, Opera Classica and Belle Masque societies of the university, and are open to all members of the student body, faculty and Administration.

The members of the literary societies of several nearby colleges have also been invited to the showing.

Entertaining and Cultureal

Literary Club President Jack Curtin, speaking for all three organizations, told the VILLANOVAN that "the movies are a move on our part to try to bring a bit of both entertainment and culture to our members, as well as enable the three organizations to become better acquainted.

"All three, although in different fields, have basically the same aims," said Curtin, "and perhaps this will allow them to appreciate each other's interests."

Curtin also pointed out that the last meeting of the Literary Club, which consisted of the presentation of a paper on the Beat Generation by senior English major Ray Quaglia, was the most successful undertaking of the club so far this year.

Blasts Underclasses

At the same time, however, the president joined the heads of several other campus organizations — notably the VILLANOVAN and the BELLE AIRE —in blasting underclass support.

"Of the almost 30 students and faculty members in attendance at the meeting," Curtin said, "only three or four at the most were underclassmen—and one of those was a freshman.

"If the Literary Club is to continue next year, and I certainly think it should, we must have new blood—we must have it fast. Juniors especially are needed, and they have been the most disinterested class so far."

History Dept. Lecture Series Opens Tonite

The Department of History and Political Science will begin its 1959 series of lectures this evening with a talk on "Foreign Political Problems in the Italian Unification Movement of the 19th Century."

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan O.S.A., M.A., dean of the arts and sciences division will be the chairman.

Raymond L. Cummings, history professor, will speak on how the Italian unification's threat to interests of great governments in the 19th century parallels the threat of Africa and Asia today.

Cummings graduated from Villanova in 1948, obtained his M.A. from Georgetown in 1952, and at present is working for his Ph.D. at Penn.

As a Fulbright scholar, he traveled to Europe last year to work on his thesis on Italian Unification .

While there, he worked at the Foreign Ministry Archives in Paris, the State Archives in London, and the Public Records Office in London.

Dr. Fred J. Khouri will speak on "The U. S. in the Middle East" on March 11.

Dr. George K. Alapatt will speak on "The U. S. in South and Southeast Asia" on March 18.

All lectures will be delivered in the Commerce and Finance Building, and will begin at 7:30.

Council Vote Can Provide New Polling Spot Near C&F

by LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE
of the Villanovan Staff

The problem of creating an additional polling place for Commerce and Finance was avoided by the Student Congress last week.

This was accomplished by a premature motion to adjourn.

Sheldon Pollock, junior class president, had asked the Congress to consider the creation of two separate voting spots—the traditional one at alumni gym, for arts and engineering students, and another for C and F students in either the basement of their classroom building or Sheehan dormitory.

The suggestion had been passed by the Student Senate by a narrow six to five vote. It is expected to produce controversy at the next Congress meeting next keek.

Listed Reason

Pollock listed these reasons for the proposal:

Many students vote during the ten minute break between classes and the lines discourage some from exercising this privilege.

Many people in Sullivan and Sheehan Halls do not vote if the weather is inclement.

Perhaps past election statistics show that only 50 percent of the C and F students vote because of the long walk and jobs which require that they leave school immediately after work.

Election noises would not interfere with classes since loudspeakers are prohibited except during the ten minute break.

In general the entire student body would benefit from the change, Pollock said.

Unfair System

Pollock also charged that the present system is unfair to some candidates. This system will enable more candidates to run, he said.

Objections to Pollock's proposal were forming in the corridors before last week's meeting.

Several representatives charged that the additional of a polling place so near the C and F building would give the advantage in voting to the already numerically superior business group.

The result of this would lead to C and F division class presidents year after year, one Arts and Science representative said.

Denies Purpose

Pollock, himself a C and F student, denied that the purpose of the proposal was to give the voting advantage to the business school.

He explained that if the proposal was passed, more students, not necessarily from one division, would find it more convenient to cast ballots.

The necessity of stirring student interest in class elections was evidenced two weeks ago when just 52 percent of the freshman class voted in their council elections.

John P. Kelley, senior Political Science major, and chairman of the elections committee, said that the elections had been adequately advertised.

Kelley also lamented that two of the three freshmen nominated to one of the posts had a scholastic average below the acceptable mark.

Shamokinaki Dance Acclaimed Success

Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, O.S.A., moderator of the seventh annual Shamokinaki Dance, announced last week that this year's event was one of the most successful.

Attendance at the dance, held on February 20 in the Field House, was better than 550 couples, a record-breaking number for the affair.

Fr. O'Donnell thanked all who attended the dance as well as to the various committee members, patrons and innumerable others who volunteered their services.

All returns from the Shamokinaki campaign, which will benefit the Augustinian Missions in Japan, have not as yet been made. Fr. O'Donnell expects to announce the final results in the coming week.

Although this year's dance was highly successful, hopes are even higher for next year's affair, Fr. O'Donnell said.

John Barlos warns merchants Jim Lynch and John McGarry (far right) that they had better give gifts at his daughter's wedding, as Ray Kantra, the phony inspector general looks on. The scene is from Belle Masque's production of Nikolai Gogol's "Inspector General" last week.

Ticket Committee Holds Parley

Chairman Harry Devlin (extreme left) discusses the final arrangements for the Senior Dinner-Dance with the members of his committee. Tickets are now on sale in 206 Sheehan, but there are only a limited number remaining.

Student Council Initiates New Ticket Sales Program

The Special Problems committee of the Student Council has initiated a new plan for the selling of student tickets to Villanova athletic events in conjunction with the Athletic Board.

The new system, which was drawn up by the committee in response to many student complaints about the jam-ups that occur at the ticket office before any major event (notably the basketball game with St. Joseph's in January), was presented to the council at last Wednesday's meeting by Treasurer Fred Wiele.

The council program is also an attempt to have the ticket office stabilize its policies, according to Wiele. There have been numerous student complaints concerning the varying regulations concerning the purchase of tickets.

Three-Day System

The proposal presents a three-day system for ticket sales. On the first day, only student tickets will be sold; each student being allowed to present two matriculation cards so that he can sit with a friend.

"This will help to create a strong student cheering section," Wiele pointed out, "since it will consist entirely of Villanova students, whose cheering will not be tempered by the presence of dates."

On the second day of ticket sales, according to the council plan, students would be able to purchase date tickets along with their matriculation cards, and sales would be unlimited on the third day.

New Members

In other business, the council welcomed new members William Long and James McMonagle to the meeting. Long and McMonagle are the new freshman representatives.

Both elections committee chairman J. P. Kelley and vice-president Gerry McGrath, however, blasted the class of 1962 for its poor turnout in the recent elections.

Chairman Bob Murphy also told the council that Villanova is now third in the voting for the sportsmanship trophy awarded by the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia in conjunction with Palestra conduct during Big Five basketball games.

Murphy said that Villanova dropped from second place because "some student threw a dead chicken onto the floor prior to the St. Joseph's game."

Other reports concerned the food poll (still being tabulated), the telephone problem in Sheehan Hall (still unsolved) and the student directories (still being printed).

Annual Blood Drive in Alumni Gymnasium

Alumni Gym will be the scene for the annual Villanova Red Cross Blood Drive today and tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

For the first time in Villanova's history, the school has a chance to be insured with blood for a full year with the donation from all signed-up donors plus about 25 or 30 walk-in donors.

Blood Drive chairman, Bruce Irving, stated: "Students who are 21 and over can donate blood without permission from their parents. We are relying on the seniors to carry us over the top."

Otto's Band New Addition To Villanova Social Scene

Villanova's newest band has announced its intention of bolstering lagging student spirit at the remaining basketball games.

Otto's Stringless Band, under the direction of Paul Hessler, has provided musical support for Villanova cheers, and entertainment during half-time, with its lively polkas and German folk tunes.

Hessler expressed the hope that "the music of the band will aid the student body in outcheering opposition."

In addition to Hessler, a senior Electrical Engineer, band members are John Gannon, junior Science; Patrick Kenny, frosh C and F; Joseph Sorokac, frosh Science; and Joseph Willmott, frosh Science.

The band plans to play at the La Salle game on March 7.

Rev. Henry B. Syvinski, O.S.A., moderator of the school band, is in charge of Villanova's latest musical addition.

A Grandma who lives in St. Clair,
While clinging to youth, in despair,
Has rinses and dyes,
But hard as she tries
Her face looks too old for her hair.

Student Council To Limit Presidency

The Student Council next week will act on a motion to exclude a junior from the student body presidency.

Council secretary Bob Wagner proposed that an amendment be made to the constitution establishing the senior requirement for the president.

Wagner's motion was a change from a previous proposal calling for senior status for both the president and secretary.

He also proposed that the secretary and treasurer "shall be either sophomores or juniors during their terms of office." Wagner, senior electrical engineering student, is now secretary of the council.

"The education to be gained by serving as Student Council secretary could be put to good use in future years by a secretary who is a sophomore or junior during his term of office," W her said.

Frosh Reps Debut On Student Council

by WILLIAM SPEERS
of the Villanovan Staff

Last Wednesday nght, Freshmen Bill Long and Jim McMonagle entered a new phase in tneir young college carcers. A Student Council meeting was held that night and both Long and McMonagle are newly elected Council representatives.

As they came into the meeting, they looked rather out of place amidst the hustle and bustle of the veteran members. The next two hours proved to be their baptism of fire. For the entire meeting was spent on one motion—the annual free day.

It was a hot session both verbally and physically. The date finally chosen was March 16. Long voted for the 16th; McMonagle for May 8.

Votes Were Split

After the meeting we asked the two representatives why they voted differently. Both answered that they had taken a rough poll among the frosh and found the residents prefer the May date, while the day hops voiced March 16 as the most favorable day.

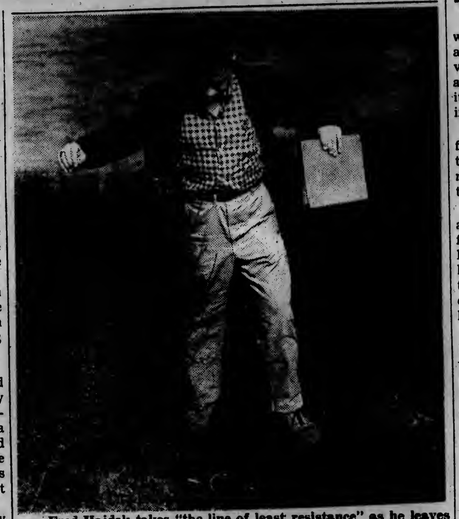
McMonagle admitted that they were a little confused at first. "But things appeared much clearer after a preliminary talk with parliamentarians Don Kempf and Jim Corey," Long added.

Long said he especially enjoyed the spirited debate among the members, while McMonagle was impressed with the intricaces of parliamentry procedure.

Plan for Future

Since they will serve until the end of their sophomore year, both representatives have begun to plan for the future. McMonagle stated that he would seek recreational facilities, such as ping pong and pool tables for the resident hall basements.

The representatves once again extended their thanks to all those who voted for them. Both stated that they would welcome any suggestions or complaints from the Class of '62. "Jim can be located in his room, 345 Mendel, and anytime and I can be reached at my home phone number LA 5-6047," Long said.



"We are very proud to have the opportunity to serve the Class of '62," McMonagle stated, "and we will do all in our power to serve in the best interests of the freshmen class."

Favorable Comments

The older Student Council members had nothing but favorable comments for the newcomers. Said Bob Murphy, Student Council president, "The splitting of their votes on the free day issue may be significant. But you can say that I was favorably impressed."

Student Council vice-chairman, Tom Hoffman, was impressed by the freshmen's in-

Perry Elected Pres.

Frank Perry, junior Mechanical Engineer from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has been elected president of A. S. M. E.

The vice-presidency was won by Don McKenzie. Other newly elected officers are Bill Henry, secretary; Jack King, treasurer; and Bill Galm ,Student Council representative.

Outgoing president Jim Woodward stated that the new officers will take over their duties immediately. Their formal installaton will take place at the next regular meeting.

Irish Author Exhibited At Library Fete

Ceremonies in observation of the tenth anniversary of the Villanova library was highlighted Sunday by the opening of a first edition exhibit of the works of author James Brendan Connolly.

Ron Delany was among the several speakers who paid tribute to this renowned author of Irish Sea Stories. The late author was also an athlete and participated in the 1896 Olympic Games.

The speakers include the Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Chairman of Villanova's Board of Trustees and the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., the University's President.

Connolly, a native of Boston, was of Irish ancestry and is regarded as one of the greatest writers of sea stories. He died in January of 1957 at the age of seventy-six.

Connolly's works, together with photos and other examples of his literary contributions, will be on display and open to public viewng daily.

The Friends of the Villanova Library, who helped finance the construction of the library met on Sunday in connection with the opening exhibit. The library, containing 145,000 volumes, was one of the three buildings constructed in 1949.

Mr. John C. Kelly, prominent New York Advertising executive and a member of Villanova's Board of Trustees, is chairman of the Friends of the Villanova Library.

Contest Starts For Junior Queen

Ed Olsen, chairman of the junior prom committee, announced that the junior queen contest begins today.

Pictures will be accepted up until April 17. Only those pictures entered by March 20 will appear in the VILLANOVAN, excluding the finalists, who will be presented in the Junior Week issue .

All pictures must be at least five by three inches in size, and should contain the following information on its back: your name and major, date's name, her school or occupation, her hometown, her height, color of hair and eyes, and her age.

Pictures may be submitted to Ed Olsen in Room 252 Sullivan Hall, or at the student activities office, second floor Dougherty Hall.

Apathy of Juniors Mars Junior Week

Junior class failure to produce a good Junior Week edition of the VILLANOVAN unless class interest is soon generated, was predicted last week by Larry O'Rourke, VILLANOVAN editor.

O'Rourke told junior president Sheldon Pollock that there had been little response to the current drive to procure staff members for next year's newspaper.

"The senior editors traditionally step out just before the Junior Week edition", O'rourke said. "As a consequence, juniors will undertake the publication of what should be a Junior Week paper without having previous training."

Pollock asked the present senior editors to help coordinate the Junior Week edition. "It's a pity that seniors must be called on to publish a paper for juniors and their mothers," Pollock said.

Then there's the story of the two pessimists who met at a party and shook heads . . . .

Clark To Discuss Lawyer's Role In Senate At Forum

"A Lawyer in the Senate" will be the topic of the Honorable Joseph S. Clark, Pennsylvania U. S. Senator, when he addresses the Villanova University Law School Forum tonight in Garey Hall.

Always featuring leaders in fields of consequence to lawyers the forum each year invites a member of the U. S. Congress to preside at one session.

A native of Philadelphia and a member of an old Philadelphia family, Clark lives in Chestnut Hill. He graduated Magna Cum Laude from Harvard and returned to Philadelphia to receive his LL.B. from Penn and his LL.D. from Temple.

Admitted to the Pennsylvania bar association, he practiced law in Philadelphia. He upset a Republican reign of 25 years in 1951 when he was elected to the first of two terms he served as Mayor of Philadelphia.

As one of the original framers of the new city charter and as reform mayor, Clark was responsible for many changes and improvements in the city government.

Clark was elected to the United States Senate in 1956. Among his endeavors in the Senate were his ardent backing of the student loan program. He also collaborated with Senator Paul Douglas to lead a fight against the Senate filibuster, which was defeated.

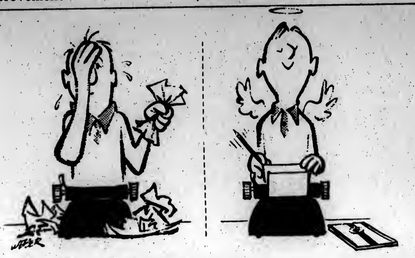
Many leading Democrats consider Clark to be a strong contender for the Democratic Vice Presidential Nomination in 1960. As a northern liberal, Clark has been strongly critized for his membership in the Americans for Democratic Action. He is a practical idealist, willing on occasion to bow to the will of the politicos.

Food Poll Being Counted, Results To Be Announced

Because of the heavy returns from the student body, the results of the food poll will not be available until next week.

Fred Wiele, chairman of the Student Union and Special Problems Committee of the Student Council made this announcement and said, "The student body is to be congratulated on its cooperation. It is estimated that 1300 students participated in the poll".

A report will be submitted to the Arministration and to Paul Specia, superintendant of the cafeteria, as soon as results are known.



Special representatives of the Student Council will meet with members of the Administration to discuss the possibilities of improvement .

Fountainhead Site For Senior Event

Seniors will probably celebrate their last social event as undergraduates at the Fountainhead, Bucks County, it was learned last week from class president Oscar Scogna.

Scogna said although he was still negotiating for another spot, it appeared the Fountainhead had the leading spot in the considerations.

Scogna said he had not as yet signed any contract with the operators of the Bucks County site, and did not as yet know the final price for the May 30 event.

The Decision Is Final

The annual "free day" awarded the students of Villanova University will be Monday, March 16. The Student Council decided that last week.

And despite several attempts — via petitions, threats and declarations — by members of the student body and of the council itself to change that decision, that's the way it's going to be.

And that's the way it should be.

Now don't get us wrong. We're still in favor of May 8, and think it would have been the best day to choose. Not only, that but we feel March 16 was the worst possible date to pick: it has no bearing on the NIT, and is nothing but a "party" day.

But it's the day that the council chose to award as the "free day;" and as such, deserves to be honored as the final word on the matter. And looking closely at the ones doing the complaining, it seems that they are probably the ones most to blame if things didn't go their way.

For one thing, their charge—that the council was swayed in its decision by a delegation of students in the back of the room — is ridiculous. Certainly the council was influenced; but the men who did the influencing deserve commendation, not anger. At least they cared enough about what was going on to come to the meeting and try to swing matters their way. And they did.

No. There can be no complaining about the council decision as a whole. But if it's complaints some students want to register, here are plenty of things they can complain about.

For instance, they can complain about those council members who didn't even bother to attend the important meeting.

Or about the representatives who sent alternates to the meeting — without instructing these men how to vote. Or about the representatives who, knowing what their constituents wanted, voted another way. (The roll call vote is printed on Page 12.) Or the representatives who didn't make an effort to find out how their constituents wanted them to vote, or if they did, allowed themselves to be swayed.

And when they're all finished with that, they just might take a look at themselves. Where were they last Wednesday when the decision was being made?

If they weren't at the council meeting, they have no right to complain.

Well Done, Mr. Chairman

Whatever complaints there are about last Wednesday's Student Council meeting, there can be none about the manner in which it was conducted.

For chairman Bob Murphy, it was probably the high-water mark of his college political career. He met a tense and difficult situation squarely, and emerged from it with the respect and admiration of all present.

The council meeting was one that could have gotten out of hand very easily — if the chairman would have allowed it. But Murphy kept a tight-fisted control on matters, treating all sides fairly and without a trace of bias. Besides that, he showed great patience in explaining and re-explaining the various motions to the confused council.

And he resisted the temptation to turn the chair over to vice-chairman Hoffman and step onto the floor himself to make his own views known; something that hasn't always happened at Villanova.

Last Wednesday's meeting was one that could have made or broken the council. One mistake, and the students' respect for the council would have been destroyed.

Bob Murphy, by virtue of his outstanding performance, instead raised the prestige of the council to a new high.

Our congratulations, Mr. Chairman, for a job well done.

Free Day Free-For-All Sidelights

by JACK CURTIN

That big Student Council free-for-all over the "free day" was obviously the big story of this week. And it had many interesting sidelights. Such as:

...The fact that the back of the council meeting looked like a meeting of the Jizz A.C., lately crowned Intramural Football Champs. Most of the students in attendance were members of, or associated with, the perennial intramural entry.

...The petitions that were circulating about the campus with such rapidity the morning after the big decision. The Juniors seemed the most excited group, but then, they always seem to make the most noise. All the efforts, at any rate, came to naught. They were nixed, and rightly so, by council prexy Bob Murphy.

...The interesting note executive vice-president Jerry McGrath found on the door to his room Thursday, signed by soph representative Frank Dunn. McGrath started off Wednesday's festivities with a blast at Dunn for his non-attendance at the meeting, and his fellow council-member came back with a reply. The note, we hear, told McGrath to "shut his fat mouth," which hardly seems the answer to the problem.

...The rather large number of council members who don't understand either Robert's Rules of Order or their own constitution, or at least give no evidence of it. Representative Will Boucher was the only really honest man at the meeting, rising to question Murphy on a "point of confusion." Methinks the proposed trained program would be fine, but who's going to do the tutoring?

...The consternation of vice-chairman Tom Hoffman and secretary Bob Wagner when the council roll book disappeared for a day or so. Said book turned up in the VILLANOVAN office, but not before Hoffman, who'd had the book last, had become a nervous wreck.

...The shocked look on the face of representative Jim Corey when, just as he was congratulating the students in attendance at the meeting on their interest in the council and hoping that they'd be back again, they all stood up and walked from the room, indicating that they'd gotten what they wanted and were no longer interested. Or could Mr. Corey have been speaking sercastically?

Jazz, Bongos, Marijuana Are Beatnik Trademarks

by LOUIS R. DESFOSSES

Editor's Note: The views expressed by Desfosses are not necessarily those held by the editors. Desfosses' opinions are interesting, to say the least, and are felt to represent one school of thought on the "Beat Generation," and are thus entitled to publication.

Three bearded, tossle-headed, slovenly-dressed men hover over their bongo drums forcing a wild rhythmic sound to fill an almost unfurnished room. At the perimeter of a dimmed circle of light sit several woman—mates of the bearded drummers. They sit and sway to the rhythm, occasionally breaking into high pitched squeels of ecstasy. Who are these throwbacks to a more primitive time? They are the much publicized "Beat Generation."

From New York, where they are known as Bohemians, to San Francisco, where they call themselves the "Beatniks of Beat Generation," these oddballs carry on their perversion and unwholesomeness.

Not since the days of Sodom and Gomorrah has such a degenerate group of individuals received so much publicity and yet contributed so little to society. Professing a doctrine of non-conformity, these hypocrites conform so strictly to non-conformity that they are non-conformists in the strictest sense of the word.

The Beat Generation is composed of small groups of small souls which gather together in large cities. For the most part, they are outcasts looking for other outcasts with whom they can carry on their rebellion against society. Believing in the sensual experience of life, they revent to practices that would make the inhabitants of the previously mentioned cities hang their heads in shame.

The Beat Generation is not a generation in the true sense of the word, but rather the product of several generations. Since the late nineteenth century, the term Beat Generation has been used as a label for this particular excrement of society—a term which has been coated with a scabrous coating of pseudo-intellectual baloney.

In France, they call themselves Talkathon Existentualists; while in the U. S. they hide behind the title of the Beat Generation.

The original Beat Generation was the French Impressionist School—a group of rebellious artists who were joined under the common bond of rejection. Rejected by the art critics, these artists put their portraits of self impression on the market under the title of "Impressionism."

Painting the dirt and filth of Paris was the primary goal of the Impressionist, so they established a community right in the heart of the Paris slums where they could be close to their work. Their studies were the cafes and their subject the rubble of humanity. From such a fertile breeding ground came philosophy, art, literature and perversion.

Freedom of expression was their goal, so they cast aside all form of discipline and abandoned themselves to uncoordinated rambling and ravings. The final product of this refusal of authority ended in insanity, suicide, and the complete loss of respect for themselves and humanity.

The Impressionists, however, have won a place in history and in the world of art. In art especially because their rebellion was against the technique of recording scenes.

The Beat Generation, on the other hand, has no intention of proving itself (at least it declares it has no intention of doing so.) However, it follows the philosophy of its predecessors—that of abandoning itself to the sensual experience of every vice known to man. Guided by this ideal of corruption, they invaded the fields of literature and art where their orderless wanderings have been met with ridicule.

Rebelling even against the standard medium of communication, the Bohemians and Beatniks have accepted the jive-type, hip-talk jargon as their mode of expression. Progressive jazz is an infatuation, and the bongo drum and the marijuana are their trademarks.

Screaming out against order, they wander about in their "Greenwich Villages" insulting mankind by their very presence. The most odious characteristic of the Beatniks is the fact that they seek to trap those unaware, adding glamour to their filthy ideas by claiming intellectual and aesthetic superiority.

Scientists and educated men from all fields recognize the worth of disciplined thought. Mathematics is founded on this discipline. With increased criticism from the intelligensia, the madness of the "Beats" will be exposed for what it is —the ravings of immature people against order and responsibility.

IRS CONVENTION

by J. P. KELLEY

In a political column last semester I tried to bring out that public opinion is often based on men's emotions rather than their reasoning powers. The State Convention of the Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Club, which will be held on the Villanova campus on Friday and Saturday, March 13th and 14th, offers students the opportunity to develop a more informed opinion regarding "The Problems of the Middle East". Cultivating such an opinion is almost of necessity in these perilous times, because this area, next to Berlin, provides the most woe for our country in dealing with Communistic Russia. Our government often guides U. S. policies according to the public opinion of the people of our country; naturally the more informed the people, the better the governmental policy.

Experts to Speak

The Villanova I.R.S. branch is working hard to make this convention a success. We have engaged speakers to discuss the Middle Eastern problem. On Friday evening, March 13th, at 7:30 P. M. at the George Washington Motel in King of Prussia, Pa., Mr. Keith Wheelock, Research Associate at the Foreign Policy Research Institute of the U. of P., will provide us with "A General Outlook on the Middle East". He has recently returned from Egypt and is currently writing a book on that country.

For Saturday, March 14th, we have engaged two expert speakers who will present partisan views concerning the Arab-Israeli disputes. They are Mr. Yaakov Morris, an Israeli citizen and staff member of the Israeli Consulate in New York, and Mr. Jamal A. Sa'd, a citizen of Lebanon and Acting Director of the Arab Information Institute in Washington. Mr. Morris will speak at 11:00 A. M. and Mr. Sa'd at 1:30 P. M. here on the Villanova campus. Their views should be interesting and conflicting and we should be able to arrive at an objective conclusion from them.

Saturday evening will feature Dr. Fred J. Khouri, Associate Professor of Political Science here at Villanova and an expert on Middle Eastern affairs. Dr. Khouri will address those attending the banquet in the Forge Room of the George Washington Motel. He will probably speak on "The United States and the Middle East".

First Hand Information

This is your chance to obtain first hand information concerning this Middle Eastern bed of turmoil. Many other students, including coeds, from the various colleges and universities throughout the state will be attending.

The convention will broaden the reputation of Villanova since these delegates, when they return to school, will discuss with their classmates the merits of the convention and the intellectual calibre of Villanova students. If you are truly interested in world affairs and improving your mind you should not pass up the opportunity to attend these lectures; for more information call me at UI-3-0337 or Robert Refuno, 314 Sullivan Hall, or Clint Chin, Post Office Box 681, Villanova. All of the proceeding are free of charge, except the banquet with is $2.75.

J. P. Receives 'Dear John' Letter On Kennedy Issue

Dear J. P.,

The verbal bombardment which you directed against the VILLANOVAN last week is quite daring and noble—on the surface. After reading your "blast" a second time and then thrice, there appeared to be some irregularity in the pattern which youd "buckshot" left on Villanova's journalists.

You quoted "Poor Mr. Kennedy" as saying: " . . . they (the advantages which the appointment of an American ambassador to the Vatican might have in Rome—Mr. Kennedy was not convinced of these—) would be more than offset by the divisive effect at home."

The VILLANOVAN interpreted this statement to mean that there are no concrete arguments for NOT sending an envoy to Vatican City, but American Protestants would not be too pleased with such a move.

Sovereign State

Inasmuch as reason for sending such an ambassador are concerned, you must remember that the center of Catholicism is also a sovereign TEMPORAL state governed by both LAY and ecclesiastical rulers. True, this state is small, but our government is represented in embassies in small countries throughout the world.

In recent years, American statesmen travelling aboard have not failed to consult with our late Holy Father, whose aim it was to calm the stormy seas of a troubled world. When Pius XII spoke on matters which concerned the world, or the United States in particular, our government deemed it most advantageous to turn a listening ear to the Vatican.

How important the Pope is when he attempts to aid a struggling and strife-torn world. No one cares that he is a spiritual and temporal head. Let someone broach the subject of diplomatic recognition of that same Pontiff, and objections immediately spring forth—objection based on the fact that he is a spiritual leader.

His role as the temporal or secular sovereign on the people of the Vatican is at once overlooked—why?

Opposition from Protestants

It is your august opinion that the VILLANOVAN erred in stating that the only reason there is for not sending an ambassador to Rome is the op-

Nostalgic Nonsense On Past

By PETE NOLAN

Although it has been missing from the campus only about a year, the memory of old Belle Air Hall has faded from the minds of many Villanovans. Sometimes referred to as "the shack," "the barracks," or "the little Lthan Avenue schoolhouse," Belle Air Hall was in a class all by itself.

Where else could a day hop listen to a lecture from his parked car outside the classroom window. How many times did you chuckle as you watched a prof, pressing too hard on his chalk, plunge his fist through the wall into the next room.

Some old-timers say that a student who presented a letter to the administration, expressing sincere and genuine fear, in one hundred and fifty words or less, could be excused from classes in this building. However we have been unable to uncover any documentary proof to certify the existance of any such conscientious objectors.

They're still arguing as to whether or not the old building should have been torn down or used for a spectacular bon-fire rally. Although the former decision was chosen, the bon-fire rally was almost had.

It seems that about a week before the closing of the building a cigarette butt was dropped between the wall boards, and that the same afternoon this happened an English class was seen exiting from the structure through a charred, gaping hole in the South wall.

Nevertheless, Belle Air was levele dfrom the campus a week later, and was soon forgotten in the excitement over the new C&F building.

* * * * *

There is a select group of students who park their cars across from the field house at eight twenty every morning and are gone by eleven thirty.

We were lucky enough to catch some of these people during a class break in the C&F pie shop. Interrupting their pinochle game, we asked them to comment on what they remembered about Belle Air Hall. A few, looking up from their cards, facetiously commented that Belle Air had been condemned thirty years ago.

Own Pie Shop

One sleek gentleman who seemed to be the leader, spoke for the majority:" I don't think that Belle Air was the worst place in the world, but we like the new C&F building better. After all it has its own pie shop."

When I asked him what he did think was the worst thing in the world, he calmly replied: "Well other than not having dual exaust, the worst thing I can think of would be a three-thirty class in John Barry."

There are many opinions of all types concerning Belle Air Hall. Unfortunately we do not have room enough here to cast them. A major puzzlement is how it stood up as long as it did. Some say that its walls were lined with a mystical substance called Kryptonite,' but there is, nevertheless, doubt in many minds. One thing is certain: that no one can ever know for sure, for Belle Air Hall has passed on with the words of wisdom that were once echoed within her portals.

USN Chaplain Tells NROTC Of Ship Duties

"The Navy exercises special care to fulfill the religious needs of its men," asserted Capt. W. F. Cuthreill, Chaplain of the Fourth Naval District, in his annual address to the school NROTC unit, last Tuesday in Vasey Auditorium.

The chaplain elaborated with references from Navy Regulations. He pointed out that the commanding officer of a ship must assure that Divine Services are conducted each Sunday if possible; that chaplains are secured; that music is provided, if practicable, and that space and altar are rigged.

Villanova Midshipmen who have been on cruise are familiar with the shipwide announcement during services calling a halt to all card games and unnecessary work and noise.

Cuthreill added that participation in services is encouraged, but not imposed upon ship's personnel.

He cited the little-known fact that, except for necessity, no ships of the Navy begin a cruise on Sunday. In addition, "holiday routine" is observed Sundays, with only necessary work done.

The Captain concluded his program with two films, depicting the Chaplain Corps at work.

Engineer Accepts Six Stories For Spring Magazine

Bob Merkert, editor-in-chief of the VILLANOVA ENGINEER, has accepted six stories for the Spring issue of this magazine.

Robert Wagner, senior Electrical Engineer, has written, as the feature article, an Introduction to Electrical Engineering for the purpose, in keeping with the policy of the Villanova Engineer, of familiarizing underclassmen with the various engineering departments.

The story, "Direct Circuit Transmission", was written by John Pilcicki, senior Electrical Engineer and executive editor of the Villanova Engineer. Dave Roop, senior electrical engineer, wrote "Network Calculator," and Don Kempf, senior arts, wrote "A Tree Fort."

Lubricants was written by Joseph Corcoran, senior Chemical Engineer, and "The American Institute of Electrical Engineers—Institute of Radar Engineers" was written by Robert Merkert, chairman A.I.E.E.-I.R.A.

Deadline for the May issue is Monday, April 6.

The cover for this issue is by Jack McKenzie, senior Civil Engineer.

Council Vote Due On Plan To Instruct Office Seekers

by JOHN J. QUINN
of the Villanovan Staff

A Student Service Corps, designed to aid student government candidates, will become a reality, predicts Oscar Scogna, senior class president.

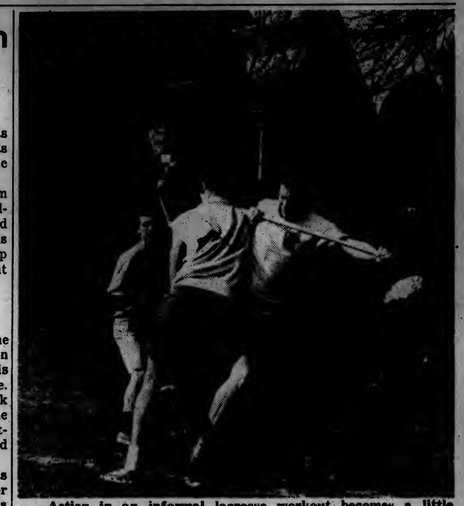
The issue of a student leadership program was unanimously passed by the Student Senate and is slated to be recommended for passage by the Student Congress at next Wednesday's meeting.

This program would educate potential student officers in the fundamentals of student government.

"The Service Corps would also acquaint candidates for student offices with the constitution and by laws of the Student Council," says Scogna.

Meetings and discussions with representatives of the administration followed by question and answer periods will highlight the program.

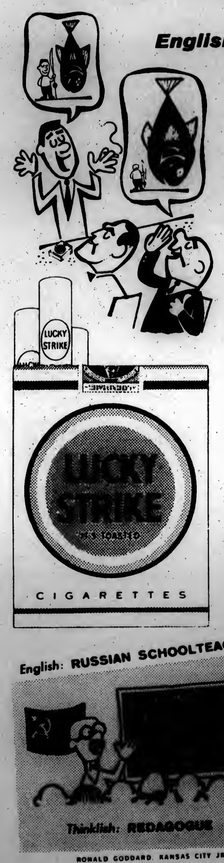
At the termination of the course a short exam would be given to all, with the results being made public. These results would help the voters select the right leaders.



Participation in the program would be voluntary but attendance would be published to aid the voters. Scogna states, "This program would be a great step forward in student government at Villanova."

I.C.G. to Meet Sat.

The regional meeting of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government will be held this Saturday at Immaculata College.



The Villanova club will work for the next two months on the bills to be presented in committee at both the regional and state conventions.

All committee assignments within the Villanova chapter have been made, but there is still some doubt as to the chapter's specific committee assignment on the regional level.

Action in an informal lacrosse workout becomes a little heated, as Jay Ellis (back to camera) and Ed Hartwell engage in a pushing match, while Jack McGregor waits for the ball to fall free.

Gogols "Inspector General" Couldn't Pass Inspection

by BILL GALLAGHER

The problem with Belle Masque's production of Nicolai Gogol's "The Inspector General" seemed to be that it teetered throughout the evening between satire played in dead earnest by half o fthe cast and comedy bordering on the slapstick played by the other half. It was all reminiscent of a see-saw: actors interpreting their roles with much less humor than was required bouncing up, actors taking pratfalls bouncing down.

The show was entertaining when the actors burlesquing affairs were in charge: the antics of Owen Klein as Dobchinsky and his wonderfully comic "mugging" that mirrored each new development in the town crisis and those of Tom Flynn as Bobchinsky with his lisp spilling out through widely separated teeth and especially when these two Mortimer Snerds "bumped" for possesion of a chair, a delightful bit of nonsense that almost went unnoticed.

Indignant Wife

Then there was the indignant merchant's wife of Carole Scanlon who dared thump the feared, supposed inspector general on the thigh in a burst of fury; or Bill Friend's shuffling, whistling police orderly plodding listlessly into and out of the confusion; or Rosemary Donnelly's gushing ingenue; or Dough McClatchy's humorous Director of Welfare and John Cannon's judge.

Although there were talented portrayals within the context of their interpretations by Ray Kantra, Mary Shaffer and Tony Provenzano, the effect of their contribution suffered because they played as though the satire that Gogol penned in 1831 were as pertinent now as then. I'm not so certain it is. We have no monarchical ruling body, no political set-up similar to that of early nineteenth century Russia and our class structure is entirely different. If the satire had sting, scenes such as the first meeting of the town governor with the supposed inspector general or the ruble bearing procession would have been alive, crackling with wit instead of just laying there, without invention and gaiety.

Plus and Minus

On the plus side, there was authentic, mood setting music and very clever make-up work on most of the cast, especially on Tom Flynn, Doug McClatchy and Owen Klein. But again on the minus side, there was the diversity and, at times, lack of Russian accents. And the set was like a postage stamp that seemed to be always overcrowded when some of the townspeople decended upon it. At one point in the action, visiting town folk were asked to sit down. "There aren't any chairs" was the answer. Planned for or not, this brought the biggest laugh of the night since there was no space for additional furniture.

Toward the end of the last scene, wherein a letter is read exposing every town dignitary's vices, John Barlas turned to the audience and asked: "What are you laughing at? You're only laughing at yourselves". The only trouble was that there was no one laughing.

'Inspector' Hears Critique

even by microphones."

Unheard Dialogue

But in spite of the arena setup, bits of dialogue were still blocked from the cars of the audience. One person claimed difficulty in discerning dialogue, because it was delivered in Russian dialect. The stage was too high for another person, who also suggested that microphones overhang the stage.

Duprey admitted that some dialogue was bound to be missed by someone, but added that the scenes were additive, that the play was composed of little vignettes, and few big moments. A person could, therefore, lose some of the dialogue because the speaker has his back to him; but he would be adequately acquainted with the play from the large portions he has heard.

As for the hanging of microphones, Duprey believed that the arena director would rather build the voices of the actors than install useless electronic crutches.

Duprey, head of the Drama Department, sat informally on stage in front of the cast. His replies were scholarly yet genial, and he created a person - to - person atmosphere, while the female members of the cast were busily dispensing coffee to the forum.

Faculty Member Questions

Duprey's colleague on the faculty, Mr. Jerome Fischer, raised a pointed question: why was the dialect used? Why wasn't straight, unaccented English used?

A play such as this requires atmosphere, answered Duprey. "We had no real scenery and the dialect rendered an atmosphere which mere costuming could not do."

But the dialect was weak, added Fischer. He felt that certain dialect words were pronounced with gusto, while ordinary, household words were hurriedly pronounced, sometimes slurred.

It is only natural, he said, for the cast to tend to speak English in the same manner as they do off-stage. His remedy: to subdue the dialect, and to use more precise diction in the everyday words.

Duprey reservedly agreed with this, but lamented that little could be done about it at this point.

Turned-Off Accents

He then related the novel way in which the cast acquired their accents. For six weeks before presentation, he ordered his proteges to practice the accent repeatedly. Rehearsals were in dialect, and the manner of speech grew on them.

Then a week before opening night, he told them to shed the accent. What remained was a quaint trace of dialect which seemed unaffected. He regretted, however, that he hadn't begun this program earlier for more convincing results.

An alert watcher noticed that Marya's part called for a blue dress, but that she was wearing a pink one. Mr. Richard Cavanaugh, assistant director, informed him that, in truth, "we saved fifteen dollars by using that one." The laughter that followed was consonant with the relaxed atmosphere of the group.

A student wondered how such an Americanism as "Blow your brains out!" had crept into the dialogue. Duprey believed that this was a literal translation from Gogol's Russian.

The obvious manner in which the daughter's face reacted to every word of the Governor, irritated one patron. Duprey explained that Marya, a simpleton, adores the Governor. This simple, uncomplicated girl is taken aback by the cosmopolitan man from the city. "She would react to the movement of his little finger," he said.

A man commented that the scene late in the play, in which the people yell 'Suspicion! Suspicion!", was grossly overdone. On the contrary, replied Duprey, these people were supposed to react in that manner, since they are not characters, but caricatures.

Barlas Cheered

The critics could find no outrageous faults in the play, and most criticisms concerned staging and props. The Judge's eyebrows could be less exaggerated; Inspector-General could be improved by extending his sideburns; and certain characters could emote with less excitement.

The postmaster received praise for his exuberant leap from the stage, and John Barlas was roundly commended for his expert portrayal of the Governor.

Before closing, Duprey hastened to draw attention to the improvement in lighting. "We have avoided that mistake we made in Saint Joan (an arena show last year). None of the lights are blinding people in the audience."

A student completed the forum by paying tribute to the cast members whose beards were their own. Five or six members, including the cigar-smoking Governor, took bows for this recognition.

The gathering dissolved, and Director Duprey went back to the drawing board.

Anybody For Super A's?

by JOHN M. HONE

In an effort to obtain a more objective classification of students, Notre Dame University has instituted a new grade system, based on six points.

Under the system six and five are A, four is B, three equals C, two and one are D, Zero equals F.

To obtain a six, one must be a highly superior student. This change from the previously used standard four point system will make it more difficult to obtain honors since the six is expected to be given only to the exceptional student.

Another criticism, as expressed in the Notre Dame Scholastic is that the system will push students with C and D into higher levels.

The system was not initiated to obtain a wider range of grade point averages and a more accurate ability indication of the students who lie in the middle and bottom of the class; the attempt is designed to separate the outstanding from the superior student.

A recent student opinion survey conducted by "The Torch," student newspaper of St. John's University, asked the question "What legislation would you like to see the student council enact?" The survey received some varied answers.

One student wanted the council to work for easier test schedules so that all the tests would not be crowded into a one week period.

Another, a freshman, replied, "I didn't even know they had a student council." Another freshman wanted bigger NO SMOKING signs.

One wanted parking space closer to the buildings. The classic reply was given by a junior coed who wanted a trolley car line between the science and liberal arts buildings.

The University of Delaware is embarking on a program that will enable superior students to widen their educational background without the threat of poor marks.

They are initiating a series of courses open to junior, senior, and graduate students with cumulative average over 2.75.

This semester, a course entitled "The Impact of the Concept of Evolution upon Present Day Thought" carrying one credit is being offered. No exams or grades will be given during the course.

The course will be given by guest lectures, each of whom will discuss some aspect of the course from "Darwin and Western Social Thought" to "Variarion in Animals and Plants Under Domestication".

At what price victory? The president of Arizona State college recently voiced the opinion that holidays should no longer be given on the defeat of rival Arizona institution on athletics.

He stated that he was against this policy but that he is instead trying to rally more student support behind the teams. He believes that the college is now more capable of meeting and defeating rival colleges than ever before and thus he is against the holiday pattern.

He suggested student dances and somewhat later hours for victory celebrations.

All this is somewnat shocking. If classes are no longer to be canceled on victories, JUST WHAT SENSE IS THERE IN WINNING? All that is left is a general sense of satisfaction and surely that isn't worth it!

The San Francisco University newspaper "FOGHORN" recently made issue with PARADE Magazine. PARADE ran an article entitled :"Who is Today's college hero" based on a survey at the University of Iowa.

The article features an ex-marine as an example of the new hero. The hero is none other than the campus leader, followed by the intellectual, with the footballer running a distant last.

The ex-marine believes that a long list of activities on a job application means more than straight A's. Sporting a C average ("I could do better if I weren't so active") he feels that he can become "a real organization man—bright, eager, personable, with a background of organization and leading educated people". He considers his greatest asset in college his ability to dance. You must be in the right social crowd not with an introvert group socially unacceptable.

Part of the pleasure is "being up there with the chosen few knowing you're well liked and one of the wheels."

What does he desire in the long run? Not much, just marriage, a sport car, nice ranch house, a wife who is good looking, possessing the same type of personality he considers himself.

Now who would like to take any issue with a guy like that.

Knights of Columbus Communion Breakfast

The Knights of Columbus Communion Breakfast will be held Sunday at Stouffer's Restaurant, after the 9 A.M. mass in the chapel.

"All members are urged to attend the affair," stated Fred Wiele, Campus Trustee. He also stated that tickets will sell for $1.00 and the balance of the meal will be paid for from the association's treasury.

Tickets may be purchased from any officer on campus whose names will be posted on the bulletin boards.

John McGinley To Represent Juniors

John McGinley has been appointed to the newly created post of junior class alumni representative by class president Sheldon Pollock. McGinley is a junior Electrical Engineer from Bryn Mawr.

The position defined in the words of the motion creating it, was presented to a recent meeting of the Student Council by Pollock.

It is intended to, " . . . inform the junior class of the functions of the Alumni groups, with special attention directed toward the functions of the senior class alumni representative."

At the time of the announcement, Pollock said, "This is a step toward greater interest and participation in the work of the various Alumni Associations and regional groups."

Local Unit NFCCS To Hold Meeting at LaSalle College

The Philadelphia Regional Council of the National Federation of Catholic College Students will hold a conference on Sunday, March 8 at LaSalle College.

The subject of the conference will be a proposed international Catholic student community.

The state congress of the federation will be held the weekend of March 20-22 in Wilkes Barre. Delegates will be sent from colleges of the Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Scranton regions.

Another conference has been tentatively planned for Sunday, April 5, which will bring together editorial and staff personnel from the campus newspapers of ten colleges of the region to discuss the aims and methods of campus newspaper publication.

The first part of this meeting was concerned with a general discussion of the history of foreign student relations.

The second part of the conference consisted of a breakdown into five groups composed of foreign students, student government leaders, and representatives from N.F.C.C.S.

School Song Contest Deadline Draws Near

Bruce Irving, chairman of the Spirit Committee, said that all students can show their school spirit by submitting entries in the new school song contest by Friday.

"A desperate attempt will be made to select a song and put it into circulation for the NIT" stated Irving.

All entries are to be placed in the Spirit Committee box in the Student Council Office. The judges for the contest will be from the athletic office.

Denial of Personal Guilt Source of Many Problems

by BISHOP FULTON J. SHEEN
SPECIAL TO THE VILLANOVAN

ON A FOGGY day in San Francisco this year, two priests grabbed the wrists of a man about to jump from a bridge. They saved him from a tragic end. But thousands of "successful" suicides each year make us realize that unhappiness is not a stranger to our times. Why?

The principal reason for the unhappiness of modern man is his denial of personal guilt. By this denial he excludes not only forgiveness, but the place that comes from a reconciliation with the God of love.

NEVER DENY personal guilt. It has five serious effects in your soul: 1) It destroys character by eliminating responsibility and therefore freedom. 2) It makes forgiveness impossible by denying there is a sin to be forgiven. 3) It turns people into scandal-mongers and gossips, because it makes them project their own guilt to others to escape their uneasy conscience. 4) It leads to greater sin by making conscience less reproachful and virtue more distasteful. 5) Finally, denial of personal guilt leads to despair which develops into a positive fanaticism against religion and morality, which hatred is a sure sign of guilt.

Denial of Sin

THE WORST THING in the world is not sin, but the denial of sin—this is the unforgivable sin. If the blind deny they are blind, how shall they ever see?

Our Lord did not like the "nice" people who denied personal guilt. What moved Him to invective was not badness, but self-righteous goodness. We find no words of comdemnation against Magdalene, who stumbled on the problem of sin, nor on the penitent thief, who found it difficult to respect possessions.

IT WAS AGAINST the Scribes and Pharisees who denied that they were responsible for their wrongs that He said: "Woe to you, hypocrites . . . blind guides . . . serpents . . . whited sepulchres, which outwardly appear to men beautiful but within are full of dead men's bones and of all filthiness."

Who Are Condemned

He said that the harlots and the quislings would enter the Kingdom of Heaven before the self-righteous and the smug. He would not condemn those whom society condemned, but rather, those who had sinned and had not yet been found out, or refused to admit it.

TO BE A SINNER, is your distress, but to know it, is your hope. The "nasty" people are the convertible people, because they posses within themselves an emptiness, not like the Grand Canyon, but like a nest which can be filled. They have a hunger and a thirst for something outside themselves. This sense of sin in them does not beget a forlorn despair but a creative despair, knowing that only God can help them.

Be brave enough to confront yourself at all times, having trust in God. The greater the consciousness of your own misery, the greater will be your confidence in the goodness and mercy of God.

position such an action would encounter from Protestants.

Based upon your reasoning (known as "begging the question"), the VILLANOVAN'S statement is "of course a fallacy." Why is it an untruth? . . . because you say so?

You also charge the VILLANOVAN with misrepresentation of "poor" Mr. Kennedy's "key word, divisive." You accuse the VILLANOVAN of—in the Websterian sense of the word — "creating discord or division."

Tell me now, Mr. Kelley, has the VILLANOVAN actually divided " . . . the population into two segments — Protestants and Catholics — as you contend; or has this "divisive effect" been in existence in our nation for many years?

There is Division

You quoted from the LOOK article frequently, but you must have missed the title: "Democrat Forecast: A Catholic in 1960." If there were no "divisive effect" in the United States, would such an article be worth reading or even necessary?

I quote the LOOK feature which stated: "An old taboo of American politics is near extinction. It is that notion that only Protestants should be nominated for top national jobs." The same page of the magazine noted that " . . . candidates in many states have trampled across denominational lines."

Fletcher Knebel also stated in LOOK that "In 1958, the Roman Catholic bishops decried government failure to aid religious schools. Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, then president of the Methodist Council of Bishops, promptly retorted that the Catholic hierarchy should not be permitted "to get its prehensible hands in the public treasury.

"Are there not traces in these excerpts (taken from the same LOOK article from which the VILLANOVAN "misinterpreted" "Poor" Mr. Kennedy's words) of division?

You empatically postulated the guilt of the VILLANOVAN for three "major" errors. First, the paper substituted "should" for "would" in a direct quote of the "Poor Senator's." I grant you that this is an offense against journalistic standards, but aren't you quibbling a bit on a non-essential part of your argument.

Perhaps Accident

I think that this "misquote" of our newspaper might have been accidental on the part of either the writer or the printer. Common sense dictates that Mr. Kennedy's statement does not make sense when you replace "would" with should. Reference to the VILLANOVAN's editorial clears this point.

The second "major error," the misinterpretation of the Senator's statement has been discussed fully. As to the third "major error," that of the basis for diplomatic recognition, the VILLANOVAN's views are founded upon the same logic to which you have resorted when you declared that Mr. Kennedy's " . . . reasoning, according to my interpretation, which I believe to be correct, is sound and adequate."

I referred to this before as a philosophical expression known as "begging the question." Is your interpretation as correct as you contend?

Pax Romana Day Conference To Meet This Sunday

The Pax Romana Day Conference, a meeting of the International Movement of Catholic college students and graduates, will be held at LaSalle College this Sunday.

There will be morning and afternoon sessions from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The admission of $1.50 includes a program, working papers, lunch, and an afternoon snack.

The main speaker of the morning will be Ted Hanis, now associated with the U.N. and past president of the National Student Association.

The speakers of the afternoon will deal with the relationships between the National Federation of Catholic College Students and Pax Romana.

James E. Dougherty, past president of N.F.C.C.S., director of Pax Romana, and at present chairman of N.S.A.'s Advisory Board and Associate Professor of Political Science at St. Joseph's College, will speak on "The Challenge of the Church in Uncommitted Areas of the World".

Debate Society Has Twenty-Five Novice Members

In reply to a request for students interested in debating, the Debating Society had a turnout of twenty-five possible members.

An orientation and novice debating program was immediately put into effect featuring a debate by freshman Joseph Luggera, affirimative, and Eugene D'Aquili, negative, on the national topic, Resolved: "That the Further Development of Nuclear Weapon Should be Prohibited by International Agreement".

Each varsity debator was assigned 4 new members with the purpose of orientating them to debate procedures and technique.

Within two weeks the new members will debate one another, followed very shortly by intercollegiate novice debates.

On March 7, the Society will travel to Hofstra for an intercollegiate tournament.

March 16 Will Be Free Day

was about to become embroiled in a discussion of these two dates, the March 16 contingent made itself known. Representatives Jim Quigley and Don Kemf leaped into the discussion after comments from seniors Joe Sayers and Jim Cusak from the back of the room, and the battle was on.

Now Council Treasurer Fred Wiele chipped in with an amendment, proposing that the motion now read "either March 13 or March 16" as the "free day."

More Amendments

Corey followed with a further amendment to delete the 13th from the original amendment and leave only the March 16 as a substitution for May 8. This was finally passed.

Then, amid complete confusion on the part of the majority of the council members despite Murphy's repeated attempts to explain the situation to them, the amendment to change the date in the original motion from May 8 to March 16 was passed, 20½-19½.

With the main motion now on the floor for consideration, Hoffman asked for a five minute recess, a motion that was defeated 21-19.

From this point on, Pollock continually called for an immediate vote (something that could have been blocked for the rest of the evening by those who favored different dates, just by not allowing the necessary 2/3 vote) and VILLANOVAN editor Larry O'Rourke asked for recorded voice votes on every motion.

Hoffman then proposed an amendment that would change the date from March 16 back to May 8, or return the main motion to its original status, which was accepted despite a protest from Wiele. This was defeated, 22½-17. O'Brien followed with an attempt to change the date back to March 13, but this was downed, 24½-14½.

Corey Tries Coup

With the main motion on the floor reading in favor of the March 16 date and an unanimous vote on the part of the council to make a decision, Corey attempted to pull the political maneuver of the evening, bringing up a motion to table the motion on the floor.

This would have postponed a vote on the date until the next council meeting and would have, in effect, validated either March date, since there would not have been enough time for the council to pick either the 13th or the 16th. The motion was roundly defeated in a voice vote.

Then came the deciding vote, and the virtual end of the meeting. An immediate adjournment motion resulted in a 19½-19½ tie which Murphy broke by deciding to stay, but after a short recess, the council reconsidered and voted overwhelmingly to call it a day.

New Course Available To VU Engineers

The Chemical Engineering Department has announced the addition of a new course, Process Control. The course considers the theory of controlling as a system the interacting properties of temperature, pressure, level, flow, pH, viscosity and composition.

While many schools have offered a primarily qualitative course in instrumentation, Villanova is one of the first schools to offer the more quantative course in Process Control theory.

The course will be taught by Mr. Donald Klein of the Chemical Engineering Department. Klein, who received his B.Ch.E Degree in '43 and his M.Ch.E. degree in '48, both from Villanova, also spent three years as a control engineer with Dag and Zimmerman Inc., prior to joining the faculty in 1953.

Process control, which has been used extensively in electronics engineering, was slow to be accepted in the field of chemical engineering and is a relatively new study.

It is an outgrowth of a paper entitled "Regeneration Theory" delivered in 1932 by H. Nyquist. Experts are of the opinion that Process Control will have far-reaching effects on the field of chemical engineering.

Law School Announces Course in Patent Law

Harold Gill Reushlein Dean of the Law School has announced the addition of a course in Patent Law.

The course, first of its kind available in Pennsylvania, will be taught by Attorney Charles Allen.

The course, although intended primarily for students pursuing the LL.B. degree at Villanova, is also open to a limited number of special students including representatives of Burroughs Corp., Wyeth Laboratories and Smith, Kline and French.

Allen, a member of the New York and Pennsylvania bars, is a patent law specialist with the law firm of Howson and Howson in Philadelphia.

Society Members View Semper Fidelis Films

Semper Fidelis Society members viewed two movies last Thursday night at John Barry Hall.

The films, "To The Shores of Iwo Jima", and "The Marine Corps and the Helicopter", were shown in conjunction with the society's plans to sponsor more training aids for future Marine officers.

Leadership classes, to be given by Technical Sergeant Edward Mulchany, USMC, have tentatively been scheduled for Monday afternoon at 3:30.

In keeping with the new training program, plans are presently under way to engage area Marine officers as weekly speakers for the Society.

AIREE-IRE SOCIETIES Hold Essay Contest

"Engineering versus Liberal Arts" was the topic of discussion at the monthly meeting of the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Society for the Advancement of Management, held last night at the Poor Richards Club.

GIVE BLOOD!

COUNCIL CHATTER

—The council apparently doesn't trust Chairman Bob Murphy. The original adjournment motion, which read that the next meeting would be called at his discretion, resulted in a tie. A second motion, adjourning until the next regular meeting, passed by a large margin . . . Murphy, however, was the dominant figure in the meeting, and deserves a lot of credit for the masterful way he handled the chair. And his dry sarcasm was welcome over the more than two hour haul . . . Senior Ed Walsh, speaking in favor of the March 16 date from the contingent in the back of the room, broke the place up with his comment that "I'm from New York, and from what I can find out, St. Patrick's Day is on a Tuesday this year." . . . Representative Don Kempf, noted for his tongue-tied confusion, came up with another masterpiece. Speaking in refutation of an argument for May 8, he said that "I can't really see anyone going home to pick up his father for Father's Day. Now, for Mother's Day I could see a guy going to get his father . . ." Somehow, it doesn't figure . . . VILLANOVAN editor Larry O'Rourke caused nothing but trouble for the council. His motions for roll-call votes sent parliamentary experts Kempf, Corey and McGrath scurrying to the rule book for a ten minute debate . . . The big controversy might not be over yet. Vice-chairman Tom Hoffman pointed out that, if he should want to, any member of the majority on the last vote (those who voted for March 16) could make a motion to reconsider at the next meeting. Should it be passed, the whole thing could start over again. Further, a council representative, should he get a petition of a majority of the members, could ask Murphy to call a special meeting.

Tutor Program In Effect Without Congress Approval

The Student Tutor Program went into effect March 2 without the approval of the Student Congress, it was announced by Jerry Hepburn, chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee.

However, Council president Robert Murphy assumed responsibility of approval until the official motion is approved at the next Student Council meeting March 11.

Hepburn urged that all students interested in holding positions as student tutors and those students who are in need of scholastic aid sign up in the Student Council office, second floor Dougherty Hall during this week.

"A limited number of positions are available for both tutors and those desiring assistance, since an emphasis will be placed on results rather than quantity," states Hepburn.

Hepburn and his committee will then take it upon themselves to organize the program by assigning students to their respective tutors.

"The big 'if' in the program is whether of not there will be an enthusiastic turnout by students wanting to give up their time as tutors for the betterment of fellow students," emphasized Hepburn.

Israeli, Arab Speakers At IRS Talks

Several speakers will talk on the current Middle Eastern and Arab-Israeli situations at the coming conference of the Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Clubs.

Robert Rafano, president of the International Relations Society and John P. Kelley, co-chairmen of the event announced that the convention will take place on Friday and Saturday, March 13, 14.

The opening lecture, "The General Outlook of the Mddle East", will be the subject of Keith Wheelock, research assistant for the Foreign Policy Institute of the University of Pennsylvania.

The Arabic-Israeli discussion will feature Yaakov Morris, officer for the Israel Office of Information in New York City.

Morris will give the Israeli viewpoint and Jamal Sa'd, Assistant Director of the Arab Information Center in Washington, D. C., will speak on Arabian views.

Villanova's Dr. Fred J. Khouri, will follow up the Saturday afternoon discussions with an address to student representatives at the banquet climaxing the conference.

Co-chairmen Kelley and Rafano expressed hope that most of the I.R.S. members will attend the conference.

PKP Holds Meeting

Villanova's Engineering fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, will commence its annual pledging tomorrow.

All freshmen engineers who have successfully completed one semester are invited to attend the initial pledge meeting. Notices as to time and place will be posted

Engineering vs. Arts Topic At SAM Meeting

Bob Merkert, chairman of the A.I.E.E.-I.R.E., announced that the essay contest for the Villanova Chapter will be held April 8.

The deadline for the contest, which will consist of a twenty minute oral presentation and a written report, is before the Easter vacation.

A prize of 15 dollars will be awarded to the chapter winner, in addition to chance of advancement in district and national competition.

Paparella To Give Aquinas Lecture

Dr. Benedict A. Paparella, of the Philosophy department, will be the guest speaker at the second annual Aquinas Lecture to be held at Holy Family College Friday.

A former teacher at Holy Family College, Paparella will speak on "A Thomistic Concept of the Virtues as They are Related to Happiness."

The general theme of the talk will be to show how in the fulfillment of man's social prosperities and needs in sociable living, it is necessary that the man act and live in a manner which is consistent with a life of virtue.

The lecture will be delivered in the college gym at 10 a.m. The Aquinas Lectures are held as a tradition in many colleges and universities throughout the world in celebration of the feast of St. Thomas Aquinas.

Psychol. Prof Has List of Grad Openings

L. N. Recktenwald, Assistant Professor of Psychology, announced that he had again secured a list of educational facilities and financial assistance being offered to graduate students.

This list, which has been prepared by the American Psychological Association, consists of offers from about 150 institutions of higher education in the United States.

Students should also make inquires in Room 138 Mendel about taking the Miller Analogies Test and the Graduate Record Examination.

Dixieland Band Gives Philadelphia Concert

An international Dixieland jazz concert featuring Chris Barber's Jazz Band from England and six American jazz stars will be held at the Academy of Music on Sunday evening, March 15, at 8:30 P.M.

Barber's group, famous for their million seller "Petite Fleur," will be making its first Philadelphia appearance.

The American stars featured along with the group include Marty Napoleon, Mickey Sheene, Pee Wee Irwin, Bob Wilber, Ray Deal, and Chubby Jackson.

The program will feature the top jazz favorites of all time. Tickets are on sale at the Academy of Music box office, Broad and Locust Sts.

Guild to Present Paul Carroll Play

The Philopatrian Theatre Guild will present "Shadow and Substance," the second play produced in this country by Irish playwright Paul Vincent Carroll, on March 13 and 14. The play, about educational and religious conflict in Ireland, will take place in San Domingo Hall, 2009 Spruce Street. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Devlin To Head C.U.R. Appointed By Merkert

Bob Merkert, chairman of the Religious Affairs Committee, has appointed Peter Devlin to head the Colleges and Universities Relief Administration. The commission of the N.F.C.C.S.

The C.U.R.A. sponsors a clothing drive each year as well as a book drive for the Roma College of South Africa. This is the first year on campus for the C.U.R.A.

Here's How They Voted

Here's the way the Student Council voted on the "free day" decision during the final three roll call votes.

The initial vote listed is for or against amending the motion, which read "Let March 16 be the Free Day," to read in favor of May 8. The second is for or against amending the motion to be in favor of March 13, and the final vote (after the first two were defeated) passed March 16 as the day off.

Full votes are designated by their name and class, half votes by their name and organization. Alternates and absentees are list below.

Turf and Tinsel Features Gridders

Eight Junior football players have received parts in the forthcoming Turf and Tinsel production, "Piper Hiedsieck '98".

The football players turned actors are Leon Horin, Jim Ward, Paul Tomczyk, Frank Cappelletti, Charles Walsh, Ed Lemkin, Furm Nagel, and Jim Osborne.

They will perform as a specialty group in this "gay nineties" show. In their first stage appearance, the athletes will be suited for a beach scene.

Later on in the production, they will appear as old ladies preaching a temperence mission.

The "rover boys" will make their last appearance in the show when they appear in Alpine outfits in a German polka scene.

Engineering Tests

J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of the School of Engineering announced that the Engineer-in-Training Examination will be given on Saturday, May 2. Applications must be in by April 13.

Spring Training at VU Like Majors - Well Almost!

by JAMES J. MURRAY

Spring training at Villanova is comparable to any big league training camp—minus 50 degrees.

On February 23rd I arrived here in southern Delaware county where the Villanova baseball team has camped. Charles Farnam in charge of team equipment and Jake Nevins, team trainer, arrived early. (In fact both have been down here all year, Due to their efforts the team is attired and physically fit.)

The camp site itself is located on the shady side of Goodreau Stadium and is banked by Ithan Avenue (which is lined with rows of bare elm trees) and County rd. (the highway which connects south Delaware county with north Delaware county). The remaining side is large white house. (House belongs to the Tract family who are ardent Villanova fans.)

No contract difficulties, everyone in camp but two players, George Emma (first base) and Ralph Kowalkowski (pitcher) were the exceptions.

These two kept in shape by playing basketball over the winter and were so adept that they have some games to play in New York (N.I.T.) before reporting. In answer to rumors the coach said they definitly will not be traded for playing basketball.

Balmy 32°?

Temperature was a balmy 32° as the players worked out the first day games, some guys throwing the ball around but mostly run, run, run exercise.

Engaging in an early warm-up in baseball drills are (from left) Fred Paciolla, Tom Pristovec and Dennis Cardone. After a week of workouts in the Field House, Coach Art Mahan's squad moved out of doors last week.

Art Mahan, pitching coach, was telling the hopeful pitchers not to burn their arms out by trying to break the sound barrier with their "fast" ball.

Then, art Mahan, batting coach, was teaching the potential Babe Ruths not to try to knock the ball out of the park but to take a nice even cut and get those base hits.

Meanwhile head coach Art Mahan was listening to every problem from, "my arm hurts" to "can I have a new cap coach?"

Head coach Art Mahan, when asked how prospects were for this year's team, replied in his incomparable Boston twang, 'It's hard to believe after losing so many good ball players, but we're gonna be tough." The coach was referring to the fact that six players made winter deals and are playing for Detroit, Cincinnatti, and Pittsburgh.

Six Players to the Majors

"Sure," the coach continued, "we lost Kelly, Kropp, (pitchers) Fidaglo, Nichols, (catchers) Noone, Donatucci, (shortstops) but there is material here to fill the gaps more than adequately. Bobby Klenck, infielder, is back after being injured. Hal Bauser's sore arm seems OK and he should be ready to throw a few good games."

The coach pondered for a while and continued, "We are missing one infielder to fill that spot vacated by shortstop Donatucci. There is a spot in the outfield vacant because Bobby Vincent has been drafted. (Signed with U. S. Army).

The big hole is behind the plate. We need a catcher. Of course, I'm just basing my conclusions on the returnee's, we have a lot of talent on this practice field and every position is up for grabs."

The coach was interrupted when a ball careened off his knee. Paul Borian, team's leading hitter, and Freddie Anthony, also a member of the 300 club came over. Paul apologised, picked up the ball and took over as the coach excused himself to correct a glaring mistake in a pitchers stance.

Paul smiling through his wind burnt face started, "I've shed twenty pounds this winter and feel great." Freddie broke in and said, "if you hit your weight your lucky." Paul continued with, "Fred, (5-6) the only thing smaller than your average is your strike zone." Both ball players laughed and continued to have a catch.

I climbed to the top of the weather beaten unpainted stands and looked over the field. There were almost seventy athletes—some in uniform, some in makeshift outfits running, throwing, catching, and doing their best with one goal in mind—to be on the team opening day. Twenty-five or so will realize their goal and the others—they'll be better men for trying.

BASEBALL BRIEFS—Eddie Monahan outfielder, said he doesn't know how the rumor got started but he doesn't have a damaged eye. Both eyes are "on the ball" . . . Left handed pitcher, Kreitzer, has all the tools to fill Jack Kelly's spot . . . When Bobby Klenck explained to the coach that he'd have to break in his new glove before the season starts the coach replied, "just have a catch with me. I use to spend my winter breaking in gloves for the big firms. I was really fast. . . . "

Quin-Caps Retain Lead In Intramural Bowling

Last week's competition in the intramural bowling league proved that the first place teams were still the class of the league.

In action last Tuesday the league leading Quin-Caps defeated the third place Saints in three out of four games. The loss dropped the Saints into fourth place.

In the Wednesday league the loop leading Pencil-Pushers took three out of four games in their win over the Hot Rockets.

Tuesday proved to be a sorry day for the Buffers who were whitewashed by the Yoo-Hoos. With the victory the Yoo-Hoos jumped to third place. Their attack was led by Pete Recker who scored 506 points and was high for the day.

Also in the Tuesday league second place Boss Choice kept within three games of the Quin-Caps by defeating the Holy Rollers in three out of four games.

Jack Petrecca is the possessor of the high average in the Tuesday league with a 173.3 mark.

On Wednesday the Chug-a-luga and the Cathodes moved into a tie for second place. The Knickerbachers pulled off the biggest upset of the day by defeating the Knickerbachers 3-1. The loss dropped the Knickerbachers from second to fourth place.

Dick Carper is high man in the Wednesday circuit with a 160 average.

Small Five Favored In Intramurals

"We think we can go all the way this year." The speaker was junior engineer Mike Marinak, coach of the talent-laden Small Five, one of the eight finalists in the Intramural Basketball competition scheduled for Alumni Gym.

On paper the Small Five looks like the team to beat. All but one of the seven team members are six feet or over, with Fred Wiele and Bill Barron heading the list at six feet four inches.

Sam Ciesielski and Tom Connolly are six feet two inches, Hal Bauser and Ron Dobies stand six feet even. The only "little" guy is an outstanding backcourt man, Dick Parrin.

A glance at the statistics indicate that the Smill Five led the 6:30 league in both scoring and rebounding. Their biggest asset however is a well balanced scoring attack, all eight players being potent scoring threats.

Delany, Jenkins Honored On Dominican Republic Stamps

by TONY MACKLIN

In a corner of one of the large display cases in the library is an object that should be of great interest to track enthusiasts, stamp collectors, and to Villanovans in general.

The object is a postage stamp picturing Villanova graduate student and former Wildcat point - getter, record - smasher Ron Delany crossing the finish line in winning the 1,500-meter run in the 1956 Olympic games at Melbourne.

Charley Jenkins being unavailable for comment, the burden of comment falls upon Mr. Delany. Ron received the stamp on an envelope postmarked the first day of issue. He also received copies. "Many stamp enthusiasts have sent me stamps to autograph," he sings.

Scott's Monthly Journal in their column of stamp activity "Around the World" provides the necessary background for the stamps. On October 30, 1958, the Dominican Republic issued the seventh Olympic series in two years. It consist of three airmail (correo aereo) stamps and five ordinary stamps picturing winners of the last Olympic Games. The stamps are all multi-colored and each design has the flag of the athlete's country.

Another ex-Villanova, ace Charley Jenkins likewise has been honored with a stamp for his performance in the Olympics. Jenkins shares a stamp with Tom Courtney, also of the United States team. The stamp pictures Courtney taking the baton from Jenkins and it commemorates victories in the 400 and 800-meter runs and the 1,600-meter relay.

These two stamps, along with a number of others were issued by the Dominican Republic in honor of the 1956 Olympic winners.

Since the stamps were issued by the Dominican Republic, it would seem that the natural place to obtain information about them would be the office of the consul of the Dominican Republic. It isn't. All that is known in that office is that "we had to visa the invoices for the documents."

The E. A. Wright Company, a Philadelphia firm who printed the stamps, offer less help: "We'd just be giving all our time and effort. With all our customers, we can't give out any information. We're besieged all the time. It's our policy not to give out any information. We'd be doing it all the time."

The United States is represented by the stamp of Jenkins and Courtney and by one of Milt Campbell running in the decathlon. The Jenkins-Courtney stamp is an 11c airmail and the Campbell stamp is 2c.

The other stamps in the series include Gillian Sheen of England, fencing, Shozo Sasahara of Japan, wrestling and Madeleine Barthod of Switzerland, downhill skiing. The Sheen stamp is 1c, the Sasahara stamp is 3c, and the Berthod stamp is 5c.

The 7c stamp shows Murray Rose of Australia, winner of the 400 and 1,500-meter freestyle swims.

The 16c airmail stamp shows India's field hockey teams in action. The 17c airmain displays Sweden's yachting team winning a race.

The Ron Delany stamp was issued in a previous set. Since he was running for Ireland there is a Irish flag included in the design. The stamp is a 2c corroes.

There is a rumor going around that the Dominican Republic is about to dedicate a stamp to another pretty speedy individual, Zsa Zsa Gabor. She ran faster than either Charley or Ron.

In truth, Villanova is very proud of the accomplishments of its athletes. The Dominican Republic stamps are another in the long list of honors accorded to them. The fame of Villanovans lives all over the world. Not many universities can make this statement.

Clerk: "With the best straw to be found, of course."
Salesman: "I thought so. Now I know where the straw came from that broke the camel's back!"

the Nurses Swimming Championship will take place.

The final intramural activity of the Spring will be a golf tournament, Monday, May 11. The site selected by Geisz is the Main Line Golf Club located on Lancaster Pike in Radnor.

Geisz also mentioned that a Horseshoe Touranment will be held late in April and early May. No definite date has been set.

Golf Team Begins Tryouts Thursday

Tryouts for the Intramural golf teams will begin tomorrow. Interested students are asked to check the bulletin for time and place.

The purpose of the initial meeting will be to find out how many students are actually interested. All participants will be given an equal chance to display their talents.

Three local golf courses have already been selected for play. The rules committee, composed of three members of the golf team, will establish the procedure to be followed.

Bowlers Enter NY Tourney

Villanova University is, this year, for the first time, competing in the Eastern Intercollegiate Bowling Conference held in New York City.

The qualifying rounds, consisting of eight games across sixteen alleys will be held on April 18, 19, and 25, 26. Last year there were 240 entrants in the qualifiers. Qualifying average was 168.

The top sixteen scores, based on the Petersen point system, will qualify for the semi-finals on May 25. The semi-finals will also be eight games across sixteen alleys.

The top eight of these sixteen will bowl in head to head competition in the finals.

First prize — the twenty-two inch V. Loria and Son Collegiate Trophy — will remain at the school of the victor for the year that he won. Three wins entitle a school to permanent possession.

Each of the top three receives a statuette as a personal prize. The high game of the competitions will be awarded a special trophy. All finalists and semi-finalists also receive trophies.

Any male undergraduate carrying at least twelve credits in a four-year accredited college who is in good scholastic standing is eligible. Night students need carry only eight credits.

Entry fee is $6.00 per person. This includes all bowling charges. Entries must be postmarked before April 17 to be eligible.

All competition will take place in the Bowlmor Recreation, 110 University Place, New York City. Information and entry blanks may be obtained from that address.

ADVENTURES IN SOCIAL SCIENCE: NO. 2

Today, with earnestness and sobriety, we make the second of our forays into social science. We take up the most basic of all social sciences—sociology itself.

Sociology teaches us that man is a social animal. It is not instinct or heredity that determines his conduct; it is environment. This fact is vividly borne out when you consider the case of Julio Sigafoos.

Julio, abandoned as an infant in a dark wood near Cleveland, was adopted by a pack of wild dogs and reared as one of their own. When Julio was found by a hunter at the age of twelve, the poor child was more canine than human. He ran on all fours, barked and growled, ate raw meat, lapped water with his tongue, and could neither speak nor understand one single word. In short, he was a complete product of his environment.

Julio, incidentally, was more fortunate than most wild children. They never become truly humanized, but Julio was exceptional. Bit by bit, he began to talk and walk and eat and drink as people do. His long-dormant mental processes, when awakened at last, turned out to be fantastically acute. He was so bright that he learned to read and write in a month, got through grammar school in three years, and high school in two. And last June as thousands of spectators, knowing the odds Julio had overcome, stood and raised cheer after cheer, he was graduated valedictorian from Cal Tech with a degree in astrophysics!

Who can say to what towering heights this incredible boy would have risen had he not been killed the day after commencement while chasing a car?

But I digress. To return to sociology, people tend to gather in groups—a tendency that began, as we all know, with the introduction of Marlboro Cigarettes. What an aid to sociability they are! How benignly one looks upon one's fellows after puffing on Marlboro's filter that really filters, on Marlboro's flavor that's really flavorful. How eager it makes one to extend the hand of friendship! How grateful we all are to Marlboro for making possible this togetherness! How good not to live in the bleak pre-Marlboro world with every man a stranger!

The groups that people live in today (thanks to Marlboro) vary widely in their customs. What is perfectly acceptable in one society may be quite outlandish in another. Take, for instance, the case of Ug Van Wyck.

Ug, a Polynesian lad, grew up in an idyllic South Sea isle where the leading event of the year was the feast of Max, the sun god. A quaint all-day ceremony was held, with tribal dancing, war chants, fat-lady races, pie-eating contests, and, for the grand finale, the sacrifice of two dozen maidens.

According to Ug's folkways, sacrificing maidens was entirely acceptable, but when, in his eighteenth year, he was sent as an exchange student to the University of Wisconsin, he soon learned that Americans take a dim view of this practice—in Wisconsin, at any rate. The first fifteen or twenty maidens Ug sacrificed, he was let off with a warning. When, however, he persisted, drastic measures were taken: he was depledged by his fraternity. A broken man, Ug quit school and moved to Milwaukee where today he earns a meager living as a stein.

For real sociability, provide Marlboros for filter smokers and Philip Morris for non-filter smokers. Both are made by the Philip Morris company; both sponsor this column; both are tops!

Cats Impressive Despite IC4A Loss

by TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Even though the track team failed to re-capture the indoor IC4A title it had held the past two years, the Wildcats made a fine showing last Saturday in Madison Square Garden.

Ed Collymore, who had been running the 600 of late, dropped back to the more familiar sprint and successfully defended his 60-yard title.

Ed was beaten off the starting blocks by the other four finalists, but he belted past Penn State's Bob Brown in the last 10 yards to win in the time of 6.2.

Charley Stead matched Collymore's five points with a classy performance in the high jump. Stead easily cleared 6-7, then three times nearly jumped 6-9.

Relay Outstanding

The mile relay team did itself proud, finishing a close second to a veteran Pittsburgh quartet. Pitt, which had won the relay with virtually the same squad in 1958, broke the Garden IC4A record for the distance, as it was clocked in 3:18.6. Villanova had held the old standard—3:19.6—set in 1956 by Gene Maliff, Warner Meitman, Rollie Simpson and Charley Jenkins.

The unit consisting of sophomores Joe Manion and Nick DeAnglelis, junior Jim Blackburn and senior Collymore was clocked unofficially in 3:18.8. That's a big improvement over the times the same quartet was registering earlier in the campaign.

Collymore's performance, though we have come by now to expect only the finest from the All-American sprinter, is worthy of special note.

He won a heat in the 60 at 3.35 p.m.; won a quarter-final in the 60 at 4; anchored the relay team to a first place in the trials at 8.25; won a semi-final in the 60 at 8.55; won the 60 final at 9.10; anchored the relay to second place in the final at 10.50, running his leg unofficially in 48.7.

Fourth In Scoring

The two first places and the second earned Villanova 14 points and fourth place in the team scoring—behind Manhattan, Penn State and Yale.

A possible five points failed to materialize in the broad jump, as junior John Buckley, bothered by a muscle pull on one thigh, could not get off a jump near his usual distance.

The defending outdoor IC4A champion broke stride on each attempt—apparently afraid of fouling—and lost what power the injured leg still had. The best Buckley could do was 21 feet nine inches.

Senior Vic DiMaio was eliminated in the time trials in the 1000, while junior Bob Godesky came in last in the final of the mile. Godesky had come in second in a mile trial during the afternoon, but running two miles on the same day apparently took too much out of the hard-working ace.

Held for Relay

The VILLANOVAN had reported last week that DeAngelis would run in the 600, but Coach Jim Elliott decided to save Nick for the big effort in the mile relay.

In the freshman medley relay, the local representatives ran away with the prize with a commendable time of seven minutes, 35.9 seconds.

Pat Nicastro took the lead from the very start in the 880 leg. Bob Coffil held it in the 440, as he coasted easily. Bob Raemore, running like a bespectacled rabbit, boosted the margin during his 220 stint.

Jon Dante, normally a half-miler or a 1000-yarder, ran the anchor mile. With a lead of 30 yards, he took things easily. But, when Dartmouth's Tom Laris, the interscholastic mile champ last year, made up a big deficit for Dartmouth and pulled even with Dante with three-quarters of a lap to go, Dante turned and looked at Laris, then promptly scooted off to win by 20 yards.

It's back to New York for the last Madison Square Garden meet of the year this Saturday—the Knights of Columbus Games.

Stead In Mile Quartet

Stead will put those long legs of his to use in the mile relay substituting for Collymore, as Coach Elliott prepares for the heavy relay schedule coming up during the outdoor season. Manion, Blackburn and DeAngelis will join Stead in trying to match their time last week.

Collymore, who is undefeated in the 600 this year, will revert to that longer distance after sprinting for two weeks. He'll probably duel with former teammate Charley Jenkins. (Colly can't seem to get rid of Jenkins. The VILLANOVAN two weeks ago even ran a picture of Collymore and called him Jenkins).

Stead will compete in the high jump as well as the mile relay. The two freshman sprinters—Paul Drayton and Frank Budd—will compete in the 60. It's Budd's first activity since he hurt his ankle a month ago.

The freshmen will compete in an AAU mile relay race. Nicastro, Coffil and Raemore will comprise three-fourths of the team. The last man will be determined in time trials this week in practice.

All students who have had any experience in the shot put, the javelin or the discus, and who would like to join the varsity track and field team for the spring season, have been invited by assistant coach Jim Tuppeny to report to him any afternoon at the stadium.

V.U. Meets LaSalle in '59 Finale

by JOE FITZPATRICK

When LaSalle and Villanova close out "Big Five" activity at the Palestra on Saturday much will be at stake.

A LaSalle victory will cause a two-way tie for second place in "Big Five" play. Both the 'Cats and the Explorers would have 2-2 records in inter-city play.

A Villanova triumph will set their "Big Five" mark at 3-1 and the 'Cats would be all alone in second place while LaSalle would join Temple and Penn in a three way scramble in the "Big Five" basement.

The Explorers will have other than local incentives in mind when they take to the Palestra floor on Saturday.

Fresh from a decisive thrashing of last year's NIT champion, Xavier and riding the crest of a win streak, the Explorers will have visions of the NIT dancing in their heads.

Villanova, on the other hand, will be returning to action after a much needed two week lay-off. Much-needed because the Villanovans looked weary in their last two outings, both of which they suffered setbacks, one to NYU and the other to North Carolina State.

Battle of Strategy

The game could prove to be an unprecedented battle of basketball strategy. Both Villanova coach Al Severance and LaSalle mentor Dudey Moore will be using each and every trick up their respective basketball sleeves.

Offensively LaSalle will have two sharpshooters in Ralph Bantivoglio and Joey Heyer in the backcourt. If left alone this duo could pile up an unbelievable number of points.

They will not be left alone, however, Villanova will probably send Jim Kenny and Jim Huggard out to meet the two Explorers.

Huggard and Kenny will either be on the outside part of a 2-3 zone or playing man-for-man.

Under the boards the Explorers have their own version of NYU's Sanders and Ramsey. Who? Bob Herdelin and Bob Alden.

Against Xavier on Saturday night Herdelin grabbed 23 rebounds and scored 22 points while teammate Alden was pulling down 22 rebounds and scoring 13 points.

Alden and Herdelin will have help in LaSalle's fifth man. To finish off the starting contingent coach Moore could start either Hugh Brolly or Al Ferner. Both can be valuable rebounders as well as destructive scorers.

George Raveling and "Tweetie" Driscoll will have to show signs of early season brilliance in order to contain the LaSalle big men.

LaSalle To Play Man-For-Man

When the Wildcats have the ball they will be facing a very efficient and well coached man-for-man defense.

Joe Heyer will cover Jim Kenny and Ralph Bantivogio will probably draw the tough task of guarding Jim Huggard.

Either Ferner or Brolly will get the most difficult assignment of the night—Joe Ryan. Both Explorers tend to press on defense and when pressed Ryan thrives.

Joe's drives could force Dudey Moore to reach for reserves early and when it comes to reserves he has few.

Bob Herdelin will cover George Raveling and Bobby Alden will probably draw John Driscoll. Some observers believe that the Driscoll - Alden match will be the story of the game.

Tweetie will have his hands full because even though Alden looks weak he is very agressive and he moves well. It will take hustle on the part of Villanova's Raveling and Driscoll to control the offensive board and hence stop LaSalle's fast break.

Whetever the strategy the game is a city series duel on which a great deal hinges and it will be just as exciting as last year's 111-105 quadruple overtime thriller.

I-M Playoffs To Start Mon. In Alumni Hall

The Intramural Basketball Season will enter its final phase next Monday with the commencement of the annual playoffs in Alumni Gym.

Intramural director, Ed Geisz, announced that the eight participating teams will consist of the winners and runner-ups in each of the four leagues.

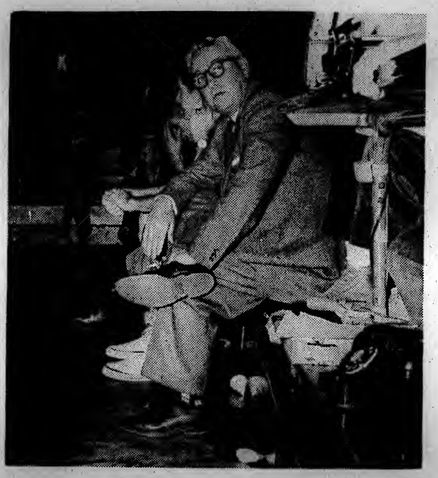
The league leaders are: Villanova A.C., Bravo A.C., Small Five, and Ranch Hands. The four that placed, Amboys, Northern Stars, Alumni 49ers, and Northerners will complete the eight team field. All are vieing for the title won last year by Turse's Trotters.

Geisz also made public the complete intramural schedule for the remainder of the semester.

On April 1st the softball league will get under way. On the following day a Life Saving course, sponsored by the Red Cross will be held.

Geisz notes that this program certifies participating students for summer positions as life guards and swimming instructors.

Monday, April 6th, will mark the beginning of the Annual Tennis Tournament.



Later on in the month, the Intramural Track Championship will be staged. The next day

Mass, Motorcade To Support N.I.T. Bid

More than 800 students are expected tonight to watch Villanova open its National Invitational Tournament bid against St. John's at Madison Square Garden.

Students this afternoon will travel by automobile, bus, and train to New York for the 9 p.m. event.

Tickets for Villanova's first N.I.T. bid went on sale Monday in the Field House. By yesterday afternoon most of them were gone, reported officials at the offico.

The tickets were priced at one dollar for students and three dollars for dates.

Still Some Available

The tickets went off sale yesterday, said Bob Wagner, business manager for the athletic department. Tickets will be on sale in New York tonight.

The team left for New York last night. They were to practice in the Garden this afternoon.

Bob Murphy, student body president, promised Coach Al Severance the "full support of the Villanova students."

One council committee has already made efforts to insure the success of the team.

Bruce Irving, chairman of the Spirit Committee, is encouraging large attendance at the team mass, 12:15 today in the chapel.

"With so much at stake," said Irving, "student support and a little help from the Lord could stubborn Explorer team from LaSalle. St. John's according to reports, expects an easy time with the Cats.

Motorcade Planned

Officers of Phi Kappa Pi fraternity said that a motorcade would form today on the parking lot at 4 p.m.

By LOUIS R. DESFOSSES
of the Villanovan Staff

Pledges of the fraternity have been constructing signs for display at the game.

Cars in the motorcade are expected to proceed by the Pennsylvania and New Jersey Turnpikes to New York City.

According to fraternity officers the cars will be painted with slogans and designs. Undecorated cars will be permitted to join the motorcade, however, they said.

The last Villanova motorcade took place during the football season of 1957. Then hundreds of Villanova students drove in a four mile motorcade from Villanova, via the Schuylkill Expressway to center-city Philadelphia.

Cheering Credited

Parts of the motorcade were lopped off there by Philadelphia police.

Football coaches that day credited the large cheering section at Municipal Stadium as aiding the Wildcats.

Villanova students will probably return to campus immediately after tonight's game. A full class schedule is planned for tomorrow.

Murphy joined with the heads of other organizations in asking for road safety tonight.

The Spirit Committee outlined this as the most direct route from Villanova to the Garden:

Schuylkill Expressway west to the Norristown Interchange of the Pennsylvania Turnpike, then Pennsylvania Turnpike to Delaware River Turnpike Bridge.

Then New Jersey Turnpike to Lincoln Tunnel. The garden is at 50th st. and 8th ave.

Speed limit on the Pennsylvania Turnpike is 65 miles per hour and on the New Jersey Turnpike 60 miles per hour.

Villanova Radio Station WVIL will broadcast the entire game tonight from Madison Square Garden between Villanova and St. John's.

Bill Washington, station manager, said the plans were made last week when a local outfit agreed to sponsor the show.

"We hope to accommodate those students forced to stay away from the game," Washington said.

John Oberlies, news and sports director, will do the play by play coverage. The color, beginning at 8:45, will be handled by sports coordinator Ted Folson.

Washington said that all Dougherty Hall lounges would be open during the game and the broadcast could be heard throughout the building as well as the dormitories.

The station manager said he had already received calls from several alumni and friends of Villanova asking admission to the broadcast.

Raymond L. Cummings, History Professor, points to map of 1815 Italy which he used to supplement his talk on the "Unification of Italy," the first of three lectures to be presented this semester by the Political Science and History Departments.

Prof Parallels Nationalism

The relatively obscure era of Italian unification one hundred years ago was lent a new vitality by Raymond L. Cummings, History professor, who inaugurated the 1959 political science lecture series, last Wednesday evening.

The Fullbright scholar drew striking parallels between Cavour's Italy in 1859 and Nassar's UAR in 1959.

Delving into the sources of nationalism, Cummings drew a lucid picture of 1859 Italy, which was then a group of small, independent states, including the Papal States, Sardinia, and the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies. Sardinia was ruled by the unification-minded, liberal prime minister Cavour; in the Two Sicilies a virtuous but weak King Francis II was trying to recover the shreds of a revolution torn country.

"Cavour, like Nasser today," said Cummings, "was an ardent proponent of nationalism. He 'fraternized with the revolution' in the Sicilies with a form of indirect aggression that today we associate with Nasser."

Propegandc Barrage

The propaganda barrage of the liberals, exaggerating the squalor in the Sicilies, was nearly as formidable as the British machine before World War II.

Like Nasser, Cavour was regarded with apprehension because he too was tampering with the status quo by fostering unification.

By THOMAS M. WOLF
of the Villanovan Staff

Cummings detailed the precarious policy that Napoleon III followed at the time. The emperor envisioned a united Italy as a potential threat on his flank, and wanted to contain Sardinia, at the same time prolonging the "big-brother" image he had established when he expelled the Austrians from Italian territory.

With this Cummings made an analogy. Today the U. S. officially supports the colonial policies of the certain allies, even though most of the country privately sympathizes with the aspirations for independence within these colonies. "Algeria is an example of this," he added.

Friendly Foe

Napoleon III likewise followed an ambivalent policy—that of "the friendly foe." He sympathized with the Cavour liberals, but his better self warned him against it.

The speaker's opinion of Garibaldi was couched in harsh tones. "Left Wing radicals forced Cavour to send Garibaldi on his raid, his piracy," he noted. "The man didn't even see fit to observe the international rule of fighting under a flag."

Garibaldi descended uninvited upon the Sicilian government in support of the revolution. After describing the sad government as "opposition to God in the form of a state", the grandiose conqueror routed 20,000 "superannuated incompetants" with his famous "1,000 Red Shirts."

Temporary Reprieve

France could have intervened and stopped Garibaldi, but Cummings believed that "this would have been only a temporary reprieve for the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies. The Kingdom would have become, in effect, a French satellite, in the same way that Hungary is a Russian Satellite today."

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., chairman, neatly moralized Cummings' talk by quoting Seneca: "The one thing that we learn from history, is that we learn nothing from history."

Cummings was graduated from Villanova in 1948, obtained his M.A. from Georgetown in 1952, and at present is working for his Ph.D. at Penn.

As a Fulbright Scholar, he traveled to Europe last year to work on his thesis on Italian Unification.

While there, he worked at the Foreign Ministry Archives in Paris, the State Archives in London, and the Public Records Office in London.

Temple Prof First Speaker At New Series

Dr. Elizabeth W. Schneider, Temple University Professor, yesterday discussed Gerard Manley Hopkins, English poet, with Villanova students and faculty members.

Dr. Schneider spoke at the first of a planned series of lectures, according to Dr. Charles W. Bernardin, chairman of the Villanova English department.

The speaker evaluated Hopkin's works and evaluated them as outstanding British Literature.

Bernardin said the lecture series is primarily to stimulate intellectual English majors, but non-English majors are also invited.

Professor Schneider, who has been at Temple since 1926 and is presently chairman of the graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania.

She also studied at Oxford University in 1930 and 1931, and is the author of three books, "The Aesthetics of William Hazlitt", "The Aesthetic Motive", and "Coleridge, Opium, and Kubla Khan".

In addition to these literary activities, Dr. Schneider, who specializes in the 19th Century Romanticism, is the author of many articles and reviews published in America and English scholarly journals, and has edited "Samuel Taylor Coleridge: Selected Prose and Poetry".

J. B. Discount Ducats Sold

In view of the special interest among students and teachers in Elia Kazan's production of Archibald MacLeish's hit play "J.B.," current at the ANTA Theatre, New York City, and the difficulty students and teachers are having obtaining medium priced tickets, the "J.B." management has instituted a Student Discount Plan for a certain number of orchestra seats.

The student discount seats are being offered to students and teachers at $3.45. They are orchestra seats, normally costing $6.90.

'J.B.," starring Christopher Plummer, Raymond Massey and James Daly, has won extraordinary praise from the New York and national Press. In the N. Y. Times, Brooks Atkinson referred to it as "one of the memorable works of the century." At this writing it has been nominated for five "Tonys" by The American Theatre Wing. In fact, "J. B." has received international critical acclaim.

Special Student Discount Plan blanks for use either by mail or at the ANTA Theatre box office, have been sent to the Chairman of the English Department, Dr. Charles Bernardin, and the Director of Public Relations, Gene Ruane. Additional supplies of these student discount form may be had by writing Alfred de Liagre, Jr., 55 West 42nd Street, New York 36, New York.

Villanova Actors In Drama Festival

Members of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society will participate in the sixth annual Drama Festival, sponsored by the State Department of U.M.E.S.C.O. in conjunction with international Theatre Month. The festival will be held this evening at Harcum Junior College.

The cast will perform Act III, scene I of "Victoria Regina", a three-act play by Lawrence Housman, which was recently presented at Immaculata College.

Villanova actors performing in the play are John Cannon, who will portray Disraeli, and Allan Willig, who will take the part of John Brown. Female members of the cast will be members of the Cue and Curtain Players of Immaculata College.

The play concerns a series of interesting episodes in the long reign of England's Queen Victoria.

Villanova IRS To Host Convention; Experts to Speak

By FRANK DYNAN
of The Villanovan Staff

Villanova will be host college for the annual State Convention of the Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Clubs tomorrow and Saturday.

The topic of the convention will be "The Problems of the Middle East". On Saturday "The Arab-Israeli Relationship" will be specifically considered.

Sessions of the convention will alternate between the George Washington Hotel in King of Prussia, Pa., and Vasey Auditorium.

Several Middle Eastern experts have been engaged to address the delegates. These men are either citizens of the Middle East or have recently returned from travels in the area.

Evening Session At Motel

Mr. Keith Wheelock, Research Associate of the Foreign Policy Research Institute of the University of Pennsylvania, will be the opening speaker. He will present "A General Outlook on the Middle East" at 7:30, Friday evening at the George Washington motel.

Wheelock has recently toured Egypt and is currently writing a book on that country. While in the Middle East he met with such men as Nasser and Ben-Gurion.

The Friday night address will be followed by a social to assist the delegates in becoming acquainted.

Many surrounding colleges are expected to send students to the convention. Among these will be delegations from The University of Pennsylvania and Seton Hall.

The main feature of Saturday's proceedings will be a discussion of the Arab-Israeli situation in the Vasey Auditorium.

Israeli To Defend Policy

Mr. Yaakov Morris, an Israeli citizen and staff member of the Israeli Office of Information in New York, will defend his country's position at 11:00 a.m.

After an adjournment for lunch until 1:30, Mr. Jamal A. Sa'd, a Lebonese and Assistant Director of the Arab Information Center in Washington, will present the Arab point of view.

Following Sa'd's speech, the delegates will spend the afternoon discussing the Arab-Israeli disputes.

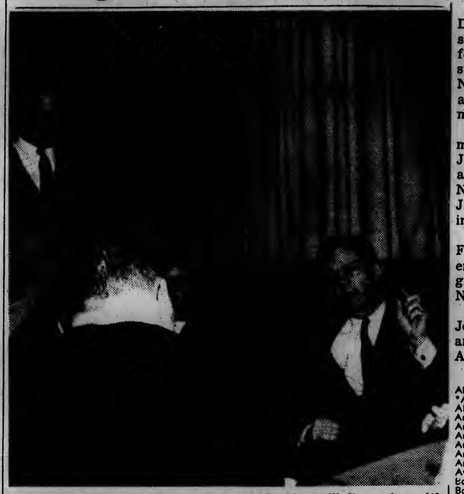
On Saturday evening there will be a banquet in the Forge Room of the George Washington motel at which Dr. Fred J. Khouri, Associate Professor of Political Science at Villanova will speak.

Talked With Nasser

Khouri's topic will be "The U. S. and the Middle East". He toured the Middle East last summer and spoke to Egyptian President Nasser and other high officials in the area.

There will also be installment of the new officers of the Association at the banquet.

The convention's entire cost will be $9 per delegate. However, members of the Villanova I.R.S., and History and Political Science department members may attend all but the banquet free of charge. The dinner will cost $2.75.



Sessions Open

All the events will be open to any student who wishes to attend. Convention co-chairman John P. Kelley stated that "the discussions and lectures should prove most interesting since the Middle East is a major trouble spot and provider of much woe for Western diplomats."

Serving with Kelley as co-chairman is Robert Rafano, President of the Villanova I.R.S.

Dean's List:

Eight Get Perfect Marks

Senator Joseph Clark leads a "cracker barrel" discussion with a group of Villanova law students before he addressed the Law Forum last Wednesday night.

The announcement of the Dean's List revealed that eight students have compiled a perfect 4.00 average. Two of the student are seniors; one a NROTC fourth year man; three are juniors; and two are sophomores.

J. Francisco Pacheco, Finance major and Education major John F. O'Donnell head the list as the only two seniors. The lone NROTC five year man is Thomas J. Breslin, Mechanical Engineering.

The three juniors are Peter A. Farrell, Finance major; Frederick Messner; Electrical Engineering; and Biology major Nicholas C. Tenagila.

Heading the sophomores are John V. McDonnell, Arts major, and Finance major, Allen A. Adinolfi.

Politics Great Opportunity, Clark Tells Law Forum

By LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE

The greatest opportunities for young lawyers are available in Washington, Senator Joseph Clark (D-Pa.) told the Villanova Law Forum last week.

"It is in the Nation's Capitol that lawyers can best fulfill their obligttion to defend natural and Constitutional rights," he said.

Clark, senior senator from Pennsylvania, spoke on the role of the lawyer in the senate at the second meeting of the Spring Session of the third annual law forum.

The senator called on the Villanov law students to enter politics.

"If you want to accomplish great good, and that certainly should be your aim as lawyers the government calls you," Clark said.

Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex.), senate majority leader, came in for a bit of criticsm from Clark. Calling Johson a "dictator by consent," Clark said the majority leader was exercising too tight a control on Democratic party discussion.

Johnson confers with the committee chairman, most of whom are Southeners or conservatives from the North and West before deciding a party stand, the senator said.

" We should instead have a system of party caucauses in which individual senators with minority points of view would have t say," Clark said.

In this Clark agreed with Senator William Proxmire (D-Wisc.) who two weeks ago called for at least four party caucauses a year.

Kennedy No Fool

Discussing the senate's role in foreign affairs, Clark praised Senator John Kennedy (D-Mass.) "Jack should certainly be heard in matters dealing with foreign affairs. He's nobodys' fool."

Clark declined to comment on Senator Kennedy's stand regarding federal aid to education. Two weeks ago Kennedy, in a national magazine, opposed any direct aid to education as violation of the Constitution and tradition of separation of church and state.

The Pennsylvania senator was somewhat less reticent about Harold E. Stassen, Republican candidate for mayor of Philadelphia.

Stassen's opponent is incumbent Richardson Dilworth, who served as District attorney while Clark was Philadelphia mayor.

Odds Favor Dilworth

"Stassen certainly has the odds against him, and that's the understatement of the evening," Clark said.

WVIL Releases Poll Tally

WVIL, Villanova's radio station, has announced the results of the campus-wide general poll among the school's underclassmen. The survey was conducted by WVIL staff members and was completed in one day.

John Oberlies, WVIL News and Sports Director, revealed final tabulation over the air last Tuesday.

The results of the poll are as follows:

1. How do you rate the spirit of the average Villanovan? excellent — 10, good — 203, fair—351, or poor—85.
2. To improve the spirit of Villanova, I recommend: organized seating at sports events—217, well run student rallies—329, revamping of the Spirit Committee or the Student Council—208, or more co-operation from the athletic department—163.
3. Do you think that the majority o fthe proposals in the Student Council are significant to you? Yes—197 No—413.
4. Do you think that you are well represented in the Student Council? Yes—283 No—344.
5. If Student Council meetings were more publicized, would you attend? Yes—337 No—275.
6. I think that the Student Council, up to now, has been: very active—9, active—274, inactive—48, effective—78, or ineffective—306.
7. I listen to WVIL: sometimes—308, whenever possible—124, seldom—145, or never—75.
8. The commercial station which I listen to most is: WRCV—124, seldom—145, or never—75.
9. My favorite kind o fmusic is: classical—104, jazz—177, Show music—145, popular—308, or rock and roll—123.
10. I think that the selection of music on WVIL is: excellent—65, good—332, fair—161, or poor—42.
11. If both a commercial station and WVIL were doing a play-by-play of a sports event, I would listen to: WVIL—368, or the commercial station—279.
12. If given the opportunity, I would participate in a WVIL panel show? Yes—299 No 314.
13. Would you advocate a program whereby leading Villanova athletic celebrities would be interviewed on the air? Yes—490 No—138.
14. How do you rate the Villanova football coaching staff? excellent—57, good—251, fair—189, or poor—78.
15. I rate Grazione—85, Intrabartolo—156, O'Pella—194, as the most valuable player of the 1958 Villanova football team.
16. I think that the recruiting policy of potential football players to Villanova is: adequate—161 or inadequate—452.

Club Formed To Instruct Children

Establishment of a campus chapter of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine will be discussed at an organizational meeting this morning at 10:30 in the rear of Vasey Auditorium.

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine is the Church's means of providing religious education for youths and adults.

The campus C.C.D. will instruct school children and high school students in Sunday schools and special classes. Those who do not wish to teach can help teachers prepare classwork material.

Another function of the C.C.D. will be the recruiting of children for instruction classes. This will include contacting parents to arrange for their children's enrollment in Confraternity classes.

Discussion Clubs Planned

To further the college student's familiarity with his religion, the C.C.D. will conduct discussion clubs and panels on campus.

The Rev. George McLoughlin, O.S.A. regional N.F.C.C.S. moderator, and the Rev. Norbert Whitley, O. S. A., University Chaplain, granted the permission for organization of the campus chapter.

Chapters now exist at nearly all the Catholic colleges in the Philadelphia area.

Bob Merkert, appointed C.C.D. president, stated that only students sincerely interested in working for the organization need apply.

No Frustration Here

The game begins at 9 tonight. You should be there.

You can watch what may be the greatest team, inch for inch, in Villanova's basketball history.

The young Wildcats, pre-season selection for the frustration division, have posted a respectable 18 win record, and a second place finish in the tough City Series.

The basketball team will be in the underdog position tonight. They need and deserve all the help they can get. Madison Square Garden should resound with "Let's go, Wildcats."

But if victory eludes us, the ride home need not be one of mourning. The Wildcats made it to the Garden by overcoming inexperience, personal problems and injuries.

They have already accomplished that ideal of the Villanovan—student, athlete, scholar.

Senate Reduction Foolish

The Student Council will soon be presented with a motion to reduce the size of the senate by chopping down the number of organizational half votes.

This chopping, according to the group now preparing the motion, will give more opportunities to better fitted and more interested student council members.

The result of this motion. they say, will be a smaller but tighter and more dedicated student senate cleared of the dead wood of disinterested organization members.

The VILLANOVAN oposes this proposal. We do not see any advantage in a reduced size council, but rather see a potential clique control, so much to be dreaded.

If student government gets into the hands of a few, then the student body, lacking organizational representation, will ignore the student officers as just "another" group talking politics.

Rather than a reduced student senate, we need a more active student body. This cannot come through legislation, only through school loyalty.

Letters

To the Editor:

In regard to remarks made in Jack Curtin's column (Mar. 4 VILLANOVAN), I feel it necessary to reply to this seemingly biased commentary on the personal note received by Gerald McGrath from me. I feel that Jack Curtin is guilty of the same poor judgment that was exercised by fellow student council member, Gerald McGrath.

At the Student Council meeting of Feb. 25, McGrath deliberately cast unwarrented and unprecedented aspersions regarding the fidelity of my attendtnce at student council and senate meetings.

For his information, I had a legitimate excuse for my absence which I'm quite willing to give if he will exercise the courtesy of an inquiry. And, regardless of this fact, it was not his place to act in this manner.

For general information, the resident sophomore vote had, up to this time, never been left unrepresented in a Student Council Meeting. Also a competent alternate had been appointed and been given my letter and instructed how to vote. Unfortunately, he was unable to attend and did not inform me of the same.

My thanks to Soph Class President, Bob DiLisa, who was gentleman enough to remind McGrath that he was out of line.

To the Editor:

I certainly feel congratulations are in order to Mr. Desfosses for pointing out the drive which is behind the idea of "Beatnikism."

This is the fear of order, discipline and responsibility, the very same factors which give value to our own education. This fear can be prompted by only one thing — laziness, the easy way out which requires no effort, no mental strain, but simply sitting, sipping, and "thinking."

This question seems to have an important bearing on religion. Our Lord preached the way of discipline and self-sacrifice—the course of the great saints; the Beatniks either are unaware of this idea. or prefer to turn their backs on it, thinking that if they hide the idea long enough, it will eventually disappear.

I resolved in September never to write sports on the editorial page but . . .

Don't we fell sad that LaSalle didn't get a tournament bid?

Why doesn't Villanova get some cheerful cheer leaders?

How fast can you really travel on the New Jersey Turnpike?

Can we make hot dogs and beer in the Garden our Lenten lunch?

I resolved in September never to publish UNCONFIRMED reports on the editorial page but . . .

All Villanova basketball games next year are scheduled on one long three week period.

St. Joseph's offered Villanova all their "Tony Jackson chews Sen-Sen signs."

All classes have been called off tomorrow.

There will be no charge for Villanova students in various New York beverage houses tonight.

I resolved in September never to reveal secret information on the editorial page but . . .

Villanova takes care of sports writer better than any other local college.

Local sports writers root for Villanova more than they root for any other local college.

The 'Cats will try to extend their conquests to the Chicago area in 1960 when they meet Loyola and DePaul.

Villanova expects a bid to the Dixie Classic in Raleigh, N.C., the same year.

I resolved in September never to predict on the editorial page but . . .

More than a thousand Villanovans will make the trip to the Garden tonight.

About an even dozen will get speeding tickets on the Turnpike.

Class cuts will set a record high tomorrow.

Villanova will beat St. John's.

The editors of the VILLANOVAN, welcome letters on current topics expressing student views.

By BOB BROTHERS

BROTHERS

Sometimes when I am typing a term paper or a story for the VILLANOVAN, I get just plain bored. I don't mind writing, but I hate typing. To top it off I spend 40 hours-a-week behind a typewriter for a Phoenixville newspaper. Heavens, the boredom of just sitting here, plunking at the same old typewriter keys all the time.

My typewriter has all sorts of fascinating keys on it besides letters, periods (.) and commas (,) but one hardly ever uses them.

Brother's Awed at Progress

Here's a key that ordinary typewriters don't have, ! . I'll bet you thought there was nothing unusual about that exclamation mark, but there is. On your typewriter you have to hit an aposrophe like this ! , then back-space, like this (well, you can't see it, but I did back-space), and then hit a period (.) On my typewriter I have a special key for exclamation marks !!!!!!!! This is progress, don't you think? What a fine key.

Back in high school we learned to type doing a; sldkfjgghfjdksla; while Sister played Ravel's Bolero in the background. Then she gave us the following sentence for practice in manipulating all the keys: Max hid Claire's eclair in Mabel's ink well, while the nasty, nosey little ant-eater jumped joyously through the soggy bagel.

Goodies on Top

All the good keys seem to be on the top of the keyboard or just at the side. Here they are. "#$%&'()*¼c?½% # How interesting. It looks like cuss words. And that's fine with me. Larry O'Rourke censors the Villanovan, but he won't sensor this.

Now is my chance to be perfectly frank. Here's what I think of people who don't like my stories. A bunch of "?%-#-(¼@)?% !!!!'s. Really looks vile, doesn't it? Actually, I wasn't thinking of anything at all. I was just hitting keys.

He Thinks of Himself

There are all kinds of levers and knobs on this machine that I haven't mentioned, but I have no idea what they are for. I'm afraid to touch them or I might break the machine, and it's not paid for yet. In fact, Wannamaker's wants it back. Probably you have wondered what all those knobs and levers are for too. I could find out and tell you, and then you'd know without having to go to all that work yourself, but I'd have a broken typewriter.

I guess I won't touch any of the knobs. I have to think of myself sometimes. Sometimes I have trouble thinking of something else; I'm so interesting. I just said that so I could use a semi-colon (;). I hardy ever use semi-colons. ;;;;;;;;

But enough of this. My typewriter has a red ribbon too. Very nice, isn't it? It also has a white ribbon, or at least there's a white dot by this red one. I'll try it.

Desfosses Defended?

By RAY QUAGLIA

QUAGLIA

I certainly agree with Mr. Desfosses' article in last week's VILLANOVAN; I think Beatniks are atrocious. Why just the other day I was told of three Beatniks in my poetry course. I was horrified! Louis, they're even here! Incognito of course, hiding their "bearded tossle headed, slovenly" selves beneath a bland exterior; but you said, they were aching to "scream out against order," and "to insult mankind." (One even sat and swayed . . . probably nostalgic for his bongo drums.)

A Call to Arms!

I'm glad someone senses the imminent danger. Although "small souled" and "in small groups," they should be stopped immediately. Since they are "insulting mankind by their very presence," and "seek to trap those unaware" and have "filthy ideas," let's band together and purge society of this "excrement."

We must strike the root; burn all the art produced by the French Impressionists, as they do nothing but "paint the dirt and filth of Paris." We must wipe out the mystical trans-Atlantic communication between France and San Franciso. (Even though totally different movements, Mr. Desfosses agrees that excrete Satanic ideas.)

Nihilism Necessary

Perhaps we will destroy a few dozen sincere artists, but no more I'm sure. Art withstood more serious setbacks. I needn't be well informed. So long as I can pick up one off-color book, see one odd character playing bongo drums, see the work of one French painter, who although I know little about painting, appears "dirty" to me, I feel justified in condemning the entire movement and asking the forceful removal of all Beatniks from society.

Let's put them on an isolated island, take away their brushes, pens and paper and hope they soon die. Perhaps the evil is in the hanger-on and not at all associated with the Beat Generation but we have too little time. Let's make a clean sweep of everyone who is non-conforming; they're all beat anyway. Hurrah for Mr. Desfosses!

C and F Eastern Movement Threatens V.U. Tranquility

SPEERS

By BILL SPEERS

Go East young man, go East! What's East? Why the C and F Building, of course. What's the C and F Building? Well on Parents' Day it was acclaimed as the most beautiful and modern on the Eastern seaboard. It is here in this ultra-modern edifice, that the "select" of the Villanova campus receive the knowledge of the ages.

The C and F Building was opened last year to house the overflowing Business majors. The arts students promptly received the C and F hand-medown, while the engineers continued to confine themselves to Mendel Hall, one of the oldest building on the campus.

The C and F student is a real study. He drives himself to school, each morning, parks his car some fifty yards from the C and F building's main entrance and there he remains for the entire day. Around 12:30 or 1:30 p.m., whatever the case may be, our C and F'er makes his way to the parking lot, and is neither seen nor heard from until 10 or 11 the next day.

It's not uncommon to run across a C and F'er who has yet to be beyond the eastern boundaries of Dougherty Hall or who thinks that John Barry Hall is the vice-president of the First National Bank. In fact, we heard of a society which is in the process of being formed, down at C and F, that will attempt to acquaint the out going seniors with the eastern half of the campus.

Tours Slated

For a period of one week a University guard will conduct daily guided tours Past Dougherty, all the way down to Fedigan Hall, and around the Library.

The organization seeks to save the C and F seniors from embarassment on graduation day, when they take their family on a final tour of the V.U. campus.

Lately, it has been noticed, though, that the enormous size of the Villanova campus, could prove to be physically detrimental to the C and Fers' health Naturally, definite measures have been taken to prevent such an occurence.

Earlier this year a cafeteria was opened in the C and F Building, in order to save the C and Fers' the daily trek to Dougherty Hall. Now an attempt is being made to install a voting poll in the basement of Sheehan Hall, so that C and Fer's won't have to walk all the way up to Alumni Hall, the traditional voting poll, which is all of 150 yards from the C and F building.

This move is thought by many to be a wise one since the general elections are coming up and quite a few C and Fer's have yet to find out what or where Alumni Hall is.

Campus To Change

It must be quite evident by now, Villanovans, that the C and Fers are the "elite,,' the "select",just the "the". And by the time school opens next year, rumor has it that the entire campus will be changed around in order to make the C and F Building the center of campus activity.

The rumor states that the Chapel will be moved to the Sheehan Hall site while Dougherty Hall will assume the present position of Sullivan Hall. Sheehan and Sullivan will be moved to the Chapel and Dougherty Hall sites, respectfully. Also the roof of the C and F cafeteria will be raised and a basketball court and ping-pong tables will be installed.

So the movement's East-do they have that we don't have. I don't know maybe it's "Commerce and Finance."

A Tear For Recess

By DON KEMPF

"What's your favorite subject at school?" I asked my eleven year old brother one day. "Science," he said and a smile came to his face, "I love science."

"Science!" I said in disbelief and horror, "you should be ashamed of yourself. Why if anyone would have asked me what my favorite subject was when I was eleven years old, I would have said 'recess.'" (I probably would then have poked the asker in the ribs and said, "Get it; recess isn't a subject at all"—but I didn't tell my brother that.)

"Why, do you know," I continued, "we didn't even have science class when I was in grade school?"

"We're having it for the first time this year," he replied, "it's taking the placc of recess."

Kempf's Staggered Again

I could say nothing. My heart was broken. Another of my clay idols had crumbled. I couldn't believe it.

Recess is dead I thought, and shed a tear at its passing. Maybe I had said it in jest—but recess really was my favorite part of the school day. You could learn so much during recess.

I mean there were so many important things to settle during recess; like who was the fastest runner in the fifth grade and how we could beat the sixth graders in football and just how tough a guy General MacArthur was and whether we'd meet at Tommy's or Bill's after school and stuff like that.

Rankled by Rosemary

I remember when I was in third grade I was madly in love with a second grader named Rosemary. I used to run down to the lunchroom every day when the recess bell sounded and wait for her to arrive so that I could tell her that she was "My Girl." I don't know why, but every time she came into the lunchroom I would get nervous and run out to the playground before she came to my table.

We didn't have one of those fancy, expensive playgrounds like they have today with steel swings and gymnastic sets and asphalt and all. We just had an empty lot with a few elm trees and a big oak on one side.

Maybe we couldn't build strong bodies on parallel bars, but we could play Run Sheep Run and Stick Ball and pitch pennies and things like that.

Science Over Midnight

When you think about it though, I guess it was a waste of time. I mean why compare notes on what secret code Captain Midnight gave on the radio last night when you could have spent the time learning science. Why today this country is in great need of scientists. Maybe if they had science instead of recess when I was in grade school we wouldn't be so far behind the Russians today in scientific discoveries.

But then, up until a year or so ago, think of how far behind us the Russians were in recesses.

Study Methods Formulated by Aquinas

By DR. BENEDICT A. PAPARELLA

Editors Note: . . . Dr. Paparella is a member of the Villanova University Department of Philosophy.

In virtue of his philosophical and theological works, St. Thomas Aquinas presented to the world an unequal inheritance of great wisdom. The revolutionary achievements and advancements of modern science and technology have not invalidated the truth as found in the works of the Angelic Doctor.

Indeed, St. Thomas spoke the truth for his age; but his penetrating understanding, his power of analysis and synthesis, his radiance of insight and foresight, his adaptablitiy in the application of his tremendous store of knowledge, his inherent traits of genius, these are his everlasting gifts and bequest to all men of all ages. The wisdom of the Holy Doctor is easily found in his writings; it but remains for us to extract it and adapt it to present day needs.

Fitting to Pay Homage

On March 7 of each year, study and make easy his approaches to knowledge. Apropos to this concern, we present an exposition of a small work of St. Thomas on the method of study entitled, "De Modo Studendi." The translation is rendered freely in parts in order that the meaning will be more in keeping with the English of the present day.

Step to Knowledge

Ever willing to impart his immense knowledge to those who would ask, the Angelic Doctor, in answer to a letter from John of Piperno as regards an easy and certain method of acquiring wisdom, sets down a number of steps to be followed by a student, if he is to gain the treasures of knowledge.

The plight of the student of St. Thomas' day in seeking to know the fastest and least painful method of acquiring wisdom is just as timely, if not more so, in the present day of "speed and space." In his brilliant style of synthesis, St. Thomas sets forth the following point whereby a sure and efficacious means of acquiring wisdom is had:

1. One should not plunge directly into the open sea of knowledge, but rather he should approach by way of small streams.
2. One should approach the difficult by way of related easier things.

the feast of this great Doctor of the Church, it has become the custom in many places of learning that subjects of import as found in St. Thomas' works are revitalized and subjected to discussion. Hence, it is only fitting that we pause in the preoccupations of our study and learning to pay due homage to the Patron Saint of all Catholic universities, academies, colleges and schools.

The student is ever eager for any advice or device that might lighten his burden of

3. Think before you speak; and be slow to enter into the general discussion.
4. Hold fast to a pure conscience.
5. Allot a certain time to prayer.
6. If you would be called men of intellectual worth, then keep to your rooms and tend to your immediate duties.
7. Endeavor to be pleasing to your fellows.
8. Be not concerned with what others do.
9. Be not too familiar with anyone, for familiarity breeds contempt and is the occasion of distractions from study.
10. Do not involve yourself with the deeds and sayings of worldly men.
11. Avoid aimless and listless wanderings about.
12. Follow in the footsteps of virtuous and hold men.
13. Be not concerned with "by whom" a thing is said; but whatever of value is said, commit it to memory.
14. Whatever you might acquire in learning, be certain it is understood, resolving any doubts that might arise.
15. Strive after knowledge of things as one who would fill a container to its capacity.
16. Do not seek those things which are beyond your capabilities. Follow these things and you will become a useful and gifted person in the vineyard of the Lord. Again, following these things, can attain to what you aspire.

Thus, in his wonderful way of communicating knowledge, St. Thomas advises his student and friend on some of the particular ways of acquiring wisdom. No great methodological nor pedagogical techniques are employed, rather a simple listing of rules of self-discipline are presented whereby a student might see himself in the proper perspective of academic life.

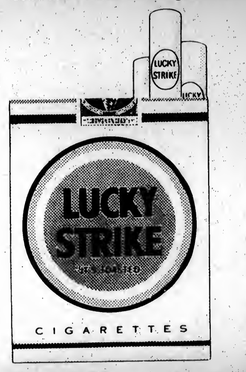
Prudence Necessary

In this letter St. Thomas exhibits his fine principles of teaching, viz., clearness, brevity, utility, sweetness and humility. It is not difficult to see in these admonitions that there is a communication of his own cast of mind to his student, John.

The approach to knowledge then is one of caution, one of prudence and one without haste. In the swim of knowledge, we must not jump "mind first" into the pool of truth; rather we must be cautious, prudent and ever willing to concentrate with a fixed attention upon the immediate tasks of learning by way of small streams of knowledge.

Time for the Spiritual

We must also be mindful that amid the many mediatations required for learning, we must allot time for spiritual meditations as well. There is a definite need for virtue, not only as regards the mind and conscience, but as a means of being pleasing to one's fellow. We must keep within our own limitations of intellect; yet, we must seek after knowledge as though we would fill our minds to capacity.



Whether or not John did heed the advice of so wise and profound a thinker and teacher as St. Thomas, we can only surmise. To give advice is a very explosive thing; for usually only if the given counsel is in keeping with the already fixed opinion is it considered of any worth. It can only be hoped that some of you will observe the counsel of St. Thomas.

Middle East Talk Heard In History Lecture Series

Dr. Fred J. Khouri, assistant professor of political science, spoke yesterday before the Law School on "The United States in the Middle East".

Khouri is a student of U. N. affairs. He specializes in relationships involving the Middle East and the powers of the U.N.

Khouri earned his Bachelor of Scienco degree at Columbia in 1938. One year later, he was awarded his Master's Degree in Science. He received his doctorate from Columbia in 1953.

Recognized as an expert on the Middle East, Khouri has lectured before the World Council and countless civic and fraternal organizations.

In 1958, Khouri conducted a research trip to the Middle East and was present there during the "Middle East Crises". He toured Turkey, Syria, Jordan, Iraq, The Gaza Strip, Israel, and Lebanon. On this tour, he interviewed the top political leaders of the above mentioned countries with the exception of Turkey.

Khouri has been a member of the University's faculty for the past eight years.

Pie Shoppe Characters

By MARY LOU SCANLON

Of all the courses offered at old V.U. Shoppe 101 seems most popular. Enrollment consists of 100% of the "brown-baggers" and a menace of resident students. It offers lectures by BMOC's, discussion periods of the food situation in the resident's cafeteria and a lab here and there on the art of eating. Best of all, everyone enrolled in the course gets an "A" in attendance.

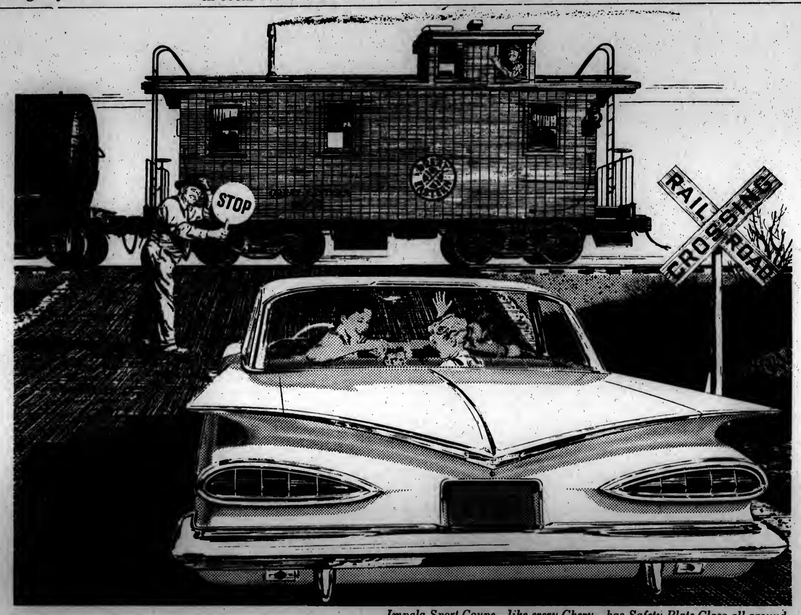
It is not so much the atmosphere but rather the people one meets and the activities that go on that makes this a favorite elective.

In the ranks one will always find a BMOC who may be distinguished by his bustling gait and his folders of notes on any and every activity on campus. He's the liason between the LMOC (little men on campus) and the faculty. He prides in announcing over the P.A. system and having the inside dope on just about everything.

What, No Poets?

The scholar can be spotted under the T.V. set behind a stack of calculus, chemistry and physics books. He is not so easily found as he is in the minority group.

We have larger groups that apparantly have reserved seats for this special class. They may be members of a varsity team or classmates in a certain school.



On ROTC day blue uniforms dot the room, and a not too unfamiliar line, "And on our summer cruise . . . ," can be heard. It seems as though we get a lot of that white stuff called snow on these days.

Jimmy's Pressure Felt

In the Pie Shoppe extra-extra-curriculars flourish. One may buy tickets to the coming social events, get a ride to a local girl's college, copy homework, borrow matric cards, solicit rides home, plan parties, cram, get dates, watch "The Three Stooges", fill in food polls, have handwriting analyzed by Psych majors, "borrow" cigarettes, watch one's lunch being thrown in the trash, and lose raincoats.

Since this course is so wide in scope and offers much opportunity for exhibiting and learning talents, many, on completion of just one semester, choose to major in it. Others having learned the rudiments of bridge and a smooth line, choose to transfer credits to Teahouse 102. (Here they matriculate in experiments they have learned in 101 lab).

We do not lose those students for too long, for, having passed the finals at Rosemont, they choose to return to the Villanova campus as teachers to the Frosh and thus complete the never ending cycle of Pie Shoppe 101.

Impala Sport Coupe—like every Chevy—has Safety Plate Glass all around.

Chevy stops quickest ... goes farthest on a gallon!

Chevy showed the best brakes of the leading low-priced three in a test of repeated stops at highway speeds conducted and certified by NASCAR*. Chevy also won over the other two in a NASCAR economy run—with the highest gas mileage for 6's and V8's at cruising speeds of just over 55 miles an hour.

Here's a car that knows how to get the most out of a gallon. And it's the only car in its field to bring you hydraulic valve lifters in all popular engines—6 and V8. This means smoother, quieter performance for you.

There are many other advances just as fundamental as the efficiency of Chevrolet's engines and the dependability of its new brakes (with more lining area than any other low-priced car). But why not stop by your dealer's and let Chevy do its own sweet talking!

Law School Dinner Monday Night

Villanova Law School will hold its sixth annual dinner at the Commerce and Finance cafeteria next Monday.

Throughout the afternoon, students and faculty will receive interested dinner guests desirous of visiting Garey Hall, the Law School building.

The Honorable Horace Stern, former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and the Honorable Anne Alpern, Attorney General of Pennsylvania, will be honored guests.

The Honorable Gerald F. Flood, President Judge of Common Pleas Court Number Seven, will serve as toastmaster.

Chief Justice Raymond S. Wilkins will speak on some of the great men who have graced the Supreme Judicial Court during its long history.

The progress of the Law School during the previous year will be given by Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein.

Awards for academic excellence will be given at the dinner.

Matthew J. Ryan, chairman, is president of the Student Bar Association which sponsors the dinner.

Other notable guests who will be present are: Dean Benjamin F. Boyer, Temple University; the Rev. John J. Curran O.S.A.: the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A.; the Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Vice Dean Theodore H. Husted, Jr., University of Pennsylvania, the Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., and the Rev. Norbert W. Whitley, O.S.A.

'Cats Intend To Win Tonight, Severance Tells Knights

By LAWRENCE M. O'ROURKE

"We're going to the Garden with every intention of winning," basketbal coach Al Severance told the Knights of Columbus last week.

Severance was guest speaker at the K. of C. Communion Breakfast at Stouffer's Restaurant last Sunday.

"With this bunch of great kids, who love to play basketball and have that deep desire needed for the big win. I think we have a fine chance against St. John's," Severance said.

"One thing this year's team has plenty of is that red muscle under the left rib," the coach told the more than 50 Knights present.

Hecklers Don't Count

Severance explained his philosophy o fcoaching and his opinion of hecklers.

"If at the end of the season the boys on the team have been able to win their share of games and learn something bigger than basketball doing it. we're satisfied," the coach said .

Dismissing critics, Severance said "I don't particularly care for the opinions of those who have never pulled a suit on in their lives."

The Squire, himself a fourth degree Knight of Columbus, termed the organization "the most respected on the Villanova campus."

"You are members of a group that is truly representative of Catholicism and Americanism," he said.

Council Grand Knight Eugene Powers, dean of the evenng division, warned the Knights of the growing threat to American education.

Lynx Pushes Drive For More Material

The drive for new material conducted by the Lynx for the spring issue of the magazine is progressing slowly and there is still a great need for copy of any type.

"We have all kinds of promises," editor-in-chief Frank Dynan stated, "but unfortunately we can't print promises. The only material we have to date is that written by the usual Lynx writers."

"That isn't to criticise our steady writers," Dynan added, "it's just that I don't think that this situation speaks well for the student body as a whole."

The deadline for the Spring issue is March 24. By that time the staff should have many more manuscripts to choose from, if the forthcoming issue is to be a good one, Dynan said.

Material will be accepted by Dr. John S. Phillipson and James J. Mitchell, Lynx moderators, in the English office, by Dynan, and by members of the Lynx staff.

1. Can you honestly say that you've made an effort to understand modern art? YES ☐ NO ☐
2. If you were to break a New Year's resolution, would you renew it on the spot rather than wait until next year? YES ☐ NO ☐
3. Would you be unwilling to play a single game of "Russian Roulette" for a million dollars? YES ☐ NO ☐
4. Are you fully convinced that the saying "Money does not buy happiness" is completely true? YES ☐ NO ☐
5. Would you be at all hesitant to rent a desirable apartment where the previous occupants had died under mysterious circumstances? YES ☐ NO ☐
6. If you were walking to town in a hurry, would you be unwilling to accept a ride in a garbage truck? YES ☐ NO ☐
7. Would you be reluctant to participate in an important medical experiment which, though not dangerous, would cause some discomfort? YES ☐ NO ☐
8. If you had an independent income sufficient for all your needs, could you be happy never to go to work? YES ☐ NO ☐
9. Can an extravagant claim make you switch from one filter cigarette to another? YES ☐ NO ☐

The truth is, thinking men and women aren't influenced by extravagant claims—especially when choosing a filter cigarette. They use their heads! They know what they want. They know that only VICEROY gives them a thinking man's filter . . . a smoking man's taste.

The Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, Villanova Library head, examines the newly procured microfiche machine which has been donated to the library by John Faraci, of the Class of 1942.

Microreader New Addition To Library Equipment

A special machine for reading microfiche has been donated to the Villanova Library, the Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, head of the Villanova Library has announced.

The machine, a Huygens Microreader, was part of a donation by John Faraci, a graduate of Class of 1942 in the memory of his father Marion C. Faraci.

In addition to the machine, Faraci also donated a set of microfiche cards to be used in the machine.

One of these microfiche cards is 3x5" and contains approximately 60 pages of a book.

The microfiche cards donated to the library are concerned with the history of Germany and Europe between the years 500 & 1500 A.D.

These particular cards are written in Latin and are primarly to be used as a principle source of material for graduate students.

The addition of this machine means that the library is now capable of preserving documents and magazines on microcards, microprint, microfilm, and microfiche.

According to Father Falvey, the system of preserving books on microfilm and microfiche is especially beneficial.

"The probability of damage to the book itself is eliminated he said.

"The microreader, which is made exclusively in Sweden, is one of the few in use by libraries in this country."

Dr. Yen On European Geological Survey

Dr. John T. C. Yen, professor of geology since 1957, has left on a six week tour of Europe for scientific research.

Yen will study the system of coal mines in England and the Low Countries in cooperation with the British, Netherlands and Belgium Geological Surveys.

Yen is investigating the Pennsylvania system, which is the term applied to the veins of coal that extend through the Northern Hemisphere and into Europe. The United States end of this system has not yet been thoroughly investigated.

After visiting Cambridge and Oxford Universities, Yen will return to Villanova, where he will assist the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in the discovery and better utilization of our coal deposits.

Pequinot Anxious For Alumni Plans

At a recent meeting of the representatives of the Student Liason Program, Mr. George Pequinot, Alumni Director, explained that the Alumni Association is anxious to foster stronger relations between undergraduates and the Alumni Association through club organizations.

Representatives are given the names of the presidents of Alumni clubs in their home area, and the representatives must then contact them and explain the aims and plans of the Student Liason Program.

It is hoped that by this means, stronger ties may be developed between present undergraduates and the Alumni. Plans for mutual activities between the two groups are also being formed.

Pequinot has urged all those representatives who originally signed up and have not reported, to visit the Alumni Office. He announced also that another meeting will be held in the near future.

National Catholic Fraternity Tours

The National Fraternity of Catholic College Students has announced a number of European tours, being offered to Catholic college students at reduced rates.

Four different itineraries are scheduled covering periods from minimum of 44 days to a maximum of 67 days. Each tour covers at least five different countries.

New features of this year's trips are parties, dances, and other social events for the travellers. These will be held under the auspices of Popular Tours, Inc. and Pax Romana.

New Philosophy Prof Named

Dr. Andrew G. A. O'Connor, has recently become a member of the Villanova Philosophy department, it was announced by the Rev. Robert P. Russell, O.S.A. Chairman of the department.

O'Connor was born in Montreal, Canada and received his education at Mont St. Louis, Loyola college, and McGill University of Montreal, and the University Baghdad, Iraq.

Before becoming a member of the Villanova faculty, O'Connor taught at McGill University, Loyola College, the University of Montreal and St. John's University in Brooklyn, New York.

He also taught at the College of Arts and Sciences, University of Baghdad (under the auspices of the Rockefeller Foundation) and was a member of the Islamic Institute at McGill University.

A man of varied interests, O'Connor's major academic study lies in the field of history of Medieval Philosophy and Sciences, with a special emphasis on Arabic and Jewish elements in the transmission of Greek learning to Latin Christendom.

Semper Fidelis To Be Addressed By Officer

The Semper Fidelis Society has asked Major John Rooney USMC, NROTC instructor, to speak tonight on amphibious warfare.

Last Thursday night, aproximaately 75 Society members and the general public viewed two Marine Cors World War Two movies entitled "Pelilieu" and "Tarawa."

Plans were made to start classes for PLCs who have not yet attended courses at Quantico, Virginia.

The classes will be given by senior PLC's who have had experience at Quantico, and will include nomenclature of small arms.

The whole is equal to the sum of its parts

(But some of its parts are more equal than others!)

Even Euclid had to admit...

It's what's up front that counts

Euclid proved that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points. And if you'll walk a straight line to the nearest pack of Winstons, you'll find it the shortest distance to a really enjoyable smoke. It's the tobacco up front that makes the difference and that's where Winston packs its own exclusive Filter-Blend—a special selection of light, mild tobacco, specially processed for filter smoking. You'll find Filter-Blend gives Winston a flavor without parallel. In fact, it's axiomatic that...

Belle Masque Dinner Dance Scheduled For Kostick's

Belle Masque, after a successful run of "Inspector General", announced the plans for its annual dinner at a meeting last Thursday.

Anyone who participated in either the fall or spring production is eligible to attend this affair, according to president Owen Klein.

Tickets Cost $6.50

The date is April 4 and tickets cost $6.50. It will be held at Kostick's at 69th and Market sts. in Upper Darby.

Anyone interested should see either Klein or Jerry McGrath.

At last week's meeting, senior pins and mugs were discussed.

There is an important meeting of the Society tonight at which a new constitution will be presented.

Important Meeting

"It is important that those who are interested in joining Belle Masque attend this meeting," said Klein.

Plans for next year's production will be discussed.

Because of the number of graduating seniors, all facets of the Belle Masque are being opened this spring to interested candidates.

Deadline April 6 Says Merkert

The deadline for articles for the May issue of "The Villanova Engineer" is April 6, announces editor-in-chief Bob Merkert.

Because this is the last issue for which the senior members will be on hand, Merkert asked that anyone interested in working for the "Engineer" next year, start in with this last issue .

The May number will be done mainly by the new editors who will have been chosen by that time. "It is far better", said Merkert, "that they make their mistakes now when the senior editors are on hand to correct them."

Immaculata Hosts Science Meeting

The Pennsylvania Catholic Round Table of Science will hold its 1959 spring meeting at Immaculata College on Saturday, April 11. The Round Table is a joint organization of teachers, staff members, and graduate science students affiliated with a Catholic school or institution.

Two sessions will be held at the meeting. The morning session will feature addresses by two prominent American scientists. Robert H. Marchessault, Ph.D., research associate for American Viscose Corp. will deliver the first address.

The second speech will be delivered by Daniel M. Lilly, Ph.D., chairman of the biology department and Scientific Research Board at St. John's University.

The afternoon sectional meeting in the different sciences for the college division, and a general session for the high school section.

Pakistani Group to Present April Festival

The Pakistan Students' Association will present a festival on Sunday, April 4, at 8:30 p.m. in the Irvine Auditorium, 34th & Spruce Streets.

The festival is planned in conjunction with the United Nations appeal for better world relations.

The evening will be highlighted with an address by his Excellency Prince Aly Khan, Pakistan Ambassador to the United Nations. Also, Mr. Horace Hildreth, the former American Ambassador to Pakistan will be on hand.

The festival is planned to stimulate better world relations, but in particular, better relations between the United States and Pakistan.

Interviews Still Held

Monday, March 16, has been chosen by the student council as a free day, all recruiting firms will retain their interviewing schedules.

Students who will not be on campus have been asked by the Placement office not to sign for interviews they cannot keep.

Senior who want to register for spring interviews can call at the lacement office, 144 Mendel, for additional instructions.

'Cats Practice for Redmen; Trounce Explorers 87-69

By JOE FITZPATRICK

The Wildcats won more than a game in defeating LaSalle 63-57, last Saturday night before 8596 noisy fans in the scason's finale at the Palestra.

Among other things, Villanova packed second place in the "Big Five" into their trunk before traveling to New York to meet St. John's in the NIT competition tonight.

The 'Cats also prevented any embarrassment on the part of the NIT selection committee, and in doing so they embarrassed some LaSalle sign makers (LaSalle had a sign that read "Explorers embarrass NIT officials.") Of course this was a reference to the fact that LaSal'e had been by-passed by the NIT.

Individually, Senior Joe Ryan, playing his last regular season game for Villanova, accomplished the most. Joe proved that playing a Philadelphia school before some 8000 hometown fans didn't bother him a bit.

The redhead led Villanova in every department. He grabbed 13 rebounds and shared the rebound lead with John Driscoll. Joe was 6-for-13 from the floor and 3-for-3 from the foul line to net him the game high—15 points.

Team Job

Ryan was everywhere at the right time, but this doesn't mean to say that he had to do a job alone. In fact the contrary would be far more accurate. The victory was a real team achievement.

Seven Villanovans took part in the fray which sent LaSalle reeling to last place in intracity competition. Four 'Cats hit double figures. Along with Ryan, who had 15, Jim Huggard had 12 and John Driscoll and George Raveling had 10 each.

Jim Kenny had seven points and Kenny Harrison, who replaced George Raveling when the latter got into foul trouble, had 9 very big points.

LaSalle's Bob Alden got the soring under way with a jumper from the Key. LaSalle then went on to extend their lead to 6-2 but then the Ryan-sparked 'Cats came roaring back.

Villanova scored 10 consecutive points and were never again headed by the Alneyites.

Villanova Zone Impenerable

The Explorers were faced with the same difficulty which has perplexed Villanova opponents all year—they couldn't pierce the Wildcat zone defense.

Ralph Bantivoglio and Joe Heyer brought the ball up court, but when they passed midcourt they met that great defensive team of Huggard and Kenny.

The two LaSalle little men could hit on only 10 of 35 shots, and more important, Huggard and Kenny prevented them from feeding LaSalle's big men, Alden and Herdelin. Bantivoglio and Heyer had only three assists between them.

Underneath the anticipated battle between Alden and Driscoll ensued. "Tweetie" won.

Once and a while Alden moved well and scored on good plays, but even the most inexperienced observer could not forget Driscoll, coming down with a rebound, tucking ball into his chest and throwing his elbows all over the Palestra to prevent the Explorers from marring his effort.

Unbiquitous John

Now and then Heyer or Bantivoglio might slip through the V.U. defense but they would only meet with frustration. There would be Driscoll, with his arms raised high in the air to prevent a shot—and prevent shots he did.

The LaSalle backcourt men would be forced to pass the ball back outside. Many times they would pass outside into the hands of Huggard, Kenny or Ryan.

The other big man, George Raveling, also did a tremendous job defensively.

George kept Bob Herdelin, usually LaSalle's top point producer, from scoring inside and he also prevented Hugh Brolly and Al Ferner from scoring from the corner.

Brolly and Ferner could muster only eight points between them, not enough to make the Villanova zone ineffective.

Offensively the Villanovans seemed to enjoy the Explorers' man-for-man defense. A good time was had by all but Huggard, Ryan and Kenny Harrison seemed to have the most fun.

Huggard Sparkles

Huggard drove around Bantivoglio as if he owned him. He threw his left handed hook, he dropped jump shots and some of his scoring underneath, on fat breaks and drives, made him look like Mandrake the Magician.

Seniors Ryan and Harrison seemed bent on going out in a blaze of glory—and that they did.

Ryan's scores came on long jump shots. Harry was having trouble hitting from outide, so he took to driving. He looked like the Harrison of old. His play was reminiscent of his sophomore activity when it was standard operating procedure to see him drive through the opponents entire team for an easy (easy for Harry that is) layup.

Raveling and Driscoll also got into the scoring frolic. Most of their counters came on taps from under the bucket but each hit on one jumper from the outside.

Jimmy Kenny scored only seven points but these came came when LaSalle was whittling down the Villanova lead and needed them the most.

Charley Stead seems to be partaking freely of some advice from Josh Culbreath, Philadelphia Pioneer Club, prior to winning the high jump title in last Saturday's Knights of Columbus indoor meet.

Three Swimmers In East. Championships

Three Villanovans are entered in the Eastern Collegiate Championships to be held this week.

Those entered are senior, Jim Gregory and juniors, Frank Keefe and Joe Harvey.

Gregory, a consistent standout for Villanova during regular season competition, will swim in both the 100 and 200 orthodox breaststroke competition.

Keefe a co-captain of the '58 Villanova swim team will be entered in the 100 and 200 backstroke.

Junior Joe Harvey will swim the 440 and 1500 meter freestroke in the post season competition.

Leaders Retain Positions In Intramural Bowling Race

For the second consecutive week the first-placed teams in each of the three intramural bowling leagues enhanced their holds on the first place positions.

In the Tuesday league Reds Morra and Gene Paja led the Quin-Caps in a 4-0 whitewashing the Boss Choice. The Yoo-Hoos moved into second place on the bowling of Paul Squiteri and Tom Ryan. The Yoo-Hoos defeated the Holy Rollers 3-1.

In other Tuesday league action the Saints held on to a tie for third place by beating the Winos in three out of four games. The Buffers won by forfeit over the 68ers to complete the days action.

On Wednesday the Pencil Pushers topped the Lowly Rollers 3-1 and the Chug-a-lugs tripped the Cathodes. The Knickerbockers won all four games from the last place Studs. The Hot Rockets rounded out the Wednesday bowling by defeating the Mainliners and gaining a point.

John McCarthy led the Munks to a 3-1 victory over fourth place the A.A. McCarthy bowled a 511 series which was backed up by Mike Carguilo's 485.

The A.A. was able to salvage a point on the efforts of Bob Debell who had a 454 series.

The upset of the day occurred when the third-placed Tigers clawed the second place King-Pins 3-1. Ron Bacovin paced the Tigers with a splendid 547 series, the winners also received support from Gene Corcoran and Sal Rico who rolled 510 and 501 repectively. Chuck Capone was high for the losers with a 460 series.

The fifth-placed Villanova A.C. had a relatively easy week as they won four points when the cellar-dwelling Holy Rollers failed to show up. The Villanova A.C. bowled for high average and Jack Mulhall was high man with 479 series.

Track Team Still Dazzles In 'Off' Year

By TOM GOLDSCHMIDT

Some Villanova tudents, spoiled by the record-breaking performances o fthe track team in recent years, have not paid much attention to the efforts of the 1959 squad.

But what they've failed to see is that in many ways this indoor season, now nearly completed, has been one of surprising success and improvement for Coach Jim Elliott's charges.

With just five men scoring points, the Wildcats came in fourth in the IC4A championships two weeks ago.

Then, in the past week, the track team added a few more laurels to its collection.

Charley Stead has to be one of the first names mentioned. After winning the IC4A high-jumping title, he came right back to beat George Dennis in the Knights of Columbus meet in New York on Saturday, jumping 6-8.

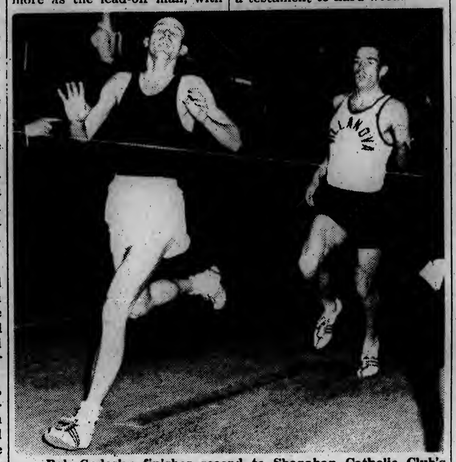
Fewer Misses

In the Milwaukee Journal meet on Monday, Stead again went over at 6-8, but Ernie Haisley, of Illinois, who jumped the same height, was awarded first place because of fewer misses.

From the improvement angle, however, the big story is the relay team. Joe Manion, Jim Blackburn, Nick DeAngelis and Ed Collymore came in a close second to Pittsburgh in the IC4A's, breaking the Garden record with 3:18.8 clocking.

There was a slight let-down in the Knights of Columbus meet. Manion failed to get the good jump on the rest o fthe field. Then, he got himself boxed in three different times and could not move up. Blackburn, Vic DiMaio and DeAngelis never were able to make up the deficit, as the Cats came in fourth.

But that was just a warm-up for the Milwaukee meet. In that one the Wildcats set a meet record, 3:17.8, as they beat Mid-West standouts Michigan and Illinois. In a change of strategy, Coach Elliott used Collymore as the lead-off man, with Manion, Blackburn and DeAngelis following in that order.



Only One Senior

What is so gratifying about the successes of the quartet is that only Collymore remains from last year. Blackburn is a junior and Manion and DeAngelis are sophomores. In seven weeks, the squad has chopped seven seconds off its time, quite a testament to hard work.

Collymore, tapering off after an arduous indoor season, came in a close third in the Knights of Columbus meet's 60-yard dash. He passed up individual competition in Milwaukee.

Bob Godesky came in sixth in a handicap 1000 in New York. He was the only man in the large field to run from scratch. In a trial heat during the afternoon, Godesky took second in 2:15.7, even though he again was the only man to run from scratch.

The freshman while relay team won a section of an AAU handicap club and college race. The quartet of Carl Wagner, Pat Nicastro, Bob Raemore and Bob Coffil did 3:21.1 off a 15-yard handicap.

Bob Godesky finishes second to Shanahan Catholic Club's Jack Fawcett in a 1000-yard trial heat in the Knights of Columbus meet. Godesky was the only man in the field to run from scratch. He finished sixth in the final, trailing runners who were given handicaps.

Entries For Softball Due Next Friday

The sound of "you need glasses, ya bum" will again echo across the Austin, Mendel, and Simpson fields a the intramural softball teams begin action on Thursday, April 2.

The entries for this perenial spring scramble must be in by March 20th and no late entries will be accepted. Aspirants may pick up their entries in Room 112 in Alumni.

Jizz A.C. the kingpins of intramural athletics are the defending champions and all varsity and freshmen athletes are ineligible to compete in softball. All teams will play at least one game a week.

Fifty future hopeful Ben Hogans have signed up for golf which begins with a qualifying round on April 6. Other entries contract John Gozo in 148 Sullivan.

Tuesday, April 28, has been announced as the date for this years Intramural Track meet. The running events will include the 100, 220, 440, 880, and mile and the broad jump, high jump and shot put in the field events. Entries are now being accepted in 313 Sullivan by Jim Klein.

The intramural horseshoes contest will begin April 13 and the championship tournament will begin April 21.

Thursday, March 12th, in the fieldhouse will be the scene for the intramural basketball championship game.

V.U. Rifle Team Edged

The varsity riue team concluded the regular schedule of matches last week. They traveled to New York where Manhattan edged them a heartbreaker Friday night by one point, 1380 to 1379. It was Villanova's lowest score of the season and Manhattan's highest.

The high man in the losing cause was Lou Spevetz, who had a 278. He was followed by Charley Russell and Frank Murthat, 277; Nat Coursey, 275 and Chris Kloss, 272.

Saturday, the Wildcats faced West Point and St. John's two of the best teams in the nation, in a triangular meet. Army took first honors, nipping the Redmen, 1433 to 1430. Villanova came up with a 1399 as they finished third.

Again Spevetz was top gun, shooting a respectable 284 out of 300 score. Kloss had a 282; Murtha, 281; Coursey, 277, and Russell, 275. Army remained unbeaten while St. John's dropped its second match in 22.

Two weeks ago, Villanova racked up their fourth win yy trouncing Georgetown, 1397 to 1377. Cris Kloss came through with a fine 286, Russell being close behind with 283. Others who scored for the Wildcats were Sevetz, 277; Murtha, 276, and Polizzotto, 269. Despite this win and victories over Western Marylond, St. Joseph's and LaSalle,, the varsity's final, regular-season record reads a mediocre 4 and 4.

Two tournaments remain—the National Intercollegiate championship, this Saturday, at Kings Point and the St. John's Invitational tournament, the following week.

In the only previous tournament competition, the Coast Guard Invitational, Villanova placed thirteenth out of twenty teams, with a 1385 total.

THE TRUE AND TYPICAL CASE OF CHATSWORTH OSCEOLA

You all know, of course, that every engineering senior is receiving fabulous offers from dozens of corporations, but do you know just how fabulous these offers are? Do you have any idea how widely the corporations are competing? Let me cite for you the true and typical case of Chatsworth Osceola, a true and typical senior.

Chatsworth, walking across the M.I.T. campus one day last week, was hailed by a man sitting in a yellow convertible studded with precious gem stones. "Hello," said the man," I am Norwalk T. Sigafoos of the Sigafoos Bearing and Bushing Company. Do you like this car?"

"Yeah, hey," said Chatsworth.

"It's yours," said Sigafoos.

"Thanks, hey," said Chatsworth.

"Do you like Philip Morris?" said Sigafoos.

"Of corris," said Chatsworth.

"Here is a pack," said Sigafoos. "And a new pack will be delivered to you at twelve-minute intervals every day as long as you shall live."

"Thanks, hey," said Chatsworth.

"Does your wife like Philip Morris?" said Sigafoos.

"She would," said Chatsworth, "but I'm not married."

"Do you want to be?" said Sigafoos.

"What American boy doesn't?" said Chatsworth.

Sigafoos pressed a button on the dashboard of his convertible and the trunk opened up and out came a nubile maiden with golden hair, flawless features, a perfect disposition, and the appendix already removed. "This is Laurel Geduldig," said Sigafoos. "Would you like to marry her?"

"Is her appendix out?" said Chatsworth.

"Yes," said Sigafoos.

"Okay, hey," said Chatsworth.

"Congratulations," said Sigafoos. "And for the happy bride, a pack of Philip Morris every twelve minutes for the rest of her life."

"Thanks, hey," said Laurel.

"Now then," said Sigafoos to Chatsworth, "let's get down to business. My company will start you at $45,000 a year. You will retire at full salary upon reaching the age of 26. When you start work, we will give you a three-story house made of bullion, complete with a French Provincial swimming pool. We will provide sitter service for all your children until they are safely through puberty. We will keep your teeth in good repair, and also the teeth of your wife and children unto the third generation. We will send your dentist a pack of Philip Morris every twelve minutes as long as he shall live . . . Now, son, I want you to think carefully about this offer. Meanwhile, here is ten thousand dollars in small, unmarked bills, which places you under no obligation whatsoever."

"It certainly seems like a fair offer," said Chatsworth. "But there is something you should know. I am not an engineer. In fact, I don't go to M.I.T. at all. I am a poetry major at Harvard. I just came over here on a bird walk."

"Oh," said Sigafoos.

"I guess I don't get to keep the money and the convertible and Laurel now, do I?" said Chatsworth.

"Of course you do," said Sigafoos. "And if you'd like the job, my offer still stands."

St. John's Expects to Scalp Cats

By TONY MACKLIN

"Any team can win it," St. John's stocky playmaer, said when asked how he felt St. John's would fare against Villanova in the NIT tonight.

"You've got to have luck." he continued. "Look at Xavier with a record of 14-10 won the tournament). You only have to put four good games together.

Villanova? You've got a good ball club. But you've got to get more out of your big men. Driscoll, is that his name? He's got to get up."

Alfieri toweled himself off and relaxed in the dressing room after St. John's had pulled out an inspiring last-second victory over NYU on a thirty-foot jump-New York sports writers called er by Tony Jackson in what the one of the most vicious games ever played in the Garden.

Self-Confidence

The Redmen play tough ball, they are rugged. They are a mature and experienced team and they believe in themselves.

They had won a good victory. They all knew it. Alfierio felt it: "We beat a good team. We were working the ball. We werent waiting for them, we were picking them up. We were all pulling together tonight.

Sure they made mistakes, we made mistakes too. But we came back. We made the breaks. We played together. This is a big Victory."

He returned to the subject of Villanova, "You've had a good season. We're seniors, this is it for us."

A New York city team is a class team. They have a certain quality that most other teams are lacking, a certain finesse. Allen Seiden exemplifies this. He is an All-American guard who exudes confidence. He feels ready.

They're Good—But

What of Villanova? "Ryan and Huggard are good. But we could go all the way," said Seiden. The tone of his voice as he said "could" made one feel he silently meant "will."

Tony Jackson is the newcomer to the team and is idolized by almost everybody in the Garden.

The little sophomore says, "Well, I think we can win the tournament. We'd like a crack at the teams who beat us last year. Any team is tough. You figure they're in the tournament. They must have done something to get there."

The man who probably will tell the story of wether St. John's does defeat Villanova is not a good shooter or a deft ball handler. He is mammouth center Lou Roethel and he must control the boards with Dick Engert to get the ball out to the three potent shooters.

Roethel also felt that the NYU game was more than a victory. "It's the same old story. If we lay together we win. We had a good streak going early in the season because we were playing together."

Ready to Move

"We were at our best in the St. Josph's games, particularly the one in Philly. We never played like that before or after. Then we had those bad games on the road (Losses to St. Louis, Loyola of Chicago, and Notre Dame). Now I think we're going to move again."

Everyone connected with St. John's seems to feel pretty much the same way about tonight's game. They had all seen the Wildcats on a bad night. (The 'Cats were more than humbled yy NYU, 78-60.)

Coach Joe Lapchick summed it all up. "You've got a good ball club and you had a bad night, an off shooting night against NYU. We've been playing badly for four weeks. We think we've finally snapped out of it."

St. John's is confident now. In some quarters they have been accused of dissension. Seiden is a "chucker," and when he guns Alfieri starts to shoot. With Seiden and Alfieri shooting Tony Jackson has to shoot.

This is the way they lose ball games. It is improbable that they will have any "lissension" problems in the NIT.

Veteran Club

The Redmen are an experienced ball club with four seniors and a sophomore in their starting lineup. They have tournament experience. They won the Holiday Festival in the Garden last December and split four games in last year's NIT.

Except for Jackson, they have played together for three years, and Tony has fitted in perfectly. This is a team that will probably win the tournament.

But they can be beaten. Coach Al Severance knows the task tat lies ahead of him. He waves his finger at Raveling and Driscoll going up for a rebound in practice. "The story of the games will be right there, underneath the boards. There's no question about it. We must get the second shot.

"And our little men must score. They gave us what? Ten points at the Garden. And they didn't hit against N.C. State. They have to give us the points, and Driscoll and Raveling must get the boards or it's all over."

Raveling Praised

How do the Cats shape up and how do they feel? On "Basketball Preview" Saturday afternoon over WRCV-TV, Jim Bonner called George Raveling "the most underrated player in the Big Five. "Herb Good, reporter for the Inquirer and president of the Sports Writers Association, agreed and said, "There is no question that Raveling has been a spark and his work under the boards has made the team what it is."

Veorge must be at his best tonight. He knows it. He thinks we can win. He may draw the big assignment of playing Tony Jackson. "I honestly yelieve I can hold Jackson under twenty. I belives I can stop him. As long as I do my job Ill be satisfied.

"You know, I have to vote for the team's most valuable player, and I have no idea who to vote for. Ryan is our shooter, and we couldn't get along without Kenny and Hugard—they're our playmakers—and then there's Driscoll and myself around the boards."

Balanced Squad

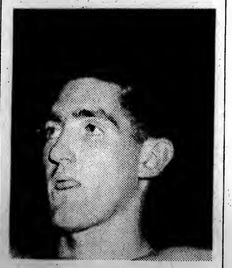
George's problem shows the balance that the Wildcats dop ossess. They do not have any one really outstanding player, an All-American St. John's has two, Sieden and Jackson.

Joe Syan plays well in the Garden. In his sophomore year, he scored thirty points and in the NYU game he hit twenty to impress the New York fans. This is Joe's swan song. It's bound to be a good one, maybe even a great one.

Jimmy Huggard, sparkling soph guard, says: "We're due to break out, to get really hot." St. underneath as we are."

Johns—they're not as tough

The real key tonight seems to be John Driscoll. He must fight off the boards as never before. If Driscoll goes up, the Redmen might go down.



The Wildcats have something in their favor. St. John's has only seen them at their very worst, when they were humbled by NYU. Villanova will be a fifteen point underdog. Psychologically, the 'Cats could surprise.

One of the Villanova players, when asked what he though about the school spirit, said, "It's lousy. If an NIT bid depended on it, we wouldn't be in the tournament."

It seems that loud student support in the Garden might be one of the answers to a Villanova victory.

Scouting Report

ST. JOHN'S

No.	Player	Class	Ht.	Wt.
33	Allen Seiden	Sr.	5-11	170

Seiden is Captain of the Redman and has been chosen on all the major All-American teams. He was high scorer last season with a 20.4 norm and this year has averaged 23. He is seventh among all-time leading scorers. Brash, fiery, he wants to dominate play. He possesses an excellent jump shot and his devasting quick-starting drives make him a potent threat at all times.

11 August Alfieri Sr. 6-2 210

Gus Alfieri is the smart player of the team. Teaming with Seiden in the backcourt he gives St. John's one of the best running and shooting combinations in the country. Stocky, heavy-legged, he is a bull on drives and is equally adept at handing off an assist or making the layup. He can pick up the team when it is down with his sharp playmaking. Gus was second high corer on the team last year, and has averaged 14 this year.

34 Louis Roethel Sr. 6-6 220

At center for the Redman is a mammouth, bespectacled Lou Roethel. Lou is big and slow but is an important cog in the St. John's machine. It is his job to control the boards and once he is situated under the boards it is almost impossible to budge him. Although he does not possess too great an artillery of shots he has a fine hook and is dangerous underneath. He is the leading rebounder on the club.

4 Richard Engert Sr. 6-5 195

Along with Roethel, it is Dick Engert's prime purpose to get the ball off the boards and out to the shooters. He is a valuable asset to the Redmen for his rebounding skill. He does not score too often but can hit with a one-hander. Hawk-like, he is a fine defensive player and a good hustler. He ranked second to Roethel in rebounds last year and has pulled down for an average of this year. He has scored points a game this season.

24 Tony Jackson Soph. 6-4 190

A future All-American, Tony Jackson is one of the most popular players in New York. He is a crowd-pleasing type of ball player who can do everything—shoot, rebound, dunk, pass, and defense. A lean Negro, gifted with superb reflexes, he can hit with a jump shot from any place on the court. He is murderous off the refensive boards and will leap up to a bat down a one-on-one attempt by an opposing player. He has a soft touch and can excel in team play.

VILLANOVA

10 James Kenny Soph. 5-11 150

The unsung floor leader of the Wildcats is scrappy Jim Kenny. The coolest member of the team, his confidence and heady play keep the 'Cats moving in the clutch. He is an expert driver and a sharp set shooter. His speed and hustle have contributed to the strength of Villanova' zone defense. Kenny has averaged 11 points a game.

24 James Huggard Soph. 5-9 170

Teaming with Kenny in the backcourt, Jim Huggard is a flashy and exciting ball player who has averaged 15 points a game. Equally adept at driving or playmaking, Jim has a deadly jumper and a fancy-dan hook. Huggard never stops running and his hustle and desire make him a consistent threat whether on offense ordefense. When Villanova goes man-to-man Jimmy draws the assignment of stopping the top man on the opposing team.

52 John Driscoll Soph. 6-8 225

Key to the Wildcats is big John Driscoll. When he uses his height and fight, under the boards the Wildcats move. John has a good jump shot from around the key. He tends sometimes to get letdown and fails to make use of his height. Another problem that faces him is that he is susceptible to fouls; he has fouled out nine times this season, eight more times than any of his tteammates. But if he can improve his stamina and get angry he can handle anyone as shown by his first half performance against Richter of N. C. State.

40 George Raveling Jr. 6-6 210

Tough, spirited George Raveling is the leading rebounder on the Wildcats and the best shooter percentage wise. He has averaged 12 points and 16 rebounds a game. George is co-holder of the Palestra rebounding record due to his 28 rebound performance against Wagner. George is extremely dangerous from underneath but his worth is diminished if he can be sucked outside. He is a fine defensive player and is a battler oll the way.

14 Joseph Ryan Sr. 6-2 160

Captain Joe Ryan is Villanova's finest shooter and is a expert in all phases of the game. He excels in hustle and scores often on follow ups, jumpers, stabs and drives. The redhead is set to end his career after three years on the varsity. Late in the season, he has settled down to assume the scoring leadership of the ballclub and play a consistently good floor game. He is a fine rebounder for his height.

Pa. International Relations Clubs Convene at Villanova

Fifty-one representatives from the Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Clubs converged on Villanova last Friday, hopefully seeking to formulate a solution to the Arab-Israeli dispute.

Villanova this year was host to the convention, since Villanovan Clinton Chin was president of the P.A.I.R.C.

Four speakers represented partisan views which were about equally divided between Pro-Arab and pro-Israeli stands.

Opening the convention Friday night at the ultra-modern George Washington Motel in King of Prussia, Keith Wheelock discussed a "General Outlook of the Middle East." Wheelock is research assistant for foreign policy at the University of Pennsylvania.

The youthful speaker, whose sympathies were moderately pro-Israel, lamented that Egypt had diverted "68 percent of her cotton trade to the Soviet block, while a mere 15 percent goes to Western Europe. It was just the opposite three years ago."

Nassar Slipping

He deplored Nasser as an "empire-seeker" and advised the U. S. to refrain from any interference in the area. As for extending support to Nasser, "we are damned if we do, and damned if we don't. This is quite a dilemma."

Wheelock has visited the Middle East five times, having talked with Nasser, Ben-Gurion and other important officials of the area.

Saturday morning, Yaakov Morris, attached to the Israeli Information Office in New York, severely chastised the Arabs in a vehement statement of the Israeli position.

"There are two types of nationalism," he emphasized, "progressive and destructive. When the Arabs cease their destructive type, and demonstrate that they desire to live in peace, there will be a settlement of the problem."

Arab Viewpoint

The Arab speaker, Jamal A. Sa'd, of the Arab Information Center in Washington, displayed more poise than the Israeli, but was equally partisan, as he con-

Choral Fete To Be Held On Saturday

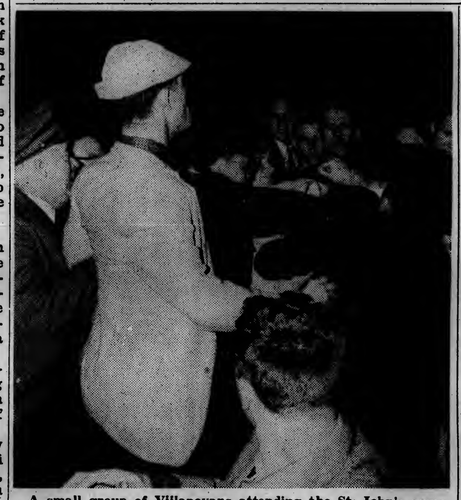
The Villanova Singers will appear in the fourth annual Choral Festival to be held at St. Joseph's College Field House this Saturday, at 8:15 p.m.

This year's Festival will also include appearances by the glee clubs of Immaculata, Chestnut Hill, Rosemont, Temple, St. Josephs and St. Peter's College of Jersey City.

The Festival was originated at Villanova four years ago and was transferred to St. Joseph's College for the past two seasons.

With its renewal each spring, the popularity of the Festival has grown. Last year's event was the most successful to date, and this year's is expected to draw a capacity crowd.

Each glee club will sing three numbers, and there will be a 20 minute intermission.



The concert will conclude with the singing of two joint numbers by members of the seven par-

C&F Polling Place Defeated Amidst Gales of Laughter

By THOMAS A. WOLF of the Villanovan Staff

A small group of Villanovans attending the St. John's game willingly assist in ejecting a St. John's rooter who tried to steal a Wildcat banner.

Student Congress chambers became a hectic arena last Wednesday as Sheldon Pollock, junion class president, unsuccessfully pushed his voting booth issue against overwhelming opposition.

Instead, Tom Hoffman's bill to locate the booths in classroom annex was passed.

Sparkling the session with frequent moments of hilarity, Pollock watched his recommendation for separate C and F voting machines get plowed under by a nearly unanimous vote.

Pollock voted against his own motion, which will allow him to ask for reconsideration of the motion at the next meeting. This he intends to do.

Two Polling Places

A C and F student himself, Pollock's recommendation called for two polling places: Alumni Gym, for arts and engineering students; and basement of Sheehan Hall for all C and F students. He amended this to allow anyone to vote either place.

The danger of multiple voting under such a system worried a few. Two suggestions to allay such fears were given by chairman Bob Murphy and Jerry McGrath.

"My plan is cheaper," announced Pollock emphatically.

His plan was for election officials to imprint on the hands of voters a mark visible only under ultra-violet lamps, which would be provided at a "nominal cost of $14."

Bob Wagner, secretary, objected that "the mark can be sweated off in two minutes."

"You cannot sweat the thing off," insisted Pollock.

Murphy Exhorts

The entire assembly appeared to be taking the issue lightly, and intermittant laughter was common as Pollock waded through innumerable notes in his hand while explaining the bill. Chairman Murphy exhorted him to "please be concise."

Freshmen and Sophomore Retreat To Begin April 22

The annual retreat for Villanova freshmen and sophomores will be held on April 22 through the 25.

The Rev. James B. Gallagher O.S.A., of Towanda, Pennsylvania and the Rev. William F. McDermott O.S.A., of Avoca, Pennsylvania, will serve as retreat masters.

Rev. James B. Gallagher, OSA.

Father Gallagher, who was ordained in Rome on July 29, 1928, will conduct the nurses' retreat in the Chapel. Father was formerly a member of the Villanova Philosophy Department.

Father McDermott will direct the male students' retreat in the Field House. Father McDermott was ordained in Washington D. C. on June 10, 1941. At one time he taught at the St. Augustine High in San Diego, California, but has since joined a Augustinian mission band.

Precedent Set

The Rev. Norbert A. Whitley, Villanova University chaplain, has stated that all those juniors and seniors who did not make their annual retreat during the first semester break will be required to do so at this time.

This year marked the first, that students were permitted to make their retreat before the time set for the annual freshmen-sophomore date. Through the efforts of the Rev. William Farrell O.S.A. and Father Whitley, arrangements were made for resident students to make their retreat on weekends in an out of town retreat house.

During the last three weeks some 150 students have journeyed to a Blackwood, New Jersey retreat house where they complete their annual obligation.

Father Whitley reminds students of the unusual graces offered to them during the retreat. Confessions will be heard each day of the retreat and on the final day of the retreat a general communion will be administered to the freshmen and sophomores in a body.

The concluding exercises will convene on the evening of the 25, with benediction and exposition of The Most Blessed Sacrament. The parents and friends of all the retreat making students are invited to assist, at this closing exercise.

Villanova Receives National Science Aid

Villanova received the largest share in a total of $76,260 granted six of the greater Philadelphia colleges and universities by the National Science Foundation.

The university received $23,500, given in order that off-hour institutes may be conducted for secondary school teachers of science and mathematics in the 1959-60 school years.

Other schools to receive grants were the University of Pennsylvania, Temple University, Bryn Mawr College, Immaculata College and Lincoln College.

Belle Masque Adopts New Constitution

Belle Masque Society met last Wednesday and, after three hours of debate, adopted a new constitution.

Designed to make Belle Masque one of the strongest and best-governed societies on campus, this constitution was drawn up by Gerry McGarth, the organization's Student Council Representative.

The document is so developed that the organization is strenghtened internally, and the University and its students are assured of having one of the finest local dramatic societies.

"We have a good reputation to maintain and enhance," said President Owen Klein, "and this new development will certainly insure this."

Under the new constitution it is possible for more members to become active in each production, and for the organization to plan as far as one year ahead.

President Klein also discussed the Dinner Dance to be held in April, and the purchase of mugs by members.

Belle Masque also announced that a one act adaption of a scene from "Diary of a Country Priest," done by Director Richard Duprey, would be presented sometime in April.

Directed by Assistant Director Richard Kavanaugh, the cast consists of John McGarry, sophomore Arts, and Mary Shaefer, sophomore at Immaculata College.

Business School Gets Recorder, Projector

The Rev. Joseph Bartley, O.S.A., dean of Commerce and Finance, announced today that a tape recorder and movie projector have been received in conjunction with the school's visual-aid training program.

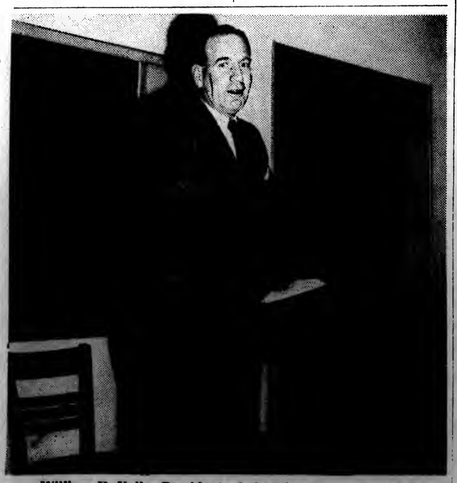
Father Bartley said that the recorder and projector will be used by the various departments for lectures in the C. and F. lecture room.

Starting soon, the school will show weekly movies on different phases of business and the business world.

Villanova cheerleaders assist the small but loud Villanova cheering section in Madison Square Garden during the Wildcats' 75-67 loss to St. John's University last week.

Zoning Study Published By School of Law

The Communities Research Institute project of the Villanova School of Law has announced publication of a study of zoning for minimum lot area.



The publication embraces a series of papers devoted to the topic at a symposium which took place at the School of Law in November.

In the celebrated Bilbar case the Pennsylvania Supreme court recently upheld a one-acre zoning ordinance.

The Villanova study—based in part on this case—attempts to evaluate large lot zoning and its legality from a number of different points of view.

Contributors to the study are attorneys Theodore O. Rogers, Walter W. Rabin, D. Barry Gibbons, and Professor John G. Stephenson, III, of the Law School faculty.

The project is under the directorship of William B. Ball, Professor of Law.

William F. Kelly, President of the First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Company, is shown speaking on "The Philosophy of Management", at last week's conference of the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Four Named to Off Stage Posts by Turf 'n Tinsel

Four students were named last week to make the behind the scenes preparation for Turf and Tinsel's spring production of "Piper Heidseck 98".

Mike Axt was appointed business manager; Ford Prime, Advertising Chairman; Jim Mayer, public relations director, and John Canavan, publicity chairman.

These men will share responsibilities of preparing the arrangements for opening night.

Andy Lohr, head of the stage crew, is responsible for a major part of the success of the production. Lohr, along with Jack McIntyre, Ed Currall, Hap Georges and Ed Paulson, have the task of intergrating the cast and the "light-footed" dancers.

Rev. Henry Syvinski, O.S.A., along with Herbert Fisk, director of the band and glee club, is organizing the orchestra.

The stage settings this year will include scenes of the Main Line, Vienna, Paris and London.

"This is a greater concentration task than ever before attempted," said Gary Tackus, president of Turf and Tinsel.

Red Cross Thanks Student Blood Donors

The American Red Cross has thanked Villanova students who contributed blood during the recent campaign.

However, the total of 248 pints obtained by the Bloodmobile did not meet the established quota.

Part of this deficit resulted from cases of colds and the flu among the student body. Ninety prospective volunteers, however, failed to keep their appointments.

Prof to Sponsor Symposium Tonite

The Villanova University Chapter of the American Association of University Professors will sponsor a symposium on "College Teaching as a Career," tonight at 8, in the reading room of John Barry Hall.

The discussion will be led by a panel of speakers, consisting of Dr. Albert H. Buford of the English department, Dr. Donald A. Gallagher of the Philosophy department and Dr. Cyrus J. Sharer of the Geography department.

The meeting will be open to students, according to Jerome J. Fischer of the English department, and president of the local chapter of the A.A.U.P.

Cash Refunded As Council Plan Fails

The student directory will not be published and the $250 already collected was returned last week according to Bill Christmann, chairman of the student activities committee.

The directory had been on sale for the past six weeks and only 500 students made deposits. This is only one-seventh of the student body.

This lack of student interest was one of the main reasons for the abandoning of the directory.

If the committee were to order the 500 copies, the price would have had to be raised to $1.35 per copy. This was due to certain fixed costs established by the publishers.

Those who made initial deposits were able to pick up their 50 cents in the Student Council office last week.

Christmann expressed his feelings toward the directory by stating that "the directory was offered as a service to the students, and that the majority of the students did not accept the offer."

Christmann also thanked the rest of the men who worked on the committee.

Society Views Film

Alvin Pederson, manager of the Philadelphia office of Arthur Anderson and Co., presented a film entitled "Inflation in the Business" at the Accounting Society meeting last Thursday.

The film dealt with the recognition of inflation in the accounting records of business enterprise, and of society in general. After the film, Pederson answered questions regarding the topic.

The film emphasized that in the accounting statements and business record 1939 dollar should not be mixed with today's dollar.

Wolf Picked To Edit Junior Week Edition

Thomas Wolf, Arts junior, has been selected to edit the Junior Week issue of the VILLANOVAN, to come out on Mothers Day.

"Twelve people have already promised articles," said Wolf, "but we need at least three more feature writers if we want our issue to be on a par with past issues."

Working in cooperation with class president Sheldon Pollock, Wolf expects to commence layouts for the edition right after Easter vacation. He repeated that the paper needs more writers.

Jim Murray, Arts, will be sports editor, and Al Lawler will supervise photography. In other admnistrative positions are John Williams, Arts, and Lou Desfosses, C and F.

Marines Get Lectures On Quantico Program

The Semper Fidelis Society, in keeping with its Marine Corps Officer training program, is holding weekly movies and lectures based on the program taught at Quantico, Virginia.

Since last Monday, interest PLC's have received training by Technical Sergeant John Mulcany, USMC, on the 22 calibre rifle. This will be followed by actual firing of the rifle at the Lower Merion Police Range.

Orientation lectures are being planned to be given by senior PLC's to underclassmen who have not yet received training at Quantico.

Psychology Club Elects Driscoll

James M. Driscoll was elected president of the newly formed Psychology Society at its first organizational meeting.

Joseph Abruzese was voted vice-president while John Connelly and Charles Kimnack were designated secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Also at this meeting, an honorary senior advisory board was appointed to sit with the elected officers as an executive committee. Named to the committee were Donald Anderson, William Walsh, Bernard Avelino, and Edward Hennessy.

The society, which is divided into three groups dealing with experimental, motivational, and Industrial psychology, will hold its next meeting tomorrow.

Unlimited Cuts Privileges Now Before Administration

The Student Congress last Wednesday voted to approach the administration to recommend that the privilege of unlimited class cuts be given to a restricted group.

The privilege, as explained by the bill's originator, Jim Corey, would allow students with a 3.00 average to elect whether to take the attendance course or to have the freedom to cut classes while they maintained their honor status.

"There is virtually no recognition of any kind for honor students," said Corey, "except the publication of names in the Villanovan and a small recognition in senior year." The practice he recommends is a policy in several schools today.

According to Fred Wiele's amendment, a student could only quality with at least a 3.00 cumulative average and a 3.00 in the previous semester. An amendment to extend the privilege to sophomores was defeated.

To Large Scale

Senior Don Kempf opposed the bill on the ground that it will affect too large of group. "We should open on a small limited scale," he said, "if we hope to have the administration consider it."

There was widespread feeling in the corridors afterwards that the administration would undoubtedly reject the proposal.

Secretary Bob Wagner, a 3.75 Electrical Engineer, voiced the strongest objections to the bill, particularly because he believed it would lower the academic standard of the school. He appeared to agree with the administration that the present attendance program has directly corelation with the recent rise in marks.

Corey insisted that the intelligent students would come to class anyway, even with such a privilege.

Why Change Then?

Belle Aire editor Bob Pinto then inquired, "If they came anyway, what's the sense of putting the motion through?" He considered the present system liberal enough.

Tom Hoffman argued that, with such a privilege, the student will tend to be satisfied with a 3.00 and no more. "It breeds laziness," he said.

In favor of the motion, Oz Scogna commented: "On some days I might benefit more from a day in the library than in a certain class. As an educator once said, 'The idea of a college is to create, not to drill.'"

Wagner countered, "If you want a do-it-yourself education, why even come to a college?"

Night School Names Five To Society

The Evening Division's Mu Chapter of the Alpha Sigma Lambda Fraternity, currently in its second year on campus has announced the nomination of five students for membership.

Alpha Sigma Lambda is a national honor fraternity, membership in which is based upon high scholastic achievement.

The five are John E. Wolfert, Electrical Engineering; Robert B. Carlson, Accounting; William J. Craig, Business Administration; John D. Keohane, Business Administration; William J. Hufnell, Business Administration.

John D. Faulds, current president of the local chapter, recently sent letters to the nominees, inviting them to the formal initiation to be held at the Lamp Post Inn on Saturday.

The initiation will be conducted in conjunction with a dinner. Dean Powers, Dean of the Evening Division, will speak.

The requirements for nomination are based upon a percentile of student grades, figured after at least four semesters of work. The five students this year all have quality-point averages of 3.2 or above.

The charter members of the Mu Chapter, that is, those who were selected last year are President John D. Faulds, Vice-President Laurence J. Welding, Secretary-Treasurer Mrs. Anna M. Flynn, William F. Ball, Jr. Rodney Broadbelt, Elizabeth Cloud, Joanne Crouse, John P. Eliff, Mrs. Marie Gallagher, Margaret T. Giordano, Matthew Lacko, Salvatore Lubrano, Sister M. Monica Mikutel, Robert Samson, and Mildred Wesolowski.

Dean Powers functions as the chapter's National Councillor and serves as its representative at the national conventions. Joseph Greyson serves as the chapter's moderator.

Library Gets Donation

The library has recently been the recipient of a large donation of books, according to the Rev. Daniel Falvey, O.S.A., librarian.

The donation was made by Msgr. John J. McKenna, pastor of St. John the Baptist Church, Manayunk.

Buford Talks At Literary Club Today

Dr. Albert Buford, associate professor in the English Department will be a guest speaker at a meeting of the Literary Club today at 3.30 in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Buford, who formerly taught at Fordham University, is recognized as one of the foremost experts in the field of English Renaissance literature.

Jack Curtin, president of the club, said yesterday that he plans to schedule events as often as possible during the remainder of the semester.

He pointed out that the recent showing of "Julius Caesar" drew more than 200 persons. "That was certainly gratifying," Curtin said. "We plan to slate another film immediately after the Easter vacation. If possible, well hold it in Vasey Hall auditorium instead of Dougherty Hall, so that everyone can be seated comfortably."

Curtin expressed disappointment, however, that the junior class has not shown any interest in the Literary Club. "The English majors, especially, should be attending our meetings," said Curtin.

Fiss will direct the Rosemont and St. Joseph's glee clubs and the Villanova Singers.

Tickets for the affair can be purchased for $1 from any member of the Villanova Singers. There will be a social and dancing at the conclusion of the concert.

Club Holds Breakfast

Villanova University Club of Philadelphia held its annual Communion Breakfast last Sunday.

Mass was celebrated for the 150 attending members in St. Mary's Hall, and breakfast was served in Dougherty Hall. Rev. James M. Hurley, O.S.A., was the main speaker.

Brick-Bat Exchange

Those people who favor universities over colleges often point to the mutual exchange of different disciplines as one of the advantages of the former. Cardinal Newman said that students in one field profit from discussion with students in other fields. The result is a "liberal education."

But Villanova is presently going through a stage in which there is no mutual exchange of ideas between students of the Commerce and Finance School and the other students in the university. Instead of the spirited, but friendly, discusion, which one would expect, there is only a growing spirit of independence and even contempt.

The Commerce and Finance School is the largest in the university. A large portion of its enrollment is composed of day-hop students. Although generalizations are never completely true, it is often said that this group is homogeneous in many respects. It participates in extra-curricular activities less than any other group in the university, for example. The primary reason for this is that most C and F day-hops hold part time jobs to pay their way through school. In many cases, then, the C and Fer is an "eight-thirty to twelve-thirty" college student.

In elections, this group usually votes as a unit. Because of its size, it would control most of the major university student ofices if every member voted. Most of the time, however, only 50 percent of the C and F day-hops turn out at the polls.

Some people in the other schools of the university think that situation is just fine. They admittedly do not want the Commerce and Finance School — and especially its day-hop students—to control such organizations as the Student Council.

There was a major conflict on the issue at last week's Congress meeting. Junior class president Sheldon Pollock, a C and F man, proposed that a new polling place be established to supplement the present one in Alumni Hall. He suggested a site in or near the new Commerce and Finance Building citing weather, distance from the polling place and cafeteria in the new building's basement as reasons why more C and F students do not vote in class and Council elections.

Pollock's proposal was rejected. Opponents made many objections in the debate. Even though it was not said in so many words, the real reason for the negative vote was the fear on the part of many Congress representatives that the proposal would mean C and F domination of the university. The general feeling was that the C and Fers not only do not walk the 150 yards to Alumni Hall, but they don't even walk 100 yards to Dougherty Hall, the student union building, to learn through the bulletin boards and newspaper just what is happening within the university.

The conflict is quite sharp. The C and F students regard the other schools, particularly the Arts and Sciences Schools, as "snobbish," "pseudo-intellectual" and "domineering". In return, the others—again with the Arts and Sciences School leading the way—use such terms as "factory" and "high school" when referring to the C and F School.

We are in no position to determine what has caused the animosity. Perhaps the aims of the C and F School are much different from those of the rest of Villanova. Perhaps the high proportion of day-hops and part-time job holders is to blame. Perhaps, too, the self-sufficient facilities in the new C. and F. Building have intensified minor differences and disagreements. No one really knows.

The VILLANOVAN, as the newspaper of the entire university, is concerned, however, by the ever-worsening rift. We like Cardinal Newman's idea about mutual exchange of ideas. Right now, though, the only thing which C. and F. students and other students of this university are exchanging are brick-bats.

Letters to the Editor

Sheldon Pollock Attacked For Airing Personal Affairs

To the Editor:

At the present time, there are two very interesting and controversial letters appearing on the Junior class bulletin board. They are in regards to our class rings and some of the feelings President Sheldon Pollock, holds towards Dieges and Clust and Mr. George Packer in particular.

First of all, I would like to say that I believe the matter regarding Pollock and George Packer should not have been made public. The matter, as far as I know it, seems to be one of a very personal nature, and should be kept that way.

As far as I can see, the complaints regarding our rings are few and far between and did not necessitate the attention the president gave them. According to Pollock's statements, his ring committee appears to have done a poor job. I cannot agree to this. In my opinion, all the members of the committee did a very fine and commendable job. This was done in the face of many obstacles that need not be mentioned.

Why the President singled himself out as an example of "bad service" I do not know. I am sure that Mr. Richard Packer, not Robert, would have paid just as much attention to "Joe Jones'" complaints as well as to Mr. Pollock's.

Some of the other complaints he cites easily have been the faults of the students. This fact was brought out in the letter he received from the company vice-president, which is on the class bulletin board. Many students who did not receive their rings on time did not send their deposits in on time, or did not fully explain their order to the company representive. Nobody is expected to read another's mind.

In conclusion, may I say that I feel the President's views are too individualistic and do not express the class opinion. Therefore, I feel the acton he took was uncalled for and unfair and intended not for corrective purposes, but as a means for formal sarcasm to the Dieges and Clust Co.

Dougherty Hall

To the Editor:

I am writing to your newspaper to ask you to lend your support to a movement to improve the conditions in Dougherty Hall.

First of all, the partition should be opened during the activities period on Thursday, so that students and faculty alike can find tables and chairs to use for that "second cup of coffee."

Secondly, either a strict rule should be put into effect to force students to clean off their waste material, or efficient help should be hired to do it for them continually throughout the day.

The Padded Cell:

The Birth Of A University

By OWEN KLEIN

Fifty thousand years ago, in a cave, dimly lit by burning bones (it was a bad year for wood; not so hot for weaker neighbors and relatives, either), Ug Mug and wife, Ugiler Mug, were sitting on their contour rocks discussing the future of their young son, Who.

Who, incidently, played second base for the local little league team and furnished a plethora of material for later comedians. He was only batting .195 at the time and his parents had decided that their 98-pound weakling had better become a scholar, which was an amazing decision to come to in those days, because Aristotle hadn't gotten published yet, and after all, if one is going to become a scholar . . . But, on with the story as I found it carved on a recent piece of what was passing for french toast.

My Kingdom for A Wheel

It seems that in the neighboring cave there was another .195 hitter whose parents had become so upset that they had stopped going to the games. He—Too (for that was his name) was destined to become a scholar. With this obvious stigma upon them, the two families sent their sons to see Me, an obvious scholar, because he had just invented the axle and was for the moment waiting for another obvious scholar to invent the wheel.

In this momentarily useless state, he was trying to make ends meet by teaching local .195 hitters how he was able to arrive at the momentarily useless invention. So Who and his buddy, Too, picked up their brown bags and went to see Me. In a week they no longer talked to their ignorant parents; in two weeks Who discovered that an object would curve if thrown with the right spin, went back to the little league and soon two-thirds of the kids in the league were batting .195 and began to go and see Me. Not until the Black Sox scandal was such a low blow dealt to organized ball.

But, on with the story—Me's wish came true. One day, that other obvious scholar walked into his cave with two wheels and said, "Can I borrow that long stick you've got in the corner? We may have something here."

What Is A College Girl?

With this obvious addition to the faculty, a fellow by the name of And, there was soon established Me And U. Me And U. became co-ed shortly after this when the girls in the area became aware of the fact that the boys would only take out the college girls.

But, because of the invention of the wheel and what followed, and the boys all owning the invention that followed, the boys began to take out the girls and after what followed they could no longer afford to go to Me And U. so all we have today of Me And U. is what was written on my french toast.

There was a post-script that mentioned the collaboration of these two obvious scholars on something called a bow and arrow, but everyone knows that was invented by Robin Hood or William Tell or some latter-day obvious scholar.

Why I Am Frustrated

By BOB PINTO

No honest man ever has a solid sense of completion. There are always the little deep-down dreams that were never realized.

Like this Valentine poem I wrote once; it started:

Won't you beer my Ballentine
I'll Schlitz my throat if you're not mine
I guess I'd Budweiser to play the field, etc.

and then I slammed it closed with the final refrain:

So love me Ortlieb me.

Yours for $5

I have submitted the entire 28-line, two-part sonnet to the VILLANOVAN every Valentine's day for the last four years but it never quite rated. (Complete copies can be had by writing your name and address and a five dollar bill and dropping it in the VILLANOVAN office.)

Other frustrating incidents for which the reader will easily find personal corollaries. I always wanted to walk through the hedge running along Lancaster Pike, but Father Donnellon's words are still ringing in my soul "use the footpaths."

Canine Personality

And of course, what red-blooded Villanovan hasn't always wanted to be the man in the Wildcat suit? After a barrage of Spirit Committee interviews and tests, they told me I had a basically canine rather than feline personality and also had a deep seated fear of Hawks and basketballs and would never do.

So many more things I always wanted but could never have: a seat on the intramural council, a tan raincoat, an education course, a seat in the stacks, and what is most important of all, a (fill in own most deep seated frustration).

Mein Kempf:

Remembrance of Days Past

By DON KEMPF

I liked grade school, really liked it a lot. I mean it was tough going and all—especially when we hit long division—but there was so much to learn and so much to do. And you could have such a good time doing it. Everybody had fun and was happy.

When I was in second grade I went swimming one day in the old quarry. I remember I had to stay after school the next night—"jug" I think it was called—but everyone laughed and said we were cute and "what kid wouldn't play hookey on a spring afternoon."

Do you think they'd say that to me now if I went swimming some spring afternoon? You bet your "A" in attendance they wouldn't! They'd say "he's cutting class." And if I did it a couple of afternoons I'd flunk attendance and my parents would receive a letter saying I was evil and I'd better watch my step.

Blanks, Anyone?

We used to play with cards a lot back then. We'd pitch them and trade them and all. I remember if you had "blanks" (cards without numbers on the back), they were worth four spades, six hearts, eleven diamonds and fifteen clubs respectively. When some commercial card company flooded the market with packages of ten trading cards each—all "blanks" —my collection collapsed in value. I was heartbroken.

I was saved by the bubble gum people, however. Somehow I had four Phil Caveratta cards in a neighborhood where Phil Cavaratta's were hard to come by. One day a kid offered me fourty-seven Bob Feller's for one Phil Caveratta. (Everyone had about ten Bob Feller's). I laughed in his face until he offered to throw in four Tommy Holmes's and a couple of Johnny Pesky's. And when he threw in a Mort Cooper, the deal was closed.

'Tough Donnie' Rides Again

We used to write a lot of notes to each other in grade school. Stuff like:

"Big Tommie,

Let's meet in back of the big billboard, the one with the Chevrolet ad on it, after school tonight. We can jump out and beat up Jimmy Collins when he passes on his way home and take his books and push him in the mud. That'll teach him not to tattle on us every time we steal his bat and ball.

Signed,
Tough Donnie

We did a lot of other things too; build scooters, deliver newspapers, throw snowballs, and talk about the old man with the beard who lived in the shack in the railroad yard. He had a million dollars—at least that's what they said.

U.S. Must Be Firm In Berlin

By JIM COREY

Berlin, former capital of a united Germany now has become a focal point of world attention. That former great city, considered by many Germans to be Germany, is now on the lips of all peoples. Why?

One supposes that the obvious reason is related to the recent statements of Nikita Krushchev, namely, that on May 27, the Soviet Union will withdraw from the German Peoples Republic, which will, in effect, give control of the lanes of transportation to this isolated bastion of freedom deep in the heart of Communist East Germany to the East Germans.

The Soviet position on this problem is not static; it has been altered to meet the increasing concern of the entire world. First, the Soviet government, speaking throught the mouths of its East German parrots, clarified the issue: "We are not going to halt the flow of civilian supplies, merely military supplies."

An Ultimatum?

In other words, "Allies, withdraw your troops from Berlin." Again, just recently, the Soviet Premier, speaking at Leipzig, said that the date —May 27 1959—could be extended to June or even July 27.

These secondary points could be multiplied two or three times, but what are the real issues, that is, Why? First, we may note that the Soviet government is not really interested in giving any political autonomy to the East Germans, since in reality it is just transferring power and authority from its right hand to its left. The real issue and desire is to in some way being Berlin under the control of East Germany. Why?

The free city of Berlin, i. e., the western sector, is a thorn in the side, a black sheep alien to the ways of Communism.

Whereas, in the drab section of East Berlin, in spite of Soviet efforts to improve this section, one sees the result of Communist domination. Compared to this is the bright and gay section of West Berlin, the result of freedom.

Startling Comparsion

The comparison is starting, even to the most convinced Communist. The free sector of Berlin is the gate of the mass exodus for the citizens of the People's Republic. Not only is this embarrising, but many refugees are highly skilled and direly needed in East Germany.

The government of Eastern Germany is not recognized by the Western Governments. What better way to at least force a de facto recognition, than to require Western Governments to bargin with the East German regime for transportation privileges.

It's clearly apparant, even to the most casual observer, that the Soviet government has everything to gain and nothing to lose in its position on Germany. Unfortunately the same cannot be said for the West.

The loss of Berlin would be an extremely serious blow to the prestiege and influence of the West. Yet the results of a determined West to hold Berlin may be even more serious. Consider first the loss of Berlin.

Konrad Adenauer, Chancellor of West Germany, has staked his reputation on a united Germany, on a free Berlin. The loss of Adenauer's leadership in West Germany would be a serious blow to the West. France has allied herself with Western Germany on this issue, a defeat would be a loss of force for Premier Charles DeGalle, who is now trying to remake France.

Can U. S. Back Down?

What about the United States? Trying to convince the people of the world that she is the champion of freedom, trying to convince the German people that only the American position will lead to a United Germany, could the United States give up her rights to Berlin, an established in the Potsdam agreement, without seriously harming its position in world affairs?

Strictly Opinion:

Clothes Make The Man

By BOB DE LISA

. . . Let's see, where were we?

Oh yes, the Ivy League mania which is overrunning the Eastern seaboard.

Pity the poor slob who enters one of our glorious halls of learning today without a three buttoned, narrow lapelled, tapered slack-ed, olive drab suit with a paisley lining.

A friend of mine is a social outcast at one of our major Ivy League schools because it was discovered that, on the day of registration, he didn't have a belt on the back of his pants. Shucks, Man, how could he be expected to integrate into such a social sect?

And Pegs Too?

Let us not forget the set pattern of conversation of this exclusive set. If one more person asks me how my summer was, I think I'll buy a pair of snapjacks and join the enemy. And how about when you go home for Thanksgiving vacation and attend one of those "just too-too" parties. Here's a typical scene:

Enter unsuspecting guest (you). Immediately a can of warm beer is placed in your hands. You drink it. You can't stand it, but you drink it. That's the sociable thing to do.

Enter character number two — your former buddy. He's wearing a standard (standard — stripes one-quarter inch apart) striped oxford shirt, khakis, sweat socks, saddle shoes and a gray crew-neck off the shoulder with the sleeves wrapped around his neck. (Now there's a definite purpose in wearing the sweater in this manner—it's "tweedy." Besides, everyone's doing it.

Ain't Love Grand?

Anyway, said friend waddles up to you with large white teeth flashing beneath orange gums and immediately gives you a friendly punch right between the shoulder blades. Your first reaction is to return his friendly gesture—right in the mouth—but you don't. You can't—you'll be ostracized.

You listen: "How's school—do you love it there?" (You can't like it, you have to love it.) Actually, no one cares how you like school or anything at all about you for that matter, it's just that it's a general theme, a pattern.

Ah, but enough of this. If you'll excuse me, I'll take my leave for now. I simply must spit-shine my shell cordovans. I don't want to look out of it you know—

Would You Believe It?

It seems like St. Joseph's College had a dire warning about their upcoming failure in the NCAA tournament in Charlotte, N. C.

A little bird told them.

The Hawk, taking to the air for the first time on the plane trip down, got airsick.

Police Dept. Please Note: O-C Spreads Culture

By FRANK DYNAN

If Captain Rizzo wants to take a long ride some Thursday night, he can drive out to the campus and raid the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. On a good night he may manage to nab forty students and charge them with listening to classical music.

In fact if he times it right, he might catch someone drinking coffee and maybe even rattling his cup and saucer. The coffee won't be espresso, but Rizzo doesn't seem the type to look a gift horse in the mouth.

It isn't that the East Lounge has been converted into a coffee house, it's just that Opera-Classica uses it as its stronghold of culture on Thursday nights.

Opera-Classica is a campus organization best described as music appreciation society. Its members, some 40 students who are not ashamed to admit that they are sensitive souls, believe that music enlightens life, or as their Latin motto puts it, "Ars musica vita illustra".

By music the society means music, not noise, so anyone who wants to hear an electric guitar solo in the key of B flat better get change for a dollar and head for the nearest luncheonette.

Actually Opera-Classica isn't anti-rock and roll, at least not its moderator, Dr. Robert O'Shea of the philosophy department. He claims that good rock and roll, as a genuine folk art, is the real expression of human personality, the spontaneous musical expression of the inner self.

He hastens to add however that most of the rock and roll heard today is part of astrictly commercial venture which appeals to the teenager's craze for fads.

Adopting the philosopher's ambiguous simplicity, O'Shea explained that Opera-Classica is predisposed to classical music "because it is there." Opera Classica President Chuck Fritz was more explicit when he stated that classical music has proven that it is good music because it has stood the test of time.

O'Shea's love of music goes beyond the classical, however. He is interested in music for its own sake and enjoys music in all its forms including jazz.

He catagorizes music into two general types: Program music, like a portrait, presents a musical picture of something, while music in its other forms presents the possibilities and relationshps of sound. He adds that the latter s a sufficient reason for being.

The society was begun in 1954 by Anthony Angeline, a former instructor in the C and F school, using his hi-fi system and collection of records. Today, through the interest of O'Shea, the Administration and a small group of students, the society has its own stereophonic sound system, including a Bell tape deck and a modest library of records and tapes.

This year's officer's besides president Fritz, are Bill Bennett, vice-president, Clem Novitsky, secretary; and Andy Sheehy, treasurer. They share with O'Shea a desire to see the society someday blossom into a fulltime music department within the University.

Opera-Classica demands of its members only that they be lovers of immortal music.

Library Honors Connolly

By BILL SPEERS

The Villanova Library is currently conducting an exhibition on the times and writings of James Brendan Connolly. Who is Connolly? What is it that warrants this comparatively unknown writer a place of honor in our library?

We visited the Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A. Librarian head, in his office last week and put these question to him. "Connolly's writing style has been compared to Neumann's and he has been noted by Joseph Conrad as America's greatest writer of sea stories," Father Falvey immediately remarked.

"But Connolly was more than an excellent writer," Father Falvey continued, "he was an exceptional athlete, a bona fide seaman and a gallant soldier who served along with Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders."

Connelly's writings consist mostly of short stories which deal mainly with life on the high seas. They vividly portray the men whose lives are regulated by the roll of the sea. His books such as "Out of Gloucester", "The Deep Sea's Toll", and "The Crested Seas" contaie numerous sea tales; some of which were written while aboard ship.

Olympic Winners

"It's a shame", said Father Falvey, "that Connolly is not widely read today. His are the type of stories that never lose their initial drama or appeal. His books contain a literary style that is unmatched by any of our modern writers.

As an athlete Connolly was one of the first winners in the modern Olympics. He was the only American entry in the 1896 games, when he won the two hops and a jump event by six feet. He literally astounded the Greeks, who hosted the games that year.

Father Falvey showed us a letter that had been given to him by Captain John W. Higgins, Commanding Officer of Villanova's N.R.O.T.C. unit, who in turn had received it from Professor Ellery H. Clark Jr., of the United States Naval Academy, who knew Connolly personally.

In the letter Clark told of an incident that occured while his father and Connolly were classmates at Harvard. As the Olympic Games date was approaching Connolly requested a leave of absence, to compete in the games as an independent. He was told that if he left Harvard, he would be required to reapply for addmission.

Quits Harvard

Connolly chose to withdraw from the university and he never did return. But the irony of the situation is that Clark's father was given a leave of absence to the Olymics as an observer. Harvard did break down though and gave Connolly a much belated letter for varsity track many years later.

In the role of a sailor, Connolly with a band of New England fishermen sailed the seven seas. He sailed to the North and Baltic Seas and with

IRS CONVENTION AT VILLANOVA

veyed the Arab position.

"We sympathize with the Nazi persecution of the Jews," he added. "But why should we, an innocent party, be forced to do penance for another's crime. It's against all rules of reason. Why not establish a Jewish state in the middle of America?"

Each reference to Zionism by Sa'd was dripping with contempt. "Israel's only neutral border," he stated, "is the Mediterranean."

"When Zionists established a land for the Jewish people, it gave rights to the Jews, but withheld them from the Arabs, even though the Arabs were in a majority of 400,000 to 500,000," he complained.

Group Discussions

Highlighting the convention was the group discussion period which followed. Persistent negotiations by discussion chairman John Castano had secured five library seminar rooms for the talks.

Under moderators Herb Lettau, Bruce Sturm, Frank Brennan, Joe DiRocco, and Tom Wolf, each panel independently concluded that there was no obvious solution at the present time for the Middle East muddle.

Villanova delegates had entered the panels somewhat disposed towards the Arab viewpoint, because of the influence of Dr. Fred Khouri, of the Villanova faculty, a public Arab partisan.

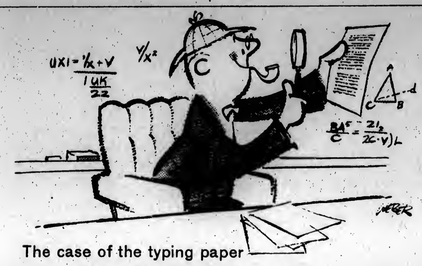
Consequently, Villanovans on the panels often encountered overwhelming opposition from pro-Israel elements, especially from a large number of Jewish students. Moderators, who agreed that Wheelock's pro-Israel talk had influenced most delegates, strained to remain neutral, often unsucessfully.

The 45 minutes allotted for discussions was generally felt to be inadequate. "Just as our discussions had reached a crescendo," complained Terry Gargano, a Seton Hill College freshman, "we were told to adjourn."

Khouri Speaks

Dr. Khouri concluded the convention by stating, in a banquet speech at the motel, that "Russia has gained more in the Middle East by U. S. mistakes than by her own deliberate action. We pushed them in."

He defended Arab nationalism by comparing it to 1776 America. "Like the Arabs today, we were anti-British, nationalistic emotional, and isolationist. Wisely, the U. S. policy is becoming more friendly towards Nasser."



Khouri had to contend with formidable distractions: a noisy blower, and the clamor from an adjacent banquet room which sounded like "an Arab revolt," as J. P. Kelley noted.

The night before, Wheelock's voice was pushed to its highest range while competing with a downstairs group singing "I've been Working on the Railroad," with considerable barroom bravura.

Castano Elected

John Castano was elected 1959-60 treasurer of the P.A.I.R.C. Bob Milkman of Penn succeeds Clinton Chin as president. Bob Rafano and John Kelley were co-chairmen of the event. They paid tribute to library secretary, Peg Hunsicker, who prepared stencils for the enormous amount of paper disseminated to the delegates.

Then there's the story of the two pessimists who met at a party and shook heads . . .

Pollock Bill Defeated

student's schedule is packed," Pollock said. "I can cite my own for an example. But most important, most of them work thirty or forty hours a week. How can they spare fifteen minutes to walk all the way up to Alumni Gym to vote?"

Murphy again asked that the members "stop snickering."

Pollock proceeded to point out that the voting is held at Alumni Gym since that is considered the geographic center of the campus. The population center, however, is the C and F building, he added.

Fred Wiele here voiced "confusion on certain points." He demanded that Pollock produce facts to sustain his assertions that: (1) Many people in Sullivan and Sheehan Halls do not vote in inclement weather; (2) Statistics show that only 50 percent of the C and F students vote because of the long walk.

Just the Facts

Wiele asked for "facts, facts."

"You may be fortunate enough to have engineers as friends," blasted Pollock at Wiele, "but I personally know arts, C and F, and engineering students who will back me up!"

Leafing through his notes hurriedly he uttered the statement: "I'm lost." Spams of laughter responded.

Murphy here thought it appropriate to make a clarification. "We should refrain from the line of reasoning that the C and F school is a collection of high school kids. Many of us are sarcastically asking ourselves, why can't these guys spare ten minutes to vote."

Pollock's next maneuver was to demonstrate the zeal of the C and F school. He produced a petition filled with signatures of interested students, "taken in the mere space of ten minutes."

The petition was circulated for inspection, and when it reached Don Kempf, he arose and stated with parliamentary eloquence: "I am gratified to see that Roy Rogers, Dan Kelley, Abe Lincoln, and Sabastian Bach are in favor of Mr. Pollock's motion.

Uproarious laughter followed which even Murphy's gavel couldn't stop.

"But Dan Kelley is a sophomore," interrupted Pollock. "I can bring him up here."

Compromise Suggested

Representative John P. Kelley rose to oppose Pollock. He suggested a compromise by which a new place would be selected, a single, centrally located polling place. He emphasized the danger of fraudulent elections under Pollock's proposal.

Meanwhile, Pollock was writing furiously on his note pad.

Kelley added that there was also a danger of too much confusion. "Imagine people standing in line waiting to get their hands stamped like they were going to a dance.

Kelley classified the proposals as "ridiculous." As for the inclement weather of Pollock, he said that "by Mr. Pollock's own admission, the C and F's must be sugar-plumbs if they can't vote in the rain."

"Why not get a special place for engineers and arts students to vote?" asked Kelley. "Certainly it will encourage more candidates to run—between the polling places."

Pollock arose and asked to reply to the "assininity and inanity of Kelley's objections."

New Plan Presented

Tom Hoffman introduced a bill to locate the polling stations in the classroom annex—a central location.

Pollock said, "Ask any engineer who ever measured the campus where the geographical center is. It's the post office! The population center is at C and F."

He added that his proposal would eliminate long lines, pushing and shoving in lines, and shouting.

Murphy's patience was obviously strained as he kept control with an iron fist.

A vote was called on Hoffman's proposal, and it passed, moving the polling places to the classroom annex. Pollock questioned whether a quorum had voted on it.

"Move for a quorum," said Pollock three times.

"I'm not deaf," said Murphy.

"Neither am I," answered Pollock. "Move for a quorum."

Murphy angrily retorted: "You're out of order. I haven't recognized you."

Bill Defeated

A quorum was accounted for and Pollock's motion to adjourn was defeated. With one person voting Nay, Pollock's bill was defeated.

Several representatives had voted against Hoffman's bill including senior engineer Gerry Hepburn, who said, "We need two polling places. If Kelley (elections chairman) needs another senior to help, I'll do it."

On both motions, VILLANOVAN editor Larry O'Rourke rose to defend his right to call for a roll-call vote. "The members should be willing to accept responsibility for how they vote," he said; "they should not afraid to see their stand in print."

Evening Council

The Evening Division Student Council will meet tomorrow at 10:15 p.m. in the Vasey Hall Auditorium.

The agenda will include many items of business which have been suggested by students to their class representatives. A major item will be the Spring Dance.

The Spring Dance will be held at the Aronimink Country Club, St. David's Road in Newtown Square on Friday, April 17. Dancing will be from nine to one; admission is $4 per couple.

Chem. Seminar Tomorrow

Dr. Joseph Feighan, of St. Joseph's College, will speak on reaction studies with single crystals at the Villanova Chemistry Seminar tomorrow at 8 p.m. in 207 Mendel Hall.

ICG Attends Convention At Immaculata College

Villanova's chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government attended the annual regional convention of the Southeastern region at Immaculata College on March 7.

Villanova had the chairmanships of two committees, with Charles Kerber heading the local government committee, and Ron Magray heading the committee on agriculture and natural resources. Chapter chairman Frank Cunningham served on the region rules committee.

Tom Peretti and John Isselman represented the local chapter on the transportation committee, Ed Kulak on highways and transportation, Larry Ruth and Joe Pultorak on education, Bob Rafano on constitutional revision, and Steve D'Alessio on labor and industry.

Villanova's delegation, ten members, was fifth in size among the ten schools attending the convention.

A total of fourteen bills passed the morning committee hearings, and, of these, six were completely under the sponsorship of Villanova, while two other bills were co-sponsored by the local chapter.

The most closely contested bill of the day was Ruth's education bill, advocating a centralization of the state's public school system. After a long debate, the bill was defeated by a narrow margin.

ICG will now publish all existing bills and draw up several new ones in preparation for the 25 annual state convention at Harrisburg which opens on April 16.

Prom Queen Gets $250 Scholarship

The Patricia Stevens Finishing School, the judge of the Junior Prom Queen contest, will award a $250 scholarship to the winning contestant.

All entries to the contest must be submitted by April 10. Pictures will be received at Ed Olsen's room, 252 Sullivan or at the Student Activities Office, second floor, Dougherty Hall.

The winner will be announced at the prom.

Officials at the Finishing School stated that the prize scholarship will be designed to fit the winning girl's individual interests. Besides courses in poise, personality, and grooming, the school also offers in its curriculum wardrobe planning, voice and diction, and makeup and hair styling.

Photographs for the contest must be at least five inches by seven inches, and must include the student's name, major, date's name, school or occupation of date, her hometown, age and the color of her hair and eyes.

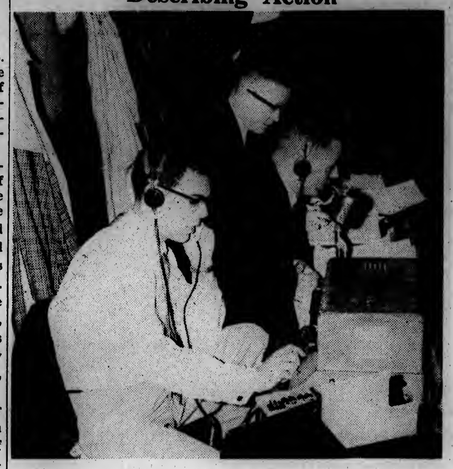
Fr. Donnellon Speaks

The Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O. S. A., University President spoke at the Lackawanna County Friends Sons of St. Patrick Dinner in Scranton on March 17.

Pennsylvania Governor David L. Lawrence also spoke at the dinner.

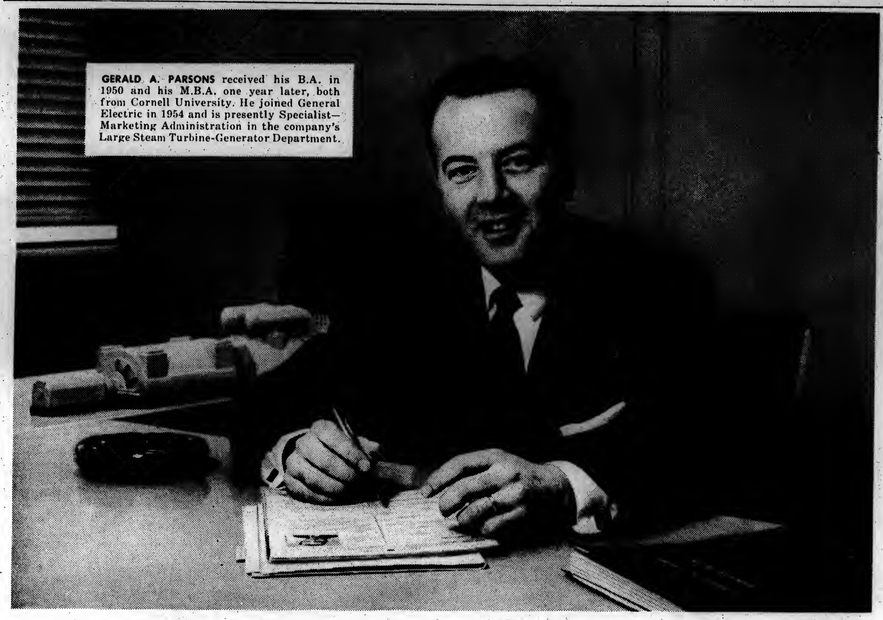
Wilkins Speaker At Law Dinner

The Honorable Raymond S. Wilkins, Chief Justice of the Supreme Juridical Court of Massachusetts, was the principal speaker at Villanova University's Sixth Annual Law Dinner on Monday night.



The Honorable Anne X. Alpern, Attorney General of Pennsylvania, and former State Supreme Court Justice Horace Stern were among the honored guests. Judge Gerald F. Flood of Philadelphia's Common Pleas Courts served as toastmaster.

Other speakers included the Very Rev. Henry E. Greenlee, O.S.A., Chairman of Villanova's Board of Trustees and the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President.



Matthew J. Ryan, third year law student from Newtown Square, Pa., was chairman of the law dinner. About 400 persons attended.

"The biggest challenge a man has to face is himself"

"Men and businesses are alike in one respect," says Gerald A. Parsons, 30-year-old marketing and personnel development specialist. "Their success depends to a great extent on how well they respond to challenge. And I've found that the biggest challenge a man has to face on his job is not the competition of others — but the far more important one of developing himself to his fullest capabilities.

"During my four years with General Electric, I've had plenty of opportunity for self-development. Challenging training assignments at five different locations within the company have given me a broader understanding of my career area. In my present job I have the benefit of working with experts, both in establishing long-range goals and in helping to achieve them. I've found that working toward future potential is vital in the development of successful businesses — and successful men."

Young men such as Gerry Parsons are important to the future of companies like General Electric and to the growth of America's dynamic, competitive-enterprise economy. Our nation's progress will depend more and more upon those forward-looking individuals who continue to develop to their fullest capabilities during their lifetime.

That is why General Electric provides a climate for individual progress — with opportunity for increasing knowledge and skills — for all of its employees, including 30,000 college graduates. For it is only as individuals meet the challenge of self-development that there continues to be progress for a business, an industry, or a nation.

Dr. Fred J. Khouri speaks on the Suez incident last week in the second lecture in the History Department's current series.

Khouri Brands British Suez Move 'Stupid'

Remarks by Dr. Fred J. Khouri, on the culpability of the British and French invasion of the Suez, stirred lively discussion from the floor at the second of the History Department lectures last Wednesday night.

In response to a question, Khouri stated emphatically that he opposed the Suez invasion. He added that he had been shocked at the time by the apparent "stupidity," especially on the part of the British, in handling the situation.

Mr. Francis A. Coghlan, a British subject, also of the History and Political Sciense Department, asked Khouri if reactionary elements in the Middle East were not merely using anti-British feeling to control the rampant nationalism in their countries.

Khouri admitted that while this might be the case, it was more true that the British were inevitably going to be driven from those countries—why did they not leave now? A lively question and answer period ensued.

Khouri, whose topic was "The United States in the Middle East," was introduced by Dr. Thomas O'Toole, of Villanova's School of Law.

CCD Holds First Mass and Social

The first annual Regional Mass, buffet and social of the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, was held last week at CYO Building, Philadelphia. Representatives from several Catholic Colleges of the area were present.

The Rev. Charles B. Mynaugh, Archdiocesan Director of C.C.D. spoke on the necessity of practicing the principles of Catholicism in daily living.

He later spoke on the purpose of the campus unit of the CCD, pointing out the need for Catacists in many places and mentioned some of the work being done in the Archdiocese.

Father Mynaugh stressed that the C.C.D. must have a greater spirit of unity and that the present group is but a nucleus of the force needed for the job ahead.

The Villanova Unit, newly organized under president Bob Merkert plans to be operating on full scale by next year.

Radio Engineer Jobs Increasing

Radio Engineers are needed in the Federal Communications Commission at various locations throughout the United States and its territories and possessions, the United States Civil Service Commission has announced.

The entrance salaries for these positions are $4,490 and $5,430 a year.

College graduates and senior students who have successfully completed, or expect to complete within 9 months a 4-year professional engineering curriculum in such fields of engineering as radio, electrical, electronic, communications, etc., or in physics may be qualified for positions paying $4,490 a year.

Students interested in learning more about these jobs and how to apply should inquire at the placement office for information.

Galm and Wallen Chair Mother's Day Committee

Bill Galm and John Wallen, co-chairman of the class of 1960 Mother's Day, last week named committee heads to direct the event.

Chairmen of the dinner committee will be Neil Drislane and Stan Ciesielski. Jack King and Edward Scott will head the programs and tickets committee. Larry Kelly is to head the special events committee.

Charlie Carrol and Carlo Lo Veuchio were appointed co-chairmen of the entertainment committee, while Ron MaGrey and Tom Labreque will supervise the Diaper Dan committee. Other committee heads are, Joe Moran, Mass committee; Dick Wines, Corsage; and Mike Deffley, publication.

Tickets will be priced at $8.50 and will go on sale shortly after Easter vacation. The price of the ticket will include dinner for two, favor for the student's mother, corsage, and other special events.

Anyone wishing to help sell tickets can contact John Wallen in room 52, Sullivan Hall.

As in the past, if the student's mother wishes to bring a daughter, sister or aunt along, the student should purchase a special ticket which will be on sale along with the regular tickets.

The chairmen stated that tickets should be purchased as soon as possible so that some estimate can be made of the number attending.

Knights of Columbus Establish Dance Date

The Knights of Columbus will hold their first annual charter day dance April 3.

The affair will be held at the Merion Tribute House. The price of the tickets is $3.

The Paul Judge orchestra, with eight pieces and a singer, will play for the charter dance.

Placement Interviews Scheduled

Students desiring placement interviews during April must sign in at the placement office, Mendel Hall, before the end of this week.

This was announced by John Moritz, placement director, who further stated that a number of special interviews will be held at Villanova within the next month.

Soph Midshipmen Visit NIKE Site

Midshipmen of the Sophomore class, Naval Reserve Officers Training Unit, Villanova University led by Captain John W. Higgins, Jr., USN, Professor of Naval Science and Lt. Commander Norman Matheson visited the NIKE Site, "A" Battery, 2nd Missile Battalion, 59th Artilery, Paoli, Pa. last week.

Midshipmen, in their sophomore year, must take a course in Naval Weapons. As a supplement to the Naval Weapons course, as well as other NROTC courses, Midshipmen are taken on numerous field trips to familiarize them with the equipment and progress being made by other branches of the Armed Forces.

The Midshipmen are briefed by Captain Allen at the outset of their tour of the NIKE installation.

Second Leutenant F. J. Bachman, U. S. Army, has an attentive audience as he explains the use of forward control surfaces of the NIKE.

"I think it's the back end" is not what Lieut. Bachman is saying. Actually he is outlining the functions of the tail end assembly of the missile.

"This is the end what breathes fire" assents the Lieutenent as he points to a section of the firing chamber of the ground-to-air rocket.

This is just part of the crowd which listened to WVIL's broadcast of the Villanova-St. John's NIT basketball game last Thursday in the west lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Council Called '50% Interested'

By J. EDGAR LOHR
of the Villanovan Staff

Robert Murphy, student body president, highlighted WVIL's Showdown last week when he bluntly stated, "Only fifty percent of the present student council members are actually interested workers."

The program, conducted in accordance with WVIL's recent poll, was moderated by John Oberlies, director of news and sports, and headlined Jack Curtin, managing editor of The VILLANOVAN, Murphy, and Nick Cassetta, who acted as statistician for the poll.

A negative answer by the students to the question, "Do you think the majority of the proposals in the Student Council are significant to you?" resulted in derogatory remarks against the student body by Murphy and Curtin.

Dollar Bills Needed

In protest of the attitude of the students, Curtin said, "The students of Villanova will not be satisfied with the Student Council until it slips dollar bills under their doors each morning!"

On the topic of whether there is a sufficient number of representatives, Murphy stated, "I can not see any possible additions to the council."

Murphy added on the subject of elections, "Unfortunately, the reason for the deadheads on the council is the popularity contests which are mistakenly called elections."

The students also declared that they would attend council meetings if they were more publicized. This brought a laugh from Curtin and Murphy since both pointed out that The VILLANOVAN, WVIL, and the student council bulletin board announce all meetings.

Long List

When it was announced that the student opinion of the student council was that it was active but ineffective, Murphy presented this list of programs undertaken by the council:

Senior car permissions, increased senior placement, special sections at football games, and area student-alumni clubs.

He said the establishment of Parent's Day, vending machines in the C. and F. building, the food pool, early acquisition of blazers by sophomores, distribution of tickets by the athletic department, free day, student tutor service, insurance program, elections, student trips, and used book system, were other accomplishments.

Another topic which caused much excitement was the rating of the Villanova school spirit by the students as fair to good.

Murphy explained, "a majority of the school spirit is false since it pertains to sports alone and not with the betterment of the university itself."

Curtin added that a part of any blame for spirit failure must lie with the orientation committees, for "if the spirit isn't instilled in September, you can't expect it to exist in January."

'Science of Management' Theme of SAM Conference

The eleventh annual conference of the Society for the Advancement of Management was held at Villanova last Thursday.

"The Science of Management" was the theme of the affair, which featured three concurrent conferences at which men from industry and universities stated their views.

The conference got under way with registration and a tour of the campus followed by welcoming addresses and introductions. The invocation was given by Rev. Joseph C. Bartley, O.S.A., Dean of Commerce and Finance.

Villanova President Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., delivered the welcoming address and James A. Marley, president of the Villanova chapter S.A.M. introduced the guests.

Conference Topics

The topics for the conference were the future requirements of management, what industry expects of university graduates, and computors as a tool of management.

Richard Kitto, legal specialist for the industrial relations department of Standard Press Steel and Dr. Harold Fischer, of Franklin and Marshall College and vice-president of the university chapter division of the society, addressed the conference on the future requirements of management.

Speaking at the conference on what industry expects of university graduates were Donald Laubenstein, assistant manager of corporate employment at Scott Paper Company and Dr. Walter H. Klein, chairman of the Industrial Administration department.

The conference on computors as a tool of management was headed by Ted Sable, director of training, Philadelphia training department, Remington - Rand Co., and Paul Chinitz, assistant regional manager, univac division, of Remington-Rand.

Following the afternoon sessions, a dinner was held at the Conestoga Mill. The conference was resumed at Villanova with a summary of the afternoon conferences by James McHale, chairman of arrangements.

Featured Speaker

Then the featured speaker, William F. Kelly, president of the First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Compay delivered his speech on the "Philosophy of Management."

Members of the Villanova Chapter who worked on conference included tour chairman, Albert J. Duryea; registration chairman, Kieran Devery; transportation chairman, Robert J. Barone; publicity chairman, Joseph L. Marozzi, and dinner chairman, Mark Evans.

City Alumni Club Holds Breakfast

Villanova University Club of Philadelphia held its annual Communion Breakfast last Sunday.

Mass was celebrated for the 150 attending members in St. Mary's Hall, and breakfast was served in Dougherty Hall. Rev. James M. Hurley, O.S.A., was the main speaker.

Other Alumni activities included quarterly meeting of the Alumni Association's Board of Governors, which followed the breakfast. The organization's 1960 budget was discussed at the meeting, and nominations were held for the next two years' officers.

The same day, the executive committee of the Philadelphia Club held a conference under the direction of Francis Solis, club president.

Bravo Co. Meets Amboys For 'Mural Flag Tonight

It's not the NIT or the NCAA, but it's about as close as the university can come.

That's the Intramural Basketball Championship game, which will be played tonight at 7:30 in Alumni Gym.

At any rate, there are no St. John's, Bradley's, West Virginia's, Cincinnatti's, etc. in this tourney. Instead, there are Bravo's and Amboys.

Who?

That's right—Bravo Company and the Amboys, both of whom could be called the "Cinderella" team of the tourney.

Bravo Favored

Bravo, which on the basis of past performances will take the court as a slight favorites this evening (this, plus the fact that the Amboys suffered several damaging injuries in the semi-final contests), have a very small squad, but make up in speed and hustle what they lack in size.

By JIM MURRAY

The Amboys have one big man and parallel the Bravo unit in the speed and hustle department.

Bravo has come a long way in reaching the finals of the championship tournment. Their game with the Knights of Columbus team in the opening round of the play-offs was their closest and most exciting.

Close Contests

The score was tied with but five seconds remaining in the contest, and then a half court shot ala John Egan of Providence in the NIT) sent Bravo into the next round, 45-43.

That set the stage for another thrilling two point victory, this one an upset over of the tourney favorites, the Small Five. (Any similarity between the name and the size of the players on that team was purely coindental — three players were 6'3".)

Thus Bravo Co. goes into the final tonight as a favorite for the title. They also set a precedent when they take the floor, being the first Navy team ever to advance this far.

The Amboys also had a long hard fight in their quest for the championship.

Upset Northerners

They first took the measure of the Ranchhands (considered a "dark horse" in the competition) by a 37-30 count, despite a 15 point effort by the losers' Bob Murphy.

In their next conest, they pulled one of the major upsets of the year, dumping the title favorites, the Northerners, 41-32, in a wild and rough battle.

So stop in tonight at Alumni Gym if you want to fill the empty spaces in your tournament-broken heart. Be you a Wildcat or a Hawk—this will have to be the big one.

Quin Caps and Monk's Win Bowling League Titles

Tuesday League

The Quin Caps, a team of six varsity football players, have clinched the Tuesday league bowling title.

The team, Gene Paja, Joe Nardo, Gene O'Pella, Paul Morra, Ed Roehre and Tom McPherson, won the crown last week with a 4-0 win over the 68ers.

Meanwhile the Yoo-Hoos remain in second place. The Boss Choice team was helped in their win over the Buffers by Jack Reina's 579 series.

The sixth place Holy Rollers pulled a mild upset by downing the fifth place Saints. The top scores were registered by Charles Brown and Bill Bradley for the winners.

HOW TO BE A THUMPING BIG SUCCESS ON CAMPUS

While up in the attic last week hiding from the tax man, I came across a letter, yellow with age, that dear old Dad had sent me when I was a freshman. I reproduce it below in the hope that it may light your way as it did mine.

"Dear Son, (Dad always called me Son. This was short for Sonnenberg, which used to be my first name. I traded it last year with a man named Max. He threw in two outfielders and a left-handed pitcher . . . But I digress.)

"Dear Son, (Dad wrote)

"I suppose you are finding college very big and bewildering, and maybe a little frightening too. Well, it need not be that way if you will follow a few simple rules.

"First of all, if you have any problems, take them to your teachers. They want to help you. That's what they are there for. Perhaps they seem a little aloof, but that is only because they are so busy. You will find your teachers warm as toast and friendly as pups if you will call on them at an hour when they are not overly busy. Four a.m., for instance.

"Second, learn to budget your time. What with classes, activities, studying, and social life all competing for your time, it is easy to fall into sloppy habits. Set up a rigid schedule and stick to it. Remember, there are only 24 hours a day. Three of these hours must be spent in class. For every hour in class you must, of course, spend two hours studying. So there go six more hours. Then, as we all know, for every hour studying, you must spend two hours sleeping. This accounts for twelve more hours. Then there are meals—three hours each for breakfast and lunch, four hours for dinner. Never forget, Sonnenberg, you must chew each mouthful twelve hundred times. You show me a backward student, and I'll show you a man who bolts his food.

I could not dissuade her...

"But college is more than just sleeping, eating, and studying. There are also many interesting activities which you must not miss. You'll want to give at least three hours a day to the campus newspaper, and, of course, another three hours each to the dramatic and music clubs. And let's say a total of eight hours daily to the stamp club, the debating club, and the foreign affairs club. Then, of course, nine or ten hours for fencing and bird-walking, and another ten or twelve for ceramics and three-card monte.

"Finally we come to the most important part of each day—what I call 'The Quiet Time.' This is a period in which you renew yourself—just relax and think great thoughts and smoke Marlboro Cigarettes. Why Marlboro? Because they are the natural complement to the active life. They have better 'makin's': the filter filters; the flavor is rich and mellow and a treat to the tired, a boon to the spent, a safe harbor to the storm-tossed. That's why.

"Well, Sonnenberg, I guess that's about all. Your kindly old mother sends her love. She has just finished putting up rather a large batch of pickles—in fact, 350,000 jars. I told her that with you away at school, we would not need so many, but kindly old Mother is such a creature of habit that, though I hit her quite hard several times, I could not dissuade her.

Keep 'em flying,

Dad."

Charley Stead Is Team Man In Individualistic Sport

By TOM TROY

The announcer's characteristic monotone droned on: "Final results in the high-jump: first: John Thomas, Boston University—seven feet; second: George Dennis, Shanahan Catholic Club—6-10; third, Charles Stead, Villanova—6-8." Then even more slowly: "Thomas's jump is a new world's record."

Pandemonium breaks loose. The next day headlines scream of Thomas's feat. And rightly so. World's records deserve headlines and hurrahs. But what about the guys like Charley Stead? How does someone who jumps 6-8 feel when he finishes a mere third?

"Hell, I didn't feel anything. That boy just did better, that's all. More power to him. I would like to break records too. But, I'll tell you, I would rather have the team win than high-jump eight feet!"

This statement is Charley Stead to a "T". The tall bespectacled senior is one of the anamolies of the track world—a real team performer in sport's most individualistic effort.

Another Rindge

Charley is another of the many graduates from Rindge Tech High School of Cambridge, Mass., who has achieved stardom at Villanova.

Ed Collymore, Phil Reavis and Charley Jenkins are other grads of Rindge who have made Jim Elliot's life as a coach very happy.

But Charley Stead has exhibited a versatility that none of these others—not even that fantastic sprinter, quarter-miler deluxe, Collymore has.

Stead consistently high-jumps 6-8; he runs on the mile relay team; he soloes in the quarter mile; he runs on the sprint medley team.

Perhaps Charley is as versatile as he is because of the method in which he first started to compete in sports.

"When I was in high school I was bigger than anyone else, so I played basketball. But one day I went down to the track, and just foolin' around, started to high-jump."

Versatility Starts

"I started getting above six feet, so Mr. Duffy (the track coach at Rindge) had me come out for the team. Soon he started me running too, and then I was doing both in meets."

"Yes, Mr. Duffy had a big influence on me in that he got me to compete in track, but I think Mr. Tuppeny and Jumbo are the persons I owe most to."

"Why, when I was a sophomore, I barely got over 6-3. Now, they've got me doing a consistent 6-8."

Consistency is another trait of Charley Stead. This year, jumping in the toughest competition ever seen in the annals of the high jump, he has jumped over 6-6 every time but once.

In Washington, he leaped 6-8¼ for a new meet record. He finished third in the K. of C. Games in Boston (the night Thomas broke the record) third in the Inquirer Games and recorded two fourths.

IC4A Champion

And, of course, Charley won the IC4A jump with a leap of 6-7 just three weeks ago. Modestly enough, Charley didn't mention this or any of his other accomplishments when interviewed. Instead, Stead spoke of the team.

"Yes, an IC4A victory would've really been something, but we were just overpowered. I'll tell you—one year we won that meet, we dressed 16 guys. Man — Manhattan dressed just the opposite of that number—61.

"It was the same way this year. All three of the teams that finished ahead of us dressed well over 40 men. We were just outnumbered."

Of course, just as Charley points out, this being outnumbered isn't anything new for Villanova. But Villanova trackmen are more than just runners, pole-vaulters, etc. They are also students. "Yes, I think the track team is the brightest athletic group in the school."

Charley himself is a C+ student, majoring in Education. He was a math major in that department, but has just switched to Social Studies. Charley hopes to make a career out of social work, and would like to work with children in particular.

Outdoor Prospects

But in the more immediate future, Charley sees a fairly good outdoor season in the prospect. "We should win our dual meets, but I really don't know about the outdoor IC4A. Manhatten will dress a lot again, and that's trouble."

Several football players are now practicing in weight events, and Charley thought that they could perhaps be the difference between victory and a second or third place finish.

As for Charley, he will be competing in his speciality, the high jump, and will run on the mile relay team. Charley feels that running has no effect on his jumping.

"I don't think running is either a detriment or an aid to my high-jumping. And I don't care which I do, although I do like the jump."

It is quite evident that Charley is a firm believer in the Ron Delany theory of just doing enough to win. Speaking of the prevalent attitude of wanting records all the time—Charley said:

"Well, I don't try to run as fast as I can, just enough to get ahead and stay there at the finish. The only time I race as fast as I can is when I'm on a relay team, like I'll be this spring.

"Then, I'll try my best. For I know those other guys before me and after me are trying their best. And I don't want to let them down."

Charley Stead hasn't let Villanova down in the past; we feel certain that he won't in the future.

From the Pressbox:

We'll Be Back

By JACK CURTIN

"We'll be back!"

A student in the packed Villanova section—imbued with a spirit born both of malt and of the fine, albeit losing, effort of his team on the Madison Square Garden court—started the chant. By the time substitute Bob Liberatore sank his after-the-buzzer foul shot to make the final margin by which St. John's bounced the Wildcats out of the National Invitation Tournament a mere eight points, the cry had reached its crescendo. Not that it was overpoweringly loud. Rather it was just a voice above the crowd, barely audible. Yet audible it was—and prophetic.

"We'll be back!"

The cry wasn't that of all the Villanova students, but of enough of them to mark one of those high-water points in student spirit which could never be achieved through the efforts of an organized cheering squad. It had about it the strange quality of surety and confidence that can come only with spontaneity. This was a display of spirit that would have gladdened the heart of the late J. Patrick Nicholson. This was the kind of reaction that goes only to a team that deserves it.

"We'll be back!"

Jimmy Huggard knew it; his actions spoke for him—even louder than the voices in the stands. The fiery little hustler was everywhere-popping in jump shot after jump shot from behind the key, stealing the ball, hawking the opposition on defense, even (believe it or not) rebounding—trying desperately to close up a gap that was much narrower than the experts said it had any right to be. The next time the Wildcats take a shot at the big time, he'll be leading the way.

"We'll be back!"

But Joe Ryan won't. This was the end of the line for the Main Liners' captain and top scorer; the last stop on a glory trail that never quite led to the fame it promised. Joe Ryan will never play in the Garden again. The next time around, he'll be one of the multitude in the stands—and the Garden will be the worse for it. For this was Joe's court, the one where he put on his best performances. It is sad, but true, that Villanova was never able to take advantage of these fine individual performances. The Philadelphia ace never played on a winning team in New York.

"We'll be back!"

All of them: Huggard, Jim Kenny, John Driscoll, George Raveling, Dick Kaminski—all will play on the Garden floor again, all will face tourney pressure once more. This is a team with a future; a team that will have another shot at the prestige and glory to be found in a tournament. It is not a team that will miss that chance twice.

We'll be back.

Sports Chatter:

'Cats Mature In NIT

By TONY MACKLIN

The thump-thump of a nervous ball chatters on the cement floor here under the Garden crowd. Joe Ryan shakes his fist. "Let's go, we can beat them!" The other players nod and join in the pre-game jargon of hope and anxiety. The locker room is Villanova's nerve center tonight. Outside the Butler Bulldogs are disposing of Fordham's Rams. The clock drags interminably.

There is an eruption of noise as the first game ends. A louder eruption as St. John's rolls on to the court. The Indian theme whoops over the organ.

"All right, let's go! The locker room door is flung open, and Captain Joe Ryan leads the 'Cats out. The Villanova fans greet them with enthusiasm.

Tension Mounts

The 'Cats look sharp. The ball snaps from player to player. 12,000 fans sit in Nero-like judgment. The red-clad Redmen are impressive. The organ plays the Villanova fight song.

The pressure builds. Huggard chews gum. Raveling taps rebounds up mechanically, Harrison is knocking them in from outside, Ryan can't stop moving.

Madison Square Garden is a three-decked arena of noise. The referee tosses the ball up. The tap is controlled by Raveling over to Ryan. Driscoll misses the shot.

Action Galore

Quickly, St. John's has five points.

Joe kicks the ball out of bounds. George knocks in a tap. Ryan to Huggard and the score is 4-5. Driscoll hits. Huggard to Ryan, Joe stops, jumps and swish! 8-5. The 'Cats lead. "Maybe, maybe!" the fans chortle.

But the joy in section H is short-lived. The score reaches 17-17 and Lou Roethel becomes a burly assassin from the corner.

Referees are a lot like profs, they make the course. A jittery team is not a strong team. Five awful minutes later and St. John's is strutting at 17-30.

Hawk-like Engert is doing a thorough job harassing Ryan. John Driscoll is stuck on the bench with fouls. Seiden and Alfieri are warming up and the 'Cats are staggering at a twelve point deficit.

As the second half begins the 'Cats begin to snarl and scratch. Ryan drives. The "little" guys scramble after the ball like cats after catnip. Huggard is buzzing all over the court. He dives head first on the floor with man-mountain Roethel.

Cool Kenny scores, Raveling rebounds, and Ryan halts Jackson. VU cuts the lead to four points and their rooters plead for them to keep on coming.

Redmen Better

But the Redmen have just too much tonight. A fast explosion of points by the devastating backcourt of Alfieri and Seiden and the game falls to the Brooklynites.

For the last time, Joe Ryan faces the reporters; for the last time, he hangs up number 14. He has been captain through a fine 18-7 season, but satisfaction is not easy coming by. His basketball career is over.

Ryan Valuable

Hubey White should fit in next year. Kaminski shows great promise. But no matter what anybody says we are going to miss the redhead. Sometimes, true, he let us down. But what of all the times he held us up? Joe Ryan's place is going to be hard to fill.

One thing is certain, the 'Cats grew up a great deal in their first NIT appearance. We have seen glimpses of future glory tonight.

Wildcat guard Jim Kenny goes up for two points despite outstreched arms of a "headless" defender in N.I.T. game.

Redmen Ease 'Cats From NIT, 75-67

Huggard Great; Scores Twenty In Tourney Loss

By JOE FITZPATRICK

When a coach reaches into the grab-bag for a defense he doesn't get much of a variety. In fact he can come up with either one of two basic defense patterns-the zone or the man-for-man.

If the opponents have a man that is hot from one of the corners then the one is not effective. If the opposition has a McNeill-Kennedy type who can drive through the defense then the man-for-man becomes obsolete.

In last Thursday's 75-67 loss to St. John's the Villanova five not only ran into a smooth performing, well-balanced attack but they also ran out of defenses with which to contain the Redmen.

The Wildcats started the game in a 1-2-2 zone. It was employed in order that to prevent St. John's All-American Al Seiden from driving as well as to stop Gus Alfieri and Tony Jackson from scoring from the the outside.

The defense worked perfectly for the first six minutes of the contest. Seiden found it impossible to drive and Jim Huggard's defensive hustle on the outside prevented Jackson and Alfieri from hitting from outside.

Roethel Breaks the Zone

But the unexpected took place. St. John's big center, Lou Roethel moved into the corner and proceeded to wreck the Villanova zone.

Roethel hit on two stabs from his corner haunt and that pulled Huggard to the right side. Alfieri was now opened and he hit on two quick sets. With the score 24-17 Richie Kaminski and Bob Lieratore replaced Hug and Jim Kenny.

Roethel again scored from the corner. St John's increased their lead to 30-17. Huggard and Kenny returned to the game and the Wildcats narrowed the gap to 32-26 but Roethel, aided by his own rebounding off the Villanova offensive board, hit on two more shots, one a short jumper and the other a tap.

When St. John's took to the floor for the second half they were not surprised to see Villanova in man-for-man defense. Roethel had successfully pulled Villanova out of their zone.

Enter Alan Seiden.

Man-for-Man Not Effective

With Villanova trailing by 10 points and pressing in ther man-for-man Seiden went wild. In attempts to get the ball Jim Huggard had to commit himself and when Seiden shot by no one switched. Seiden scored unmolested.

Against the St. John's defense only two Wildcats could score—Huggard and Ryan.

Jim played his finest game of the year. He scored 20 points, most of which came on 25 foot jumpshots. His shooting caused St. John's coach to comment that he never knew anyone with so many shots.

Ryan didn't come around until there were only eight minutes remaining. Then the redhead really looked like Joe Ryan. He came down court to within 30 feet of the basket and leaped into air for two, but it was too late.

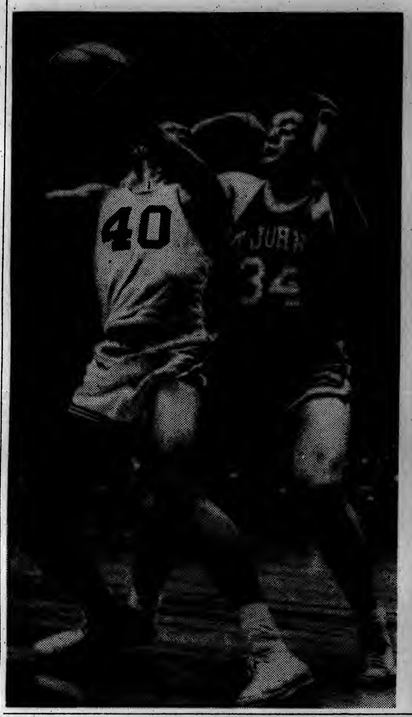
The efforts of Ryan and Huggard were not enough. Tony Jackson was held offensively but he was disasterous under the boards. Tony scored only 13 points but grabbed off 20 rebounds.

Jackson Rebound Leader

With Jackson leading St. John's attack off the boards (The Redmen grabbed 64 boards to Villanova's 37) and Seiden, Alfieri and Roethel heading a 50% scoring fete (30 for 60) Huggard's great game went in vain. He had little help and he couldn't go it alone.

The Wildcats hit on only 29 of 83 shots. Raveling was Villanova's rebound leader with 15 and Jim Huggard, there he is again, was second with eight. With shooting and rebounding like this one could hardly expect victory.

Huggard was high man for Villanova with 20, Joe Ryan was second with 16 and George Raveling hit for 12 points.



Other Villanova contributors were Jim Kenny, 10, John Driscoll, 5, and Bob Liberatore 3.

Roethel and Seiden kept St. John's in Manhatten for remainder of the NIT. The Wildcats just didn't have the guns. They went back to the Main Line to wait for another year.

The game closed out an 18 and 7 season for the Wildcats. It marked the end of a campaign in which the 'Cats reached a new high in City Series play—second place.

The game also closed out the collegate basketball careers of Joe Ryan, Kenny Harrison, George Emma and Ralph Kowalkowski.

V.U. Nine To Open March 31

By JIM MURRAY

The Villanova baseball team scoops the big leagues again. The first game takes place two weeks prior to any regular season major league action. Villanova also answered the critics who said, "It couldn't be done"—spring training in the snow that is.

On March 31 the 'Cats will travel to Gettysburg to take on the Bullets in their initial contest. Villanova fans won't have long to wait to see this year's varsity.

On April 1 the Villanova nine will meet Seahawks of Wagner College in their home debut.

Enough for future items; now for present activity.

After three weeks of intense practice, what has been accomplished? Well, everything started out fine with good weather setting the stage for a few inter-squad games.

During the long weekend that just passed the team was inactive because of last Thursday's reminder—three inches of snow—that spring training in the wnter is, to say the least, risky.

Reminiscent of Bowie

After the first two weeks of trimming down exercises the ball players are starting to look like ball players. Art Mahan has been working his thoroughbred athletes in all kinds of races these past two weeks.

The racing program starts out with the workouts (just jogging around) then the coach sends his sprinters to the post (50 or 100 yd. dashes).

Then comes the favorite of the coach and the participants—the distance run. The coach sends his future Phillies (ouch) around the course again and again. Here we separate the thoroughbred from the plugs. Well, they are looking more like ball players anyway.

The coach believes that inter-squad games help cut down the number of candidates. 'It's different," says Mahan, "when a fellow is just throwing or hitting, he's just throwing or hitting while in a game the thinking comes into play; then you see whether or not a fellow is coordinated—whether he can think while hitting or throwing."

Pitchers Ahead of Hitters

The early inter-squad games bore out the old axoim that the pitchers are always ahead of the hitters for the first few weeks. Any rookie who was throwing hard against the gray winter background over the field was completely in charge of the hitters.

For example in one game Paul Borian, a veteran slugger from last year's NCAA participants, caught a pitch and sent it sailing over the center field extension.

The ball was recovered from the center of the football field. The next three times he went down swinging.

Now that the hitters are catching up to the pitchers here are a few observations from inter-squad games to date.

Dave Hennegan, a service returnee, is the handy man of the club. Hennegan can fill in behind the plate, in the infield, or cover some of the pasture land (back to the horses again). Dave sure did return at the right time.

Early Pitching Strong

Joe Michell and Lee Parry look ready to make the pitching staff ring strong. Michell was the 1958 squad's valuable relief pitcher, not that greats such as Jack Kelly and Bob Kropiewnicki needed relief very often, but when they did coach Mahan could count on Joe. He even dropped in an occasional starting assignment.

Bobby Klenck has been moving around second like a rabbit. Klenck looked good last year in spring practice but he sustained an injury and he sat out the entire season.

First base rookie Jod Platco has been hitting the ball like Gil Hodges. But it will take a great deal of hitting for him to replace Villanova's All-East first sacker George Emma. In fact it's not who's on first that's worrying Mahan, rather it's who's behind the plate. Who will replace Hank Nichols as the Villanova backstop?

Anyone who wishes to be a manager on this years varsity baseball team please contact Charlie Farnan in the Field House.

FRIDAY NITE PROM OPENS LAST SENIOR SOCIAL WHIRL

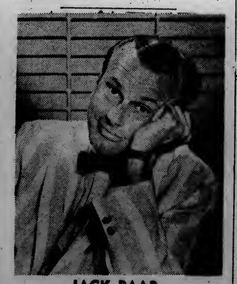
New Lecture Series Starts Next Wed.

BY WILLIAM J. SPEERS
of the Villanovan Staff

The first in a series of Augustinian lectures to be given annually at Villanova will be delivered by The Rev. Paul Henry on April 19 at 3 p.m. in the Field House.

The entire lecture series will be presented under the auspices of the Villanova Philosophy Department which announced that all the lectures will be published.

Father's Henry's topic for the initial lecture will be "St. Augustine On Personality".



Father Henry is a member of the faculty at the Institute Catholique de Paris, but at present is serving as visiting professor at Duke University. He also taught philosophy at the University of Pennsylvania, Iowa State and Fordham University.

The Augustinian Lecture series was established in conjunction with the current rebirth of philosophy of St. Augustine.

Mr. James Wieland, Philosophy teacher, said that Augustinian philosophy, which was Platonic in foundation and influenced by Platinus theories, was dominant in the Western world up until the advent of Thomas Aquinas.

He conceded that the Aquinas rewakening of Aristotelian concepts replaced Augustinian theory to a great extent, but also noted that there still remains tremendous latent pressures in Augustinian philosophy which is still untapped.

Dr. Gallagher expressed the hope that the lecture series will spur new interests in the study of St. Augustine as a philosopher.

Tickets for the Junior Prom, to be held May 1, go on sale in the Pie Shoppe today. The price is six dollars.

State Dep't. Asked to Aid Ex-VU Grad

By H. JAMES McATEER
of the Villanovan Staff

Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., University President, has personally requested that the Department of State spare no effort in securing the release of a Villanova graduate now imprisoned behind the Iron Curtain.

Army Specialist 4/C John Robert Kennedy, of Villanova's Class of 1957, is serving a term of 14 months at hard labor in Pankraz Prison, Czechoslovakia.

He allegedly crossed from Germany into Czech territory illegally last August 23.

Since then, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A Kennedy, of Philadelphia, and many others have appealed to the State Department and to the Czech government for his release.

English Student Here

While at Villanova, Kennedy stood very high as an English major. English literature, particularly Shakespeare, was one of his main interests.

His other hobbies included reading, basketball, and operatic recordings.

A graduate of St. Thomas More High School, Kennedy had studied at St. Charles Borromeo Seminary, Overbrook, and at the Augustinian Academy, Staten Island, N. Y.. before coming to Villanova.

Besides his intcrest in English, Kennedy was a member of the French Club during his junior and senior years, and was a student employee at the University Library.

Kennedy's brother Eugene, also a Villanova graduate, told this reporter that the family has received little news from the prisoner.

Pollock Motion Supported By Campus Veterans' Club

The Veterans Organization of Villanova has announced its support for Sheldon Pollock's Student Congress motion of March 11 to establish an additional polling place in the Sheehan hall basement.

"The organization sincerely believes that this change will benefit the University," said Francis McKay, secretary of the club. "It will increase participation in elections, thereby making a truly representative Congress."

McKay scolded the members of the Congress for voting "for their own selfish interests." He took special issue with the manner in which the Congress handled the matter, treating "frivolously a matter which the club considers quite serious."

"Their responsibility," he added, "calls for serious consideration of every motion placed before them; this responsibility has apparently been forgotten."

He promised wholehearted support for Pollock's motion if the matter should enter the Congress again.

Pollock said that he does intend to revive the issue at tonight's meeting, but in the form of a compromise motion. His original proposal was defeated by a nearly unanimous vote, yielding to Tom Hoffman's successful proposal to locate the booths in the class-room annex.

Pollock's motion tonight will be in this form: if classroom annex is inaccessible, only then establish a polling place in the basement of Sheehan; retain the Alumni Hall facilities for Arts and Engineering voters.

The danger of multiple voting will also be investigated tonight. At the last meeting Pollock suggested imprinting the hands of the voters with an ink visible only under ultra-violet light. This idea was rejected.

Tonight Tom Hoffman will introduce a motion to expedite voting and assure no multiple voting. It will provide for punching an unusual design in matriculation cards of voters.

Tickets are still on sale today for the Senior Prom Friday night in the Field House, the big opening for the last undergraduate social weekend of the class of 1959.

The dinner-dance Saturday night at the Broadwood Hotel has been sold out for weeks.

The Glenn Miller orchestra under the direction of Ray McKinley will provide Friday eve music starting at 9 p.m.

Tickets for the annual major dance of the social season are priced at $6.

Same Location

They were on sale today, as they have been for three weeks, in the northeast corner of the non-resident cafeteria.

"Although we have sold more than 200 tickets, we hope that number to make the prom a great success," said chairman Gregory Dean last Monday.

Dean revealed that the total expense of the prom is more than $2,000. The band alone cost more than $1,500, members of the committee said.

"Decorations will be completely consistent with the Moonlight Cocktails theme," according to Joe Vasturia, decorations chief.

Dean, while refusing to reveal the favors that will be presented free to dates, said they each are priced on the market at $1.29.

Reception Gone

The traditional faculty reception before the prom has been eliminated this year.

In previous years the prom queen was picked at the reception. This time however the queen will be picked by members of the Miller orchestra right on the stage.

John D. Kelly, who has been directing the queen contest, said that Jack Paar selected five finalists from the more than 75 entries.

Just about 10:30 Friday night the finalists will be called to the stage. While class officers make welcoming remarks, the band members will appraise the candidates.

Their ballots will be collected and the queen announced immediately.

Awards to Queen

She will be honored with a trophy and a bouquet of roses, Dean said.

The Saturday night dinner-dance will probably start about 7 o'clock, chairman Harry Devlin said.

The music for this affair will be provided by the Paul Judge band. It will begin just after the dinner and continue until 1 a.m.

The entire weekend was planned under the direction of Oz Scogna, class president.

"Spring is Here," or "All Wet," a sage of Villanova, is enacted by Larry Levengood and Joe Mingione (above), who stir up a storm in the Chemical Engineering aeration pool trying to retrieve a lost ball. Below, Harry Goldburg, who had ventured into the pool via pipeline to save the ball game, is caught in a sudden shower caused by an eruption of the spray system.

Drill Team Readies For 4 District Meet

The final competition in the spring series will be the Fourth Naval District drill meet at the Philadelphia Naval Base. In addition to the Villanova team, Ohio State, Princeton, Miami of Ohio, Penn State, and the University of Pennsylvania will be among the entrants.

Under the supervision of Sergeant Edward Molcany, the 16-man team has been pacing the muddy grounds of Mendel Field for over a month in preparation for the heavy schedule.

"We have hopes for a successful season," Molcany said.

Education Dept. To Hear Wetter

Dr. Allen H. Wetter, Philadelphia Superintendent of Schools will speak at Villanova next Monday at 8 p.m.

The talk is to be presented to all students and faculty members of the Education department, however all other interested students and faculty have been invited.

Armco Exhibits Here

A mobile van which displays the drainage and metal products of the Armco corporation, was on display at Villanova the past two days. The van was accompanied by one of their engineers, Richard Carr.

SPIRIT OF PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia has never forgotten the principles of tolerance laid down by William Penn, according to the Catholic Digest. The magazine cites the city for retaining its original spirit while bowing to the demands of urban progress.

Father's Day Activities To Be Celebrated on May 9

The annual outing for Villanova seniors and their fathers will be held Saturday, May 9.

Tickets for the event will go on sale next Monday, in the pie shoppe, announced Gary Mara and Jim Hull, the ticket chairmen. Cost will be $6.50 a ticket.

Don Kempf, chairman for the day, said that the events will get under way at 11 a.m. with a Mass celebrated by Rev. Henry F. Weeks, O.S.A., class moderator.

A banquet will follow the Mass.

The events of the afternoon will include basketball and football. They are part of the annual Blue-White Day, also being celebrated.

One of the feature events of the afternoon will be the track meet with Pitt.

Ticket chairmen Mara and Hull have asked seniors to purchase their tickets early so the banquet committee, headed by Jim Corey, may complete arrangements with the caterers.

Various other heads of committees include Joe Schneider and Jack Curtin, publicity; Bill Christy, programs; and Joe Driscoll, Mass arrangements.

Kempf said, "We hope to get 500 seniors and their fathers to insure the day's success."

D.P.M. Dinner Dance To Be Held Saturday

The Delta Pi Mu fraternity will hold its annual Dinner Dance in the ballroom of the Penn Sherwood Hotel this April 18 it was disclosed last week by chairman Bill Vincent.

The reception will be held in the Della Robia Lounge at 7:00 p.m.

Dinner will be served at 8:00 p.m. and dancing after dinner will go on until 1:00 a.m.

Music will be aptly supplied by Charlie Gresh and his band.

Co-Eds Elegible For Miss Milkmaid Contest

Villanova co-eds are now eligible for the title of Miss Milkmaid of 1959.

The contest is being sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association of Milk Dealers.

All girls must be between the ages of 17 and 22 and must never have been a professional model.

The winner of the Milkmaid contest will receive such prizes as a complete wardrobe, hair styling, and an opportunity to compete for a $1,000 scholarship.

Field Trip Planned

The Marketing Society announced that it will conduct a field trip to the Armstrong Cork Company, in Scranton, Pennsylvania, later this month.

The purpose of the trip is to study the Marketing Research Department and to tour the plant itself.

The Society also reported that 35 couples attended its annual dinner-dance, held last Saturday at the Valley Country Club.

MacLeish's J. B. Seen As Powerful Religious Drama

By BILL GALLAGHER

Currently on view at the Anta Theatre in New York is "J.B.", the poetic drama which Archibald MacLeish has fashioned from the biblical account of Job. Set [illegible] tale in a modern day circus [illegible]ng, he and director Elia Kazan should be held accountable for some of the following reactions.

During the first act of a performance a few weeks ago, the raspy whisper of a woman sitting in the middle section of the orchestra was heard to exclaim, for all to hear: "This is very, very deep." Since we all know that New York audiences are generally a sophisticated lot, we chalk this up as coming from an out-of-towner who thought she was going to see "La Plume de Ma Tante". Besides, affairs hadn't proceeded more than twenty-five minutes on-stage.

Give it time and you can hear: "It was theatrical, exciting and impressive, but I'm not so certain that I understood it." And this uttered by a liberal arts student at a leading eastern university.

Pro and Con

Couple these remarks with the many angry letters that were sent to the editor of The New York TIMES and then set all this down opposite the very favorable reviews of the New York critics and what have you got? A controversy, that's what.

Since the play is written in verse, and the subject matter concerns the battle for possession of a human soul, it is certainly meat for the thinking man. God, expertly portrayed by Raymond Massey, situates himself in a crow's-nest type platform and argues down to Christopher Plummer, equally brilliant as the devil, who stands at about the fifth row in the orchestra.

Their bitter fight concerns man's fidelity to God while under extreme duress. For two hours the audience is swept along because their arguments are brilliant, persuasive, and as enacted under the masterful direction of Elia Kazan, stunningly and thoroughly absorbing.

The entire cast rose to the high level of acting set by Plummer and Massey. James Daly, a sudden replacement for the injured Pat Hingle, does well, especially in the second act, when his suffering reaches the point where it starts to become painful to even the audience. And Nan Martin, portraying his wife, proves to be one of the finds of the season.

Stunning Setting

Another hero is Boris Arenson, whose setting, which is at once a circus, a home, and a razed city, completely demolishes that imaginary fourth wall. There is no proscenium arch at the ANTA. The marvelous set serves as a springboard which propels the action right into the laps of those out front and then leaves them alone with it, to ponder, to contemplate, but strangely, not fully to sympathize with. This is one of the mysteries of the play. We know that J. B. represents all men and we certainly see the agony that he suffers on-stage, just as we suffer in real life. Yet, for all this, there is more a healthy fear than pity evoked by the production.

The message, to me at least, rang out loud and clear. Man doesn't have to have glaring faults to suffer the agonies of life; he merits them by original sin. Sometimes he accepts them, sometimes he tries to avoid them. But he is always responsible.

"J. B." is a prayer, a combination of philosophy, psychology and poetry, done in a most theatrical manner. It can be seen at special student rates. Applications may be obtained in the VILLANOVAN office.

T'nT Readies Show; First Nite April 22

The Turf and Tinsel Society, one of Villanova's largest and most active organizations, will open their twelfth consecutive show two weeks from today.

On Wednesday, April 22, over 100 Villanova male students will don maidenly frocks, will take a final peek at the script, spot the last light and ring up the curtain on a revival of one of the Society's biggest hits—"Piper-Heidsieck '98".

The musical-comedy will be presented for the ensuing four days concluding on Sunday, the 26th, with a special Mothers' Day performance. As they have done in the past, T'nT will give a matinee for the nuns in the area, the Saturday before Mothers' Day.

"Piper" was originally staged at V.U. in the spring of 1951. In the fall of the same year, the armed forces adopted the script and performed the same show in Philadelphia's Town Hall.

Gay Ninety Setting

The book and music for "Piper" were written by Mr. Robert M. Whelen, the present Secretary of Athletics at Villanova. Whelen along with Mr. George J. Pequignot, executive secretary of the Alumni Association, are serving as co-producers of this year's show.

The "gay ninties" serve as "Piper's" setting while the theme revolves around the attempts made by a newly-rich family to break into Main Line society.

While the Main Line will be the locale for most of the farce, other scenes will take place in various parts of the world. Some of those places to be visited will include Paris, Germany, and Atlantic City.

The lead role of Mrs. Murphy will be played by Gary Tackas, T'nT president, while John Birkenheuer as Larry Murphy and Jim Gillespie as Kitty will enact the "romantic leads".

Co-producer Pequignot has reminded Villanova of the uniqueness of Turf and Tinsel. "There are only three other organizations in the entire country

Catholic Priest Defines Liberal

In a recent issue of the Sign, National Catholic Magazine, The Rev. Ralph Gorman, C. P., answered the question, "Can a Catholic be a liberal?"

Father Gorman asserted that "a Catholic can be a liberal or a conservative if these terms are given a rational and objective meaning."

O'Connor Calls Bigamy A Luxury of the Past

By THOMAS M. WOLF
of the Villanovan Staff

"Bigamy is becoming a luxury of the past in Islamic countries," Dr. Andrew O'Connor, of the Philosophy Department, recently told the Delta Pi Mu fraternity.

"Any Muslin is allowed four wives," he added, "but only in the palace of Saud (King of Saudi Arabia) is there anything like a harem.

"The practice is dying out for practical reasons. How can the poor Muslim live in a crowded apartment in Egypt with four women and all the progeny they are likely to produce?"

Dr. O'Connor, a native of Canada, has spent three years in Iraq, ten days of which were passed in the company of Northern Iraq Arabs, following the camel trade.

Unique Method

He related the novel formula with which the Muslim can unburden himself of a surplus wife. Simply by repeating three times in the presence of his unwanted spouse the succinct statement, "I divorce you," he becomes a free man, said Dr. O'Connor.

The status of the Muslim woman is unique, he said. In the legal framework of the countries, two women are equal to one man.

"Under no circumstances do you walk along a street with a non-relative female," he added. "A girl will not even thank you for giving up a seat on the bus for her. She feels she will be compromised if she does.

"You never meet a man's wife, they are always hidden behind veils. When I entered a house, the husband tapped for the wife to hide so she wouldn't be contaminated by my glance."

According to custom, the Muslim rewards a visitor to his house with whatever the visitor admires. "Perhaps that's why they hide their wives," he said.

Delivery Informal

Dr. O'Connor's delivery was strictly informal. He frequently wandered from the rostrum, resorted to the colloquial, and seemed entirely unbound by any inflexible lecture outline.

He frequently alluded to experience in the Middle East on which he based his talk. Reflecting on his stay in Baghdad, he sympathized with King Faisal whose hapless demise last summer brought in the present regime. He had once been offered the opportunity to tutor the young king.

"It is relatively easy to become a Mohammedan," he stressed. "A man merely has to say, in front of a witness. There is no God but God, and Mohammed is his prophet.' A man could jokingly become a member if he wasn't carefull."

He repeatedly interrupted his talk with artful digressions, in his classroom manner, tapping a reservoir of anecdotes to illustrate his statements.

"The Muslin is forbidden to eat pork," he said. He related how the Iraqi branch of the Coca-Cola Co. allegedly spread the rumor that Pepsi-Cola contained pepsin, a pork substance. "Multitudes abstained from Pepsi for some time."

Punishment Severe

Punishment for violations of the law are severe. "Smokers are whipped, thiefs in Kuwait have hands amputated, and adulterers have been dragged outside the city walls (indeed there are walls) and stoned." Self-punishment is equally severe. He has witnessed men who had punctured their eyeballs with needles.

He sees a distinct Jewish influence in the Muslim's bible, the Koran. In fact, he was once taken to the "tomb" of Jonah, reportedly in a Northern Iraqi mosque. Archeology is forbidden at the site.

"I went up with them," he said, "and saw a four-foot fish, purported to be the whale which swallowed up Jonah. When I commented that Jonah therefore must have been a mere two inches high, he was scandalized." Dr. O'Connor beat a hasty retreat.

Following the speech, he opened himself to questions, lighting the first in a quick series of cigarettes.

What is the social system in those lands?

No Middle Class

"They have yet to develop a middle class. Among the poor, living conditions are terrible, and cholera takes a deadly toll. In one poor family, only three out of eighteen infants survived childhood."

His description of the upper class was equally vivid. "They are extravagantly wealthy, driving Packards while they have a stable full of other cars at home. One shiek took me hunting gazelles in a jeep." He felt that the resolution of this problem will depend on history which we will see in our lifetimes.

He was received in Iraq. Although the natives dislike America, they didn't know where Canada was. They are acutely conscious of race relations, he said. King Faisal was curious about the Authorine Lucy case of several years ago.

Dr. O'Connor offered a solution to the bitterness. He appealed to approach them with understanding, to bridge the gap. "I love these people," he concluded.

Junior Dinner Dance Plans Announced By Chairmen

John Driscoll and Raymond Rafferty, Co-Chairmen for the Junior Dinner Dance Committee, announced last week that plans for the event have been completed.

The annual affair, highlight of the Junior Week festivities, will be held in the main ballroom of the Broadwood Hotel in Phiadelphia, Saturday, May 2. The Broadwood Hotel is located at the corner of Broad and Vine sts.

The dinner dance will begin at 6:30 p.m. and continue until 1 a.m. The theme will be "A Spring Night".

Price of tickets is $11.50. Tables will accomodate five couples and will sell for $57.50

Tickets will go on sale next Monday. Single and table reservations can be purchased Monday and Tuesday. Only single tickets can be purchased on Wednesday, the closing day.

Only one table ticket at a time will be sold to a single person.

Al Raymond's band is slated to provide the entertainment at the dinner dance.

Publicity, decorations, and theme are under the chairmanship of John Rietzze, Jr. math major. Tickets, programs and invitations were handled by Bob McCauley, Jr. Industrial-Administration.

Entertainment was arranged for by Carlo La Vechio, Jr., Arts, and Vic Manfriedi, Jr. Pre-Law. Special arrangements were Special arrangements were handled by Nick Samango.

Marine Group Holds Classes In Camp Lore

The Semper Fidelis Society has announced its training plans for junior candidates for the remainder of the year, according to Richard Delaney, society treasurer.

Beginning last Monday and continuing every succeeding Monday, classes will be held at 3:30 p.m. at John Barry Hall. Members who have made it through Quantico and have a desire to teach new members have been requested to sign up in the Marine Office, John Barry Hall.

The first two scheduled lessons are on Marine Corps History, while the third and fourth are on the M-1 rifle. Lesson five is a Quantico orientation program and lesson six will teach the fundamentals of drill. Lesson seven will again be on the M-1 rifle.

It has been noted that the Marine Corps is being reduced in strength and competition for officer billets are running high. In some cases, over 50 percent of training platoons have been dropped out of the program because of lack of proper attitude and preparation.

Approximately 40 persons attended the last lecture given by Lieutenant Gillan, U.S.N., NROTC instructor on March 19.

Water Safety Course Offered by Red Cross

An American Red Cross Water-Safety Course will be presented by the Intramural Department starting Tues., April 7 through May 7.

Classes will be held every Tues. and Thurs. at 7:00 p.m. at the Field House swimming pool.

It is required that each student has a current senior Red Cross life saving card.

Students must register at the pool at once.

A senior Red Cross life saving course will be conducted later in April.

Former Students Service Standouts

A number of former Villanovans have been making good in several branches of the Navy.

Marine Second Lieutenants Lawrence P. Tierney and James A. Smith, both former Villanova basketball players, are members of the Hawaii Marines basketball team, defending champion in the All-Marine Tournament.

Among those who made their first solo flights were Naval Ensigns Ronald W. Pyle, William B. Oates and William Davies.

Marine Second Lieutenant Stanley M. McGeehan, Jr. completed advance flight training and Alexander G. Severance, Jr. was commissioned a Navy Ensign March 6 after completing a 16-week training program.

Education Society Headed By Rolls

James P. Rolls, junior education major, was elected president of the Villanova Chapter of the Student Education Association at its last meeting.

Others elected were John J. Gallagher, vice-president; Jack J. Bolger, secretary; and John D. Williams, treasurer. The newly-elected officers will hold their positions until February of 1960.

The Student Education Association, which is the professional society of all education majors, recently sent members to the annual convention of the Southeastern District of the association at Ursinus College.

The chapter will also be represented at the state convention at Slipery Rock State Teachers College this month.

Enlistment Program Offered to Students

An enlistment program for the United States Defense Command has been offered to Villanova Students according to an announcement by Master Sergeant James J. Bertwistle, local Army recruiting officer.

This program offers direct assignment to the United States guided missile units located within the United States.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Army recruiting office at the Post Office building in West Chester.

Letters Few

The few letters that are forewarded to America by the Czechs seem to indicate that, while Kennedy is not actually mistreated, his accomodations are very poor, and that the Czech government is withholding everything—food, clothes, money, and letters—sent to him.

Although the absence of communication between Kennedy and his family is certainly disheartening, the parents hoped that the situation will soon improve.

They expect Kennedy upon release to continue his preparations for a career in teaching.

● A business manager, in search of talent within his organization, passed out a questionnaire to younger workers. One question was: "What is your chief reason for thinking that you possess executive ability?"

The most interesting answer he received: "I think I would make a very successful executive because I seldom get lonesome and would not mind working in a private office."

Marine Corps End Semi-Annual Visit

The Marine Corps officer selection team will complete its semi-annual visit to Villanova today and tomorrow.

The purpose of the visit is to interview interested persons in the two Marine Corps Officer training program—the Platoon Leaders Class program for freshmen and sophomores and the Officer Candidate Program for college seniors and recent graduates.

The team headed by Captain A. W. Ruete, Jr., USMC, is available between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

The Platoon Leaders Class program, which is especially active at Villanova, has no drills or classes during the school year, two six week summer courses of training at Quantico, Virginia, pay while attending summer training courses, draft deferment, and commissioning on graduation day.

The Officer Candidate program features a ten week Officer Candidate School at Quantico, and commissioning at the end of the ten week course.

BIG BROTHER: ALUMNI

It would be an understatement to declare that students here are highly critical of certain facets of Villanova — the sports schedule, athletic scholarships, intra-mural facilities, and the like. This tendency is only natural, indeed the authorities would worry if there were absolutely no dissatisfaction, no unrest.

But unlimited general complaining, without promise of profitable remedy, is useless. It is within the province of each of us to help improve whatever we find lacking at Villanova. Within a few years, we will either accept or reject an invitation to associate ourselves with the Alumni Association, the closest thing to a big brother that the school has at the moment.

George Pequinot, Alumni Executive Secretary, today begins an informative series in the Villanovan about the association. He discusses the goals, the activities, the gripes, and the functions of the group in a message of great import to graduate and undergraduate alike.

He emphasizes that the Alumni is not merely a collection of aged faces seen beneath appropriate banners at home football games. It is not a social institution bent on rowdy reunions. Rather, he proudly announces that it is, at long last, assuming a mature role in educational affairs.

The Association has drafted an imposing list of goals, and if it achieves half of them, Villanova, the beneficiary, will be better for it. Of course, one of them is to raise money, a task whose importance can't be minimized. But the goal which appeals to us is the one stated: "to heighten alumni interest, leading to greater alumni participation in the life of the institution." It reminds us that we are alumni for many more years than we are students.

Council Stirs Interest

A series of stimulating sessions in the past months has given striking evidence that the Student Council is attaining a more intimate relationship with the student body at large.

Recent meetings indicate that the Council has no intention of becoming an aloof, static, dignified, pompous deliberative body. Specifically, we are thinking of the meetings concerning the free day and the additional polling places. Delegates are introducing bills of real substance with a gratifying eagerness, most of which are beneficial, others hopeless.Tonight the Congress convenes to consider again the polling place bill which it somewhat brusquely disposed of at the last meeting. The fact that the action is anticipated with such concern by the student body attests to the fact that interest is staging a moderate devival. The spirit might even move some students to attend tonight's meeting, if only out of curiosity.

Apparent Need For Council Seriousness

to the Editor:

Sheldon Pollock's recent "two polling places" motion in the Student Council and the resultant publicity serve to illustrate an important point: the Council apparently refuses to take itself seriously. Please note that I say "apparently".

I am very much aware of the time and effort that the various council members devote "behind the scenes" to advancing Villanova. Individually and in small groups, these men work efficiently and effectively. However, when they congregate for public meetings, the spirit of co-operation seems to die, and factionalism takes over.

Many worthwhile projects die before birth of the clannish spirit of the Council.

Proof of this lies, as I have said, in Pollock's motion. Certainly something should be done to encourage the student body to vote. Also, I am completely in favor of convenience in voting whenever possible. Pollock's motion was an attempt to solve the problems of apathy and inconvience. Possibly it but at least the effort was was a poorly formulated plan, made.

The Council, when facing a vote on the proposal, chose to make of it a laughingstock, and the consequent publicity turned the entire C and F school into a huge joke. Why could not the Council attempt to make a workable law of this motion? If this was not feasible, why could they not simply defeat the motion and get on with other important business? It is because there is no other important busnss?

It is unfortunate that the many things accomplished in official and unofficial committee are defeated on the Council floor. If a voting bloc cannot bear to have thunder stolen by another bloc, it should formulate a plan of its own to correct the situation necessitating legislation, rather than ridiculing another's plan.

In this way, the Council could appear, if not united, at least positive in its approach to its many problems.

to the Editor:

I have recently read that the Pennsylvania Tax Advisory Committee has recommended that the state sales tax be increased, that the cigarette tax go up a penny, and that pari-mutuel betting be legalized at licensed race tracks.

I would counter the first recommendation by suggesting a real estate tax on the Governor's Mansion. The second proposal is fine with me because soon the tax on cigarettes will be so high that I'll have to give up smoking, which I've always wanted to do anyway.

The third suggestion is the best. Instead of shipping all our money across the river as we do now, maybe we can arrange a swap with Governor Meyner, giving him the Phillies in return for Garden State Park. The race track proposal should appeal to many students. They wouldn't have to cut as many classes in the spring in order to get to the track by post time.

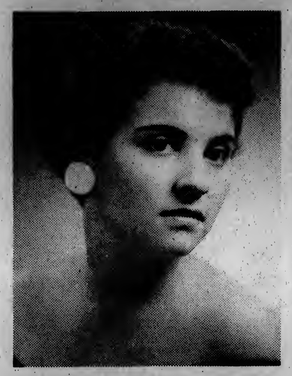
Pollock Defended In Ring Controversy

To the Editor:

Lately one person has been singled out of the 3,500 students attending this school and attacked from all sides, sometimes justifiably, but many times grudgingly. This person as you know is the Junior Class President, Sheldon Pollock.

Ever since Sheldon was elected to represent the Junior Class he has been criticized and centered out as the "guy who can't do anything right." Most of us seem to forget that we are a class, not just a president. If those who do all the critizing would only step out of the shadows and give the class a hand, maybe they would start to criticize themselves a little too, and not just Sheldon. It takes more than one man to run a class, but it seems that those students who continually stand in the background complaining can't comprehend this.



Pertaining to Sheldon's letter to Dieges and Clust, I feel as many students do; it was a wise step on the part of a person who has the welfare of the students in mind, not just the Junior Class, but all who will have to deal with Dieges and Clust, and George Packer in particular, in the future.

I know that this was not a personal matter between Pollock and George Packer, for many students were annoyed and even angry. This was not due to the late delivery of certain rings, but due to "bad service" on the part of Dieges and Clust's representative, George Packer. True, many mix-ups occurred which were the fault of the students, but here the major and justifiable complaint is the lack of courtesy extended to the students.

As you know, anyone can assail someone who, due to the circumstances, would be unable to defend himself. Words have ruined a good man and the irony of it all is that most of those who do the assailing are not competent, and do the criticizing from a distance.

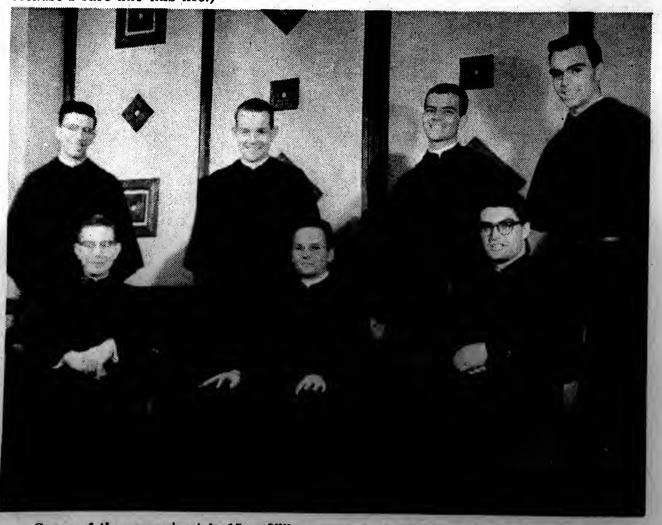
An Engineer . . .

"There is no shortage of vocations . . ." That seems like a poor beginning for a vocation article, doesn't it ? Well, maybe if I finish the statement, you'll understand. " . . . there is just a lack of acceptance on the part of men." That sounds like the old pitch, doesn't it ?

If this article seems blunt and too frank, you'll have to blame it on my training as an engineering "student" before I was "trapped" by the Augustinians. Here are the facts.

The world definitely needs more priests; it needs more Augustinian priests (there is a difference). But why aren't there enough if God wills to take care of our needs? Well, let's look at the gifts that a guy needs in order to have a calling from God. Consider the situation here at V. U.

There are approximately 3,500 Catholic young men who are still bachelors running around the campus (being a Catholic and single are of course the most obvious requirements). We might cut this number somewhat due to lack of physical qualifications, but I don't think this would eliminate many. Next we might cut out a few due to lack of sufficient mental ability. However, if you have enough on the ball to get into college, you probably have enough brains to get through the course in the seminary. I feel safe in saying that we still have about 2,000 eligible men on campus after these eliminations.



Now we might consider the spiritual gifts that one needs to qualify. We know that the average "college boy", despite occasional lapses, is essentially good. When the chips are down, he chooses heaven rather than hell. This may be too personal, but there was a lot of better living guys on campus when God called me to join Him. As we were told during our first retreat, "People don't enter Religion because they are saints, but rather that they can become saints".

I can recall that my roomie shamed me into getting up for Mass during Lent, and while others gave up beer and so forth during Lent, I remained loyal to Dan Kelly. (Hey, I'm a bit off the track!) Anyhow, I'd say the majority of the guys at V. U. are solid enough to make good priests, so let's not cut down the number of eligible men because "they're not good enough".

The last requirement that might cut down our number of possible Augustinians is the spirit of self-sacrifice. This could be a deciding factor, but don't we see self sacrifice in the guys who work on the proms, for the paper, on the Student Council and so forth ? This is love of neighbor in action. (Editors note: the writer of this article was elected President of the Student Council before he left Villanova for the seminary). If we could tie love of God in with this natural self-sacrifice, we have all necessary to be an Augustinian: Charity, our most important product.

Can you see now that there is no shortage of vocations, but of people who accept them ? God doesn't demand that we all become priests, but He does demand that we seriously consider what He wants us to be before we decide what we want to be.

Finally, for you who meet the requirements, but "just don't want to give it all up", — well, neither did I! Nor did a lot of others who are now Augustinians. We saw that we had the needed talents, and that there was a shortage of priests; we saw that we loved God and our fellow man, so here we are! Like it or not. (By the way, say a few prayers for me, because I sure like this life.)

an Art's man . . .

Villanova was never a strange word at our house. Older friends, relatives and a brother of mine familiarized me with life on the campus even before I had finished grammar school. Villanova was woven into the very fabric of my life when my brother, Dick, passed to his eternal reward in his undergraduate days at Villanova in February of 1949. Priests, classmates and professors came to our home in Phillipsburg, New Jersey, to express their sympathy and to pray for their fellow-Villanovan.

In that year I was in the eight grade; I had two ambitions: I thought that I wanted to be a priest and I wanted to go to Villanova. During my high school days I played football and baseball, went to dances and dated almost as if I had forgotten about the priesthood.

When I graduated from high school, I kept at least one of the goals clearly in view: that of going to Villanova. And so my football coach; Mickey Frinzi (a former halfback in the coaching days of Jim Leonard) brought me down to the campus to see Father Thomas Burke who was then the registrar of the college. I enrolled in the arts department with the hazy notion that if I were going to wind up in the seminary some day, I would have to have a background in the arts.

Villanova was a haven. I was happy to be in college at last; the dream of the priesthood seemed to flounder in the rush of college life. Dances, dates and athletics still monopolized a great deal of the time. Springtime brought my favorite time of the year, and usually every Friday of the spring semester found me standing out on Spring Mill Road hitching a ride back home. Spring meant baseball to me, and many weekends were spent on the diamond. Mickey Frinzi happened to be managing the local semi-pro club, and so I had an excellent opportunity to play ball on the weekends that I was able to get home.

One day Father Burke invited me to his room for a short visit. In the middle of conversation he caught me off guard with a startling question: "Have you ever though about the priesthood?" I told him that I had thought about it in the past, but lately, I hadn' given it much thought. So he supplied thoughts and asked me back again.

In the meantime, I followed some of the boys from Sullivan Hall to the chapel for the 7.30 Mass and Communion a couple of times a week to help me to digest the advice that Father Burke gave me. Soon after this I thought that the place for me was the seminary. Why? Because that's where I felt God wanted me.

I finished my sophomore year at Villanova, then went to the Augustinian "boot camp" in upstate New York. One year later I returned to Villanova a black-robed Augustinian religious.

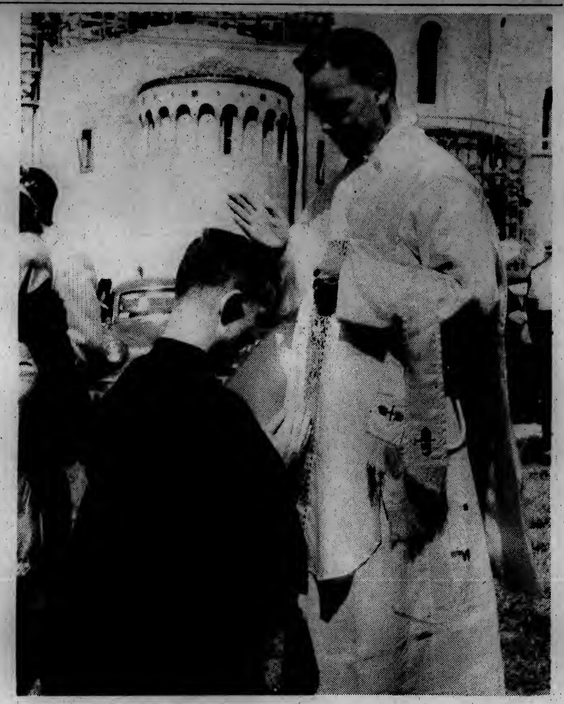
and a C&F man . . .

Happily having been exposed to the life of a Villanova C & F Student for three pulsating years, I would venture to say with reasonable assurance that many Villanova men aren't too certain how they intend to pursue the good life when the college days are ended. In brief, how and where will they achieve the recognition and happiness human nature craves so deeply ?

And to be more Christian about it all, many absorbed in the whirlwind of activity have not reflected that God has reason of their fulfilling that state in the Christian life He willed from all eternity that they glorify Him precisely by has destined.

So it is that it can be a rather shaking experience to a happy-go-lucky college man preoccupied mostly with how to finance the next beer, to realize that perhaps the Almighty Triune God has called him to be a priest forever. Undoubtely some who grace Villanova today are called!

It would be folly to think that we promote priestly vocations somewhat along the line of the "Marlboro Man". A vocation is of necessity a mysterious question, an encounter between God and man. God's way can seem strange and are always fascinating. To reminisce a bit, in 1950 my closest friend from home and I came to the Mainline to take Villanova by storm. We dwelled in that ancient monument, Alumni Hall.



Today the results of our enrollment seem surprising: we are both priests in the Order of St. Augustine. After our first year when my roommate left to join the Order, I was dumbfounded. Leave all this, this was the greatest! Two years later I too had my farewell party with the boys. I don't want to seem dramatic, but it is the finger of God.

My one aim in all this musing has been to persuade you to listen in the depths of your soul for the faint whisper of God.

If He calls, don't fight it. It is bigger than you.

The sacrifice of those following an Augustinian vocation " . . . will not be a lonely one; it will be accompanied by their offerings of the greatest sacrifice of all . . ." (See article below)

" . . . peace of mind and the highest vocation possible . . ." (See article below)

. . . now Augustinians

. . . three fellows, different from one another, but normal. The articles on the opposite page are by ex-Villanova students who, a few years ago, were exactly in the same situation in which you now find yourself. They wanted to be good Catholics; they wanted to be what God wanted them to be, but they weren't sure just what that was.

Quite often they were confused, and they wondered if they would ever come to any knowledge of themselves and the consequent decisions. Quite often they gave the problem little or no thought because there were too many other things to do: dates, games, tests, parties, bull sessions and so on. But gradually, they came to know what God had in mind for them. How?

These very different fellows had several things in common. They were honest; they didn't try to kid themselves. They knew that God loved them and they prayed to Him. They were frequently at Mass and Communion. And they talked the situation over with the priest. That's all, nothing exceptional in any way. For this small price they gained peace of mind and the highest vocation possible, the priesthood.

As Augustinian priests, their lives will be difficult. There will be long hours, obscurity, disappointments and insults. All the splinters from the cross will be their lot. Their sacrifice will not be a lonely one; it will be accompanied by their offerings of the greatest sacrifice of all, that of the Mass. The peace of soul for living for, with, and in Christ will overcome all their problems.

As Augustinian priests, they may be ordered to any part of the Church's labors. They may do parish work, teach in a high school or college, preach missions in the United States, do foreign mission work in Japan, or be chaplains in the service.

Whatever they do, they will work confidently because they are following God's will by their vow of obedience. They will strive always to become more detached from persons and things, and more attached to Christ by their vows to chastity and poverty.

These articles then are directed to you: you who aren't sure what the future holds for you; you who know that whatever the future does hold you you will have to be in line with God's will. There is no happiness in any other way.

The crux of the whole matter for you then is: "What is God's will for me? What does He want me to do? I'll go along with Him, but what is it?"

That is why we wrote these articles; we were in the same boat and God helped us to dry land. This is the way: get to Mass and Communion as often as possible; ask God and His Mother for the answer; talk the situation over with a priest, finally, hold on. The answer won't come immediately, but it will come. That's all there is to it, but we guarantee success. Each of us knows that we never could have decided and gone through with it on his own. We'll be praying for you.

O my God, Thou who art the God of wisdom and good counsel, Thou who readest in my heart a sincere desire to please Thee alone and to direct myself in regard to my choice of a state in life, in conformity with Thy holy will in all things; by the intercession of the most holy Virgin, my Mother, and of my Patron Saints, grant me the grace to know that state of life which I ought to choose, and to embrace it when known, in order that thus I may seek Thy glory and increase it, work out my own salvation and deserve the heavenly reward which Thou hast promised to those who do Thy holy will. Amen. (Raccolta, #711)

Executive Secretary Cites Goals For Alumni Assn.

By GEORGE PEQUINOT
Alumni Executive Secretary

Alumni . . . what does it mean to you? If we were to pose this question to the Villanova student body, we would doubtlessly receive a variety of answers. Searching generally for a meaning, one finds that the word has been associated with many things over the years among which, in no small prominence, have been a passion for winning football games, and rowdy reunions. Today, at long last, it is becoming a mature partner in the higher educational enterprise.

However, it is what the word alumni means to the Villanova student which concerns the Villanova General Alumni Association. We are regretfully aware that it possibly can mean very little and we blame no one but ourselves

Our constitution states that anyone who matriculates at Villanova, whether he ultimately graduates or not, is to be considered an alumnus. Therefore, all are invited to join us, but there are those who go on to other schools to earn their degree who understandably consider themselves alumni of that school.

These we may or may not carry on our mailing list depending upon their preference. We have nearly thirteen thousand on our mailing list and there are well over a thousand for whom we have no current address. Fortunately, the latter number is decreasing.

Our association, like most, has its officers, governing bodies, and committees. Our officers are elected by the active members and serve for a two-year term.

Policy Board

The governing, policy-making body is the Board of Governors which is basically comprised of the representatives from the various area clubs. This group meets quarterly here on the campus to take up the business of the association and to establish policy. The detail of the business and minor decisions are handled by the Committee.

The association has an Executive Secretary, a full-time employee, who executes the business of the association through the Alumni Office.

Another, and most important part of our organization, is the area Villanova club. Our membership is becoming an increasingly far-flung group, and it is only through these clubs that our association can maintain the close contact that is so necessary to realize our potential. Club areas are determined by the concentration of our membership. There is a feeling that an area should have a potential of at least one hundred Villanovans to be able to sustain an active club.

We presently have about thirty-five such areas, and these would embrace close to 90% of the alumni. While the clubs are free to write their own By-Laws, and to set up themselves ah they so desire, most of them follow the same pattern—one closely resembling our general association.

Each club has a representative to the association's Board of Governors which ties the club organization into the general organization.

Origin of Alumni

I was not around when the association was formed many years ago, but I can tell you how and why it came about. It came about the same way it would today if there were no such organized group. Everyday one sees cases in which someone or something in need is helped by interested people banding together for that purpose.

Such was the reason for the formation of every alumni organization . . . to be of service to its alma mater. The Villanova General Alumni Association was formed by a group of men with a common denominator, a Villanova education, for the common cause of service to their alma mater. This is our purpose . . . service to Villanova.

There are very few institutions of higher learning around today which do not need assistance in many forms. Even though your education is costing a lot of money, it is not costing as much as it should in order for the university to balance its books.

A school like ours cannot turn to the state for support, so whom can it look to for assistance but its friends? Those who have preceded you here consider themselves Villanova's best friends as you also will one day soon. You will realize, as we do, that Villanova has been a good friend to you, even though there may have been times when, for your own benefit, restrictions were made which you resented.

Frequent Gripes

Let me speak frankly and refer to the gripes which one hears from time-to-time from the undergraduates and the graduates, for the Alumni Office is the "whipping post" for such things.

It is a sure sign that a person is interested. You will gradually become aware that certain problems are inherent to all schools, and that our Alma Mater is doing a better-than-average job of meeting them head-on.

Therefore, all of us consider ourselves friends of Villanova and as such are busy developing an alumni program that can lend a real helping hand. To give you an idea what we can do, consider the following goals toward which we can aim:

1. to heighten alumni interest, leading to greater alumni participation in the life of the institution.
2. to raise money.
3. to utilize alumni experience and know-how in solving institution problems.
4. to recruit better students, and to increase the enrollment to qualified sons and daughters of alumni.
5. to provide programs of continuing education for alumni.
6. to offer vocational guidance and placement opportunities for alumni.
7. to encourage alumni to participate in civic and community affairs.
8. to publicize the name and prestige of their alma mater in local communities.
9. to inform the institution of alumni sentiment in the field.

Next week we shall look into the activities of our Association.

Deputy Grand Knight Lawrence Carlin points out the charter of Villanova Council, Knight of Columbus, to Fred Wiele, Ron Dobies, and their dates, at the Knights' first annual dance, which was held last Friday night at the Merion Tribute House.

Turf and Tinsel originated a few years before World War II. It disbanded at the start of the war but resumed its activities in 1948.

Quite a few "names" have graduated from the T 'n T ranks. Among them are All-American halfback Gene Filipski, track and field stars Don Bragg and Ron Delany, Skip Kilmond, who recently played a supporting role in television's "Playhouse 90", and Ron Liomporra, currently appearing in the Broadway hit "Bells Are Ringing".

Naval ROTC Drill Team Opens Spring Competition

The Naval R.O.T.C. drill team embarks this weekend on an extensive program of drill meets for the spring season by participating in the National Cherry Blossom Festival Drill Competition in Washington, D. C.

The well-practiced team, under the command of Midshipman Terence P. Connell will spend four days in the nation's capitol with activities highlighted by the drill competition Friday and the annual Cherry Blossom Parade the following evening.

Competition for the event is expected to be keen since the participating teams chosen are a nation wide basis and are considered among the country's crack units.

Indiantown Gap Military Reservation will be the scene of the team's next competition in the annual Pershing Rifles regimental drill meet. At this event, scheduled for April 25, will be the best of the Pennsylvania Pershing Rifle units.

After a short rest, the drill team will again compete in the Philadelphia R.O.T.C. drill meet at Franklin Field May 6. Although less successful in last year's competition, the unit hopes to regain its championship in both the basic and trick drills.

Sophomore Class Ring Orders Soon Accepted

Orders for Sophomore class rings will be taken from April 28 to May 1 in the VILLANOVAN office.

All orders will require a $10.00 deposit with the rest to be paid upon delivery, announced sophomore class president, Bob DeLisa, at a class meeting last Thursday.

Orders taken after these dates will not arrive with the class order, due for delivery next fall, he said.

"This is the earliest that ring orders have ever been taken," said DeLisa.

Vet Club To Sponsor Annual Dinner Dance

The annual dinner dance of the Villanova Veteran's Club will be held Saturday, April 18, at the General Wayne Inn in Wynnewood.

Plans were announced last week by club president Frank Cernos.

Arrangements for the event are being made by Dinner Dance Committee under the direction of Ed Gallagher. Tickets are available from committee members.

Cernos also announced that election of officers for next year will take place at the bi-weekly meeting tomorrow.

Villanova Graduate Named Credit Mgr.

Dennis J. Craig, who was graduated from Villanova in 1951 with a bachelor's degree in Economics, has been named credit manager of the Armstrong Cork Company's building products division.

Craig served as assistant credit manager of this Armstrong division since 1957. He joined the firm in 1954 following service in the Navy.

GOOD FRIDAY

Fourteen states have declared Good Friday or a portion of it a legal holiday, according to the Catholic Digest. The magazine reports that observance of Good Friday "is coming up more often than before in labor-contract discussions."

School Gets Federal Aid In September

Villanova will receive an allotment for the year beginning next September under the current federal student aid program, announced the Rev. Henry Klekotka, dean of admissions. The precise amount was not announced.

Although information as to the precise amount of the aid was not available, it is not expected to be large. Application forms are distributed from the admissions office.

"The act as it stands is generous for the students," said Fr. Klekotka, "but the legislation is new and many problems need to be settled."

The program was authorized by the National Defense Education Act of 1958. An initial appropriation of $6 million was granted to schools, but was spread very thin. Villanova is participating in a small allotment this current semester.

Villanova itself will select student recipients, arrange the loans, and be responsible for their collection.

Any needy full-time student in good standing is eligible for the loan. Special consideration will be given prospective teachers.

"In addition to the stated qualifications," said Fr. Klekotka, "it must be mentioned that availability of loans will depend upon the sum of money allotted us."

New Bills

Two new federal aid-to-education bills are receiving attention in the new Congress (among more than 100 education bills introduced).

Introduced by two Montana Democrats, Senator Murray and Rep. Metcalf, they provide a permanent program of "aid" for teachers' salaries and school construction and involve total allotments of $5 billion a year after the program is in full swing.
